ESTATE. The interest which any one has in lands, or in any other subject of property. 1 Prest.Est. 20. And see Mulford v. Le Franc, 26 Cal. 103; Robertson v. VanCleave, 129 Ind. 217, 29 N.E. 781, 15 L.R.A. 68; Ball v. Chadwick, 46 Ill. 31. An estate in lands, tenements, and hereditaments signifies such interest as the tenant has therein. 2 Bl.Comm. 103. The condition or circumstance in which the owner stands with regard to his property. 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 2, § 942; Boyd v. Sibold, 7 Wash.2d 279, 109 P.2d 535, 539. In this sense, "estate" is constantly used in conveyances in connection with the words "right," "title," and "interest," and is, in a great degree, synonymous with all of them. See Co.Litt. 345.

The degree, quantity, nature, and extent of interest which a person has in real property is usually referred to as an estate, and it varies from absolute ownership down to naked possession. Nicholson Corporation v. Ferguson, 114 Okl. 10, 243 P. 195, 200; Washington Ins. Co. v. Pass, for Use of Nalley, 64 Ga.App. 221, 12 S.E.2d 460, 461; Gibbs v. Lester, Tex.Com.App., 41 S.W.2d 28, 29, 80 A.L.R. 431.

In another sense, "estate" designates the property (real or personal) in which one has a right or interest; the subject-matter of ownership; the corpus of property. Thus, we speak of a "valuable estate," "all my estate," "separate estate," "trust estate," etc. This, also, is its meaning in the classification of property into "real estate" and "personal estate." Conriertin v. Concannon, 122 Or. 387, 259 P. 290, 292; Bates v. Sparrell, 10 Mass. 323; Archer v. Deneale, 1 Pet. 585, 7 L.Ed. 272; Den v. Snitcher, 14 N.J.L. 53.

There is no such legal entity as an "estate." Hansen v. Stanton, 177 Wash. 257, 31 P.2d 903, 904, 92 A.L.R. 1037. It is a convenient phrase, to identify the subject of litigation in the orphans' court, and in proceedings in rem it may be treated as harmless superfluity, but as a designation of a party to be served with a writ it is unknown to the law. It cannot be made the plaintiff in an action, as it is not a person and cannot sue or be sued. In re Harrisburg Trust Co., 80 Pa.Super.Ct. 585.

The word "estate" is a word of the greatest extension, and comprehends every species of property, real and personal. It describes both the corpus and the extent of interest. Deering v. Tucker, 55 Me. 284; Frazer v. First Nat. Bank of Mobile, 235 Ala. 252, 178 So. 441, 444. When used in some connections, it signifies everything of which riches or fortune may consist. Williams v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 155 S.W. 64, 66, 169 Mo.App. 468.

"Estate" comprehends everything a man owns, real and personal, and ought riot to be limited in its construction, unless connected with some other word which must necessarily have that effect. Weber v. Bardon, 92 N.J.Eq. 190, 111 A. 649, 650; Black v. Sylvania Producing Co., 105 Ohio St. 346, 137 N.E. 904, 905.

It means, ordinarily, the whole of the property owned by anyone, the realty as well as the personalty. Hunter v. Husted, 45 N.C. 141; Wingard v. Harrison, 337 Ill. 387, 169 N.E. 232, 233; Miller v. Miller, 200 Iowa, 1070, 205 N.W. 870, 874, 43 A.L.R. 567; In re Quackenbush's Will, 127 Misc. 731, 217 N.Y.S. 493, 496; Jennings v. Jennings, 299 Ky. 779, 187 S.W.2d 459, 463.

A man's "estate" is that which he can sell or dispose of at his pleasure or what he can pass on to another. Howard v. Mitchell, 268 Ky. 429, 105 S.W.2d 128, 133.

Estates may be either absolute or conditional. An absolute estate is a full and complete estate, Cooper v. Cooper, 56 N.J.Eq. 48, 38 A. 198, or an estate in lands not subject to be defeated upon any condition. In this phrase the word "absolute" is not used legally to distinguish a fee from a life-estate, but a qualified or conditional fee from a fee simple. Greenawalt v. Greenawalt, 71 Pa. 483. A conditional estate is one, the existence of which depends upon the happening or not happening of some uncertain event, whereby the estate may be either originally created, or enlarged, or finally defeated. 2 Bl.Comm. 151. Estates are also classed as executed or executory. The former is an estate whereby a present interest passes to and resides in the tenant, not dependent upon any subsequent circumstance or contingency. • They are more commonly called "estates in possession." 2 Bl.Comm. 162. An estate where there is vested in the grantee a present and immediate right of present or future enjoyment. An executory estate is an estate or interest in lands, the vesting or enjoyment of which depends upon some future contingency. Such estate may be an executory devise, or an executory remainder, which is the same as a contingent remainder, because no present interest passes. Further, estates may be legal or equitable. The former is that kind of estate which is properly cognizable in the courts of common law, though noticed, also, in the courts of equity. 1 Steph.Comm. 217. And see Sayre v. Mohney, 30 Or. 238, 47 P. 197; In re Qualifications of Electors, 19 R.I. 387, 35 A. 213. An equitable estate is an estate an interest in which can only be enforced in a court of chancery. Avery v. Dufrees, 9 Ohio 145. That is properly an equitable estate or interest for which a court of equity affords the only remedy; and of this nature, especially, is the benefit of every trust, express or implied, which is not converted into a legal estate by the statute of uses. The rest are equities of redemption, constructive trusts, and all equitable charges. Burt. Comp. c. 8. Brown v. Freed, 43 Ind. 253; In re Qualifications of Electors, 19 R.I. 387, 35 A. 213. "Equitable estates" are in equity what legal estates are in law; the ownership of the equitable estate is regarded by equity as the real ownership, and the legal estate is, as has been said, no more than the shadow always following the "equitable estate," which is the substance. Town of Cascade v. Cascade County, 75 Mont. 304, 243 P. 806, 808.

A contingent estate is one which depends for its effect upon an event which may or may not happen, as, where an estate is limited to a person not yet born. Conventional estates are those freeholds not of inheritance or estates for life, which are created by the express acts of the parties, in contradistinction to those which are legal and arise from the operation of law. A dominant estate, in the law of easements, is the estate for the benefit of which the easement exists, or the tenement whose owner, as such, enjoys an easement over an adjoining estate. An expectant estate is one which is not yet in possession, but the enjoyment of which is to begin at a future time; a present or vested contingent right of future enjoyment. Examples are remainders and reversions. A future estate is an estate which is not now vested in the grantee, but is to commence in possession at some future time. It includes remainders, reversions, and estates limited to commence in futuro without a particular estate to support them, which last are not good at common law, except in the case of chattel interests. See 2 Bl. Comm. 165. An estate limited to commence in possession at a future day, either without the intervention of a precedent estate, or on the determination by lapse of time, or otherwise, of a precedent estate created at the same time. Griffin v. Shepard, 124 N.Y. 70, 26 N.E. 339; Sabledowsky v. Arbuckle, 50 Minn. 475, 52 N.W. 920; A particular estate is a limited estate which is taken out of the fee, and which precedes a • remainder; as an estate for years to A., remainder to B. for life; or an estate for life to A., remainder to B. in tail. This precedent estate is called the "particular estate," and the tenant of such estate is called the "particular tenant." 2 Bl.Comm. 165; Bunting v. Speek, 41 Kan. 424, 21 P. 288, 3 L.R.A. 690. A servient estate, in the law of easements, is the estate upon which the easement is imposed or against which it is enjoyed; an estate subjected to a burden or servitude for the benefit of another estate. Walker v. Clifford, 128 Ala. 67, 29 So. 588, 86 Am.St.Rep. 74; Dillman v. Hoffman, 38 Wis. 572. A settled estate, in English law, is one created or limited under a settlement; that is, one in which the powers of alienation, devising, and transmission according to the ordinary rules of descent are restrained by the limitations of the settlement. Micklethwait v. Micklethwait, 4 C.B., N.S., 858. A vested estate is one in which there is an immediate right of present enjoyment or a present fixed right of future enjoyment; an estate as to which there is a person in being who would have an immediate right to the possession upon the ceasing of some intermediate or precedent estate. Flanner v. Fellows, 206 Ill. 136, 68 N.E. 1057.

Original and derivative estates. An original is the first of several estates, bearing to each other the relation of a particular estate and a reversion. An original estate is contrasted with a derivative estate; and a derivative estate is a particular interest carved out of another estate of larger extent. Prest.Est. 125.

For the names and definitions of the various kinds of estates in land, see the different titles below.

"Estate" and "heirs" are not equivalent terms, Martin v. Hale, 167 Tenn. 438, 71 S.W.2d 211, 214; Abraham v. Abraham, 245 App.Div. 302, 280 N.Y.S. 825.

"Estate" and "property" may be used synonymously, McVicar v. McVicar, 128 Kan. 394, 278 P. 36, 38; Ponsonby v. Sacramento Suburban Fruit Lands Co., 210 Cal. 229, 291 P. 167, 168.

Fast Estate

Real property. A term sometimes used in wills. Lewis v. Smith, 9 N.Y. 502, 61 Am.Dec. 706.

Landed Estate or Property

See Landed Estate or Property.

Qualified Estate

Interests in real property which are not absolute and unconditional including fee tail, estates on condition, estates on limitation, and estates on conditional limitation. Carpender v. City of New Brunswick, 135 N.J.Eq. 397, 39 A.2d 40, 43.

Real Estate

Landed property, including all estates and interests in lands which are held for life or for some greater estate, and whether such lands be of freehold or copyhold tenure. Wharton.

As to "Homestead," "Movable," "Residuary," "Separate," and "Trust" estate, see those titles.

Financial or Personal Status

In a wider sense, a man's whole financial status or condition,—the aggregate of his interests and concerns, so far as regards his situation with reference to wealth or its objects, including debts and obligations, as well as possessions and rights. Thus, we speak of "debts due the estate," or say that "A.'s estate is a stockholder in the bank." In this sense it is a fictitious or juridical person, the idea being that a man's business status continues his existence, for its special purposes, until its final settlement and dissolution. See Morgannelli's Estate v. City of Derby, 105 Conn. 545, 135 A. 911; In re Watson, 86 Misc. 588, 148 N.Y.S. 902, 908.

In its broadest sense, the social, civic, or political condition or standing of a person; or a class of persons considered as grouped for social, civic, or political purposes; as in the phrases, "the third estate," "the estates of the realm." See 1 Bl.Comm. 153.

"Estate" and "degree," when used in the sense of an individual's personal status, are synonymous, and indicate the individual's rank in life. State v. Bishop, 15 Me. 122.

ESTATE AT SUFFERANCE. The interest of a tenant who has come rightfully into possession of lands by permission of the owner, and continues to occupy the same after the period for which he is entitled to hold by such permission. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 392; 2 Bl.Comm. 150; Co.Litt. 57b. The estate arises where one comes into possession of land by lawful title, but keeps it afterwards without any title at all, and the original entry need not have been under lease or as a tenant of the dispossessing landlord. Malone v. Floyd, 50 Ga.App. 701, 179 S.E. 176.

ESTATE AT WILL. A species of estate less-than freehold, where lands and tenements are let by one man to another, to have and to hold at the will of the lessor; and the tenant by force of this lease obtains possession. 2 Bl.Comm. 145; 4 Kent, Comm. 110; Litt. § 68; Co.Litt. 55a; Tud.L.Cas.R. P. 10, 14. Or it is where lands are let without limiting any certain and determinate estate. 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 403, § 1543.

The estate arises where lands or tenements are expressly demised by one person to another to be held during the joint wills of both parties, or it may arise by implication of law wherever one person is put in possession of another's land with the owner's consent, but under an agreement which does not suffice to create in the tenant an estate of freehold or for years. Eason v. Rose, 183 Va. 359, 32 S.E.2d 66, 68.

ESTATE BY ELEGIT. See Elegit.

ESTATE BY ENTIRETY. A form of co-ownership of realty or personalty held by husband and wife in which there is unity of estate, unity of possession and unity of control of entire property, and on death of one, survivor takes estate under original conveyance. In re Cochran's Real Estate, Sel. Orph., 66 A.2d 497, 499; In re Gallagher's Estate, 352 Pa. 476, 43 A.2d 132, 133.

ESTATE BY PURCHASE. One acquired in any other method than descent. In re Field, 182 App. Div. 226, 169 N.Y.S. 677, 679. See, also, Purchase.

ESTATE BY STATUTE MERCHANT. An estate whereby the creditor, under the custom of London, retained the possession of all his debtor's lands until his debts were paid. 1 Greenl. Cruise, Dig. 515. See Statute Merchant.

ESTATE BY STATUTE STAPLE. See Staple.

ESTATE BY THE CURTESY. See Curtesy.

ESTATE BY THE ENTIRETY. Called also estate in entirety, or estate by the entireties. An estate in joint tenancy, plus the unity of the marital relation. Hoyt v. Winstanley, 221 Mich. 515, 191 N.W. 213, 214. A common-law estate, based on the doctrine that husband and wife are one, and that a conveyance of real property to husband and wife creates but one estate. Klorfine v. Cole, 121 Or. 76, 252 P. 708, 709. An estate held by husband and wife together so long as both live, and, after the death of either, by the survivor. It is an estate held by husband and wife by virtue of a title acquired by them jointly after marriage. Bailey v. Smith, 89 Fla. 303, 103 So. 833, 834. A creature of the common law created by legal fiction based wholly on the common-law doctrine that husband and wife are one, and hence a conveyance to husband and wife created only one estate, and each was owner of the whole estate, and neither could dispose of it without the consent of the other, and on thè death of one survivor was the owner in fee simple. Wimbush v. Danford, 292 Mo. 588, 238 S.W. 460, 466; In re Flynn, D.C.Pa., 1 F.2d 566, 567; Alexander v. Alexander, 154 Or. 317, 58 P.2d 1265, 1270, 1271.

An "estate by entireties" resembles a "joint tenancy" in that there is a right of survivorship in both, but such an estate is distinguishable from a joint tenancy in that the latter may be invested in any number of natural persons each of whom Is seized of an undivided moiety of the whole, whereas a "tenancy by entirety" is vested in two persons only, who in law are regarded as only one, and each of whom becomes seized of the estate as a whole. Heffner v. White, 113 Ind.App. 296, 45 N.E.2d 342, 346; Carlisle v. Parker, 8 W.W.Harr. 83;188 A. 67.

ESTATE DUTY. A duty imposed in England (act of 1894) superseding probate duty, taxing not the interest to which some person succeeds on a death, but the interest which ceased by reason of the death. Hansen, Death Duties 63. It is leviable on property which was left untouched by probate duty, such as real estate, yet it is in substance of the same nature as the old probate duty.

ESTATE FOR LIFE. See Life Estate.

ESTATE FOR YEARS. A species of estate less than freehold, where a man has an interest in lands and tenements, and a possession thereof, by virtue of such interest, for some fixed and determinate period of time; as in the case where lands are let for the term of a certain number of years, agreed upon between the lessor and the lessee, and the lessee enters thereon. 1 Steph.Comm. 263, 264. Blackstone calls this estate a "contract" for the possession of lands or tenements for some determinate period. 2 Bl.Comm. 140. See Hutcheson v. Hodnett, 115 Ga. 990, 42 S.E. 422; Harbottle v. Central Coal & Coke Co., 134 Ark. 254, 203 S.W. 1044, 1046; 2 Crabb, R.P. § 1267; Bac.Abr. Leases; Wms.R.P. 195. Such estates are frequently called terms.

"Estates for years" embrace all terms limited to endure for a definite and ascertained period, however short or long the period may be; they embrace terms for a fixed number of weeks or months or for a single year, as well as for any definite number of years, however great. Guy v. Brennan, 60 Cal.App. 452, 213 P. 265, 267. Compare Metcalf Auto Co. v. Norton, 119 Me. 103, 109 A. 384.

ESTATE FROM PERIOD TO PERIOD. An estate continuing for successive periods of a year, or successive periods of a fraction of a year, unless it is terminated. Pitney-Bowes Postage Meter Co. v. United States, D.C.Conn., 57 F.Supp. 365, 366.

ESTATE FROM YEAR TO YEAR. An example of an estate for years. It is of later origin and is not found in Littleton (see § 381). It exists in cases where the parties stipulate for it, and also where the parties by their conduct have placed themselves in the relation of landlord and tenant without adopting any other term. If a tenar4 has been allowed to hold over after the expiratibn of his term in such a way as to preclude the possibility of his becoming a tenant on sufferance, it is a tenancy from year to year. Jenks, Mod.Land Law 88. See, also, Odger, C.L. 869; 7 Q.B. 958. It was originally a development of a tenancy at will, by which the tenancy was terminable only at the time of the year at which it began, and on notice.

ESTATE IN COMMON. An estate in lands held by two or more persons, with interests accruing under different titles; or accruing under the same title, but at different periods; or conferred by words of limitation importing that the grantees are to take in distinct shares. 1 Steph.Comm. 323. See Tenancy in qommon. An estate held in joint possession by two or more persons at the same time by several and distinct titles. 1 Washb.R.P. 415; 2 Bla.Comm. 191; 1 Pres.Est. 139.

ESTATE IN COPARCENARY. See Coparcenary.

ESTATE IN DOWER. See Dower.

ESTATE IN EXPECTANCY. One which is not yet in possession, but the enjoyment of which is to begin at a future time; an estate giving a present or vested contingent right of future enjoyment. One in which the right to pernancy of the profits is postponed to some future period. Such are estates in remainder and reversion. Underhill v. R. Co., 20 Barb. 455; Fenton v. Miller, 108 1Vrich. 246, 65 N.W. 966; Ayers v. Trust Co., 187 Ill. 42, 58 N.E. 318.

ESTATE IN FEE SIMPLE. See Fee Simple.

ESTATE IN FEE-TAIL. See Tail, Estate in.

ESTATE IN JOINT TENANCY. See Tenancy.

ESTATE IN LANDS. Property one has in lands, tenements or hereditaments, or conditions or. circumstances in which tenant stands as to his property. Tallman v. Eastern Illinois & Peoria R. Co., 379 Ill. 441, 41 N.E.2d 537, 540.

ESTATE IN REMAINDER. See Remainder.

ESTATE IN REVERSION. See Reversion.

ESTATE IN SEVERALTY. An estate held by a person in his own right only, without any other person being joined or connected with him in point of interest, during. his estate. This is the most common and usual way of holding an estate. 2 Bl. Comm. 179; Cruise, Dig. tit. 18, c. 1, § 1.

ESTATE IN VADIO. An estate in gage or pledge. 2 Bl.Comm. 157; 1 Steph.Comm. 282. See Mortgage.

ESTATE LESS THAN FREEHOLD. An estate for years, estate at will, or estate at sufferance. Fowler v. Marion & Pittsburg Coal Co., 315 Ill. 312, 146 N.E. 318, 319. See Estate of Freehold.

ESTATE OF FREEHOLD. See Freehold.

ESTATE OF INHERITANCE. An estate which may descend to heirs. 1 Washb.R.P. 51; Administration & Trust Co. v. Catron, 171 Tenn. 268, 102 S.W.2d 59, 60. A species of freehold estate in lands, otherwise called a "fee," where the tenant is not only entitled to enjoy the land for his own life, but where, after his death, it is cast by the law upon the persons who successively represent him in perpetuum, in right of blood, according to a certain established order of descent. 1 Steph. Comfn. 218; Litt. § 1; Nellis v. Munson, 108 N.Y. 453, 15 N.E. 739; Roulston v. Hall, 66 Ark. 305, 50 S.W. 690, 74 Am.St.Rep. 97; George v. George, 51 Ohio App. 169, 200 N.E. 142, 143.

Estates of freehold are divided into those of inheritance and those not of inheritance. All estates of inheritance in tenements are freehold; but, since freeholds embrace estates for life and those of indefinite duration which may endure for life, all freeholds are not "estates of inheritance." Beirl v. Columbia County, 73 Or. 107, 144 P. 457, 460; Crabb, R.P. § 945.

ESTATE ON CONDITIONAL LIMITATION. An estate conveyed to one person so that, upon occurrence or failure of occurrence of some contingent event, whether conditional or limitative, the estate shall depart from original grantee and pass to another. Carpender v. City of New Brunswick, 135 N.J.Eq. 397, 39 A.2d 40, 43.

ESTATE ON LIMITATION. An estate originated by the use of words denoting duration of time, such as while, during, so long as, and the like and when designated limitative event happens, such estate ends naturally without any re-entry and property reverts to grantor. Carpender v. City of New Brunswick, 135 N.J.Eq. 397, 39 A.2d 40, 43. Sometimes referred to as "base fee", "qualified fee", "determinable fee", or "fee simple defeasible". Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Chapman, 171 A.2d 653, 657, 35 N.J. 177.

ESTATE PUR AUTRE VIE. See Pur Autre Vie.

ESTATE SUBJECT TO A CONDITIONAL LIMITATION. The .distinction between an estate upon condition subsequent and an "estate subject to a conditional limitation" is that in former words creating condition do not originally limit term, but merely permit its termination upon happening of contingency, while in latter words creating it limit continuation of estate to time preceding happening of contingency. Johnson v. Lane, 199 Ark. 740, 135 S.W.2d 853, 866.

ESTATE TAIL. See Tail, Estate in.

ESTATE TAIL, QUASI. When a tenant for life grants his estate to a man and his heirs, as these words, though apt and proper to create an estate tail, cannot do so, because the grantor, being only tenant for life, cannot grant in perpetuum, therefore they are said to create an estate tail quasi, or improper. Brown.

ESTA'T'E TAX. An excise tax upon privilege of transferring or transmitting property by reason of death and is not tax on property itself. Friend v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.7, 119 F.2d 959, 960; In re Vanderbilt's Estate, 281 N.Y. 297, 22 N.E.2d 379, 390. An "estate tax" taxes, not the interest to which some person succeeds on a death, but the interest which ceases by reason of the death; while the "inheritance tax" is based on the interest to which the living person succeeds. In re Ogden's Estate, 209 Wis. 162, 244 N.W. 571, 573.

It is an "estate tax" when the tax is required to be paid on the entire net estate before it is divided into its several parts to be distributed. State Tax Commission v. Backman, 88 Utah 424, 55 P.2d 171, 174.

ESTATE UPON CONDITION. An estate in lands, the existence of which depends upon the happening or not happening of some uncertain event, whereby the estate may be either originally created, or enlarged, or finally defeated. 2 Bl.Comm. 151; 1 Steph.Comm. 276; Co. Litt. 201a. An estate having a qualification annexed to it, by which it may, upon the happening of a particular event, be created, or enlarged, or destroyed. 4, Kent, Comm. 121. Uri' red States v. 1,010.8 Acres, More or Less, Situate in Sussex County, Del., D.C.Del., 56 F.Supp. 120, 127.

ESTATE UPON CONDITION EXPRESSED. An estate granted, either in fee-simple or otherwise, with an express qualification annexed, whereby the estate granted shall either commence, be enlarged, or be defeated upon performance or breach of such qualification or condition. 2 Bl.Comm. 154. An estate which is so expressly defined and limited by the words of its creation that it cannot endure for any longer time than till the contingency happens upon which the estate is to fail. 1 Steph.Comm. 278.

ESTATE UPON CONDITION IMPLIED. An estate having a condition annexed to it inseparably from its essence and constitution, although no condition be expressed in words. 2 Bl.Comm. 152; 4 Kent, Comm. 121.

ESTATES OF THE REALM. The lords spiritual, the lords temporal, and the commons of Great Britain. 1 Bl.Comm. 153. Sometimes called the "three estates." Inasmuch as the lords spiritual have no separate assembly or negative hi their political capacity, some authorities reduce the estates in Great Britain to two, the lords and commons. Webster, Dict.

Generally in feudal Europe there were three estates, the clergy, nobles, and commons. In England (until about the 14th century) the three estates of the realm were the clergy, barons, and knights. In legal practice the lords spiritual and lords temporal are usually collectively designated under the one name lords. Webster, Dict.

ESTENDARD, ESTENDART, or STANDARD. An ensign for horsemen in war.

ESTER. A compound ether derived from oxygenated acid. E. I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co. v. Byrnes, D.C.N.Y., 1 F.R.D. 34, 36.

ESTER IN JUDGMENT. L. Fr. To appear before a tribunal either as plaintiff or defendant. Kelham.

ESTIMATE. A valuing or rating by the mind, without actually measuring, weighing, or the like. City of Tulsa v. Weston, 102 Okl. 222, 229 P. 108, 122. A rough or approximate calculation only. Bair v. Montrose, 58 Utah 398, 199 P. 667, 669; United States v. Foster, C.C.A.Iowa, 131 F.2d 3, 7; P. M. Hennessy Const. Co. v. Hart, 141 Minn. 449, 170 N.W. 579, 598. Thus, a census is a finding of the population, not an "estimate." State ex rel. Reynolds v. Jost, 265 Mo. 51, 175 S.W. 591, 597, Ann.Cas.1917D, 1102.

This word is used to express the mind or judgment of the speaker or writer on the particular subject under consideration. It implies a calculation or computation, as to estimate the gain or loss of an enterprise. People v. Clark, 37 Hun, N.Y., 203; New Orleans Terminal Co. v. Dixie Rendering, La.App., 179 So. 98, 100.

As used in a contract for the sale of an estimated quantity of goods, "estimated" may mean practically the same as "more or less." Robbins v. Hill, Tex.Civ.App., 259 S.W.

1112, 1115. Generally, the word "estimated" indicates that a statement of quantity is a matter of description, and not of the essence of the contract. Biglione v. Bronge, 192 Cal. 167, 219 P. 69, 70.

ESTIMATED COST. The "estimated cost" of a building means the reasonable cost of a building erected in accordance with the plans and specifications referred to, and not necessarily the amount of some actual estimate made by a builder, nor an estimate agreed upon by the parties, nor yet an estimate or bid accepted by the defendant. New Orleans Terminal Co. v. Dixie Rendering, La, App., 179 So. 98, 100.

ESTOP. To stop, bar, or impede; to prevent; to preclude. Co.Litt 352a; Olsgard v. Lemke, 32 N. D. 551, 156 N.W. 102, 103. See Estoppel, ESTOPPEL. A man's own act or acceptance stops or closes his mouth to allege or plead the truth. Caulfield v. Noonan, 229 Iowa 955, 295 N. W. 466, 471; Williams v. Edwards, 163 Okl, 246, 22 P.2d 1026.

An estoppel arises when one is concluded and forbidden by law to speak against his own act or deed. Gural v. Engle, 128 N,J.L, 252, 25 A.2d 257, 261; an inconsistent position, attitude or course of conduct may not be adopted to loss or injury of another. Brand v. Farmers Mut. Protective Ass'n of Texas, Tex.Civ.App., 95 S.W.2d 994, 997.

Estoppel is a bar or impediment which precludes allegation or denial of a certain fact or state of facts, in consequence of previous allegation or denial or conduct or admission, or in consequence of a final adjudication of the matter in a court of law, Lewis v. King, 157 La. 718, 103 So. 19, 22; Agoodash Achim of Ithaca v. Temple Beth-147 Misc, 405, 263 N.Y.S. 81; Chernick V. National. Surety Co.: 50 R.I. 419, 148 A. 418, 419 ; an equitable doctrine to accomplish justice, Sisson v. Swift, 243 Ala. 289, 9 So.2d 891, 903; Elowe v. Superior Fire Ins. Co., 307 Ill, App, 569, 30 N.E.2d 953, 958; preclusion by act or conduct from asserting right which might otherwise have existed. Reynolds v. Travelers' ins. Co. 176 Wash. 36, 28 P.2d 310, 314; Tucker v. Brown, 20 Wash.2d 740, 150 P.2d 604, 652; Preclusion from alleging or denying fact because of previous action, inaction, allegation, or denial. Steph.P1. 239; Spear v. Farwell, 5 Cal.App.2d 111, 42 P.2d 391, 392; Scholl v. Scholl, 123 Ohio St. 1, 173 N.E. 305, 306; preclusion from denying truth of fact which has in contemplation of law become settled by acts and proceedings of judicial or legislative officers, or by act of party himself, either by conventional writing or by representations, express or implied in pais, May v. City of Kearney, 145 Neb. 475, 17 N.W.2d 448, 458; shield for defense but not a weapon of attack, United States, to Use of Noland Co. v. Maryland Casualty Co., D.C.Md., 38 F.Supp. 479, 484. It is available only for protection, and cannot be used as a weapon of assault. Stanio V. Berner Lohne Co., 127 Conn, 431, 17 A.2d 502, 504; It operates to put party entitled to its benefits in same position as if thing represented were true. May v. City of Kearney, 145 Neb. 475, 17 N.W.2d 448, 458.

Under law of "estoppel" where one of two innocent persons must suffer, he whose act occasioned loss must bear it. Buxbaum v. Assicurazioni General!, 175 Misc. 785, 25 N.Y.S.2d 357, 360; Sackenreuther v. Winston, Tex.Civ. App., 137 S.W.2d 93, 96.

Elements or essentials of estoppel include change of position of parties so that party against whom estoppel is invoked has received a profit or benefit or party invoking estoppel has changed his position to his detriment, Wertz v. Shane, 216 Iowa 768, 249 N.W. 661; Lebold v. Inland Steel Co., C.C.A.I11., 125 F.2d 369, 375; Garmon v. Fitzgerald, 168 Miss. 532, 151 So. 726, 728; circumstances such that a knowledge of truth is necessarily imputed to party estopped, Froslee v. Sonju, 209 Minn. 522, 297 N.W. 1, 3, 4; conduct intended to deceive or of such nature that reasonably prudent person would have been deceived, Cellized Floors v. Glens Falls Indemnity Co. of New York, 9 N.J. Misc. 1111, 156 A. 845, 846; Agnew v. Mullenix, La, App., 11 So.2d 106, 107; direct or immediate influence Ion party claiming benefit, of estoppel, Stanolind Oil & Gas Co. v. Midas Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 173 S.W.2d 342, 345; false representation or wrongful silence or concealment, Noxon v. Cockburn, Tex.Civ.App., 147 S.W.2d 872, 875; Weber v. Fohl, 111 Ind.App. 388, 41. N.E.2d 648, 650, 651; Van Antwerp v. United States, C.C.A.Cal., 92 F.2d 871, 875; inducing another to alter his position or to do that which he would not otherwise have done, Babcock v. McKee, S.D., 18 N.W.2d 750, 754; Wellsville East Field Irr. Co. v. Lindsay Land & Livestock Co., 104 Utah 448, 137 P.2d 634, 647; Albermarle County V. Massey, 183 Va. 310, 32 S.E.2d. 228, 230; intent or reasonable expectation of party estopped that other would act, Bank of Sutton v. Skidmore, 113 W.Va. 25, 167 S.E. 144, 146; Mercer Casualty Co. v. Lewis, 41 Cal.App.2d 918, 108 P.2d 65, 67; knowledge of facts by party to be estopped, Caveney v. Caveney, 234 Wis. 637, 291 N.W. 818, 824; In re Dimon's Estate, Sur., 32 N.Y.S.2d 239, 243; lack of knowledge and means of knowledge by party claiming estoppel, Ainscow v. Alexander, Der.Super., 39 A.2d 54, 60; Froslee v. Sonju, 209 Minn, 522, 297 N.W. 1, 3, 4; misleading of one party by another party, Williams v. Middle-West Roads Co., 295 Ky. 648, 175 S.W.2d 136, 138; United States, to Use of Noland Co. v. Marfand Casualty Co., D.C.Md., 38 F.Supp. 479, 484; prejudice or loss or injury to party invoking estoppel, Vinton V. Atlas Assur. Co., 107 Vt. 272, 178 A. 909, 912; Commission v, Shell Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 170 S.W.2d 568, 570; Hooper v. Bail, 133 Me. 412, 179 A. 404, 406; reliance by one party on act, word or conduct of other party, Gosney v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 114 F.2d 649, 652; In re Sarvey's Estate, 206 Iowa 527, 219 N.W. 318, 321; right of party asserting estoppel to believe party estopped intended that his conduct should be acted upon, Lusitanian-American Development Co. v. Seaboard Dairy Credit Corporation, 1 Ca1.2d 121, 34 P.2d 139, 142; wrongdoing on part of person sought to be estopped, Sovereign Camp, W. 0. W., v. Johnson, Tex.Civ.App., 64 S.W.2d 1084, 1087. Nor on mere delay in asserting a claim, Peyrefitte v. Union Homestead Ass'n, La. App., 185 So. 693, 695.

Nor on errors of judgment, Northwestern Nat. Bank v. Commonwealth, 345 Pa. 192, 27 A.2d 20, 23; nor on error of law, United States v. Du Pont, D.C.Del., 47 F.Supp. 894, 897.

Estoppels are sometimes said to be of three kinds: (1) by deed; (2) by matter of record; (3) by matter in pais. The first two are also called legal estoppels, as distinguished from the last kind, known as equitable estoppels.

Acts and Declarations

An "estoppel by acts and declarations" is such as arises from the acts and declarations of a person by which he designedly induces another to alter his position injuriously to himself. Brauch V. Peking, 219 Iowa 556, 258 N.W. 892,

Adjudication Distinguished

"Adjudication" and an "estoppel" from relitigating things are different in that there is an adjudication when a suit is repeated, but that there may be an estoppel because some fact which is controlling in both actions was litigated and set at rest in first action. Kunkel v. Eastern Iowa Light & Power Co-Op., 232 Iowa 649, 5 N.W.2d 899, 903.

Common Law

"Estoppel at common law" includes estoppel by record, estoppel by deed, and certain cases of estoppel in pais which are recognized in courts of law. Thomas v. Conyers, 198 N.C. 229, 151 S.E. 270, 273.

Election Distinguished

"Election" differs from an "estoppel in pais" in that in order to be effective it need not be acted upon by the other party by way of a detrimental change of his position, provided the election is a decisive one. Phillips v. Rooker, 134 Tenn. 457, 184 S.W. 12, 14.

Estoppel Against Estoppel

Doctrine that two estoppels may destroy each other, or that one estoppel may set another at large. Shean v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 263 Mich. 535, 248 N.W. 892, 893.

In wife's divorce suit, evidence showed that wife in procuring void Nevada divorce decree was under husband's duress, domination, and compulsion, and hence there arose an "estoppel against estoppel" destroying each other, and wife was not barred from setting up invalidity of Nevada decree. Lippincott v. Lippincott, 141 Neb. 186, 3 N.W.2d 207, 215, 140 A.L.R. 901.

Fraud

Estoppel is a penalty paid by perpetrator of wrong by affirmative act which, though without fraudulent intent, may result in legal fraud on another. Harris v. Prince, Tex.Civ.App., 98 S.W.• 2d 1022, 1026.

A judgment procured by fraud may not be used as the basis of an "estoppel". Seubert v. Seubert, 68 S.D. 195, 299 N.W. 873, 875; Actual or intended fraud is not an essential element of estoppel, but estoppel arises when omission to speak is an actual or constructive fraud. Kelley-Springfield Tire Co. v. Stein, 163 Misc. 393, 297 N.Y.S. 22, 26. An act done which cannot be contravened without fraud may be basis of estoppel, Tradesmens Nat. Bank of New Haven v. Minor, 122 Conn. 419, 190 A. 270, 272, An essential element of "equitable estoppel" is fraudulent intent. Fleishbein v. Western Auto Supply Agency, 19 Cal. App.2d 424, 65 P.2d 928; An estoppel does not require a showing of fraudulent intent. New Jersey Suburban Water Co. v. Town of Harrison, 122 N.J.L. 189, 3 A.2d 623, 625, 626, 627; An estoppel may arise although there is no designed fraud. Laraway v. First Nat. Bank of La Verne, 39 Cal.App.2d 718, 104 P.2d 95, 101; Estoppel is an equitable principle dependent on fraud. Volk v. City of New York, 259 App.Div. 247, 19 N.Y.S.2d 53, 60.

Intent

"Estoppel" in its broadest sense is penalty paid by one perpetrating wrong by known fraud or by affirmative act which, though without fraudulent intent, may result in legal fraud on another. Harris v. Prince, Tex.Civ.App., 98 S.W.2d 1022, 1026.

Actual or intended fraud is not an essential element of estoppel but estoppel arises when omission to speak is an actual or constructive fraud. Kelley-Springfield Tire Co. v. Stein, 163 Misc. 393, 297 N.Y.S. 22, 26. Elements of equitable, estoppel are representations intentionally made under such circumstances as show that party making them intended, or might reasonably have anticipated, that party to whom they are made, or to whom they are communicated, will rely and act on them as true, Crane Co. of Minnesota v. Advance Plumbing & Heating Co., 177 Minn. 132, 224 N.W. 847, 848. An essential element of equitable estoppel is fraudulent intent but careless and culpable conduct is equivalent to intent to deceive. Fleishbein v. Western Auto Supply Agency, 19 Cal.App.2d 424, 65 P.2d 928. An estoppel arises when one by acts, representations, admissions or silence intentionally induces another to change his position for the worse. Smith v. Vara, 136 Misc. 500, 241 N.Y.S. 202, 209; American Exchange Nat. Bank v. Winder, 198 N.C. 18, 150 S.E. 489, 491. An estoppel does not require a showing of fraudulent intent. New Jersey Suburban Water Co. v. Town of Harrison, 122 N.J. L. 189, 3 A.2d 623, 625, 626, 627. An estoppel may arise where there is no intent to mislead. Mancini v. Thomas, 113 Vt. 322, 34 A.2d 105, 109.

Legal Title to Land

Estoppel affecting legal title to land requires conduct amounting to knowing representation or concealment relied on by other party changing his position for the worse. Crane v. Esmond, 214 Wis. 571, 253 N.W. 780.

It requires conduct amounting to representation or concealment of material facts known to party estopped at time of conduct, or at least under circumstances necessarily imputing knowledge thereof, and truth concerning such facts must be unknown to other party claiming benefit of estoppel, with further requirement that conduct was done with intention or expectation that it would be acted on, and other party led to act thereon in reliance on conduct so as to change his position for the worse. Jacksonville Public Service Corporation v. Calhoun Water Co., 219 Ala. 616, 123 So. 79, 81, 64 A.L.R. 1550.

Misrepresentation

See Representation, Estoppel By.

Pleading

Pleader must allege and prove not only that person sought to be estopped made misleading statements and representations but that pleader actually believed and relied on them and was misled to his injury thereby. Stanolind Oil & Gas Co. v. Midas Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 173 S.W.2d 342, 345.

A plea, replication, or other pleading, which, without confessing or denying the matter of fact adversely alleged, relies merely on some matter of estoppel as a ground for excluding the opposite party from the allegation of the fact. Steph.P1. 219; 3 Bl.Comm. 308.

A plea which neither admits nor denies the facts alleged by the plaintiff, but denies his right to allege them. Gould, Pl. c. 2, § 39.

A special plea in bar, which happens where a man has done some act or executed some deed which precludes him from averring anything to the contrary. 3 Bl.Comm. 308.

A pleader is not "estopped" by judicial allegations which have neither deceived nor damaged anyone. Thomas v. Leonard Truck Lines, La.App., 7 So.2d 753, 756; Hearon v. Davis, La.App., 8 So.2d 787, 791.

Person pleading estoppel must have been misled to his injury by acts of omission or commission of him who is sought to be estopped. Selber Bros. v. Newstadt's Shoe Stores, 203 La. 316, 14 So.2d 10; 13.

Plea of estoppel lacks merit unless it appears that opposing litigant has been misled, deceived or has suffered damage from the allegations of pleader. Mounger v. Ferrell, La.App., 11 So.2d 56, 60.

Plea of "estoppel" was fatally defective where there was no statement that defendant relied on course alleged to have been taken by plaintiff. Sertic v. Roberts, 171 Or. 121, 136 P.2d 248, 251.

Statements in pleading in former action which are merely assertions of conclusion of law do not constitute "estoppel by pleading." Smith v. Saulsberry, 157 Wash. 270, 288 P. 927, 930.

Ratification Distinguished

The substance of "estoppel" is the inducement of another to act to his prejudice. The substance of "ratification" is confirmation after conduct. Citizens State Bank of Thedford v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. of Baltimore, Md., 130 Neb. 603, 266 N.W. 81, 84, 103 A.L.R. 1401; Cudahy Bros. Co. v. West Michigan Dock & Market Corporation, 285 Mich. 18, 280 N.W. 93, 95; Gillihan v. Morguelan, 299 Ky. 671, 186 S.W.2d 807, 809.

By ratification party is bound because he intended to be, while under "estoppel" he is bound because other party will be prejudiced unless the law treats him as legally bound. Carlile v. Harris, Tex.Civ.App., 38 S.W.2d 622, 624; doctrine of ratification is based on fact of intention to carry out terms of certain agreement, while doctrine of estoppel is based on right of party to deny existence of agreement by reason of misleading acts. B. F. C. Morris Co. v. Mason, 171 Okl. 589, 39 P.2d 1, 3; Ratification requires no change of position or prejudice. Texas & Pacific Coal & Oil Co. v. Kirtley, Tex.Civ.App., 288 S.W. 619, 622. Ratification is retroactive and validates all of the act involved, while estoppel extends only to so much of the act as is affected by the conduct working the estoppel. Woodworth v. School Dist. No. 2, Stevens County, 92 Wash. 456, 1.59 P. 757, 760. Generally speaking, "ratification" applies to a formal declaration of the approval of another's act, whereas "estoppel" is where the party is bound by his own act, but the legal effect is the same. Zenos v. Britten-Cook Land & Live Stock Co., 75 Cal.App. 299, 242 P. 914, 917; Marian Sa[y]. Bank v. Leahy, 200 Iowa 220, 204 N.W. 156, 458.

Recital

The theory of "estoppel by recital" is that holder of instrument is entitled to rely upon facts recited therein. Bloomfield Village Drain Dist. v. Keefe, C.C.A.Mich., 119 F.2d 157, 163, 165.

Res Judicata Distinguished

A prior judgment between same parties, which is not strictly res judicata because based upon different cause of action, operates as an "estoppel" only as to matters actually in issue or points controverted. JEtna Life Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., v. Martin, C.C.A.Ark., 108 F.2d 824, 827; Cunningham v. Oklahoma City, 188 Okl. 466, 110 P.2d 1102, 1104.

Doctrine that issues decided may not be drawn in question in any future action between same parties or their privies, whether cause of action in the two actions be identical or different, is based on "estoppel" rather than upon "res judicata". Norwood v. McDonald, 142 Ohio St. 299, 52 N.E.2d 67, 71, 74; In a later action upon a different cause of action a judgment operates as an "estoppel" only as to such issues in second action as were actually determined in the first action. Lorber v. Vista Irr. Dist., C. C.A.Cal., 127 F.2d 628, 634. The doctrine of "res judicata" is a branch of law of "estoppel". Krisher v. McAllister, 71 Ohio App. 58, 47 N.E.2d 817, 819; The plea of "res judicata" is in its nature an "estoppel" against the losing party from again litigating matters involved in previous action, but the plea does not have that effect as to matters transpiring subsequently. Fort Worth Stockyards Co. v. Brown, Tex.Civ.App., 161 S.W.2d 549, 555. Where a second action between same parties involves different cause of action, under doctrine of "res judicata", judgment in first action operates as an "estoppel" only as to those matters which were in issue and actually litigated. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers v. Bridg,eman, 179 Va. 533, 19 S. E.2d 667, 670.

Stare Decisis

The doctrine of "stare decisis" is but an application of the doctrine of "estoppel." Brown v. Rosenbaum, 175 Misc. 295, 23 N.Y.S.2d 161, 171; The doctrine of "stare decisis" involves no element of "estoppel". Joslin v. State, Tex.Civ.App., 146 S.W.2d 208, 212.

Suppression

The doctrine of "estoppel by concealment and suppression" applies only where there has been reduction to practice of invention. Bogoslowsky v. Huse, 142 F.2d 75, 76, 31 C.C.P.A. (Patents) 1034.

Waiver Distinguished

Waiver is intentional relinquishment of a known right. Globe Indemnity Co. v. Cohen, C.C.A.Pa., 106 F.2d 687, 691; Beatty v. Employers' Liability Assur. Corporation, 106 Vt. 25, 168 A. 919, 922; but may be more narrowly and accurately defined as intended giving up of known privilege or power. John Alt Furniture Co. v. Maryland Casualty. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 88 F.2d 36, 41. Waiver is voluntary and intentional. Insurance Co. of North America v. Williams, 42 Ariz. 331, 26 P.2d 117, 119; Sentinel Fire Ins. Co. v. McRoberts, 50 Ga.App. 732, 179 S.E. 256. Waiver is voluntary surrender or relinquishment of some known right, benefit or advantage; estoppel is the inhibition to assert it. Benson v. Borden, 174 Md. 202, 198 A. 419, 427, 428; Johnston v. Columbian Nat. Life Ins. Co., 130 Me. 143, 154 A. 79, 80.

Acts, conduct or declarations insufficient to create a technical estoppel may create a waiver. Benson v. Borden, 174 Md. 202, 198 A. 419, 427, 428. Acts or conduct of only one of the parties is involved in waiver while an estoppel may arise where there is no intent to mislead. Beatty v. Employers' Liability Assur. Corporation, 106 Vt. 25, 168 A. 919, 922; Benson v. Borden, 174 Md. 202, 198 A. 419, 427, 428. Actual intent to abandon or surrender right is essential in waiver and immaterial in estoppel. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S. v. Pettid, 40 Ariz. 239, 11 P.2d 833, 838; Boyce v. Toke Point Oyster Co., Consol., 145 Or. 114, 25 P.2d 930; Actual or constructive fraudulent conduct is essential to estoppel but not to waiver. Insurance Co. of North America v. Williams, 42 Ariz. 331, 26 P.2d 117, 119; An act which operates to injury of other party is essential to estoppel whereas there may be a waiver, although the opposite party is beneficially affected. Sentinel Fire Ins. Co. v. McRoberts, 50 Ga.App. 732, 179 S.E. 256; Conduct or dealings with another by which other is induced to act or to forbear to act is basis of estoppel whereas waiver is intentional relinquishment of a known right. De Pasquale v. Union Indemnity Co., 50 R.I. 509, 149 A. 795; Reynolds v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 176 Wash. 36, 28 P.2d 310, 314. Estoppel results from an act which operates to the injury of the other party, while waiver may even affect him beneficially. City of Glendale v. Coquat, 46 Ariz. 478, 52 P.2d 1178, 1180, 102 A.L.R. 837. Fraud may be implied in estoppel but never in waiver. City of Glendale v. Coquat, 46 Ariz. 478, 52 P.2d 1178, 1180, 102 A.L.R. 837; Benson v. Borden, 174 Md. 202, 198 A. 419, 427, 428. Ignorance of party who invokes estoppel, representations or conduct of party estopped which misled, and an innocent and deleterious change of position in reliance upon such representations or conduct are essential to estoppel whereas waiver is an intentional relinquishment. Ellis v. Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co. of New York, 187 S.C. 162, 197 S. E. 510; Knowledge and intention are both involved in, waiver while an estoppel may arise where there is no intent to mislead. Benson v. Borden, 174 Md. 202, 198 A. 419, 427, 428; Beatty v. Employers' Liability Assur. Corporation, 106 Vt. 25, 168 A. 919, 922. Misleading of party to his injury or prejudice or into altered position is essential to estoppel but not to waiver. A-1 Cleaners & Dyers v. American Mut. Liability Ins. Co. of Boston, 307 Ill.App. 64, 30 N. E.2d 87, 88; Beatty v. Employers' Liability Assur. Corporation, 106 Vt. 25, 168 A. 919, 922. Waiver consists merely in renouncing some right or in ratifying what one might repudiate. Williams v. Anaconda Copper Mining Co., 96 Mont. 204, 29 P.2d 649, 651. Waiver depends on what one party intends to do, rather than upon what he induces his adversary to do, as in "estoppel". Nathan Miller, Inc., v. Northern Ins. Co. of New York, 3 Terry 523, 39 A.2d 23, 25; Wisdom v. Board of Sup'rs of Polk County, 236 Iowa 669, 19 N.W.2d 602, 610.

Implied waiver is kin to estoppel and rests on course of conduct evidencing intention not to insist on some performance due. Kansas City Life Ins. Co. v. Davis, C.C.A.Cal., 95 F.2d 952, 957. It does not necessarily include all elements of estoppel. Smith v. Coutant, 232 Iowa 887, 6 N.W. 2d 421, 425.

Legal effect of waiver and estoppel is the same. Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Soc. v. Greathouse, 242 Ala. 532, 7 So.2d 89, 91.

Technically, a distinction exists between "waiver" and "estoppel" but under insurance law, terms are used interchangeably. Boyle Road & Bridge Co. v. American Employers' Ins. Co. of Boston, Mass., 195 S.C. 397, 11 S.E.2d 438, 440, 441; The doctrine of waiver, as asserted against insurance companies to avoid the strict enforcement of conditions contained in their policies, is only another name for the doctrine of estoppel. Rushville Nat. Bank of Rushville v. State Life Ins. Co., 210 Ind. 492, 1 N.E.2d 445, 448. While there are distinguishing features between "waiver" and "estoppel," waiver belongs to family of estoppel and the terms are frequently used as meaning the same thing in law of insurance contracts. Ellis v. Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co. of New York, 187 S.C. 162, 197 S.E. 510, 512.

Warranty

An estoppel based on principle of giving effect to manifest intent of grantor and of preventing grantor from derogating or destroying his own grant by subsequent act. Lewis v. King, 157 La. 718, 103 So. 19, 22; Jordan v. Marks, D.C.La., 55 F.Supp. 204, 209. See, also, Deed, Estoppel By.

For "Acquiescence, Estoppel By", "Admissions, Estoppel By", "Collateral Attack", "Concealment, Estoppel By," "Conduct, Estoppel By", "Contract, Estoppel By", "Deed, Estoppel By", "Election, Estoppel By", "Equitable Estoppel", "In Pais, Estoppel In", "Judgment, Estoppel By", "Judicial Estoppel," "Laches, Estoppel By," "Legal Estoppel," "Negligence, Estoppel By," "Promissory Estoppel," "Quasi Estoppel," "Record, Estoppel By," "Representation, Estoppel By," "Silence, Estoppel By" and "Verdict, Estoppel By," see those titles.

ESTOVERIA SUNT ARDENDI, ARANDI, CONSTRUENDI ET CLAUDENDI. 13 Coke, 68. Estovers are of fire-bote, plow-bote, house-bote, and hedge-bote.

ESTOVERHS HABENDIS. A writ for a wife judicially separated to recover her alimony or estovers. Obsolete.

ESTOVERS. The right to use,- during lease, whatever timber there may be on leased premises necessary to promote good husbandry. Hood v. Foster, 194 Miss. 812, 13 So.2d 652, 653.

An allowance made to a person out of an estate or other thing for his or her support, as for food and raiment.

An allowance (more commonly called "alimony") granted to a woman divorced a mensa et thoro, for her support out of her husband's estate. 1 Bl.Comm. 441.

The right or privilege which a tenant has to furnish himself with so much wood from the demised premises as may be sufficient or necessary for his fuel, fences, and other agricultural operations. 2 Bl.Comm. 35; Woodf.Landl. & Ten. 232; Zimmerman v. Shreeve, 59 Md. 363; Van Rensselaer v. Radcliff, 10 Wend. (N.Y.) 639, 25 Am. Dec. 582.

There is much learning in the old books relative to the creation, apportionment, suspension, and extinguishment of these rights, very little of which, however, is applicable to the condition of things in this country, except perhaps in New York, where the grants of the manor-lands have led to some litigation on the subject. Tayl.Landl. & T. § 220. See 4 Wash.R.P. 99; 7 Bing. 640; Richardson v. York, 14 Me. 221; Dalton v. Dalton, 42 N.C. 197; Loomis v. Wilbur, 5 Mas. 13, Fed.Cas.No.8,498.

Common of estovers, see Common.

ESTRAY. Cattle whose owner is unknown. 2 Kent, Comm. 359; Spelman. Any beast, not wild, found within any lordship, and not owned by any man. Cowell; 1 Bl.Comm. 297. These belonged to the lord of the soil. Britt. c. 17. An animal that has strayed away and lost itself; a wandering beast which no one seeks, follows, or claims. Campbell v. Hamilton, 42 N.D. 216, 172 N.W. 810.

Estray must be understood as denoting a wandering beast whose owner is unknown to the person who takes it up. An estray is an animal that has escaped from its owner, and wanders or strays about; usually defined, at common law, as a wandering animal whose owner is unknown. An animal cannot be an estray when on the range where it was raised, and permitted by its owner to run, and especially when the owner is known to the party who takes it up. The fact of its being breachy or vicious does not make it an estray. Kinney v. Roe, 70 Iowa, 509, 30 N.W. 776; Shepherd v. Hawley, 4 Or. 208; Lyman v.

Gipson, 18 Pick., Mass., 426; but see Worthington v. Brent, 69 Mo. 205; State v. Apel, 14 Tex. 431.

Heifers trespassing unattended upon adjoining ranch when taken up held "estrays" within Estray Act even if heifers' owners were known, since act covers animals belonging to known as well as to unknown owners. Soares v. Ghisletta, 1 Cal.App.2d 402, 36 P.2d 668, 669.

The term is used of flotsam at sea. 15 L.Q.R. 357.

ESTREAT, v. To take out a forfeited recognizance from the records of a court, and return it to the court of exchequer, to be prosecuted. See Estreat, n.

A forfeited recognizance taken out from among the other records for the purpose of being sent up to the exchequer, that the parties might be sued thereon, was said to be estreated. 4 Bi.Comm. 253. And see Louisiana Society v. Cage, 45 La.Ann. 1394, 14 So. 422.

There is no "estreat" or taking a judgment of forfeiture of a bail recognizance from the records and sending it up to the exchequer for suit thereon in Louisiana, since the same court which renders a judgment executes it, and the same officers who are charged with procuring it to be rendered are also charged with procuring it to be executed. State v. Johnson, 132 La. 11, 60 So. 702, 703.

ESTREAT, n. (From Lat. extractum.) In English law. A copy or extract from the book of estreats, that is, the rolls of any court, in which the amercements or fines, recognizances, etc., imposed or taken by that court upon or from the accused, are set down, and which are to be levied by the bailiff or other officer of the court. Cowell; Brown. A true copy or note of some original writing or record, and especially of fines and amercements imposed by a court, extracted from the record, and certified to a proper officer or officers authorized and required to collect them. Fitzh. N.B. 57, 76.

ESTRECIATUS. Straightened, as applied to roads. Cowell.

ESTREPE. To strip; to despoil; to lay waste; to comit waste upon an estate, as by cutting down trees, removing buildings, etc. To injure the value of a reversionary interest by stripping or spoiling the estate.

ESTREPEMENT. A species of aggravated waste, by stripping or devastating the land, to the injury of the reversioner, and especially pending a suit for possession.

ESTREPEMENT, WRIT OF. This was a common-law writ of waste, which lay in particular for the reversioner against the tenant for life, in respect of damage or injury to the land committed by the latter.

As it was only auxiliary to a real action for recovery of the land, and as equity afforded the same relief by injunction, the writ fell into disuse in England, and was abolished by 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 27. In Pennsylvania, by statute, the remedy by estrepement is extended for the benefit of specified persons. See 10 Viner, Abr. 497; Woodf. Landl. & T. 447; Arch.Civ.PL 17; 7 Com.Dig. 659; Byrne v. Boyle, 37 Pa. 260.

ESTUARY, is that part of the mouth or lower course of a river flowing into the sea which is subject to tide; especially, an enlargement of a river channel toward its mouth in which the movement of the tide Is very prominent. Alameda County v. Garrison, 108 Cal.App. 122, 291 P. 464, 466.

ET. And. The introductory word of several Latin and law French phrases formerly in common use.

ET ADJOURNATUR. And it is adjourned.

A phrase used in the old reports, where the argument, of a cause was adjourned to another day, or where a second argument was had. 1 Keb. 692, 754, 773.

ET AL. An abbreviation for et alii, "and others." Mitchell v. Mason, 90 Fla. 192, 105 So. 404, 405. The singular is "et alius" (q. v.). It may also mean "and another" in the singular. Babb v. Dowdy, 229 Ky. 767, 17 S.W.2d 1014, 1016; Glen Falls Indemnity Co. v. Manning, La.App., 168 So. 787, 788. ,

Where the words "et al." are used in a judgment against defendants, the quoted words include all defendants. Williams v. Williams, 25 Tenn.App. 290, 156 S.W.2d 363, 369.

ET ALIT it CONTRA. And others on the other side.

A phrase constantly used in the Year Books, in describing a joinder in issue. P. 1 Edw. II. Prist; et alii 6 contra, et sic ad patriam: ready; and others, it contra, and so to the country. T. 3 Edw. III. 4.

ET ALIUS. And another.

The abbreviation et al. (sometimes in the plural written et als.) is often affixed to the name of the person first mentioned, where there are several plaintiffs, grantors, persons addressed, etc. See In re McGovern's Estate, 77 Mont. 182, 250 P. 812, 815; Anderson v. Haas, 160 Ga. 420, 128 S.E. 178, 179; Conery v. Webb, 12 La.Ann. 282; Lyman v. Milton, 44 Cal. 630.

ET ALLOCATUR. And it is allowed.

ET CETERA (or ET C1ETERA). And others; and other things; and others of like character; and others of the like kind; and the rest; and so on; and so forth. Muir v. Kay, 66 Utah, 550, 244 P. 901, 904; Osterberg v. Section 30 Development Co., 160 Minn. 497, 200 N.W. 738, 739; State on Inf. Haw v. Three States Lumber Co., 274 Mo. 361, 202 S.W. 1083, 1084; Wagner v. Brady, 130 Tenn. 554, 171 S.W. 1179; Fleck v. Harmstad, 304 Pa. 302, 155 A. 875, 877, 77 A.L.R. 874. In its abbreviated form (etc.) this phrase is frequently affixed to one of a series of articles or names to show that others are intended to follow or understood to be included. So, after reciting the initiatory words of a set formula, or a clause already given in full, etc. is added, as an abbreviation, for the sake of convenience. And other things of like kind or purpose as compared with those immediately theretofore mentioned. Hisaw v. Ellison Ridge Consolidated School Dist., 189 Miss. 664, 198 So. 557, 558.

In its abbreviated form (etc.) this phrase means and other like purposes. Anderson & Kerr Drilling Co. v. Bruhlme er, Tex.Civ.App., 115 S.W.2d 1212, 1214; other things of like character. Lewis v. Ladner, 177 Miss. 473, 168 So. 431, 282; other things or the rest; and so forth; used to indicate others of a kind specified, Potter v. Borough of Metuchen, 108 N.J.L. 447, 155 A. 369, 370; others of the like kind; and the rest; and so on; and so forth, Forman v. Columbia Theater Co., 20 Wash.2d 685, 148 P.2d 951, 953. In such form it Is frequently affixed to one of a series of articles or names to show that others are intended to follow or understood to be included so, after reciting the initiatory words of a set formula, or a clause already given in full, etc. is added, as an abbreviation, for the sake of convenience. See Lathers v. Keogh, 39 Hun, N.Y., 579; Morton v. Young, 173 Ky. 301, 190 S.W. 1090; Becker v. Hopper, 22 Wyo. 237, 138 P. 179, 180, Ann.Cas. 1916D, 1041.

ET DE CEO SE METTENT EN LE PAYS. L. Fr. And of this they put themselves upon the country.

ET DE HOC PONIT SE SUPER PATRIAM. And of this he puts himself upon the country. The formal conclusion of a common-law plea in bar by way of traverse. See 3 Bl.Comm. 313. The literal translation is retained in the modern form.

ET EI LEGITUR IN ILEC VERBA. L. Lat. And it is read to him in these words. Words formerly used in entering the prayer of oyer on record.

ET HABEAS IBI TUNC HOC BREVE. And have you then there this writ. The formal words directing the return of a writ. The literal translation is retained in the modern form of a considerable number of writs.

ET HABUIT. And he had it.

A common phrase in the Year Books, expressive of the allowance of an application or demand by a party. Parn. demands la view. Et habuit, etc. M. 6 Edw. III. 49.

ET HOC PARATUS EST VERIFICARE. And this he is prepared to verify.

The Latin form of concluding a plea in confession and avoidance; that is, where the defendant has confessed all that the plaintiff has set forth, and has pleaded new matter in avoidance. 1 Salk. 2.

These words were used, when the pleadings were in Latin, at the conclusion of any pleading which contained new affirmative matter. They expressed the willingness or readiness of the party so pleading to establish by proof the matter alleged in his pleading. A pleading which concluded in that manner was technically said to "conclude with a verification," in contradistinction to a pleading which simply denied matter alleged by the opposite party, and which for that reason was said to "conclude to the country," because the party merely put himself upon the country, or left the matter to the jury. Brown.

ET HOC PETIT QUOD INQUIRATUR PER PATRIAM. And this he prays may be inquired of by the country. The conclusion of a plaintiff's pleading, tendering an issue to the country. 1 Salk. 6. Literally translated in the modern forms.

ET INDE PETIT JUDICIUM. And thereupon [or thereof] he prays judgment. A clause at the end of pleadings, praying the judgment of the court in favor of the party pleading. It occurs as early as the time of Bracton, and is literally translated in the modern forms. Bract. fol. 57b; Crabb, Eng. Law, 217.

ET INDE PRODUCIT SECTAM. And thereupon he brings suit. The Latin conclusion of a declaration, except against attorneys and other officers of the court. 3 Bl.Comm. 295.

ET MODO AD HUNG DIEM. Lat. And now at this day. This phrase was the formal beginning of an entry of appearance or of a continuance. The equivalent English words are still used in this connection.

ET NON. Lat. And not. A technical phrase in pleading, which introduces the negative averments of a special traverse. It has the same force and effect as the words absque hoc, "without this," and is occasionally used instead of the latter.

ET SEQ. An abbreviation for et sequentes (masculine and feminine plural) or et sequentia (neuter), "and the following." Thus a reference to "p. 1, et seq." means "page first and the following pages." Also abbreviated "et sqq.," which is preferred by some authorities for a reference to more than one following page.

ET SIC. And so. In the Latin forms of pleading these were the introductory words of a special conclusion to a plea in bar, the object being to render it positive and not argumentative; as et sic nil debet.

ET SIC AD JUDICIUM. And so to judgment. Yearb. T. 1 Edw. II. 10.

ET SIC AD PATRIAM. And so to the country. A phrase used in the Year Books, to record an issue to the country.

ET SIC FECIT. Arid he did so. Yearb. P. 9 Hen. VI. 17.

ET SIC PENDET. And so it hangs. A term used in the old reports to signify that a point was left undetermined. T. Raym. 168.

ET SIC ULTERIUS. And so on; and so further; and so forth. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 50, § 27.

ET UX. An abbreviation for et uxor,—"and wife." Where a grantor's wife joins him in the conveyance, it is sometimes expressed (in abstracts, etc.) to be by "A. B. et ux."

ETCHING. Strictly, the art of using acid to bite a design on metal; in a broader sense, the word includes the sand-blast process, which uses no acid, but relies on abrasion by sand, emery, or a like substance. Graphic Arts Co. v. Photo-Chromotype Engraving Co., C.C.A.Pa., 231 F. 146, 148.

ETERNAL SECURITY. The doctrine of "eternal security" means that once one becomes a Christian or has been "regenerated" his future conduct, no matter what it may be, will not jeopardize his salvation. Ashman v. Studebaker, 115 Ind.App. 73, 56 N.E.2d 674, 678.

ETHICAL. "Of or relating to moral action, motive or character; as, ethical emotion; also, treating ,,of moral feelings, duties or conduct; containing precepts of morality; moral"; and secondarily as "professionally right or befitting; conforming to professional standards of conduct." Kraushaar v. La Vin, 181 Misc. 508, 42 N.Y.S.2d 857, 859.

ETHICS. What is generally called the "ethics" of the profession is but consensus of expert opinion as to necessity of professional standards. Cherry v. Board of Regents of University of State of New York, 289 N.Y. 148, 44 N.E.2d 405, 412.

ETHICS, LEGAL. See Legal Ethics.

ETIQUETTE OF THE PROFESSION. The code of honor agreed on by mutual understanding and tacitly accepted by members of the legal profession, especially by the bar. Wharton.

EUM QUI NOCENTEM INFAMAT, NON EST .IEQUUM ET BONUM OB EAM REM CONDEMNARI; DELICTA ENIM NOCENTIUM NOTA ESSE OPORTET ET EXPEDIT. It is not just and proper that he who speaks ill of a bad man should be condemned on that account; for it is fitting and expedient that the crimes of bad men should be known. Dig. 47, 10, 17; 1 Bl.Comm. 125.

EUNDO, MORANDO, ET REDEUNDO. Lat. Going, remaining, and returning.

A person who is privileged from arrest (as a witness, legislator, etc.) is generally so privileged eundo, morando, at redeundo; that is, on his way to the place where his duties are to be performed, while he remains there, and on his return journey.

EUNDO ET REDEUNDO. Lat. In going and returning. Applied to vessels. 3 C.Rob.Adm. 141.

EUNOMY. Equal laws and a well-adjusted constitution of government.

EUNUCH. A male of the human species who has been castrated. See Domat. liv. prel. tit. 2, § 1, n. 10. Eckert v. Van Pelt, 69 Kan. 357, 76 P. 909, 66 L.R.A. 266.

EUTHANASIA. The act or practice of painlessly putting to death persons suffering from incurable and distressing disease. An easy or agreeable death.

EVASIO. Lat. In old practice. An escape from prison or custody. Reg. Orig. 312.

EVASION. An act of eluding or avoiding, or avoidance by artifice. City of Wink v. Griffith Amusement Co., 129 Tex. 40, 100 S.W.2d 695, 701.

A subtle endeavoring to set aside truth or to escape the punishment of the law.

Thus, If one person says to another that he will not strike him, but will give him a pot of ale to strike first, and, accordingly, the latter strikes, the returning the blow is punishable; and, if the person first striking is killed, it it is murder, for no man shall evade the justice of the law by such a pretense. 1 Hawk.P.C. 81; Bac.Abr. Fraud, A. So no one may plead Ignorance of the law to evade it. Jacob.

Artifice or cunning is implicit in the term as applied to contest between citizen and government over taxation. Clapp v. Heiner, C.C.A.Pa., 51 F.2d 224, 225.

In a general way the words "suppression," "evasion," and "concealment" mean to avoid by some device or strategy or the concealment or intentional withholding some fact which ought in good faith to be communicated. Murray v. Brotherhood of American Yeomen, 180 Iowa, 626, 163 N.W. 421, 428.

When an act is condemned as an "evasion," what is meant is that it is on the wrong side of the line indicated by the policy if not by the mere letter of the law. Wyndmoor Building & Loan Ass'n v. Power Building & Loan Ass'n, Pa.Super., 121 Pa.Super. 236, 183 A. 367, 369; Bullen v. State of Wisconsin, Wis., 240 U.S. 625, 36 S.Ct. 473, 474, 60 L. Ed. 830.

EVASIVE. Tending or seeking to evade; elusive; shifting; as an evasive argument or plea.

Deprivation of lessee of free enjoyment of premises, and, if it does so, deprivation need not be permanent. Title & Trust Co. v. Durkheimer Inv. Co., 155 Or. 427, 63 P.2d 909.

EVASIVE ANSWER. One which consists in refusing either to admit or to deny a matter as to which the defendant is necessarily presumed to have knowledge.

Hence, where a defendant is alleged to be a corporation, an answer declining, for want of sufficient information, either to admit or to deny such an averment would be evasive. Raleigh & Gaston Ry. Co. v. Pullman Co., 122 Ga. 700, 50 S.E. 1008. But an answer distinctly denying an allegation that the defendant is a corporation, although it may be false, is not evasive. Gaynor v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 12 Ga.App. 601, 77 S.E. 1072, 1073.

EVE. The period immediately preceding an important event. Jarvis v. Jarvis, 286 Ill. 478, 122 N.E. 121, 123.

EVEN. Although; if. May v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 143 Ark. 75, 219 S.W. 756, 757.

EVENING. The closing part of the day and beginning of the night; in a strict sense, from sunset till dark; in common speech, the latter part of the day and the earlier part of the night, until bedtime. Golay v. Stoddard, 60 Idaho 168, 89 P. 2d 1002, 1005. The period between sunset or the evening meal and ordinary bedtime. City of Albany v. Black, 216 Ala. 4, 112 So. 433; State v. Foley, 89 Vt. 193, 94 A. 841, 842.

EVENINGS. In old English law. The delivery at even or night of a certain portion of grass, or corn, etc., to a customary tenant, who performs the service of cutting, mowing, or reaping for his lord, given him as a gratuity or encouragement, Kennett, Gloss.

EVENT. The consequence of anything, the issue, conclusion, end; that in which an action, operation, or series of operations, terminates. Geis v. Geis, 125 Neb. 394, 250 N.W. 252; Brewer v. Ash Grove Lime & Portland Cement Co., 223 Mo.App. 983, 25 S.W.2d 1086, 1088.

Anything that -happens or comes to pass as distinguished from a thing that exists, Quinn v. Streeter, Sup., 175 Misc. 932, 24 N.Y.S.2d 916, 920. That which comes, arrives, or happens, especially an incident which is important or remarkable, Schulz v. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 331 Mo. 616, 56 S.W.2d 126; the consequence, outcome, sequel, or end effected by prior operation of medium or contributing force or agency referred to as the "means" or "cause", Toups v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., D.C.La., 49 F.Supp. 348, 349; the culmination or end that means may have produced or brought about. Whatcott v. Continental Casualty Co., 85 Utah 406, 39 P.2d 733, 736; Sentinel Life Ins. Co. v. Blackmer, C.C.A.Colo., 77 F.2d 347, 350.

An event may be injury itself rather than means producing it. Juhl v. Hussman-Ligonier Co., Mo.App., 146 S.W.2d 106, 108. An event need not necessarily be a cause, but may be and generally is a result. Guillod v. Kansas City Power & Light Co., 224 Mo.App. 382, 18 S.W.2d 97, 100.

The word includes all of steps or connected Incidents from first cause to final result, and may include both cause and effect. Rinehart v. F. M. Stamper Co., 227 Mo.App. 653, 55 S.W.2d 729. The word is broad enough to include an omission. Texas Cities Gas Co. v. Dickens, Tex.Civ. App., 156 S.W.2d 1010, 1016.

The "making of a contract" is an "event". Brown v. Oneida Knitting Mills, 226 Wis. 662, 277 N.W. 653, 655.

In reference to judicial and quasi judicial proceedings, "event" means the conclusion, end, or final outcome or result of a litigation; as, in the phrase "abide the event," speaking of costs or of an agreement that one suit shall be governed by the determination in another. Reeves v. McGregor, 9 Adol. & El. 576; Benjamin v. Ver Nooy, 168 N.Y. 578, 61 N.E. 971; Gordon v. Krellman, 217 App.Div. 477, 216 N.Y.S. 778, 779.

Where costs are awarded to an appellant to abide the event, the "event" which determines whether the appellant is entitled to an award of costs of appeal is his success in obtaining a judgment on the merits on the retrial. Commercial Sealeaf Co.. v. Purepac Corporation, 169 Misc. 133, 7 N.Y.S.2d 146, 148.

EVENT OF ANY SUIT. Means legal event of any suit. Drainage Dist. No. 1 of Lincoln County v. Kirkpatrick-Pettis Co., 140 Neb. 530, 300 N.W. 582, 587; Geis v. Geis, 125 Neb. 394, 250 N.W. 252.

EVENTUS EST QUI EX CAUSA SEQUITUR; ET DICITUR EVENTUS QUIA EX CAUSIS EVENIT. 9 Coke, 81. An event is that which follows from the cause, and is called an "event" because it eventuates from causes.

EVENTUS VARIOS RES NOVA SEMPER HABET. Co. Litt. 379. A new matter always produces various events.

EVERY. Each one of all; all the separate individuals who constitute the whole, regarded one by one. Smith v. Hall, 217 Ky. 615, 290 S.W. 480, 482; Salo v. Pacific Coast Casualty Co., 95 Wash. 109, 163 P. 384, 385, L.R.A.1917D, 613. The term is sometimes equivalent to "all"; Erskine v. Pyle, 51 S.D. 262, 213 N.W. 500, 502; and sometimes to "each"; Miller v. Rodd, 285 Pa. 16, 131 A. 482, 483.

EVERY CONTRACT OF HIRING, VERBAL, WRITTEN OR IMPLIED. Means wherever and by whomsoever made. De Gray v. Miller Bros. Const. Co., 106 Vt. 259, 173 A. 556, 562.

EVERY CORPORATION. Statute providing that books of "every corporation" shall be open to inspection of shareholders, held applicable to foreign corporation doing business within state. Getridge v. State Capital Co., 129 Cal.App. 86, 18 P. 2d 375, 376.

EVERY MAN MUST BE TAKEN TO CONTEMPLATE THE PROBABLE CONSEQUENCES OF THE ACT HE DOES. Lord Ellenborough, 9 East, 277. A fundamental maxim in the law of evidence. Best, Pres. § 16; 1 Phil.Ev. 444. (Every man is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his own voluntary acts. 1 Greenl.Evid. § 18; 9 B. & C. 643; 3 Maule & S. 11; Webb, Poll.Torts 35.)

EVERY OTHER THING. This phrase, as used in requiring employer to furnish safe place of employment and to do "every other thing" reasonably necessary to protect employees, relates to things of same kind that employer must necessarily do in making place safe. Northwestern Casualty & Surety Co. v. Industrial Commission, 194 Wis. 337, 216 N.W. 485, 486.

EVERY OWNER. As used in law making "every owner" of a motor vehicle liable for personal injuries in certain circumstances include a municipality. Kelly v. City of Niagara Falls, 131 Misc. 934, 229 N.Y.S. 328, 331.

EVERY PART. As used in charge on caveat to probate of will, the signature is included in "every part" of will. Dulin v. Dulin, 197 N.C. 215, 148 S.E. 175, 178.

EVERY PERSON. Statute making it misdemeanor for "every person" to sell appointments to public office applies to all persons whether public officials or not. Smalley v. State, 75 Okl.Cr. 10, 127 P.2d 869, 870.

Statute making it duty of "every person" to pay taxes without demand includes receivers. Hood v. Bond, 42 N.M. 295, 77 P.2d 180, 188.

Statute providing for arrest of every person in city engaged in violating law or ordinance includes female offenders. City of Janesville v. Tweedell, 217 Wis. 395, 258 N.W. 437.

Where a law specifically excludes any person engaged in certain transportation from definition of "contract hauler" and defines "for hire carrier" to include "every person," except "certified operator" and "contract hauler," "every person" includes those engaged in such transportation. State ex rel. Scott v. Superior Court for Thurston County, 173 Wash. 547, 24 P.2d 87.

EVERY PERSON, FIRM OR CORPORATION. City ordinance providing "every person, firm or corporation" should pay gasoline tax held to include receivers. Kansas City, Mo. v. Johnson, C. C.A.Mo., 70 F.2d 360, 361.

EVERY RESIDENT OF THIS STATE, As used in constitutional provision partially exempting from taxation those honorably discharged from military service applies to every person who fulfills requirements of provision regardless of sex. Lockhart v. Wolden, 17 Ca1.2d 628, 111 P.2d 319, 320.

EVERY RIGHT, TITLE, INTEREST OR THING. Tender of "every right, title, interest or thing" received is tender of everything received in action to rescind land contract. Mathews v. Tannenbaum, 139 Cal.App. 500, 34 P.2d 233, 235.

EVERY STOCK CORPORATION. Statute making stockholders of "every stock corporation" liable for employees' services refers to domestic stock corporations only. Bogardus v. Fitzpatrick, 139 Misc. 533, 247 N.Y.S. 692, 693.

EVERY SUCH PROVISION. In statute providing that devise for jointure of wife shall bar her dower and that every such provision by will shall be taken as intended in lieu of dower, "every such provision" means devise for jointure of wife. Shackelford v. Shackelford, 181 Va. 869, 27 S.E.2d 354, 359.

EVES-DROPPERS. See Eaves-Droppers.

EVICT. Civil law. To recover anything from a person by virtue of the judgment of a court or judicial sentence.

Common law. To dispossess, or turn out of the possession of lands by process of law. Also to recover land by judgment at law. "If the land is evicted, no rent shall be paid." 10 Coke, 128a.

The term "evicted," means deprivation by one of office, or of salary attached thereto, to which another is, or may be, entitled. The term "evicted" properly applies only to realty and has been used to describe inability to get promised possession, and also, as deprivation of the possession of lands and tenements. Hawkins v. Voisine, 292 Mich. 357, 290 N.W. 827, 828.

To "evict" a tenant is to deprive him of possession of the leased premises or disturb him in their beneficial enjoyment so as to cause tenant to abandon the premises. Estes v. Gatliff, 291 Ky. 93, 163 S.W.2d 273, 276.

EVICTION. Dispossession by process of law; the act of depriving a person of the possession of lands which he has held, in pursuance of the judgment of a court. Reasoner v. Edmundson, 5 Ind. 395; Cowdrey v. Coit, 44 N.Y. 392, 4 Am.Rep. 690; Home Life Ins. Co. v. Sherman, 46 N.Y. 372.

Originally and technically, the dispossession must be by judgment of law; if otherwise, it was an ouster; Webb v. Alexander, 7 Wend.N.Y. 285; but the necessity of legal process was long ago abandoned in England; 4 Term 617; and in this country also it is settled that there need not be legal process; Green v. Irving, 54 Miss. 450, 28 Am.Rep. 360; Thomas v. Becker, 190 Iowa 237, 180 N.W. 285, 286. Any actual entry and dispossession, adversely and lawfully made under paramount title, will be an eviction. Rawle, Co*v.* § 133; Gallison v. Downing, 244 Mass. 33, 138 N.E. 315, 318.

In a more popular sense, the term denotes turning a tenant of land out of possession, either by re-entry or by legal proceedings, such as an action of ejectment. Sweet.

By a loose extension, the term is sometimes applied to the ousting of a person from the possession of chattels; but, properly, it applies only to realty.

A wrongful act upon the part of the landlord is involved in eviction. Cerruti v. Burdick, 130 Conn. 284, 33 A.2d 333, 335.

An entry under paramount title, so as to interfere with the rights of the grantee, is implied in eviction. The object of the party making the entry is immaterial, whether it be to take all or a part of the land itself or merely an incorporeal right. Phrases equivalent in meaning are "ouster by paramount title," "entry and disturbance," "possession under an elder title," and the like. Mitchell v. Warner, 5 Conn. 497.

An "eviction by title paramount" arises when a third person establishes title to demised premises superior to that of landlord, and by virtue of that title gains possession. John R. Thompson Co. v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., D.C.Ohio, 31 F.Supp. 399, 400.

Any act of landlord which deprives tenant of beneficial enjoyment of premises. Adler v. Sklaroff, 154 Pa.Super. 444, 36 A.2d 231,,233.

Any wrong of lessor which results in substantial interference with lessee's rights. Harrison v. Fregger, 88 Mont. 448, 294 P. 372, 373.

Deprivation of lessee of possession of premises or disturbance of lessee in beneficial enjoyment so as to cause tenant to abandon the premises. Estes v. Gatliff, 291 Ky. 93, 163 S.W.2d 273, 276.

Dispossession of tenant by landlord. Lesher v. Louisville Gas & Electric Co., D.C.Ky., 49 F.Supp. 88, 89, 90.

Dispossession under judgment, though it need not be by force of process under judgment. Edgemont Coal Co. v. Asher, D.C.Ky., 298 F. 1000; Walker v. Robinson, 163 Ky. 618, 174 S. W. 503, 505.

Entry on and taking possession of any part of demised premises by landlord during continuance of lease and exclusion of tenant. Landon v. Hill, 136 Cal.App. 560, 29 P.2d 281, 282.

Formerly the word was used to denote an expulsion by the assertion of a paramount title or by process of law. Port Utilities Commission of Charleston v. Marine Oil Co., 173 S.C. 345, 175 S.E. 818.

Intentional exclusion of lessee from some part of leased premises. Gorfinkle v. Abrams, 263 Mass. 569, 161 N.E. 795.

Interference with tenant's beneficial enjoyment of premises. Peale v. Tvete, 172 Wash. 296, 20 P.2d 12, 13; Kahn v. Bancamerica-Blair Corporation, 327 Pa. 209, 193 A. 905, 906.

Manual or physical explusion or exclusion from demised premises, or any part thereof is unnecessary to constitute eviction. Kennerly v. B. F. Avery & Sons Plow Co., Tex. Civ.App., 300 S.W. 159, 161.

Originally an eviction was understood to be a dispossession of the tenant by some act of his landlord or the failure of his title. Of later years it has come to include any wrongful act of the landlord which may result in an interference with the tenant's possession in whole or in part. The act may be one of omission as well as one of commission. Holden v. Tidwell, 37 Old. 553, 133 P. 54, 56, 49 L.R.A.,N.S., 369.

Something of a grave and permanent character by landlord or those acting under his authority with intent and effect to deprive tenant of use, occupation, and enjoyment of premises or part thereof, or the establishment or assertion against tenant of a title paramount to the landlord. Blomberg v. Evans, 194 N.C. 113, 138 S.E. 593, 594, 53 A.L.R. 686; Aguglia v. Cavicchia, 229 Mass. 263, 118 N.E. 283, 284, L.R.A.1918C, 59; Waldorf System v. Dawson, 49 R.I. 57, 139 A. 789, 790; Automobile Supply Co. v. Scene-in-Action Corporation, 340 Ill. 196, 172 N.E. 35, 37, 69 A.L.R. 1085.

When it would be useless for covenantee to attempt to maintain his title, as where holder of superior title has taken actual possession or threatens suit, an eviction occurs in legal contemplation. Love v. Minerva Petroleum Corporation, Tex.Civ.App., 105 S.W.2d 892, 894.

When tenant's possession or enjoyment of premises is interfered with by a third person not acting by landlord's authority, or consent, there is no "eviction". Smith v. Nortz Lumber Co., N.D., 72 N.D. 353, 7 N.W.2d 435, 437; Prospect Point Land Improvement Co. v. Jackson, 109 N.J.L. 385, 162 A. 576, 577.

Civil Law

The abandonment which one is obliged to make of a thing, in pursuance of a sentence by which he is condemned to do so. Poth.Contr.Sale, pt. 2, c. 1, § 2, art. 1, no. 83. The abandonment which a buyer is compelled to make of a thing purchased, in pursuance of a judicial sentence.

Eviction is the loss suffered by the buyer of the totality of the thing sold, or of a part thereof, occasioned by the right or claims of a third person. Civil Code La. art. 2500.

For "Actual Eviction," "Constructive Eviction," "Partial Eviction," and "Total Eviction," see those titles.

EVIDENCE. Any species of proof, or probative matter, legally presented at the trial of an issue, by the act of the parties and through the medium of witnesses, records, documents, concrete objects, etc., for the purpose of inducing belief in the minds of the court or jury as to their contention. Hotchkiss v. Newton, 10 Ga. 567; O'Brien v. State, 69 Neb. 691, 96 N.W. 650; Hubbell v. U. S., 15 Ct.C1. 606; McWilliams v. Rodgers, 56 Ala. 93.

EVIDENCE BY INSPECTION is such evidence as is addressed directly to the senses without intervention of testimony. Kabase v..State, 31 Ala. App. 77, 12 So.2d 758, 764.

EVIDENCE COMPLETED. Means that both sides have offered testimony and rested, or that plaintiff has rested and defendant has made motion for finding on plaintiff's case .and stands on motion and declines to offer evidence. Merriam v. Sugrue, D.C.Mun.App., 41 A.2d 166, 167.

EVIDENCE; LAW OF. The aggregate of rules and principles regulating the admissibility, relevancy, and weight and sufficiency of evidence in legal proceedings. See Ballinger's Ann.Codes & St.Or.1901, § 678, Code 1930, § 9-102.

EVIDENCE OF DEBT. A term applied to written instruments or securities for the payment of money, importing on their face the existence of a debt. 1 Rev.St.N.Y. p. 599, § 55.

EVIDENCE OF INSURABILITY SATISFACTORY TO COMPANY. Means evidence which would satisfy a reasonable person experienced in the life insurance business that insured was in an insurable condition. Bowie v. Bankers Life Co., C.C.A.Colo., 105 F.2d 806, 808.

EVIDENCE OF TITLE. A deed or other document establishing the title to property, especially real estate.

EVIDENCE PROPER is something capable of being weighed in scales of reason and compared and estimated with other matter of the probative sort. Neely v. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. of Chattanooga, Tenn., 322 Pa. 417, 185 A. 784, 788.

EVIDENCE REASONABLY TENDING TO SUPPORT VERDICT. Means evidence that is competent, relevant, and material, and which to rational and impartial mind naturally leads, or involuntarily tends to lead, to conclusion for which there is valid, just, and substantial reason. Kelly v. Oliver Farm Equipment Sales Co., 169 Okl. 269, 36 P.2d 888, 891, EVIDENCE SUFFICIENT IN LAW. Substantial evidence. Almon v. Morgan County, 245 Ala. 241, 16 So.2d 511, 516.

EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT FINDINGS. In action to review an order of the Unemployment Compensation Commission "evidence" to support findings meant substantial evidence or such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion and enough to justify, if the trial were to a jury, a refusal to direct a verdict when the conclusion sought to be drawn from it is one of fact for jury. Jordan v. Craighead, 114 Mont. 337, 136 P.2d 526, 528.

EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT THE VERDICT. Means some legal evidence tending to prove every material fact in issue as to which the party in whose favor the verdict was rendered had the burden of proof. Nicolai-Neppach Co. v. Smith, 154 Or. 450, 58 P.2d 1016, 1024, 107 A.L.R. 1124.

EVIDENT. Clear to the understanding and satisfactory to the judgment; manifest; plain; obvious; conclusive. Russell v. State, 71 Fla. 236, 71 So. 27, 28. Noticeable; apparent to observation. Hamill v. Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co., 165 Iowa 266, 143 N.W. 99, 107. That is "evident" that suggests more than a mental process, but no difficulty in seeing that the thing is true. Bremner v. Marc Eidlitz & Son, 118 Conn. 666, 174 A. 172, 174.

A constitutional provision forbidding bail in capital cases when the proof is "evident," means that, if the evidence is such as to lead a dispassionate mind to the conclusion that the accused is guilty, and that if the law is properly administered a conviction would be had of a capital offense, bail should be denied. Ex parte Vermillion, 102 Tex.Cr.R. 590, 280 S.W. 771; Ex parte Bates, 90 Tex.Cr.R. 406, 235 S.W. 879, 880; Ex parte Dumas, 110 Tex.Cr.R. 1, 7 S.W.2d 90, 9L

Under constitutional provision that all prisoners shall be bailable unless for capital offenses when the proof is evident, the word "evident" means that the accused, with a cool and deliberate mind and formed design, did maliciously kill another, and that a dispassionate jury would, not only convict him, but would also assess the death penalty. Ex parte Redding, 147 Tex.Cr.R. 434, 180 S.W.2d 951, 952; Ex parte Shults, 127 Tex.Cr.R. 484, 77 S.W.2d 877.

—Proof Evident. See Proof.

EVIDENTIA, L. Evidence. See Preuve.

EVIDENTIARY. Having the quality of evidence; constituting evidence; evidencing. A term introduced by Bentham, and, from its convenience, adopted by other writers.

EVIDENTIARY FACTS. Facts necessary to prove the essential or ultimate fact. People ex rel. Hudson & M. R. Co. v. Sexton, Sup., 44 N.Y. S.2d 884, 885. Facts which furnish evidence of existence of some other fact. General Tire & Rubber Co. v. Cooper, 176 Miss. 491, 165 So. 420, 421; proofs and testimony. In re Britton's Will, 167 Misc. 747, 4 N.Y.S.2d 715, 719; such facts must be found from testimony and other evidence. Texas Employers Ins. Ass'n v. Reed, Tex.Civ.App., 150 S.W.2d 858, 862.

Those which have a legitimate bearing on the matter or question in issue and which are directly (not inferentially) established by the evidence in the case. Woodiill v. Patton, 76 Ind. 579, 40 Am.Rep. 269. Facts which can be directly established by testimony or evidence ;-distinguished from "ultimate facts." Real Estate Title, Ins. & Trust Co. v. Lederer, D.C.Pa., 229 F. 799, 804.

EVIDENTLY. Means in an evident manner, perceptibly, clearly, obviously, plainly. It is employed to express the idea of full-proof conviction. Tennes v. Tennes, 320 Ill.App. 19, 50 N.E.2d 132, 139.

EVIL. It is an "evil" within rule that either means or end of conspiracy must be evil, to frustrate or impede a government function, whether that function is performed under a constitutional or an unconstitutional law. U. S. v. Rhoads, D.C. D.C., 48 F.Supp. 175, 176.

EVIL REPUTATION. Character imputed to person in community is generally bad. People v. Pieri, 269 N.Y. 315, 199 N.E. 495, 497.

EVOCATION. In French law. The withdrawal of a cause from the cognizance of an inferior court, and bringing it before another court or judge. In some respects this process resembles the proceedings upon certiorari.

EVOLUTION. Every useful art has its technique which is practiced by those who are skilled in it, and which is broadened in its usefulness thereto from precedent to precedent. This is the process of "evolution"—a phenomenon in which the expectable follows the expectable. Less Car Load Lots Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., D.C.N.Y., 10 F. Supp. 642, 648.

EVOLVED. Means "developed" and may apply to any person attaining highly developed mental training and experience in arts and sciences and profession of teaching, medicine, or law. In re Carpenter's Estate, 163 Misc. 474, 297 N.Y.S. 649, 654.

EWAGE. (L. Fr. Ewe, water.) In old English law. Toll paid for water passage. Cowell. The same as aquage or aquagium. Tomlins.

EWBRICE. Adultery; spouse-breach; marriage-breach. Cowell; Tomlins.

EWRY. An office in the royal household where the table linen, etc., is taken care of. Wharton.

EX. A latin preposition meaning from, out of, by, on, on account of, or according to.

A prefix, denoting removal, cessation or former. Prefixed to the name of an office, relation, status, etc., it denotes that the person spoken of once occupied that office or relation, but does so no longer, or that he is now out of it. Thus, *ex-*mayor, ex-partner, ex-judge.

A prefix which is equivalent to "without," "reserving," or "excepting." In this use, probably an abbreviation of "except." Thus, ex-interest, *ex-*coupons.

"A sale of bonds 'ex. July coupons' means a sale reserving the coupons; that is, a sale in which the seller receives, in addition to the purchase price, the benefit of the coupons, which benefit he may realize either by detaching them or receiving from the buyer an equivalent consideration." Porter v. Wormser, 94 N.Y. 445.

Also used as an abbreviation for "exhibit." See Dugan v. Trisler, 69 Ind.. 555.

EX ABUNDANTL Out of abundance; abundantly; superfluously; more than sufficient. Calvin.

EX ABUNDANT! CAUTELA. Lat. Out of abundant caution. "The practice has arisen abundanti cautela." 8 East, 326; Lord Ellenborough, 4 Maule & S. 544.

EX ADVERSO. On the other side. 2 Show. 461. Applied to counsel.

EX ZEQUITATE. According to equity; in equity. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 10, § 3.

EX ./EQUO ET BONO. A phrase derived from the civil law, meaning, in justice and fairness; according to what is just and good; according to equity and conscience. 3 Bl. Comm. 163.

EX ALTERA PARTE. Of the other part.

EX ANTECEDENTIBUS ET CONSEQUENTIBUS FIT OPTIMA INTERPRETATIO. A passage in a statute is best interpreted by reference to what precedes and what follows it. Behrens v. State, 140 Neb. 671, 1 N.W.2d 289, 292; The best interpretation [of a part of an instrument] is made from the antecedents and the consequents, [from the preceding and following parts.] 2 Inst. 317.

The law will judge of a deed or other instrument, consisting of divers parts or clauses, by looking at the whole; and will give to each part its proper office, so as to ascertain and carry out the intention of the parties. Broom, Max. *577. The whole instrument is to be viewed and compared in all its parts, so that every part of it may be made consistent and effectual. 2 Kent, Comm. 555.

EX ARBITRIO JUDICIS. At, in, or upon the discretion of the judge. 4 Bl. Comm. 394. A term of the civil law. Inst. 4, 6, 31.

EX ASSENSU CURIAE. By or with the consent of the court.

EX ASSENSU PATRIS. By or with the consent of the father.

A species of dower ad ostium ecclesice, during the life of the father of the husband; the son, by the. father's copsent expressly given, endowing his wife with parcel of his father's lands. Abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 105, § 13.

EX ASSENSU SUO. With his assent. Formal words in judgments for damages by default. Comb. 220.

EX CATHEDRA. From the chair. Originally applied to the decisions of the popes from their cathedra, or chair. Hence, authoritative; having the weight of authority.

EX CAUSA, L. Lat. By title.

EX CERTA SCIENTIA. Of certain or sure knowledge. These words were anciently used in patents, and imported full knowledge of the subject-matter on the part of the king. See 1 Coke, 40b.

EX COLORS, By color; under color of; under pretense, show, or protection of. Thus, ex colore officii, under color of office.

EX COMITATE. Out of comity or courtesy.

EX COMMODATO. From or out of loan. A term applied in the old law of England to a right of action arising out of a loan, (commodatum.) Glanv. lib. 10, c. 13; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 166.

EX COMPARATIONE SCRIPTORUM. By a comparison of writings or handwritings. A term in the law of evidence. Best, Pres. 218.

EX CONCESSIS. From the premises granted. According to what has been already allowed.

EX CONSULTO. With consultation or deliberation.

EX CONTINENTL Immediately; without any interval or delay; incontinently. A term of the civil law. Calvin.

EX CONTRACTU. From or out of a contract.

In both the civil and the common law; rights and causes of action are divided into two classes,-those arising ex contractu, (from a contract,) and those arising ex delicto, (from a delict or tort.) See 3 Bl.Comm. 117; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 384. See Scharf v. People, 134 Ill. 240, 24 N.E. 761; Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Maxam, 70 Ind.App. 266, 117 N.E. 801, 807.

If cause of action declared in pleading arises from breach of promise, the action is "ex contractu". Chambers v. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co., 232 Ala. 609, 168 So. 893.

EX CURIA. Out of court; away from the court.

EX DEBITO JUSTITIZE. From or as a debt of justice; in accordance with the requirement of justice; of right; as a matter of right. The opposite of ex gratia, (q. v.). 3 Bl. Comm. 48, 67.

EX DEFECTU SANGUINIS. From failure of blood; for want of issue.

EX DELICTO. From a delict, tort, fault, crime, or malfeasance.

In both the civil and the common law, obligations and causes of action are divided into two great classes,-those arising ex contractu, (out of a contract,) and those ex delicto. The latter are such as grow out of or are founded upon a wrong or tort, e. g., trespass, trover, replevin. These terms were known in English law at a very early, period. See Inst. 4, 1, pr.; Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 384; 3 Bl.Comm. 117; Bract. fol. 101b; King v. New Orleans Ry. & Light Co., 140 La. 843, 74 So. 168, 169; Lamb v. McHan, 17 Ga.App. 5, 86 S.E. 252, 253; Seney v. Knight, 292 Ill. 206, 126 N.E. 761, 763.

An action "ex delicto" is an action of tort; an action arising out of fault, misconduct, or malfeasance. Sayers & Muir Service Station v. Indian Refining Co., 266 Ky. 779; 100 S.W.2d 687, 689. If cause of action declared in pleading arises from breach of duty growing out of contract, it is in form "ex delicto" and case. Chambers v. Birmingham Trust & Savings Co., 232 Ala. 609, 168 So. 893.

EX DELICTO NON EX SUPPLICIO EMERGIT INFAMIA. Infamy arises from the crime, not from the punishment.

EX DEMISSIONE (commonly abbreviated ex dem.) Upon the demise. A phrase forming part of the title of the old action of ejectment.

EX DIRECTO. Directly; immediately. Story, Bills, § 199.

EX DIUTURNITATE TEMPORIS, OMNIA PILE-SUMUNTUR SOLEMNITER ESSE ACTA. From length of time [after lapse of time] all things are presumed to have been done in due form. Co. Litt. 6b; Best, Ev. Introd. § 43; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 20.

EX DOLO MALO. Out of fraud; out of deceitful or tortious conduct. A phrase applied to obligations and causes of action vitiated by fraud or deceit.

EX DOLO MALO NON ORITUR ACTIO. Out of fraud no action arises; fraud never gives a right of action. No court will lend its aid to a man who founds his cause of action upon an immoral or illegal act. Cowp. 343; Broom, Max. 729.

EX DONATIONIBUS AUTEM FEODA MILITARIA MAGNUM SERJEANTIUM NON CONTINENTIBUS ORITUR NOBIS QUODDAM NOMEN GENERALE, QUOD EST SOCAGIUM. Co. Litt. 86. From grants not containing military fees or grand serjeanty, a kind of general name is used by us, which is "socage."

EX EMPTO. Out of purchase; founded on purchase. A term of the civil law, adopted by Bracton. Inst. 4, 6, 28; Bract. fol. 102. See Actio ex Empto.

EX FACIE. From the face; apparently; evidently. A term applied to what appears on the face of a writing.

EX FACTO. From' or in consequence of a fact or action; actually. Usually applied to an unlawful or tortious act as the foundation of a title, etc. Sometimes used as equivalent to "de facto." Bract. fol. 172.

EX FACTO JUS ORITUR. The law arises out of the fact. Broom, Max. 102. A rule of law continues in abstraction and theory, until an act is done on which it can attach and assume as it were a body and shape. Best, Ev. Introd. § 1.

EX FICTIONE JURIS. By a fiction of law.

EX FREQUENTI DELICTO AUGETUR PCENA. 2 Inst. 479. Punishment increases with increasing crime.

EX GRATIA. Out of grace; as a matter of grace, favor, or indulgence; gratuitous. A term applied to anything accorded as a favor; as distinguished from that which may be demanded ex debito, as a matter of right.

EX GRAVI QUERELA. (From or on the grievous complaint.) In old English practice. The name of a writ (so called from its initial words) which lay for a person to whom any lands or tenements in fee were devised by will, (within any city, town, or borough wherein lands were devisable by custom,) and the heir of the devisor entered and detained them from him. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 198, L, et seq.; 3 Reeve, Eng. Law, 49. Abolished by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27, § 36.

EX HYPOTHESI. By the hypothesis; upon the supposition; upon the theory or facts assumed.

EX INDUSTRIA. With contrivance or deliberation; designedly; on purpose. See 1 Kent, Comm. 318; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat 334, 4 L.Ed. 97.

EX INTEGRO. Anew; afresh.

EX JUSTA CAUSA. From a just or lawful cause; by a just or legal title.

EX LEGE. By the law; by force of law; as a matter of law.

EX LEGIBUS. According to the laws. A phrase of the civil law, which means according to the intent or spirit of the law, as well as according to the words or letter. Dig. 50, 16, 6. See Calvin.

EX LICENTIA REGIS. By the king's license. 1 Bl. Comm. 168, note.

EX LOCATO. From or out of lease or letting. A term of the civil law, applied to actions or rights of action arising out of the contract of locatum, (q. v.) Inst. 4, 6, 28. Adopted at an early period in the law of England. Bract. fol. 102; 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 168.

EX MALEFICIO. Has been defined variously as from or growing out of wrongdoing; tortious; tortiously; growing out of, or founded on, misdoing or tort; on account of misconduct; by virtue of or out of an illegal act. "Ex maleficio" is probably synonymous with "malfeasance". Lucas v. Central Missouri Trust Co., 350 Mo. 593, 166 S.W.2d 1053, 1056.

This term is frequently used in the civil law as the synonym of "ex delicto," (q. v.,) and is thus contrasted with "ex contractu," In this sense it is of more rare occurrence in the common law, though found in Bracton (fols. 99, 101, 102.)

EX MALEFICIO NON ORITUR CONTRACTUS. A contract cannot arise out of an act radically vicious and illegal. 1 Term, 734; 3 Term, 422; Broom, Max. 734.

EX MALLS MORIBUS BONZE LEGES NAIVE SUNT. 2 Inst. 161. Good laws arise from evil morals, i. e., are necessitated by the evil behavior of men.

EX MALITIA. From malice; maliciously. In the law of libel and slander, this term imports a publication that is false and without legal excuse. Dixon v. Allen, 69 Cal. 527, 11 P. 179.

EX MERO MOTU. Of his own mere motion; of his own accord; voluntarily and without prompting or request.

Royal letters patent which are granted at the crown's own instance, and without request made, are said to be granted ex mero motu. When a court interferes, of its own motion, to object to an irregularity, or to do something which the parties are not strictly entitled to, but which will prevent injustice, it is said to act ex mero motu, or ex proprio motu, or sua sponte, all these terms being here equivalent.

EX MORA. From or in consequence of delay. Interest is allowed ex mora; that is, where there has been delay in returning a sum borrowed. A term of the civil law. Story, Bailm. § 84.

EX MORE. According to custom. Calvin.

EX MULTITUDINE SIGNORUM, COLLIGITUR IDENTITAS VERA. From a great number of signs or marks, true identity is gathered or made up. Bac. Max. 103, in regula 25. A thing described by a great number of marks is easily identified, though, as to some, the description may not be strictly correct. Id.

EX MUTUO. From or out of loan. In the old law of England, a debt was said to arise ex mutuo when one lent another anything which consisted in number, weight, or measure. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 159; Bract. fol. 99.

EX NECESSITATE. Of necessity. 3 Rep. Ch. 123.

EX NECESSITATE LEGIS. From or by necessity of law. 4 Bl. Comm. 394.

EX NECESSITATE REI. From the necessity or urgency of • the thing or case. 2 Pow. Dev. (by Jarman,) 308.

EX NIHILO NIHIL FIT. From nothing nothing comes. Jackson v. Waldron, 13 Wend. N.Y. 178, 221; Root v. Stuyvesant, 18 Wend. N.Y. 257, 301.

EX NUDO PACTO NON ORITUR [NASCITUR] ACTIO. Out of a nude or naked pact [that is, a bare parol agreement without consideration] no action arises. Bract. fol. 99; Fleta, lib. 2, c. 56, • § 3; Plowd. 305. Out of a promise neither attended with particular solemnity (such as belongs to a specialty) nor with any consideration no legal liability can arise. 2 Steph. Comm. 113. A parol agreement, without a valid consideration, cannot be made the foundation of an action. A leading maxim both of the civil and common law. Cod. 2, 3, 10; Id. 5, 14, 1; 2 Bl. Comm. 445; Smith, Cont. 85, 86.

EX OFFICIO. From office; by virtue of the office; without any other warrant or appointment than that resulting from the holding of a particular office.

Powers may be exercised by an officer which are not specifically conferred uopn him, but are necessarily implied in his office; these are ex officio. Thus, a judge has ex officio the powers of a conservator of the peace. Courts are bound to notice public statutes judicially and ex officio. King v. Physicians' Casualty Ass'n of America, 97 Neb. 637, 150 N.W. 1010, 1011; Lobrano v. Police Jury of Parish of Plaquemines, 150 La. 14, 90 So. 423, 424; Allin v. Mercer County, 174 Ky. 566, 192 S. W. 638, 640.

EX OFFICIO INFORMATION. In English law. A criminal information filed by the attorney general ex officio on behalf of the crown, in the court of king's bench, for offenses more immediately affecting the government, and to be distinguished from informations in which the crown is the nominal prosecutor. Mozley & Whitley; 4 Steph. Comm. 372-378.

EX OFFICIO OATH. An oath taken by offending priests; abolished by 13 Car. II. St. 1, c. 12.

EX OFFICIO SERVICES. Services which the law annexes to a particular office and requires the incumbent to perform. City of Birmingham v. Hawkins, 208 Ala. 79, 94 So. 62, 64; Nichols v. Galveston County, 111 Tex. 50, 228 S.W. 547, 548.

"Ex officio services," which deputy attorney general may perform in place of Attorney General, are services imposed by law on public officer by virtue of his office and relating to public interests or business of county or state. Chemical Bank & Trust Co. v. Oakland County, 264 Mich. 673, 251 N.W. 395.

EX PACTO ILLICITO NON ORITUR ACTIO. From an illegal contract an action does not arise. Broom, Max. 742. See 7 Clark & F. 729.

EX PARTE. On one side only; by or for one party; done for, in behalf of, or on the application of, one party only.

A judicial proceeding, order, injunction, etc., is said to be ex parte when it is taken or granted at the instance and for the benefit of one party only, and without notice to, or contestation by, any person adversely interested. Janin v. Logan, 209 Ky. 811, 273 S.W. 531, 532; Van Alen v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, 37 Cal.App. 696, 174 P. 672; Stella v. Mosele, 299 53, 19 N.E.2d 433, 435.

In its primary sense, ex parte, as applied to an application in a judicial proceeding, means that it is made by a person who is not a party to the proceeding, but who has an interest in the matter which entitles him to make the application. Thus, in a bankruptcy proceeding or an administration action, an application by A. B., a creditor, or the like, would be described as made "ex parte A. B.," e., on the part of A. B.

In its more usual sense, ex parte means that an application is made by one party to a proceeding in the absence of the other. Thus, an ex parte injunction is one granted without the opposite party having had notice of the application. It would not be called "ex parte" if he had proper notice of it, and chose not to appear to oppose it. Sweet.

"Ex parte," in the heading of a reported case, signifies that the name following is that of the party upon whose application the case is heard.

EX PARTE MATERNA. On the mother's side; of the maternal line.

EX PARTE PATERNA. On the father's side; of the paternal line.

The phrases "ex parte materna" and "ex parte paterna" denote the line or blood of the mother or father, and have no, such restricted or limited sense as from the mother or father exclusively. Banta v. Demarest, 24 N.J.L. 431.

EX PARTE TALIS. A writ that lay for a bailiff or receiver, who, having auditors appointed to take his accounts, cannot obtain of them reasonable allowance, but is cast into prison. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 129.

EX PAUCIS DICTIS INTENDERE PLURIMA POSSIS. Litt. § 384. You can imply many things from few expressions.

EX PAUCIS PLURIMA CONCIPIT INGENIUM. Litt. § 550. From a few words or hints the understanding conceives many things.

EX POST FACTO. After the fact; by an act or fact occurring after some previous act or fact, and relating thereto; by subsequent matter; the opposite of ab initio. Thus, a deed may be good ab inittio, or, if invalid at its inception, may be confirmed by matter ex post facto.

EX POST FACTO LAW. A law passed after the occurrence of a fact or commission of an act, which retrospectively changes the legal consequences or relations of such fact or deed. By Const. U. S. art. 1, § 10, the states are forbidden to pass "any ex post facto law." In this connection the phrase has a much narrower meaning than its literal translation would justify, as will appear from the extracts given below.

A statute which changes punishment which may be imposed for a crime theretofore committed is "ex post facto" only if it prescribes or permits imposition of a greater sentence. People ex rel. Pincus v. Adams, 274 N.Y. 447, 9 N.E.2d 46, 110 A.L.R. 1303.

An "ex post facto law" has been defined as (1) Every law that makes an action, done before the passing of the law, and which was innocent when done, criminal, and punishes such action. (2) Every law that aggravates a crime, or makes it greater than it was when committed. (3) Every law that changes the punishment, and inflicts a greater punishment than the law annexed to the crime when cornmitted. (4) Every law that alters the legal rules of evidence, and receives less or different testimony than the law required at the time of the commission of the offense, in order to convict the offender. All these, and similar laws, are prohibited by the constitution. But a law may be ex post facto, and still not amenable to this constitutional. inhibition; that is, provided it mollifies, instead of aggravating, the rigor of the criminal law. Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall. 277, 18 L.Ed. 356; 3 Story, Const. 212; State v. Malloy, 95 S.C. 441, 78 S.E. 995, 997, Ann.Cas.1915C, 1053; In re Jamestown Caucus Law, 43 R.I. 421, 112 A. 900, 902; State v. Teasley, 194 Ala. 574, 69 So. 723, 725, Ann.Cas. 1918E, 347; Beazell v. State of Ohio, 269 U.S. 167, 46 S.Ct. 68, 70 L.Ed. 216; Hernandez v. State, 43 Ariz. 424, 32 P. 2d 18, 24.

An "ex post facto law" includes every law that creates and punishes a criminal offense which, when done before the passing of the law, was innocent, and every law that aggravates a crime or makes it greater than it was when committed, and every law that inflicts a greater punishment than was attached to the crime when committed. State v. Pleason, 56 N. D. 499, 218 N.W. 154, 155.

An "ex post facto law" is defined as a law which provides for the infliction of punishment upon a person for an act done which, when it was committed, was innocent; a law which aggravates a crime or makes it greater than when it was committed; a law that changes the punishment or inflicts a greater punishment than the law annexed to the crime when it was committed ; a law that changes the rules of evidence and receives less or different testimony than was required at the time of the commission of the offense in order to convict the offender; a law which, assuming to regulate civil rights and remedies only, in effect imposes a penalty or the deprivation of a right which, when done, was lawful; a law which deprives persons accused of crime of some lawful protection to which they have become entitled, such as the protection of a former conviction or acquittal, or of the proclamation of amnesty; every law which, in relation to the offense or its consequences, alters the situation of a person to his disadvantage. State v. Rowe, 116 N.J.L. 48, 181 A. 706.

An "ex post facto law" is one which makes an act punishable in a manner in which it was not punishable when it was committed. Statler v. U. S. Savings & Trust Co., 122 Pa.Super. 189, 186 A. 290, 292; Southern Kraft Corporation v. Hardin, 205 Ark. 512, 169 S.W.2d 637, 643.

An "ex post facto law" is one which makes a crime of an act which when committed was not a crime or a law which increases the punishment for an act already committed. Commonwealth ex rel..Wall v. Smith, 345 Pa. 512, 29 A.2d 912, 913.

An "ex post facto law" is one which renders an act punishable in manner in which it was not punishable when it was committed, or which deprives accused of any substantial right or immunity possessed by him before its passage as to prior offenses. People of U. S. ex rel. Umbenhowar v. McDonnell, D.C.Ill., 11 F.Supp. 1014, 1015.

An ex post facto law is one which renders an act punishable in manner in which it was not punishable when committed. Such a law may inflict penalties on the person, or pecuniary penalties which swell the public treasury. The legislature is therefore prohibited from passing a law by which a man's estate, or any part of it, shall be seized for a crime, which was not declared, by some previous law, to render him liable to such punishment. Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 138, 3 L.Ed. 162.

An increase in possible penalty is "ex post facto" regardless of length of sentence actually imposed. Ex parte Flora, Ohio App., 31 N.E.2d 482, 485.

The plain and obvious meaning of prohibition is that the legislature shall not pass any law, after a fact done by any citizen, which shall have relation to that fact, so as to punish that which was innocent when done; or to add to the punishment of that which was criminal; or to increase the malignity of a crime; or to retrench the rules of evidence, so as to make conviction more easy. This definition of an ex post facto law is sanctioned by long usage. Strong v. State, 1 Black., Ind., 196.

The term "ex post facto law," in the United States constitution, cannot be construed to include and to prohibit the enacting any law after a fact, nor even to prohibit the depriving a citizen of a vested right to property. Calder v. Bull, 3 Da11. 386, 1 L.Ed. 648.

Any law passed after commission of offense for which the defendant is tried which inflicts greater punishment or which alters situation of accused is "ex post facto". United States v. Platt, D.C.Tex., 31 F.Supp. 788, 793.

Statute which punishes as a crime an act previously comnlitted, which was innocent when done, which makes more burdensome punishment for a crime after its commission, or which deprives one charged with crime of any defense available according to law at time act was committed, is "ex post facto". People ex rel. Luciano v. Murphy, 290 N.Y.S. 1011, 1014, 160 Misc. 573.

The operation of a statute to repeal, extend the period of, or provide for the tolling of a statute of limitations under which a complete defense has already accrued, would be "ex post facto". Hill v. State, 146 Tex.Cr.R. 333, 171 S.W.2d 880, 882, 883, 884.

The prohibition of "ex post facto" laws applies only to criminal or penal matters. Bannister v. Bannister, 181 Md. 177, 29 A.2d 287, 289; Garrett Freight Lines v. State Tax Commission, 103 Utah 390, 135 P.2d 523, 527, 146 A.L.R. 1003; Southern Kraft Corporation v. Hardin, 205 Ark. 512, 169 S.W.2d 637, 643.

To render a statute "ex post facto," it must be one which imposes punishment for an act which was not punishable when it was committed, or imposes additional punishment -or alters the situation of the accused to his disadvantage. Andrus v. McCauley, D.C.Wash., 21 F.Supp. 70.

Trial procedure may be changed by Legislature, and new procedure may be made applicable to offenses previously committed, without violation of constitutional provision. People ex rel. Pincus v. Adams, 274 N.Y. 447, 9 N.E.2d 46, 49, 50, 110 A.L.R. 1303.

"Ex post facto" and "retrospective" are not convertible terms. The latter is a term of wider signification than the former and includes it. All ex post facto laws are necessarily retrospective, but not e converso. A curative or confirmatory statute is retrospective, but not ex post facto. Constitutions of nearly all the states contain prohibitions against ex post facto laws, but only a few forbid retrospective legislation in specific terms. Black, Const.Prohib. §§ 170, 172, 222.

Retrospective laws divesting vested rights are impolitic and unjust; but they are not "ex post facto laws," within the meaning of the constitution of the United States, nor repugnant to any other of its provisions; and, if not repugnant to the state constitution, a court cannot pronounce them to be void, merely because in their judgment they are contrary to the principles of natural justice. Albee v. May, 2 Paine, 74 Fed.Cas.No.134.

Every retrospective act is not necessarily an ex post facto law. That phrase embraces only such laws as impose or affect penalties or forfeitures. Locke v. New Orleans, 4 Wall. 172, 18 L. Ed. 334.

Retrospective laws which do not impair the obligation of contracts, or affect vested rights, or partake of the character of ex post facto laws, are not prohibited by the constitution. Bay v. Gage, 36 Barb., N.Y., 447.

The act providing that every sentence of death imposed shall be by electrocution is not an "ex post facto law" because of its retrospective effect. State ex rel. Pierre v. Jones, 200 La. 808, 9 So.2d 42, 45, 47.

EX PRAZECEDENTIBUS ET CONSEQUENTIBUS OPTIMA FIT INTERPRETATIO. 1 Roll. 374. The best interpretation is made from the context.

EX PROPRIO MOTU. Of his own accord. See Ex Mero Motu.

EX PROPRIO VIGORE. By their or its own force. 2 Kent, Comm. 457.

EX PROVISIONE HOMINIS. By the provision of man. By the limitation of the party, as distinguished from the disposition of the law. 11 Coke, 80b.

EX PROVISIONE MARITI. From the provision of the husband.

EX QUASI CONTRACTU. From quasi contract. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 60.

EX RELATIONE. Upon relation or information.

Legal proceedings which are instituted by the attorney general (or other proper person) in the name and behalf of the state, but on the information and at the instigation of an individual who has a private interest in the matter, are said to be taken "on the relation" (ex relatione) of such person, who is called the "relator." Such a cause is usually entitled thus : "State ex rel. Doe v. Roe."

In the books of reports, when a case is said to be reported ex relatione, it is meant that the reporter derives his account of it, not from personal knowledge, but from the relation or narrative of some person who was present at the argument.

EX RIGORE JURIS. According to the rigor or strictness of law; in strictness of law. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 10, § 3.

EX SCRIPTIS OLIM VISIS. From writings formerly seen.

A term used as descriptive of that kind of proof of handwriting where the knowledge has been acquired by the witness having seen letters or other documents professing fo be the handwriting of the party, and having afterwards communicated personally with the party upon the contents of those letters or documents, or having otherwise acted upon them by written answers, producing further correspondence or acquiescence by the party in some matter to which they relate, or by the witness transacting with the party some business to which they relate, or by any other mode of communication between the party and the witness which, in the ordinary course of the transactions of life, induces a reasonable presumption that the letters or documents were the handwriting of the party. 5 Adol. & E. 730.

EX SHIP. See Ship.

EX STATUTO. According to the statute. Fleta. lib. 5, c. 11, § 1.

EX STIPULATU ACTIO. In the civil law. An action of stipulation. An action given to recover marriage portions. Inst. 4, 6, 29.

EX TEMPORE. From or in consequence of time; by lapse of time. Bract. fols. 51, 52. Ex diuturno tempore, from length of time. Id. fol. 51b.

Without preparation or premeditation.

EX TESTAMENTO. From, by, or under a will. The opposite of ab intestato (q. v.).

EX TOTA MATERIA EMERGAT RESOLUTIO. The explanation should arise out of the whole subject-matter; the exposition of a statute should be made from all its parts together. Wing. Max. 238.

EX TURPI CAUSA NON ORITUR ACTIO. Out of a base [illegal, or immoral] consideration, an action does [can] not arise. 1 Selw. N. P. 63; Broom, Max. 730, 732; Story, Ag. § 195.

No disgraceful matter can ground an action. Eidson v. Maddox, 195 Ga. 641, 24 S.E.2d 895, 897.

EX TURK CONTRACTU ACTIO NON ORITUR. From an immoral or iniquitous contract an action does not arise. A contract founded upon an illegal or immoral consideration cannot be enforced by action. 2 Kent, Comm. 466; Dig. 2, 14, 27, 4.

EX UNA PARTE. Of one part or side; on one side.

EX UNO DISCES OMNES. From one thing you can discern all.

EX UTRAQUE PARTE. On both sides. Dyer, 126b.

EX UTRISQUE PARENTIBUS CONJUNCTI. Related on the side of both parents; of the whole blood. Hale, Corn. Law, c. 11.

EX VI TERMINI. From or by the force of the term. From the very meaning of the expression used. 2 Bl. Comm. 109, 115.

EX VISCERIBUS. From the bowels. From the vital part, the very essence of the thing. 10 Coke, 24b; Homer v. Shelton, 2 Metc. Mass. 213. Ex visceribus verborum, from the mere words and nothing else. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 980; Fisher v. Fields, 10 Johns. N.Y. 495.

EX VISITATIONE DEI. By the dispensation of God; by reason of physical incapacity. Anciently, when a prisoner, being arraigned, stood silent instead of pleading, a jury was impaneled to inquire whether he obstinately stood mute or was dumb ex visitatione Dei. 4 Steph. Comm. 394.

Also by natural, as distinguished from violent, causes. When a coroner's inquest finds that the death was due to disease or other natural cause, it is frequently phrased "ex visitatione Dei."

EX VISU SCRIPTIONIS. From sight of the writing; from having seen a person write. A term employed to describe one of the modes of proof of handwriting. Best, Pres. 218.

EX VOLUNTATE. Voluntarily; from freewill or choice.

EXACTION. The wrongful act of an officer or other person in compelling payment of a fee or reward for his services, under color of his official authority, where no payment is due.

Between "extortion" and "exaction" there is this difference : that in the former case the officer extorts more than his due, when something is due to him; in the latter, he exacts what is not his due, when there is nothing due to him. Co.Litt. 368.

EXACTLY ALIKE. Representation that the living apartment on the first floor was exactly like the living apartment on the second floor is specific and definite; exactly alike meaning not absolutely identical, but substantially so in size, design, finish, and fixtures. Lipsher v. Resnikoff, 99 Conn. 13, 120 A. 859.

EXACTOR.
Civil law. A gatherer or receiver of money; a collector of taxes. Cod. 10, 19.

Old English law. A collector of the public moneys; a tax gatherer. Thus, exactor regis was the name of the king's tax collector, who took up the taxes and other debts due the treasury.

EXALTARE. In old English law. To raise; to elevate. Frequently spoken of water, i. e., to raise the surface of a pond or pool.

EXAMEN. L. Lat. A trial. Examen computi, the balance of an account. Townsh. Pl. 223.

EXAMINATION. An investigation; search; interrogating.

Criminal Practice

An investigation by a magistrate of a person who has been charged with crime and arrested, or of the facts and circumstances which are alleged to have attended the crime and to fasten suspicion upon the party so charged, in order to ascertain whether there is sufficient ground to hold him to bail for his trial by the proper court. U. S. W. Stanton, C.C.A.Conn., 17 C.C.A. 475, 70 F. 890; State v. Conrad, 95 N.C. 669. The preliminary hearing to determine whether person charged with having committed a crime should be held for trial. Commonwealth v. Cohen, 102 Pa.Super. 397, 157 A. 32, 33.

Trial Practice

The examination of a witness consists of the series of questions put to him by a party to the action, or his counsel, for the purpose of bringing before the court and jury in legal form the knowledge which the witness has of the facts and matters in dispute, or of probing and sifting his evidence previously given.

Of a long account. This phrase does not mean examination of the account to ascertain the result or effect of it, but proof by testimony of correctness of items composing it. Magown v. Sinclair, 5 Daly N.Y. 63; State ex rel. Hustisford Light, Power & Mfg. Co. v. Grimm, 208 Wis. 366, 243 N.W. 763.

Of bankrupt. This is the interrogation of a bankrupt, in the course of proceedings in bankruptcy, or prior to the adjudication (Cameron v. United States, 231 U.S. 710, 34 S.Ct. 244, 58 L.Ed. 448; In re Fleischer, D.C.N.Y., 151 F. 81), concerning the conduct of his business, the cause of his bankruptcy, his dealings with his creditors and other persons, the amount, kind, and whereabouts of his property, and all matters which may affect the administration and settlement of his estate. This is authorized by Bankruptcy Act, § 7, 30 Stat. 548, 11 U.S.C.A. § 25. The bankrupt's wife or any other person may also be examined concerning the bankrupt's acts, conduct, or property. Bankruptcy Act, § 21, 30 Stat. 551, as amended by Act Feb. 5, 1903, c. 487, § 7, 32 Stat. 798, 11 U.S.C.A. § 44. In re Horgan, C.C.A.N.Y., 39 C.C.A. 118, 98 F. 414.

Of invention. An inquiry made at the patent-office, upon application for a patent, into the novelty and utility of the alleged invention, and as to its interfering with any other patented invention. Rev.St. U. S. § 4893, 35 U.S.C.A. § 36.

Of title. An investigation made by or for a person who intends to purchase real estate, in the offices where the public records are kept, to ascertain the history and present condition of the title to such land, and its status with reference to liens, incumbrances, clouds, etc.

Of wife. See Private Examination.

On his own behalf. For executor or devisee to be "examined on his own behalf", such executor or devisee must be a party to the action. In re Custer's Estate, 229 Iowa 1061, 295 N.W. 848, 852.

For "Cross-Examination," "De Bene Esse", "Direct Examination," "Preliminary Examination," "Pro Interesse Suo," "Reexamination," and "Separate Examination," see those titles.

EXAMINED COPY. A copy of a record, public book, or register, and which has been compared with the original. 1 Campb. 469.

EXAMINER. English law. A person appointed by a court to take the examination of witnesses in an action, e., to take down the result of their interrogation by the parties or their counsel, either by written interrogatories or viva voce. An examiner is generally appointed where a witness is in a foreign country, or is too ill or infirm to attend before the court, and is either an officer of the court, or a person specially appointed for the purpose. Sweet.

New Jersey. An examiner is an officer appointed by the court of chancery to take testimony in causes depending in that court. His powers are similar to those of the English examiner in chancery.

Patent Office. An officer in the patent-office charged with the duty of examining the patentability of inventions for which patents are asked.

For "Special Examiner," see that title.

EXAMINER IN CHANCERY. An officer of the court of chancery, before whom witnesses are examined, and their testimony reduced to writing, for the purpose of being read on the hearing of the cause. Cowell.

EXAMINERS. Persons appointed to question students of law in order to ascertain their qualifications before they are admitted to practice.

EXANNUAL ROLL. In old English practice. A. roll into which (in the old way of exhibiting sheriffs' accounts). the illeviable fines and desperate debts were transcribed, and which was annually read to the sheriff upon his accounting, to see what might be gotten. Cowell.

EXCAMB. In Scotch law. To exchange. 6 Bell, App. Cas. 19, 22.

EXCAMBIATOR. An exchanger of lands; a broker. Obsolete.

EXCAMBION, In Scotch law. Exchange. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 173.

Phrase as used in statute relating to disposition of property coming from a deceased spouse to relict dying intestate and without issue, refers to share a surviving spouse would take under section covering generally distribution of an intestate's property. Russell v. Roberts, 54 Ohio App. 441, 7 N.E.2d 811, 813.

EXCEPT IN TIME OF WAR. In statute providing for delivery to civil authorities of persons accused of crime but • subject to military law, "except in time of war", quoted words merely relieve military authorities in time of war of duty to deliver accused persons to civil authorities. Articles of War, art. 74, 10 U.S.C.A. § 1546. People v. Williams, 184 Misc. 510, 55 N.Y.S.2d 181, 182.

EXCEPT RIGHT OF WAY. Recitals "less the right of way" and "except right of way" in granting clause of deed have well-defined accepted certain and unambiguous meaning by which grantor conveys entire interest in servient estate and at same time expressly recognizes and acknowledges dominant estate. Jennings v. Amerada Petroleum Corporation, 179 Okl. 561, 66 P.2d 1069, 1071.

EXCEPTING. As used in a deed, the terms "reserving" and "excepting" are used interchangeably, and their technical meaning will give way to the manifest intent. Porter v. Warner-Caldwell Oil Co., 183 Okl. 1, 80 P.2d 252, 253.

The words "reserving" and "excepting," although strictly distinguishable, may be used interchangeably or indiscriminately. Stephan v. Kentucky Valley Distilling Co., 275 Ky. 705, 122 S.W.2d 493, 496.

EXCEPTIO.

Modern civil law. A plea by which the defendant admits the cause of action, but alleges new facts which, provided they be true, totally or partially answer the allegations put forward on the other side; thus distinguished from a mere traverse of the plaintiff's averments. Tomkins & J. Mod. Rom. Law, 90. In this use, the term corresponds to the common-law plea in confession and avoidance.

Roman law. An exception. In a general sense, a judicial allegation opposed by a defendant to the plaintiff's action. Calvin. A stop or stay to an action opposed by the defendant. Cowell.

Answering to the "defense" or "plea" of the common law. An allegation and defense of a defendant by which the plaintiff's claim or complaint is defeated, either according to strict law or upon grounds of equity.

In a stricter sense, the exclusion of an action that lay in strict law, on grounds of equity, (actionis jure stricto competentis ob cequitatem exclusio.) Heinecc. A kind of limitation of an action, by which it was shown that the action, though otherwise just, did not lie in the particular case. Calvin. A species of defense allowed in cases where, though the action as brought by the plaintiff was in itself just, yet it was unjust as against the particular party sued. Inst. 4, 13, pr.

EXCEPTIO DILATORIA. A dilatory exception; called also "temporalis," (temporary;) one which defeated the action for a time, (quce ad tempus nocet,) and created delay, (et temporis dilationem tribuit;) such as an agreement not to sue within a certain time, as five years. Inst. 4, 13, 10. See Dig. 44, 1, 3.

EXCEPTIO DOLI MALI. An exception or plea of fraud. Inst. 4, 13, 1, 9; Bract. fol. 100b.

EXCEPTIO DOMMINII. A claim of ownership set up in an action for the recovery of property not in the possession of the plaintiff. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 299.

EXCEPTIO DOTIS CAUTZE NON NUMERATIE. A defense to an action for the restitution of a dowry that it was never paid, though promised, available upon the dissolution of the marriage within a limited time. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 458.

EXCEPTIO EJUS REI CUJUS PETITUR DISSOLUTIO NULLA EST. A plea of that matter the dissolution of which is sought [by the action] is null, [or of no effect.] Jenk. Cent. 37, case 71.

EXCEPTIO FALSI OMNIUM ULTIMA. A plea denying a fact is the last of all.

EXCEPTIO FIRMAT REGULAM IN CASIBUS NON EXCEPTIS. An exception affirms the rule in cases not excepted. Bacon, Aph. 17.

EXCEPTIO FIRMAT REGULAM IN CONTRARIUM. An exception proves an opposite rule. See exceptio probat regulam. Bacon, Aph. 17.

EXCEPTIO IN FACTUM. An exception on the fact. An exception or plea founded on the peculiar circumstances of the case. Inst. 4, 13, 1.

EXCEPTIO IN PERSONAM. A plea or defense of a personal nature, which may be alleged only by the person himself to whom it is granted by the law. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 217.

EXCEPTIO IN REM. A plea or defense not of a personal nature, but connected with the legal circumstances on which the suit is founded, and which may therefore be alleged b? any party in interest, including the heirs and sureties of the proper or original debtor. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 217.

EXCEPTIO JURISJURANDI. An exception of oath; an exception or plea that the matter had been sworn to. Inst. 4, 13, 4. This kind of exception was allowed where a debtor, at the instance of his creditor, (creditors deferente,) had sworn that nothing was due the latter, and had notwithstanding been sued by him.

EXCEPTIO METUS. An exception or plea of fear or compulsion. Inst. 4, 13, 1, 9; Bract. fol. 100b. Answering to the modern plea of duress.

EXCEPTIO NON ADIMPLETI CONTRACTUS. An exception in an action founded on a contract involving mutual duties or obligations, to the effect that the plaintiff is not entitled to sue because he has not performed his own part of the agreement. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 394.

EXCEPTIO NON SOLUTZE PECUNI1E. A plea that the debt in suit was not discharged by payment (as alleged by the adverse party) notwithstanding an acquittance or receipt given by the person to whom the payment is stated to have been made. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 534.

EXCEPTIO NULLA EST VERSUS ACTIONEM QUIE EXCEPTIONEM PERIMIT. There is [can be] no plea against an action which destroys [the matter of] the plea. Jenk. Cent. 106, case 2.

EXCEPTIO PACTI CONVENTI. An exception of compact; an exception or plea that the plaintiff had agreed not to sue. Inst. 4, 13, 3.

EXCEPTIO PECUNI1E NON NUMERATE. An exception or plea of money not paid; a defense which might be set up by a party who was sued on a promise to repay money which he had never received. Inst. 4, 13, 2.

EXCEPTIO PEREMPTORIA. A peremptory exception; called also "perpetua: (perpetual;) one which forever destroyed the subject-matter or ground of the action, (quce semper rem de qua agitur perimit;) such as the exceptio doli mall, the exceptio metus, etc. Inst. 4, 13, 9. See Dig. 44, 1, 3.

EXCEPTIO PROBAT REGULAM. The exception proves the rule. 11 Coke, 41; 3 Term, 722. Sometimes quoted with the addition "de rebus non exceptis," ("so far as concerns the matters not excepted.")

EXCEPTIO QUIE FIRMAT LEGEM, EXPONIT LEGEM. An exception which confirms the law explains the law. 2 Bulst. 189.

EXCEPTIO QUOQUE REGULAM DECLARAT. The exception also declares the rule. Bacon, Aph. 17.

EXCEPTIO REI JUDICATIE. An exception or plea of matter adjudged; a plea that the subject-matter of the action had been determined in a previous action. Inst. 4, 13, 5.

This term is adopted by Bracton, and is constantly used in modern law to denote a defense founded upon a previous adjudication of the same matter. Bract. fols. 100b, 177; 2 Kent, Comm. 120. A plea of a former recovery or judgment.

EXCEPTIO REI VENDITIE ET TRADITZE. An exception or plea of the sale and delivery of the thing.

This exception presumes that there was a valid sale and a proper tradition; but though, in consequence of the rule that no one can transfer to another a greater right than he himself has, no property was transferred, yet because of some particular circumstance the real owner is estopped from contesting it. Mackeld. Rom.Law, § 299.

EXCEPTIO SEMPER ULTIMO PONENDA EST. An exception should always be put last. 9 Coke, 53.

EXCEPTIO SENATUSCONSULTI MACEDONIAN'. A defense to an action for the recovery of money loaned, on the ground that the loan was made to a minor or person under the paternal power of another; so named from the decree of the senate which forbade the recovery of such loans. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 432.

EXCEPTIO SENATUSCONSULTI VELLEIANI. A defense to an action on a contract of suretyship, on the ground that the surety was a woman and therefore incapable of becoming bound for another; so named from the decree of the senate forbidding it. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 455.

EXCEPTIO TEMPORIS. An exception or plea analogous to that of the statute of limitations in our law; viz., that the time prescribed by law for bringing such actions has expired. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 213.

EXCEPTION. Act of excepting or excluding from a number designated or from a description; that which is excepted or separated from others in a general rule or description; a person, thing, or case specified as distinct or not included; an act of excepting, omitting from mention or leaving out of consideration; and "except" means not including. In re Kelly's Estate, 153 Misc. 445, 274 N.Y.S. 488.

For "General Exception" and "Special Exception," see those titles.

Admiralty and Equity Practice

An exception is a formal allegation tendered by a party that some previous pleading or proceeding taken by the adverse party is insufficient. Peck v. Osteen, 37 Fla. 427, 20 So. 549; Arnold v. Slaughter, 36 W.Va. 589, 15 S.E. 250.

In admiralty, an "exception" serves the function of a demurrer in common law or equity pleading. The Nea Hellis, C.C.A.N.Y., 116 F.2d 803, 805.

Bail

An exception to bail is an objection to the special bail put in by the defendant to an action at law made by the plaintiff on grounds of the insufficiency of the bail. 1 Tidd, Pr. 255.

Bequests

Bequests of sums made to same persons by different paragraphs in same codicil held accumulative, where second paragraph stated that bequest was "exception" to other bequests made; term as used meaning in addition to person's bequests. In re Kelly's Estate, 153 Misc. 445, 274 N.Y.S. 488.

Civil Law

An exceptio or plea. Used in this sense in Louisiana. For "Declaratory Exceptions," "Dilatory Exceptions" and "Peremptory Exceptions," see those titles.

Constitution

Provision granting Legislature discretionary power to tax merchants, peddlers, and privileges is "exception" to constitutional requirement of equality. A "proviso" and an "exception" are substantially the same thing. Evans v. McCabe, 164 Tenn. 672, 52 S'.W.2d 159, 160.

Contracts

An exception is something taken out of instrument and of kind dealt with in contract. Reliance Ins. Co. v. Naman, 118 Tex. 21, 6 S.W.2d 743, 745.

Deeds or Conveyances

A clause by which grantor excepts something out of that which he granted before by the deed. Winston v. Johnson, 42 Minn. 398, 45 N.W. 958; Cox v. Colossal Cavern Co., 210 Ky. 612, 276 S.W. 540, 542; Worcester v. Smith, 117 Me. 168, 103 A. 65; De Moss v. Sample, 143 La. 243, 78 So. 482, 485; Beardslee v. New Berlin Light & Power Co., 207 N.Y. 34, 100 N.E. 434, 437, Ann.Cas.1914B, 1287.

An exception withdraws from operation of deed part of thing granted which would otherwise pass to grantee. Powell v. Big Horn Low Line Ditch Co., 81 Mont. 430, 263 P. 692, 693; Johnson v. Peck, 90 Utah, 544, 63 P.2d 251, 254; Slone v. Kentucky West Virginia Gas Co., 289 Ky. 623, 159 S.W.2d 993, 994, 995.

Insurance Contract or Policy

An exclusion of one or more risks. Kirkby v. Federal Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Mich., 35 F.2d 126, 128; Mancini v. Thomas, 113 Vt. 322, 34 A.2d 105, 109. Provision of life and accident policy specifying that indemnity should be paid only when death occurred within thirty days after accident. Mowery v. Washington Nat. Ins. Co., 289 Ill.App. 443, 7 N.E.2d 334, 336. Things taken out. Raymond v. Great American Indemnity Co., 86 N.H. 93, 163 A. 713, 716.

The object of an exception is to exclude that which otherwise would be included, Estabrook v. Eastern Commercial Travelers Accident Ass'n, 308 Mass. 439, 32 N.E.2d 250, 252; to take special cases out of a general class or to guard against misinterpretation. Landau v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, 1 N.Y.S.2d 891, 895, 166 Misc. 42.

Under liability policy, excluded uses of automobile held not "exceptions" since they were not in first instance included within any statement of insurance. Raymond v. Great American Indemnity Co., 86 N.H. 93, 163 A. 713, 716.

Practice

A formal objection to the action of the court, during the trial of a cause, in refusing a request or overruling an objection; implying that the party excepting does not acquiesce in the decision of the court, but will seek to procure its reversal, and that he means to save the benefit of his request or objection in some future proceeding. United States v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 236 U.S. 512, 35 S.Ct. 298, 303, 59 L.Ed. 696; Liquid Carbonic Co. v. Rodman, 52 Okl. 211, 152 P. 439; State v. Laundy, 103 Or. 443, 206 P. 290. It is also somewhat used to signify other objections in the course of a suit; for example, exception to bail is a formal objection that special bail offered by defendant is insufficient. 1 Tidd, Pr. 255.

An exception is, an objection formally taken to a decision of the court on a matter of law. State v. Wolzenski, 340 Mo. 1181, 105 S.W.2d 905, 907; an objection on a matter of law to a decision made, either before or after judgment, by a court, tribunal, judge, or other judicial officer in an action or proceeding. Hearn v. Gunther, 57 Cal. App.2d 82, 134 P.2d 3, 5; an objection, oral or written, taken, in course of an action or proceeding, as to bail, to the decision or a ruling of a judge, or to something in his charge to a jury. In re Pardue's Estate, 57 Cal.App.2d 918, 135 P.2d 394, 395.

.An objection to a pleading or any part thereof for want of substance is a general exception; an objection to the form in which a cause of action is stated is a special exception. Cochran v. People's Nat. Bank, Tex.Civ.App., 271 S.W. 433, 434.

Objections to report of master on bill for injunction held "exceptions". Respro, Inc., v. Worcester Backing Co., 291 Mass. 467, 197 N.E. 198, 200.

To authorize review of alleged error in admitting evidence in compensation case, there must be an "exception", that known to equity practice, and defined as act of appealing from rulings appearing of record, and nothing more. Indrisano's Case, 307 Mass. 520, 30 N.E.2d 538, 539.

Proviso and Exception Distinguished

A "proviso" and an "exception" are substantially the same thing. Evans v. McCabe, 164 Tenn. 672, 52 S.W.2d 159, 160.

A proviso differs from an exception. 1 Barn. & Ald. 99. An exception exempts, absolutely, from the operation of an engagement or an enactment; a proviso, properly speaking, defeats their operation, conditionally. An exception takes out of an engagement or enactment something which would otherwise be part of the subject-matter of it; a proviso avoids them by way of defeasance or excuse. 8 Am.Jur. 242; Board of Com'rs of Noble County v. Whitney, 73 Okl. 160, 175 P. 112, 113; Philadelphia Life Ins. Co. v. Farnsley's Adm'r, 162 Ky. 27, 171 S.W. 1004, 1005; New Jersey State Board of Optometrists v. S. S. Kresge Co., Sup., 113 N.J.L. 287, 174 A. 353, 357; Sowers Plan Crop Ins. Mut. Co. v. Hobbs, 146 Kan. 166, 68 P.2d 1110, 1111.

The ordinary office of an "exception" or "proviso" in a policy is to take special cases out of a general class or to guard against misinterpretation. Landau v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, 1 N.Y.S.2d 891, 895, 166 Misc. 42.

Reservation and Exception as Synonymous or Distinguishable

A reservation is always of a thing not in esse, but newly created or reserved out of the land or tenement demised; • an exception is always of a part of the thing granted, and of a thing in esse. Co.Litt. 47a; 4 Kent, Comm. 468.

A "reservation" creates some new right in grantor while an "exception" withholds from grant title to some part of property which would otherwise pass. Clark v. Pauley, 291 Ky. 637, 165 S.W.2d 161, 162; Federal Land Bank of New Orleans v. Cooper, 190 Miss. 490, 200 So. 729, 730, 731; Goss v. Congdon, 114 Vt. 155, 40 A.2d 429, 430.

A reservation does not affect the description of the property conveyed, but retains to the grantor some right upon the property, as an easement, whereas an exception operates upon the description and withdraws from the description the excepted property. Moore v. Davis, 273 Ky. 838, 117 S.W.2d 1033, 1035.

A "reservation" is always of something taken back out of that which is clearly granted, while an "exception" is of some part of the estate not granted at all. Houghtaling v. Stoothoff, 170 Misc. 773, 12 N.Y.S.2d 207, 210; Lewis v. Standard Oil Co. of California, C.C.A.Cal., 88 F.2d 512, 514.

A reservation provides for return of rent or service, regarded as issuing out of land granted. An exception withholds particular portion of land granted. Cook v. Farley, 195 Miss. 638, 15 So.2d 352, 355 ; Marias River Syndicate v. Big West Oil Co., 98 Mont. 254, 38 P.2d 599, 601.

Reservation means something issuing or arising out of thing granted while an exception means some part of the estate not granted, or withdrawn from the effect of the grant, although the terms are often used indiscriminately and given effect according to the obvious intent of the parties. Vance v. Pritchard, 213 N.C. 552, 197 S.E. 182, 185.

Reservation must always be in favor of and for benefit of grantor, whereas exception is mere exclusion from grant, of some interest which may be vested in grantor or outstanding in another; reservation reserves to grantor some new thing, either issuing out of or incident to thing granted, while exception in deed is clause exempting from operation thereof and retaining in grantor title to some part of the thing granted or excepting some part of thing granted, title to which is at the time in another. Klein v. Humble Oil & Refining Co., Tex.Civ.App., 67 S.W.2d 911, 915.

Reservation reserves to grantor some new interest out of thing granted, while exception excludes from operation of grant some existing part of estate. Petty v. Griffith, Mo., 165 S.W.2d 412, 414; U. S. v. 1,010.8 Acres, More or Less, Situate in Sussex County, Del., D.C.Del., 56 F.Supp. 120, 128.

The terms "reservation" and "exception" are frequently used as interchangeable for synonymous terms. Nelson v. Bacon, 113 Vt. 161, 32 A.2d 140, 145; Murphy v. Sunset Hills Ass'n, 243 Wis. 139, 9 N.W.2d 613, 615; Meaning intended must be determined by reference to subject matter and surrounding circumstances. Federal Land Bank of New Orleans v. Cooper, 190 Miss. 490, 200 So. 729, 730, 731; Duus v. Town of Ephrata, 14 Wash.2d 426, 128 P.2d 510, 511; Parties' intention, not language used, is dominating factor in determining whether provision is reservation or exception. Goss v. Congdon, 114 Vt. 155, 40 A.2d 429, 430; Technical meaning will yield to the manifest intent. Jensen v. Sheker, 231 Iowa 240, 1 NtW.2d 262, 267; Technical misnomer does not operate to defeat attempted reservation or exception. Clark v. Pauley, 291 Ky. 637, 165 S. W. 2d 161, 162; It has been also said that there is a diversity between an exception and a saving, for an exception exempts clearly, but a saving goes to the matters touched, and does not exempt. Plowd. 361. Ogden v. Straus Bldg. Corporation, 187 Wis. 232, 202 N.W. 34, 44; Haymaker v. Windsor Reservoir & Canal Co., 81 Colo. 168, 254 P. 768, 770; Central Bank & Trust Co. v. Wyatt, 189 N.C. 107, 126 S.E. 93, 94; Greenspan v. Yaple, 194 N.Y.S. 658, 659, 201 App. Div. 575.

Statutory Law

An exception in a statute is a clause designed to reserve or exempt some individuals from the general class of persons or things to which the language of the act in general attaches. People v. Bailey, 103 Misc. 366, 171 N.Y.S. 394, 397.

An exception differs from an explanation, which, by the use of a videlicet, proviso, etc., is allowed only to explain doubtful clauses precedent, or to separate and distribute generals into particulars. Cutler v. Tufts, 3 Pick., Mass., 272.

An "exception" exempts absolutely from the operation of the statute, while a "proviso" generally defeats operation of statute conditionally. Oregon Liquor Control Commission v. Coe, 163 Or. 646, 99 P.2d 29, 31; People v. Thursam, City Ct., 23 N.Y.S.2d 706, 710, 713.

The office of an "exception" in a statute is to except something from the operative effect of a statute or to qualify or restrain the generality of the substantive enactment to which it is attached, and it is not necessarily limited to the section of the statute immediately following or preceding. Gatliff Coal Co. v. Cox, C.C.A.Ky., 142 F.2d 876, 882.

Two statutes relating to same subject must be read together, and provisions of one having special application to particular subject will be deemed an "exception" to other statute general in its terms. Eagleton v. Murphy, 348 Mo. 949, 156 S.W.2d 683, 685, 138 A.L.R. 749.

Zoning

An "exception" in zoning ordinance is one allowable where conditions detailed therein as those on which exception may be permitted exist. Application of Devereux Foundation, 351 Pa. 478, 41 A.2d 744, 746.

Exceptions may be treated as a legislative process, conditions for which must be found in the zoning ordinance and may not be varied, and variances may be treated as judicial function through appeals from administrative orders, whereby literal enforcement of ordinance may be disregarded. Stone v. Cray, 89 N.H. 483, 200 A. 517, 521.

EXCEPTION EN MASSE. An assignment in defendant's amended motion for new trial that "court erred in giving Instructions Nos. 1 to 10, inclusive", is "exception en masse". Tugg v. State, 206 Ark. 161, 174 S.W.2d 374, 376.

EXCEPTION OF LACK OF CAPACITY TO STAND IN JUDGMENT. Challenges authority of plaintiff to institute and prosecute suit regardless of whether plaintiff owns or has an interest in the claim. It is usually resorted to where plaintiff is alleged to be under some disability or where he sues through a representative who, it is alleged, has no authority. Riche v. Ascension Parish School Board, La.App., 200 So. 681, 685.

EXCEPTION OF MISJOINDER seeks to restrain plaintiff's pursuit of the cause when there is present another party whose liabilities or rights are not connected with the exceptor. Henrichs v. New Orleans Public Service, La.App., 179 So. 610.

EXCEPTION OF NO CAUSE OF ACTION addresses itself to sufficiency in law of the petition and exhibits attached. Bartholomew v. Impastato, La.App., 12 So.2d 700, 702.

EXCEPTION OF NO RIGHT OF ACTION challenges plaintiff's interest or right to assert cause of action. McCain v. Le Blanc Bros., La.App., 10 So.2d 116, 118.

EXCEPTION OF WANT OF INTEREST or of "no right of action" is afforded as means of challenging preliminarily either interest or right of plaintiff to assert cause of action and is not limited to want of capacity in plaintiff as such to bring suit. McCain v. Le Blanc Bros., La.App., 10 So.2d 116, 118.

EXCEPTIONAL CIRCUMSTANCES. -Peculiar urgency, existed where death sentence was imposed, or defendant had not been given a reasonable opportunity to prepare for trial, or the commonwealth conceded belatedly, though not too late, that its material evidence is perjured. Sharpe v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, C.C.A.Ky., 135 F.2d 974, 977.

EXCEPTIS EXCIPIENDIS. Lat. With all neces. sary exceptions.

EXCEPTOR. In old English law. A party who entered an exception or plea.

EXCERPTA, or EXCERPTS. Extracts.

EXCESS. When a defendant pleaded to an action of assault that the plaintiff trespassed on his land, and he would not depart when ordered, whereupon he, molliter manus imposuit, gently laid hands on him, the replication of excess was to the effect that the defendant used more force than necessary. Wharton.

Degree or amount by which one thing or number exceeds another, and the remainder or the difference between two numbers is the excess of one over the other. In re Bunce's Estate, 100 Misc. 385, 165 N.Y.S. 426.

Statute providing that, if capital used or invested in business of corporations includes borrowed capital in "excess" of capital stock, surplus and undivided profits, such excess of borrowed capital shall be added to capital stock, surplus and undivided profits as basis for computing franchise tax, means that, if corporation uses any borrowed or additional capital, such borrowed or additional capital must be added to the other capital in order to form basis for computing the tax. State v. Union Bldg. Corporation, 185 La. 598, 170 So. 7, 12.

EXCESS FEES of tax collector consist of sum remaining in collector's hands after deducting from total of all lawful fees collected, his maximum annual fees, his deputy hire, his official expenses and one-fourth of remainder until such one-fourth amounts to specified sum. American Indemnity Co. v. Red River Nat. Bank in Clarksville, Tex. Civ.App., 132 S.W.2d 473, 480.

EXCESS INSURANCE. No recovery for loss of cotton which was insured under another policy could be had except that recoverable as "excess insurance," although the other policy also provided for its avoidance by other insurance, for, as to such other policy, the litigated policy was not "other" but merely "excess insurance." St. Paul. Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Garza County Warehouse & Marketing Ass'n, C.C.A.Tex., 93 F.2d 590, 592; Travelers Indemnity Co. v. State Automobile Ins. Co., 67 Ohio App. 457, 37 N.E.2d 198, 200.

Where fire and theft policy issued to conditional seller of truck contained indorsement against accidental collision occurring after insured had repossessed truck, and policy provided that such insurance was excess insurance where any specific insurance existed for benefit of insured, when seller later repossessed truck, insurance taken by seller became "excess insurance." Fageol Truck & Coach Co. v. Pacific Indemnity Co., 18 Ca1.2d 731, 117 P.2d 661, 669.

Where materials which belonged to owners who carried fire insurance covering merchandise while in possession of contractors, were sent to contractors to be made into finished garments, fire policies of contractors covering merchandise held in trust but excluding property otherwise specifically insured, provided only "excess insurance" in accordance with terms thereof, as to goods in possession of contractors who had insured themselves as bailees. Gordon v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co. of Philadelphia, 262 App.Div. 328, 28 N.Y.S.2d 480, 482.

EXCESS OF JURISDICTION. A case in which court has initially proceeded properly within its jurisdiction but steps out of jurisdiction in making of some order or in the doing of some judicial act. Olson v. District Court of Salt Lake County, 93 Utah, 145, 71 P.2d 529, 534, 112 A.L.R. 438. Act within judge's general power is unauthorized in particular case. Beckwith v. McAlister, 165 S.C. 1, 162 S.E. 623, 628; Carter v. Mitchell, 225 Ala. 287, 142 So. 514, 517; In re Knox' Estate, 52 Cal.App.2d 338, 126 P.2d 108, 112. Acts which exceed defined power of court in any instance. Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal, Third Dist., 17 Ca1.2d 280, 109 P.2d 942, 948, 132 A.L.R. 715.

A departure by a court from those recognized and established requirements of law, however close apparent adherence to mere form in method of procedure, which has the effect of depriving one of a constitutional right, is an "excess of jurisdiction." Wuest v. Wuest, 53 Cal.App.2d 339, 127 P.2d 934, 937.

EXCESS OR SURPLUS WATER. Mean simply water which is flowing in stream in addition to what may be termed adjudicated waters. Quigley v. McIntosh, 88 Mont. 103, 290 P. 266, 268; Any water not needed for reasonable beneficial uses of those having prior rights is "excess or surplus water". City Of. Pasadena v. City of Alhambra, Cal., 207 P.2d 17;28.

EXCESSES. Spouse's gambling habits or extravagances when carried to excess, constitute "excesses" authorizing separation from bed and board. Moore v. Moore, 192 La. 289, 187 So. 670, ,672.

EXCESSIVE. Greater than what is usual or proper; overmuch; a general term for what goes beyond just measure or amount. Austin St. Ry. Co. v. Oldham, Tex.Civ.App., 109 S.W.2d 235, 237. Tending to or marked by excess, which is the quality or state of exceeding the proper or reasonable limit or measure. Railway Co. v. Johnston, 106 Ga. 130, 32 S.E. 78; Morrow v. Missouri Gas & Electric Service Co., 315 Mo. 367, 286 S.W. 106, 111.

EXCESSIVE ASSESSMENT. A tax assessment grossly disproportionate as compared with other assessments. Southern California Telephone Co. v. Los Angeles County, 45 Cal.App.2d 111, 113 P. 2d 773, 776.

EXCESSIVE BAIL. Bail in a sum more than will be reasonably sufficient to prevent evasion of the law by flight or concealment; bail which is per se unreasonably great and clearly disproportionate to the offense involved, or shown to be so by the special circumstances of the particular case. In re Losasso, 15 Colo. 163, 24 P. 1080, 10 L.R.A. 847; Ex parte Ryan, 44 Cal. 558.

The denial of bail is not necessarily "excessive bail", although such denial may be in a particular case the equivalent of excessive bail. People ex rel. Shapiro v. Keeper 'of City Prison, Tombs, New York County, 265 App.Div. 474, 39 N :Y.S.2d 526, 531.

EXCESSIVE DAMAGES. See Damages.

EXCESSIVE DRUNKENNESS. Drunkenness is excessive where a party is so far deprived of his reason and understanding as to render him incapable of understanding character and consequences of his act. Taylor v. Koenigstein, 128 Neb. 809, 260 N.W. 544.

EXCESSIVE FINE OR PENALTY. Any fine or penalty which seriously impairs the capacity of gaining a business livelihood. C. F. Smith Co. v. Fitzgerald, 270 Mich. 659, 259 N.W. 352.

EXCESSIVE OR INTEMPERATE USE OF INTOXICANTS. In benefit certificate. Habitual indulgence in intoxicating liquors to such extent as to impair health or otherwise render insurance risk more hazardous. Wising v. Brotherhood of American Yeomen, ,132 Minn. 303, 156 N.W. 247, 248, Ann.Cas.1918A, 621.

EXCESSIVE OXIDATION. As used in product patent for improvement in bleached and dyed furs and the like, relate to what would occur if it was attempted to effect oxidation, bleaching of a dark skin with an ordinary bleach, such as strong hydrogen peroxide, without a protecting agent. Steinfur Patents Corporation v. J. Meyerson, Inc., D.C.N.Y., 56 F.2d 372, 382.

EXCESSIVE SENTENCE. No sentence is excessive which is within limits fixed by law. Bryant v. State, 39 Ga.App. 26, 145 S.E. 911; State v. Brackett, 218 N.C. 369, 11 S.E.2d 146, 149.

EXCESSIVE SPEED. Automobile's speed is "excessive" whenever it places car beyond driver's control. Esponette v. Wiseman, 130 Me. 297, 155 A. 650, 653.

EXCESSIVE TAX. One that exceeds what the tax would be if correctly calculated at the legal rate on the valuation as finally fixed by the county authorities. Pocomoke Guano Co. v. City of New Bern, 172 N.C. 258, 90 S.E. 202, 203.

EXCESSIVE VERDICT. A verdict which is result of passion or prejudice. Babb v. Murray, 26 Cal.App.2d 153, 79 P.2d 159, 160.

The test of whether a verdict is `;excessive" is whether the amount thereof is such as to shock the conscience of the court. Scheidegger v. Thompson, Mo.App., 174 S.W.2d 216, 222.

EXCESSIVELY. To excess. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Nunnery, 176 Miss. 197, 167 So. 416, 419.

EXCESSIVELY INTOXICATED. Where one is so intoxicated as to be so far deprived of his reason and understanding as to render him incapable of knowing the character and consequences of his act. Keedick v. Brogan, 116 Neb. 339, 217 N.W. 583, 585.

EXCESSIVUM IN JURE REPROBATUR. EXCESSUS IN RE QUALIBET JURE REPROBATUR COMMUNI. Co. Litt. 44. Excess in law is reprehended. Excess in anything is reprehended at common law.

EXCHANGE. To barter; to swap. Dairymen's League Co-op. Ass'n v. Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co. of New York, Sup., 8 N.Y.S.2d 403, 412. To part with, give or transfer for an equivalent. Kessler v. United States, C.C.A.Pa., 124 F.2d 152, 154; Dairymen's League Co-op. Ass'n v. Metropolitan Casualty Ins. Co. of New York, Sup., 8 N.Y.S. 2d 403, 412.

Act of giving or taking one thing for another. United States v. Paine, D.C.Mass., 31 F.Supp. 898, 900; Kessler v. United States, C.C.A.Pa., 124 F.2d 152, 154; contract by terms of which specific property is given in consideration of the receipt of property other than money. Capps v. Mines Service, 175 Or. 248, 152 P.2d 414, 416; Mutual grant of equal interests, the one in consideration of the other, Hale v. Helvering, 66 App.D.C. 242, 85 F.2d 819, 821, 822; mutual transfer of property other than for money although one of parties may pay a sum of money in addition to property, Law v. McLaughlin, D.C.Cal., 2 F.Supp. 601, 603; transaction in which one piece of property, usually something other than money or its equivalent, is given in return for another piece of property, Hadley Falls Trust Co. v. United States, C.C.A.Mass., 110 F.2d 887, 891; transfer of property for other property, Helvering v. Nebraska Bridge Supply & Lumber Co., C.C.A.8, 115 F.2d 288, 290; transfer of property for property or some value other than money, Burger-Phillips Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.Ala., 126 F.2d 934, 936; transfers of enduring interests and not such as must immediately be reconveyed in fulfillment of preconceived plan, Morgan v. Helvering, C.C.A.2, 117 F.2d 334, 336.

An exchange is two sales. Robbins v. Pacific Eastern Corporation, 8 Ca1.2d 241, 65 P.2d 42, 56.

The criterion in determining whether a transaction is a sale or an exchange is whether there is a determination of value of things exchanged, and if no price is set for either property it is an "exchange". Gruver v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.4, 142 F.2d 363, 366.

The mutual transfers must be in kind, and any transaction into which money enters, either as the consideration or as a basis of measure is excluded. Hoovel v. State, 125 Tex.Cr.R. 545, 69 S.W.2d 104, 108; Trenton Cotton Oil Co. v. C. I. R., C.C.A.6, 147 F.2d 33, 36.

Capital Assets

Reciprocal transfers. Helvering v. William Flaccus Oak Leather Co., 313 U.S. 247, 61 S.Ct. 878, 880, 85 L.Ed. 1310; Harwick v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.8, 133 F.2d 732, 737.

Conveyance of mortgaged realty by mortgagor in consideration of payment of past-due taxes thereon, Philips v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.3, 112 F.2d 721, 722.

Mortgagor's transfers of equity of redemption in property which constituted a capital asset of mortgagor to mortgagee in return for release of liability on accompanying bond given to evidence or further secure the mortgage debt. Stamler v. C. I. R., C.C.A.3, 145 F.2d 37, 39.

Commercial Law

A negotiation by which one person transfers to another funds which he has in a certain place, either at a price agreed upon or which is fixed by commercial usage. Nicely v. Bank, 15 Ind.App. 563, 44 N.E. 572, 57 Am.St.Rep. 245; Iowa State Say. Bank of Fairfield v. City Nat. Bank, 183 Iowa, 1347, 168 N.W. 148, 149, L.R.A.1918F, 169.

The process of settling accounts or debts between parties residing at a distance from each other, without the intervention of money, by exchanging orders or drafts, called bills of exchange; the payment of debts in different places by an exchange or transfer of credits. Webster, Dict.

The profit which arises from a maritime loan, when such profit is a percentage on the money lent, considering it in the light of money lent in one place to be returned in another, with a difference in amount in the sum borrowed and that paid, arising from , the difference of time and place. The term is commonly used in this sense by French writers. Hall, Emerig, Mar. Loans, 56n.

A public place where merchants, brokers, factors, etc., meet to transact their business.

Conveyancing

A mutual grant of equal interests, (in lands or tenements,) the one in consideration of the other. 2 Bl.Comm. 323; Windsor v. Collinson, 32 Or. 297, 52 P. 26; Herring Motor Co. v. 2Etna Trust & Savings Co., 87 Ind.App. 83, 154 N.E. 29, 31; Baltimore & 0. R. Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., D.C.N.Y., 241 F. 162, 169; Finke v. Boyer, 331 Mo. 1242, 56 S.W.2d 372.

Nontaxable Exchange

Elements are that property be transferred to a corporation solely in exchange for stock or securities in corporation and that transferors immediately after exchange be in control of corporation, through ownership of 80 per cent. of all voting stock and at least 80 per cent. of all other classes of stock of corporation. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Cement Investors, C.C.A.10, 122 F.2d 380, 383.

Personal Property Law

Exchange of goods is a commutation, transmutation, or transfer of goods for other goods, as distinguished from sale, which is a transfer of goods for money. 2 Bl.Comm. 446; 2 Steph. Comm. 120; Elwell v. Chamberlin, 31 N.Y. 624; Cooper v. State, 37 Ark. 418; Preston v. Keene, 14 Pet. 137, 10 L.Ed. 387.

Exchange is a contract by which the parties mutually give, or agree to give, one thing for another, neither thing, or both things, being money only.

The distinction between a sale and exchange of property is rather one of shadow than of substance. In both cases the title to property is absolutely transferred; and the same rules of law are applicable to the transaction, whether the consideration of the contract is money or by way of barter. It can make no essential difference in the rights and obligations of parties that goods and merchandise are transferred and paid for by other goods and merchandise instead of by money, which is but the representative of value or property. Com. v. Clark, 14 Gray, Mass., 367.

Stock and Securities

To exchange one security for a different security of some kind or for other property or rights. Mertz v. H. D. Hudson Mfg. Co., 194 Minn. 636, 261 N.W. 472.

Plan whereby preferred stock was issued in exchange for half of common stock held by voting trustees and other half was split up on basis of two for one constituted a genuine "exchange" of common stock for preferred stock in pursuance of a plan of "recapitalization". Bass v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.1, 129 F.2d 300, 307.

Where holder of nearly all of a corporation's stock delivered securities to corporation, gave corporation his check in payment of preferred stock, and received from corporation its check in payment of his securities, and checks, which were simultaneously deposited, cancelled each other almost entirely, transaction was exchange. Louis W. Gunby, Inc., v. Helvering, 74 App.D.C. 185, 122 F.2d 203, 206.

For "Arbitration of Exchange," "Bill of Exchange," "Dry Exchange," "First of Exchange," and "Owelty of Exchange," see those titles.

EXCHANGE BROKER. One who negotiates bills of exchange drawn on foreign countries or on other places in the same country; one who makes and concludes bargains for others in matters of money or merchandise. Little Rock v. Barton, 33 Ark. 444; Portland v. O'Neill, 1 Or. 219.

EXCHANGE OF LIVINGS. In ecclesiastical law. This is effected by resigning them into the bishop's hands, and each party being inducted into the other's benefice. If either die before both are inducted, the exchange is void.

EXCHANGED means a complete divestment of property. Lord v. Smith, 293 Mass. 555, 200 N.E. 547, 550.

EXCHEQUER. That department of the English government which has charge of the collection of the national revenue; the treasury department.

It is said to have been so named from the chequered cloth, resembling a chess-board, which anciently covered the table there, and on which, when certain of the king's accounts were made up, the sums were marked and scored with counters. 3 Bl.Comm. 44.

For "Court of Exchequer" and "Court of Exchequer Chamber," see those titles.

EXCHEQUER BILLS. Bills of credit issued in England by authority of parliament. Brande.

Instruments issued at the exchequer, under the authority, for the most part,- of acts of parliament passed for the purpose, and containing an engagement on the part of the government for repayment of the principal sums advanced with interest. 2 Steph.Comm. 586. See Briscoe v. Bank of Kentucky, 11 Pet. 328, 9 L.Ed. 709.

EXCHEQUER DIVISION. A division of the English high court of justice, to which the special business of the court of exchequer was specially assigned by section 34 of the judicature act of 1873. Merged in the queen's bench division from and after 1881, by order in council under section 31 of that act. Wharton.

EXCISE. An inland imposition, paid sometimes upon the consumption of the commodity, and frequently upon the retail sale. 1 Bl.Comm. 318; Patton v. Brady, 184 U.S. 608, 22 S.Ct. 493, 46 L. Ed. 713; Portland Bank v. Apthorp, 12 Mass. 256.

An excise has been defined as meaning tribute, custom, tax, tollage, or assessment, a fixed absolute and direct charge laid on merchandise, products, or commodities without any regard to amount of property belonging to those on whom it may fall, or to any supposed relation between money expended for a public object and a special benefit occasioned to those by whom the charge is to be paid. In re Opinion of the Justices, 282 Mass. 619, 186 N. E. 490, 491.

Tax Commission of Ohio, D.C.Ohio, 43 F.2d 170, 172; any tax not falling within classification of poll or property tax, Diefendorf v. Gallet, 51 Idaho 619, 10 P.2d 307, 312; any tax which is not directly on property or the rents or incomes from real estate, Anne Arundel County Com'rs v. English, 182 Md. 514, 35 A.2d 135, 141; duties laid on manufacture, sale, or consumption of commodities, or upon certain callings or occupations, In re City of Enid, 195 Okl. 365, 158 P.2d 348, 350, 159 A.L.R. 358; every form of charge imposed by public authority on performance of act, enjoyment of privilege, or engagement in occupation, Idaho Gold Dredging Co. v. Balderston, 258 Idaho 692, 78 P.2d 105, 112; every form of taxation which is not laid directly on persons or property. Gila Meat Co. v. State, 35 Ariz. 194, 276 P. 1, 2; Lutz v. Arnold, 208 Ind. 480, 193 N.E. 840; public charges on subjects other than manufacture and sale of commodities, such as licenses to pursue particular callings, franchises of corporations and particularly the franchise of corporate existence, and inheritance or succession of estates. Pollock v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 158 U.S. 601, 15 S.Ct. 912, 39 L.Ed. 1108; Albert Pick & Co. v. Jordan, 169 Cal. 1, 145 P. 506, 513, Ann.Cas.1916C, 1237; Des Moines Union Ry. Co. v. Chicago Great Western Ry. Co., 188 Iowa, 1019, 177 N.W. 90, 9 A.L.R. 1557; Northern Cent. Ry. Co. v. Fidelity Trust Co., 152 Md. 94, 136 A, 66, 68, 60 A.L.R. 558; Hattiesburg Grocery Co. v. Robertson, 126 Miss. 34, 88 So. 4, 5, 25 A.L.R. 748; something cut off from price paid on sale of goods as contribution to government, City of Louisville v. Churchill Downs, 267 Ky. 339, 102 S. W.2d 10, 13; tax imposed on performance of act, engagement in occupation, or, enjoyment of privilege, State v. Fields, Ohio App., 35 N,E.2d 744, 747; tax laid on manufacture, sale, or consumption of commodities or upon licenses to pursue certain occupations or upon corporate privileges. Alexander Theatre Ticket Office v. U. S., C.C.A. N.Y., 23 F.2d 44, 46; City of De Land v. Florida Public Service Co., .119 Fla. 804, 161 So. 735, 738.

An "excise tax" is often used as synonymous with "privilege" or "license tax". Shannon v. Streckfus S'teanters, 279 Ky. 649, 131 S.W.2d 833, 838.

The terms excise tax and privilege tax are synonymous. American Airways v. Wallace, D.C.Tenn., 57 F.2d 877, 880.

English Law

The name given to the duties or taxes laid on certain articles produced and consumed at home, among which spirits have always been the most important; but, exclusive of these, the duties on the licenses of auctioneers, brewers, etc., and on the licenses- to keep dogs, kill game, etc., are included in the excise duties. Wharton.

Tax and Excise Distinguished

A tax imposed directly by Legislature without assessment and measured by amount of business done, income previously received, or by extent to which privilege may have been enjoyed or exercised by the taxpayer, irrespective of nature or value of his assets or his investments in business, is excise tax while assessed tax on valuation of property is property tax. City of De Land v. Florida Public Service Co., 119 Fla. 804, 161 So. 735, 738.

A "property tax" is a visitational tax and is the taking of part of taxpayer's wealth, represented by property he owns for needs of government, and is not an "excise tax" for privilege of owning property for period of fiscal year. Bemis Hardwood Lumber Co. v. Graham County, N. C., 214 N.C. 167, 198 S.E. 843, 845.

A tax directly on property is a property tax; but a tax is an excise tax where it is not a tax on property as such, but on certain kinds of property, having reference to their origin and their intended use. State ex rel. Porterie v. H. L. Hunt, Inc., 182 La. 1073, 162 So. 777, 103 A.L.R. 9.

An excise tax is an inland impost on articles of manufacture or sale, and also upon licenses to pursue certain trades, or to deal in certain commodities, and property tax is a tax which is not a capitation tax or a direct tax on land or personalty. Flynn, Welch & Yates v. State Tax Commission, 38 N.M. 131, 28 P.2d 889, 891.

As usually used, "franchise tax" is tax on intangible values inhering to business and added value given to tangible property, being "ad valorem" as distinguished from "excise" or "privilege" tax. State Tax Commission v. Petroleum Exploration, 253 Ky. 119, 68 S.W.2d 777.

If a mortgage registration tax is in effect upon the instrument itself, the tax is a "property tax", but if the tax is imposed solely upon the privilege of registration, and validity or use of the instrument is not affected by failure to pay the tax, the tax is an "excise tax". Community Public Service Co. v. James, Tex.Civ.App., 167 S.W.2d 588, 595.

Income tax is a "property tax" and not an "excise tax." Jensen v. Henneford, 185 Wash. 209, 53 P.2d 607, 610.

The words "tax" and "excise," although often used as synonymous, are to be considered as having entirely dist tinct and separate significations, under Const.Mass. c. 1, § 1, art. 4. The former is a charge apportioned either among the whole people of the state or those residing within certain districts, municipalities, or sections. It is required to be imposed, so that, if levied for the public charges of government, it shall be shared according to the estate, real and personal, which each person may possess; or, if raised to defray the cost of some local improvement of a public nature, it shall be borne by those who will receive some special and peculiar benefit or advantage which an expenditure of money for a public object may cause to those on whom the tax is assessed. An excise, on the other hand, is of a different character. It is based on no rule of apportionment or equality whatever. It is a fixed, absolute, and direct charge laid on merchandise, products, or commodities, without any regard to the amount of property belonging to those on whom it may fall, or to any supposed relation between money expended for a public object and a special benefit occasioned to those by whom the charge is to be paid. Oliver v. Washington Mills, 11 Allen, Mass., 268.

EXCISE LAW. A law imposing excise duties on specified commodities, and providing for the collection of revenue therefrom. In a more restricted and more popular sense, a law regulating, restricting, or taxing the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors.

A statute requiring payment of license fee for operating motor vehicle on state highway for hire is an "excise tax measure" rather than a "police measure." Comp. Laws Nev. § 4437. Ziemer v. Babcock & Wilcox Co., D.C.Nev., 22 F.Supp. 384, 385.

EXCISE LIEU PROPERTY TAX. Tax on gross premiums received and collected by designated classes of insurance companies held "excise lieu property tax." United Pacific Ins. Co. v. Bakes, 57 Idaho 537, 67 P.2d 1024, 1029.

EXCLUSIVE OF ANY OUT BUILDINGS as used in covenant that within restricted area, no residence should be erected, "actual bona fide cost" of which "exclusive of any outbuildings" should be less than $10,000, meant that no buildings other than the residence could or should be considered. Dillingham v. Kahn, 188 Ark. 759, 67 S.W.2d 735.

EXCLUSIVE OF INTEREST AND COSTS as used in statute defining court's pecuniary jurisdiction, refers to interest accrued before filing of complaint, not that accruing after suit was brought. Athan v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 73 F. 2d 66, 67.

EXCLUSIVE ORIGINAL JURISDICTION IN ALL CASES. Constitutional provision, giving circuit court "exclusive original jurisdiction in all cases in equity", established in circuit court exclusive jurisdiction in all cases in equity involving matters which were of exclusive equity jurisdiction under the common law. In re Niernsee's Estate, 147 Fla. 388, 2 So.2d 737, 739.

EXCLUSIVE OWNERSHIP. Ownership free from any kind of legal or equitable interest in any one else. U. S. Casualty Co. v. Timmerman, 118 N.J. Eq. 563, 180 A. 629.

EXCLUSIVE POSSESSION. Possession may be "exclusive" so as to entitle possessor to title by adverse possession, notwithstanding that the land is subject to exercise of easement by private party. Young v. City of Lubbock, Tex.Civ.App., 130 S.W.2d 418, 420.

Defendant, if in actual adverse open and notorious possession of land, had exclusive possession, visible to another accepting mortgage on premises sought to be foreclosed. Whittaker v. Farmers' Nat. Bank of Somerset, 237 Ky. 596, 36 S.W.2d 18, 19.

Exclusive possession by adverse possessor means that adverse possessor must show an exclusive dominion over the land and an appropriation of it to his own use and benefit. Vernon's Ann.Civ.St. art. 5510. W. T. Carter & Bro. v. Holmes, 131 Tex. 365, 113 S.W.2d 1225, 1226.

Under lease providing that lessor should give exclusive possession which was defined to include consent agreements signed by lienholder satisfactory to lessee, lessor whose mortgage was in default did not comply with lease requirement by tendering a consent agreement from a company which agreed to refinance the mortgage. Fox Realty Co. v. Montgomery Ward & Co., C.C.A.Ind., 124 F.2d 710, 712, 713.

EXCLUSIVE POWER. If special power permits donee to bar one or more members of class from receiving portion of property it is "exclusive". Moore v. Emery, 137 Me. 259, 18 A.2d 781, 788, 792.

Power upon specified condition to appoint by will such full-blood relations of donor to take estate as donee might designate held exclusive power. In re Skidmore's Estate, 148 Misc. 569, 266 N.Y.S. 312.

Under will giving testator's daughters power to dispose of principal of trusts created in their favor, provided it be bequeathed to testator's descendants, where testator's general intent was that property should be kept in the family, but that his children should share equally, power of appointment was exclusive. Moore v. Emery, 137 Me. 259, 18 A.2d 781, 788, 792.

EXCLUSIVE PRIVILEGE or FRANCHISE. A statute does not grant an "exclusive" privilege or franchise, unless it shuts out or excludes others from enjoying a similar privilege or franchise. Sunnyside Land & Investment Co. v. Bernier, 119 Wash. 386, 205 P. 1041, 1042, 20 A.L.R. 1261; Toten. v. Stuart, 143 Va. 201,129 S.E. 217, 218.

EXCLUSIVE REMEDY. Where a statute creates a new right or imposes a new duty or liability, unknown to the common law, and gives a remedy for its enforcement, the remedy prescribed is "exclusive". Kosicki v. S. A. Healy Co., 312 Ill.App. 307, 38 N.E.2d 525, 528; Kosicki v. S. A. Healy Co., 380 Ill. 298, 44 N.E.2d 27, 29.

Statute declaring right to compensation under Compensation Law exclusive remedy of employee injured by fellow employee means that injured employee suing fellow employee without having elected to take compensation under such law loses remedy against employer. Hall v. Hill, 158 Misc. 341, 285 N.Y.S. 815.

Statute providing method of recovery does not furnish exclusive remedy unless its terms indicate an intent to make statutory remedy exclusive. Kosicki v. S. A. Healy Co., 312 III.App. 307, 38 N.E.2d 525, 528.

EXCLUSIVE RIGHT. An exclusive right is one which only the grantee thereof can exercise, and from which all others are prohibited or shut out.

By "exclusive right" essential to a right of way by prescription, the law means that the right should not depend for its enjoyment upon a similar right in others; it must be exclusive as against the right of the community at large. Downie v. City of Renton, 162 Wash. 181, 298 P. 454, 457.

The word "exclusive," as used in deed granting exclusive right to erect and maintain poles with wires meant that the right was exclusive of grantor, not exclusive in grantee, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. of Massachusetts v. McDonald, 273 Mass. 324, 173 N.E. 502, 503.

EXCLUSIVE USE. As used in law authorizing registration of trade-marks, means exclusive use not only of specific mark but also any other confusingly similar mark or term. McKesson & Robbins v. Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co., C.C.A. Conn., 53 F.2d 1011.

Exclusive use does not mean that no one may or does not use way except claimant of easement, but means only that claimant's right to do so does 'not depend on like right in others, Rush v. Collins, 366 Ill. 307, 8 N.E.2d 659, 662.

Seminary property is fairly to be regarded as in "exclusive use" for educational purposes. Trustees of Phillips Exeter Academy v. Exeter, 90 N.H. 472, 27 A.2d 569, 591.

EXCLUSIVELY. Apart from all others. Lee v. Gulf Oil Corporation, 148 Fla. 612, 4 So.2d 868, 870, 871; People ex rel. Divico v. Adams, 264 App.Div. 315, 35 N.Y.S.2d 453, 455; Only, Lee v. City of St. Paul, 194 Minn. 554, 261 N.W. 588, 99 A.L.R. 1137. To the exclusion of all others; without admission of others to participation; in a manner to exclude. Standard Oil Co. of Texas v. State, Tex. Civ.App., 142 S.W.2d 519, 521, 522, 523. Wholly. People ex rel. Divico v. Adams, 264 App.Div. 315, 35 N.Y.S.2d 453, 455; Baptist Memorial Hospital v. Couillens, 176 Tenn. 300, 140 S.W.2d 1088, 1092.

EXCLUSIVELY FOR PUBLIC PURPOSES. It is not essential to exemption from taxation under provisions exempting from taxation public property used "exclusively for any public purpose" that all the property that is part of the utility unit be used for public purposes. City of Toledo v. Jenkins, 143 Ohio St. 141, 54 N.E.2d 656, 664, 665.

EXCLUSIVELY INTERSTATE. Transportation of passengers by motor vehicles between points within state over route lying partly outside state held exclusively interstate. Conlin Bus Lines v. Old Colony Coach Lines, 282 Mass. 498, 185 N.E. 350, 352.

EXCLUSIVELY OF ALL OTHER CAUSES. Mean that, if accident is shown to be cause of injury for which action is brought, insured can recover. Williams v. General Accident Fire & Life Assur. Corporation, Limited, of Perth, Scotland, 144 Kan. 755, 62 P.2d 856, 857.

EXCLUSIVELY USED. The phrase in provision exempting from taxation properties exclusively used for religious worship, for schools or for purposes purely charitable, has reference to primary and inherent as over against a mere secondary and incidental use. Salvation Army v. Hoehn, Mo., 354 Mo. 107, 188 S.W.2d 826, 830.

EXCOMMENGEMENT. Excommunication (q. v.). Co. Litt. 134a.

It is described in the books as two-fold : (1) The lesser excommunication, which is an ecclesiastical censure, excluding the party from the sacraments; (2) the greater, which excludes him from the company of all Christians. Formerly, too, an excommunicated man was under various civil disabilities. He could not serve upon juries, or be a witness in any court; neither could he bring an action to recover lands or money due to him. These penalties are abolished by St. 53 Geo. III. c. 127. 3 Steph.Comm. 721.

EXCOMMUNICATO CAPIENDO. In ecclesiastical law. A writ issuing out of chancery, founded on a bishop's certificate that the defendant had been excommunicated, and requiring the sheriff to arrest and imprison him, returnable to the king's bench. 4 Bl.Comm. 415; Bac. Abr. "Excommunication," E.

EXCOMMUNICATO DELIBERANDO. A writ to the sheriff for delivery of an excommunicated person out of prison, upon certificate from the ordinary of his conformity to the ecclesiastical jurisdiction. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 63.

EXCOMMUNICATO INTERDICITUR OMNIS ACTUS LEGITIMUS, ITA QUOD AGERE NON POTEST, NEC ALIQUEM CONVENIRE, LICET IPSE AB ALIIS POSSIT CONVENIRI. Co. Litt. 133. Every legal act is forbidden an excommunicated person, so that he cannot act, nor sue any person, but he may be sued by others.

EXCOMMUNICATO RECAPIENDO. A writ commanding that persons excommunicated, who for their obstinacy had been committed to prison, but were unlawfully set free before they had given caution to obey the authority of the church, should be sought after, retaken, and imprisoned again. Reg. Orig. 67.

EXCULPATE is employed in sense of excuse of justification. State v. Langdon, 46 N.M. 277, 127 P.2d 875, 876.

EXCULPATION. In Scotland the law allows of an "exculpation", by which the prisoner is suffered before his trial to prove the thing to be impossible. State v. Langdon, 46 N.M. 277, 127 P.2d 875, 876.

EXCULPATION, LETTERS OF. In Scotch law. A warrant granted at the suit of a prisoner for citing witnesses in his own defense.

EXCULPATORY. Clearing or tending to clear from alleged fault or guilt; excusing. Moore v. State, 124 Tex.Cr.R. 97, 60 S.W.2d 453.

EXCULPATORY CLAUSE. Such clause in favor of a trustee in will implies that trustee has power which he purports to execute, and it exculpates him where this power is exercised in good faith. In re Wacht's Estate, Sur., 32 N.Y.S.2d 871, 897.

EXCUSABLE. Admitting of excuse or palliation.

As used in the law, this word implies that the act or omission spoken of is on its face unlawful, wrong, or liable to entail loss or disadvantage on the person chargeable, but that the circumstances attending it were such as to constitute a legal "excuse" for it, that is, a legal •reason for withholding or foregoing the punishment, liability, or disadvantage which otherwise would follow.

EXCUSABLE ASSAULT. One committed by accident or misfortune in doing any lawful act by lawful means, with ordinary caution and without any unlawful intent. People v. O'Connor, 82 App. Div. 55, 81 N.Y.S. 555.

EXCUSABLE HOMICIDE. See Homicide.

EXCUSABLE NEGLECT. In practice, and particularly with reference to the setting aside of a judgment taken against a party through his "excusable neglect," this means a failure to take the proper steps at the proper time, not in consequence of the party's own carelessness, inattention, or willful disregard of the process of the court, but in consequence of some unexpected or unavoidable hindrance or accident, or reliance on the care and vigilance of his counsel or on promises made by the adverse party. See 1 Bl. Judgm. § 340; Brothers v. Brothers, 71 Mont. 378, 230 P. 60, 61; Westbrook v. Rice, 28 N.D. 324, 148 N.W.

827, 828; Boise Valley Traction Co. v. Boise City, 37 Idaho, 20, 214 P. 1037, 1038; Haas v. Scott, 115 Or. 580, 239 P. 202, 204.

EXCUSAT AUT EXTENUAT DELICTUM IN CAPITALIBUS QUOD NON OPERATUR IDEM IN CIVILIBUS, Bac. Max: r. 15. That may excuse or palliate a wrongful act in capital cases which would not have the same effect in civil injuries. See Broom, Max. 324.

EXCUSATIO. In the civil law. An excuse or reason which exempts from some duty or obligation.

EXCUSATOR.

English law. An excuser.

Old German law. A defendant; he who utterly denies the plaintiff's claim. Du Cange.

EXCUSATUR QUIS QUOD CLAMEUM NON OPPOSUERIT, UT SI TOTO TEMPORE LITIGII FUIT ULTRA MARE QUACUNQUE OCCASIONE. Co. Litt. 260. He is excused who does not bring his claim, if, during the whole period in which it ought to have been brought, he has been beyond sea for any reason.

EXCUSE. A reason alleged for doing or not doing a thing. Worcester; State v. Weagley, 286 Mo. 677, 228 S.W. 817, 820; State v. Saffron, 143 Wash. 34, 254 P. 463. A matter alleged as a reason for relief or exemption from some duty or obligation.

That which is offered as a reason for being excused, or a plea offered in extenuation of a fault or irregular deportment; it is that plea or statement made by the accused which arises out of the state of facts constituting and relied on as the cause. State v. Craig, 161 S.C. 232, 159 S.E. 559, 560.

EXCUSS. To seize and detain by law.

EXCUSSIO.

Civil law. A diligent prosecution of a remedy against a debtor; the exhausting of a remedy against a principal debtor, before resorting to his sureties. Translated "discussion" (q. v.).

Old English law. Rescue or rescous. Spelman.

To finish, accomplish, make complete, fulfill. To perform; obey the injunctions of.

To make; as to execute a deed, which includes signing, sealing, and delivery; performance of all necessary formalities. Heinbach v. Heinbach, 274 Mo. 301, 202 S.W. 1123, 1130; White v. Hendley, 35 Cal.App. 267, 169 P. 710, 713; Hathaway v. Cook, 258 Ill. 92, 101 N.E. 227, 228; Williams v. Kidd, 170 Cal. 631, 151 P. 1, 8, Ann.Cas.1916E, 703. The "execution" of a note involves not only the signing but the delivery of the note. Kennedy & Parsons Co. v. Lander Dairy & Produce Co., 36 Wyo. 58, 252 P. 1036, 1038, 51 A. L.R. 315; Lynch v. Figge, 192 N.Y.S. 873, 876, 200 App. Div. 92; Perko v. Rock Springs Commercial Co., 37 Wyo. 98, 259 P. 520, 522; The execution of a contract includes performance of all acts necessary to render it complete as an instrument. Hofgesang v. Silver, 223 Ky. 101, 3 S.W.2d 185, 186; To make and sign contract, Glick v. Daniel, 184 Ark. 576, 42 S.W.2d 1007, 1008.

To perform; carry out according to its terms; as to execute a contract, or a writ. State v. Miller, 104 W.Va. 226, 139 S.E. 711, 712; Harrity v. Steers, 185 N.Y.S. 704, 195 App. Div. 11.

To fulfill the purpose of ; to obey; to perform the commands of ; as to execute a writ.

A statute is said to execute a use where it transmutes the equitable interest of the cestui que use into a legal estate of the same nature, and makes him tenant of the land accordingly, in lieu of the feoffee to uses or trustee, whose estate, on the other hand, is at the same moment annihilated. 1 Steph.Comm. 339.

Word "sign" as used in trial court's general oral charge and in special written charge given at request of defendant was synonymous with word "execute". Kinney v. Glenn, 29 Ala.App. 478, 198 So. 250, 253.

EXECUTED. Completed; carried into full effect; already done or performed; taking effect immediately; now in existence or in possession; conveying an immediate right or possession. The opposite of executory.

A contract is "executed" by being signed. Mastin Realty & Mining Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A. 8, 130 F.2d 1003, 1005. A trust does not become fully "executed" until subject matter of it has been properly paid over to beneficiaries. Harlan v. Gleason, 180 Md. 24, 22 A. 2d 579, 581. Act or course of conduct carried to completion. Northwest Steel Rolling Mills v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.9, 110 F.2d 286, 290. Term imports idea that nothing remains to be done. Pacific Finance Corporation v. Hendley, 119 Cal.App. 697, 7 P.2d 391, 393. Term when applied to contract includes delivery and implies complete contract. Smith v. School Dist. No. 1, Marshall County, 187 Okl. 184, 102 P.2d 131, 134, 135. Term when applied to deed includes the signing thereof. National Fire Ins. Co. v. Patterson, 170 Okl, 593, 41 P.2d 645, 647.

Generally a jail sentence is "executed" only when the convict has actually suffered the imprisonment. State ex rel. Libtz v. Coleman, 149 Fla. 28, 5 So.2d 60, 61.

EXECUTED CONSIDERATION. A consideration which is wholly past. 1 Pars. Cont. 391. An act done or value given before the making of the agreement.

EXECUTED CONTRACT. See Contract.

EXECUTED ESTATE. See Estate.

EXECUTED FINE. The fine sur cognizance de droit, come ceo que it ad de son done; or a fine upon acknowledgment of the right of the cognizee, as that which he has of the gift of the cognizor. Abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 74.

EXECUTED NOTE. Under Small Loan Act note was not "executed" until it was both signed and delivered. Trustees System Co. of Newark v. Stoll, 13 N.J.Misc. 490, 179 A. 372, 373.

EXECUTED ORAL AGREEMENT. An oral agreement is not "executed" unless it has been fully performed by both parties. Walther v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 40 Cal.App.2d 160, 104 P.2d 551, 554.

EXECUTED REMAINDER. See Remainder.

EXECUTED SALE. See Sale.

EXECUTED TRUST. See Trust.

EXECUTED USE. See Use.

EXECUTED WRIT. In practice. A writ carried into effect by the officer to whom it is directed The term "executed," applied to a writ, has been held to mean "used." Amb. 61.

EXECUTIO EST FINIS ET FRUCTUS LEGIS. Co. Litt 289. Execution is the end and fruit of the law.

EXECUTIO JURIS NON HABET INJURIAM. 2 Roll. 301. The execution of law does no injury.

EXECUTION. Carrying out some act or course of conduct to its completion. Northwest Steel Rolling Mills v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.9, 110 F.2d 286, 290. Completion of an act. Domestic Finance Corporation v. Williams, 174 Misc. 227, 20 N.Y.S.2d 467, 469. Putting into force, Greene v. Wheeler, C.C.A.Wis., 29 F.2d 468, 469. The completion, fulfillment, or perfecting of anything, or carrying it into operation and effect.

At common law, executions are said to be either final or quousque; the former, where complete satisfaction of the debt is intended to be procured by this process; the latter, where the execution is only a means to an end, as where the defendant is arrested on ca. sa.

The word cannot be stretched to include prescription; the natural meaning of "execution" is "performance," including excuses for performance. Wood & Selick v. Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, C.C.A.N.Y., 43 F.2d 941, 942.

Where testatrix left residue of her estate to be divided equally among named individuals, but provided that, if any of those beneficiaries should be deceased at time of "execution" of the will, their share "is" to revert to testatrix' estate, the word "execution" had reference to time when will should take effect and not to time when will was signed. Central Nat. Bank v. Stevenson, 25 Del.Ch. 215, 16 A.2d 114, 115.

Writ of assistance is in the nature of an "execution." Davis v. Federal Land Bank of Columbia, 217 N.C. 145, 7 S.E.2d 373, 376.

Attachment distinguished

Term "executions" as used in Code section dealing with commissions which sheriff may charge in cases where sheriff has collected a judgment on execution without making a sale of the judgment debtor's property is sufficiently broad to include attachment, Jones-Noland Drilling Co. v. Bixby, 34 N.M. 413, 282 P. 382. 384.

Under an attachment, property of defendant is placed in custody of law to await final determination of suit, and the attachment is really a preliminary execution dependent for its ultimate efficacy upon the rendering of a judgment in plaintiff's favor; on the other hand, an "execution" is a remedy afforded by 4.w for the enforcement of a judgment of the court. J. M. Radford Grocery Co. v. Owenby, Tex.Civ.App., 34 S.W.2d 385, 387.

Criminal Law

The carrying into effect of the sentence of the law by the infliction of capital punishment. 4 BI.Comm. 403; 4 Steph. Comm. 470.

French Law

A method of obtaining satisfaction of a debt or claim by sale of the debtor's property privately, ti. e., without judicial process, authorized by the deed or agreement of the parties or by custom; as, in the case of a stockbroker, who may sell securities of his customer, bought under his instructions or deposited by him, to indemnify himself or make good a debt. Arg.Fr.Merc.Law, 557.

Execution includes writ of garnishment. Buckley v. F. L. Riley Mercantile Co., 155 Miss. 150, 124 So. 267.

Garnishee execution is an execution against property. In re Howard Hotel Corporation, 150 Misc. 782, 270 N.Y.S. 259.

Garnishment after judgment "is execution" within statute providing that execution shall only be issued from court in which judgment is rendered. Though a garnishment is not an execution, garnishment after execution is practically an equitable execution. First Nat. Bank of Cordell v. City Guaranty Bank of Hobart, 174 Okl. 545, 51 P.2d 573, 576.

"Execution" in statute includes an order of sale. Bartlett Mortg. Co. v. Morrison, 183 Okl. 214, 81 P.2d 318, 322; Blanscet v. Palo Duro Furniture Co., Tex.Civ.App., 68 S. W.2d 527, 528.

EXECUTION OF JUDGMENT OR DECREE. "Execution" is putting into effect of final judgment of court. Tice v. Tice, 208 Iowa 145, 224 N. W. 571, 572.

As used in Code provision regarding right to demand that nullity of judgment be declared unless defendant suffered judgment to be executed, means the seizure of property. Frank v. Currie, La.App., 172 So. 843, 848.

Execution embraces all appropriate means to execution of judgment, Buckley v. F. L. Riley Mercantile Co., 155 Miss. 150, 124 So. 267.

Process to carry into effect decree or judgment is execution. Painter v. Berglund, 31 Cal.App.2d 63, 87 P.2d 360, 363; Miller v. London, 294 Mass. 300, 1 N.E.2d 198, 200.

Sometimes from the neglect of parties, or some other cause, it became impossible to carry a decree into execution without the further decree of the court upon a bill filed for that purpose. This happened generally in cases where, parties having neglected to proceed upon the decree, their rights under it became so embarrassed by a variety of subsequent events that it was necessary to have the decree of the court to settle and ascertain them. Such a bill might also be brought to carry into execution the judgment of an inferior court of equity, if the jurisdiction of that court was not equal to the purpose; as in the case of a decree in Wales, which the defendant avoided by fleeing into England. This species of bill was generally partly an original bill, and partly a bill in the nature of an original bill, though not strictly original. Story, Eq. P1 342; Daniell, Ch.Pr. 1429.

Statutory means provided for enforcement of judgment requiring the payment of money is execution. Lupton v. Edmundson, 220 N.C. 188, 16 S.E.2d 840, 841.

The last stage of a suit, whereby possession is obtained of anything recovered. It is styled "final process," and consists in putting the sentence of the law in force. 3 Bl. Comm. 412. The carrying into effect of the sentence or judgment of a court. U. S. v. Nourse, 9 Pet. 28, 9 L. Ed. 31; Griffith v. Fowler, 18 Vt. 394; Hurlbutt v. Currier, 68 N.H. 94, 38 A. 502.

Within statute providing for execution of judgment after five years from its entry, "execution" is used in broad sense of execution or carrying into effect by such means as are provided by law for enforcement of various classes of judgments. Bank of America N. T. & S. A. v. Katz, 45 Cal.App.2d 138, 113 P.2d 759, 760.

Writ of execution is a civil proceeding for enforcement of a judgment against property. Lash v. Mann, 141 Ohio St. 577, 49 N.E.2d 689, 691.

EXECUTION PAREE, In French law. A right founded on an act passed before a notary, by which the creditor may immediately, without citation or summons, seize and cause to be sold the property of his debtor, out of the proceeds of which to receive his payment. It imports a confession of judgment, and is not unlike a warrant of attorney. Code Proc. La. art. 732; 6 Toullier, no. 208; 7 Toullier, no. 99.

EXECUTION SALE. A sale by a sheriff or other ministerial officer under the authority of a writ of execution which he has levied on property of the debtor. Noland v. Barrett, 122 Mo. 181, 26 S.W. 692, 43 Am.St.Rep. 572; Norton v. Reardon, 67 Kan. 302, 72 P. 861, 100 Am.St.Rep. 459.

EXECUTIONER. The name given to him who puts criminals to death, according -to their sentence; a hangman.

EXECUTIVE. As distinguished from the legislative and judicial departments of government, the executive department is that which is charged with the detail of carrying the laws into effect and securing their due observance. The word "executive" is also used as an impersonal designation of the chief executive officer of a state or nation. In re Railroad Com'rs, 15 Neb. 679, 50

N.W. 276; In re Davies, 168 N.Y. 89, 61 N.E. 118, 56 L.R.A. 855; State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 382, 21 N.E. 252, 4 L.R.A. 79.

Under constitutional provision dividing powers of government into the legislative, the executive, including the administrative, and the judicial departments, the word "administrative" is not used as synonymous with "executive". Tucker v. State, 218 Ind. 614, 35 N.E.2d 270, 290.

Words "executive" and "administrative" may be used as synonymous or interchangeable terms. Saint v. Allen, 169 La. 1046, 126 So. 548, 555.

EXECUTIVE ACT. "Executive" and "administrative" duties are such as concern the execution of existing laws. People ex rel. Holvey v. Kapp, 355 Ill. 596, 189 N.E. 920, 923.

EXECUTIVE ADMINISTRATION, or MINISTRY. A political term in England, applicable to the higher and responsible class of public officials by whom the chief departments of the government of the kingdom are administered.

The number of these amounts to fifty or sixty persons. Their tenure of office depends on the confidence of a majority of the house of commons, and they are supposed to be agreed on all matters of general policy except such as are specifically left open questions. Cab.Lawy.

EXPECT. To await; to look forward to something intended, promised, or likely to happen. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Hamlin, 67 Kan. 476, 73 P. 58; Kronenberg v. Whale, 21 Ohio App. 322, 153

N.E. 302, 308; to look for mentally, to look forward to, as to something about to happen or come, to have a previous apprehension of whether good or evil, to look for with some confidence, and once meant to demand, to require. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 173 Miss. 192, 159 So. 564, 566.

The word has also a secondary meaning, in which it implies a demand rather than anticipation, as where a person, in negotiating a contract, says he will "expect" to write half the fire insurance. Sillman v. Spokane Savings & Loan Soc., 103 Wash. 619, 175 P. 296, 297.

Where testator gave life estate provided that after life tenant's death he "expected" his realty to be sold the word "expect" was almost equivalent of word "direct". Wattjes v. Faeth, 379 Ill. 290, 40 N.E.2d 521, 524.

'EXPECTABLE RISK. Risk which is indefinite and uncertain. Martin v. Hodson, 93 N.H. 66, 35 A.2d 402, 404.

EXPECTANCY. That which is expected or hoped for. The condition of being deferred to a future time, or of dependence upon an expected event; contingency as to possession or enjoyment. With respect to the time of their enjoyment, estates may either be in possession or in expectancy; and of expectancies there are two sorts,—one created by the act of the parties, called a "remainder;" the other by act of law, called a "reversion." 2 Bl.Comm. 163.

" 'Expectancy' as applied to property, is contingency as to possession, that which is expected or hoped for. At most it is a mere hope or expectation, contingent upon the will and pleasure of the landowner, and hardly reaches the height of a property right, much less a vested right, because where there is no obligation, there is no right. It is a possibility for which a party may under certain circumstances properly hope." Robinson v. Eagle-Picher Lead Co., 132 Kan. 860, 297 P. 697, 698, 75 A.L.R. 840.

EXPECTANCY OF LIFE. In the doctrine of life annuities, the share or number of years of life which a person of a given age may, upon an equality of chance, expect to enjoy. Wharton.

EXPECTANT. Contingent as to enjoyment. Having relation to, or dependent upon, a contingency.

EXPECTANT ESTATES, See Estate in Expectancy.

EXPECTANT HEIR. A person who has the expectation of inheriting property or an estate, but small present means.

The term is chiefly used in equity, where relief is afforded to such persons against the enforcement of "catching bargains," (q. v.) Jeffers v. Lampson, 10 Ohio St. 106; In re Robbins' Estate, 199 Pa. 500, 49 A.. 233. "The phrase is used not in its literal meaning, but as including every one who has either a vested remainder, or a contingent remainder in a family property, including a remainder in a portion, as well as a remainder in an estate, and every one who has the hope of succession to the property of an ancestor, either by reason of his being the heir-apparent or presumptive, or by reason, merely, o the expectation of a devise or bequest on account of the supposed or presumed affection of his ancestor or relation. More than this, the doctrine as to expectant heirs has been extended to all reversioners and remaindermen. So that the doctrine not only included the class mentioned, who in some popular sense might be called 'expectant heirs,' but also all remaindermen and reversioners." Jessel, M. R.

EXPECTANT RIGHT. A contingent right, not vested; one which depends on the continued existence of the present condition of things until the happening of some future event. Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co., 161 U.S. 646, 16 S.Ct. 705, 40 L. Ed. 838; Pollack v. Meyer Bros. Drug Co., C.C.A. Mo., 233 F. 861, 868; Adams v. Ernst, 1 Wash.2d 254, 95 P.2d 799, 804. A right is contingent, not vested, when it comes into existence only on an event or condition which may not happen. Wirtz v. Nestos, 51 N.D. 603, 200 N.W. 524, 530.

EXPECTATION OF LIFE. See Expectancy of Life.

EXPECTED. A shipping agent's letter that a ship was "expected" to be ready to be loaded at a port on a stated date constituted a representation of a belief or expectation. L. N. Jackson & Co. v. Seas Shipping Co., 185 Misc. 94, 56 N.Y.S.2d 501, 503.

EXPECTED SERVICE. Incidental to employment is that service which an employee has no absolute duty to perform but is of the type of duty which has the approval of the employer. Severson v. Industrial Commission, 221 Wis. 169, 266 N.W. 235, 236.

EXPEDIENT. Apt and suitable to end in view. Werner v. Biederman, 64 Ohio App. 423, 28 N.E.2d 957, 959. Whatever is suitable and appropriate in reason for the accomplishment of a specified object. Eustace v. Dickey, 240 Mass. 55, 132 N.E 852, 862.

EXPEDIENTE. An historical record of proceedings in connection with grant of land by the sovereign. State v. Balli, Tex.Civ.App., 173 S.W.2d 522, 526. In Mexican law, a term including all the papers or documents constituting a grant or title to land from government. Vanderslice v. Hanks, 3 Cal. 27, 38.

EXPEDIMENT. The whole of a person's goods and chattels, bag and baggage. Wharton.

EXPILARE. In the civil law. To spoil; to rob or plunder. Applied to inheritances. Dig. 47, 19; Cod. 9, 32.

EXPILATIO. In the civil law. The offense of unlawfully appropriating goods belonging to a succession. It is not technically theft (furtum) because such property no longer belongs to the decedent, nor to the heir, since the latter has not yet taken possession.

In the common law, the grant of letters testamentary, or letters of administration, relates back to the time of the death of the testator or intestate; so that the property of the estate is vested in the executor or administrator from that period.

EXPIRATION. Cessation; termination from mere lapse of time; as the expiration of a lease, statute, and the like. Marshall v. Rugg, 6 Wyo. 270, 45 Pac. 486, 33 L.R.A. 679; Harris v. Goldberg, 111 Misc.Rep. 600, 182 N.Y.S. 262, 263. Coming to a close. Clevenger v. Kern, 100 Ind.App. 581, 197 N.E. 731, 737. Termination or end. Petition of Prime, 335 Pa. 218, 6 A.2d 530, 532.

The record known in insurance circles as "expirations" is in effect a copy of policy issued to insured which contains the date of issuance, name of insured, expiration, amount, premiums, property covered and terms of insurance. Woodruff v. Auto Owners Ins. Co., 300 Mich. 54, 1 N.W.2d 450, 453; Kerr & Elliott v. Green Mountain Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 111 Vt. 502, 18 A.2d 164, 168.

The term "expiration," as in an insurance policy, refers to termination of the policy by lapse of time covering the policy period, while "cancellation" refers to termination of the policy by act of either or both parties prior to ending of the policy period. Beha v. Breger, 223 N.Y.S. 726, 731, 130 Misc.Rep. 235; Hanson v. Royal Ins. Co., C.C.A.Tenn., 257 F. 715, 716.

EXPIRATION OF CREDIT. As used in statute, refers to expiration of additional period of grace or credit extension accorded the debtor. Flesh. man v. Whiteside, 148 Or. 73, 34 P.2d 648, 650, 93 A.L.R. 1456.

EXPIRATION OF PERIOD FOR REDEMPTION. As used in statute concerning conveyance of title by tax deed, it means time of application for tax deed. Hartman v. Mimmack, 116 Mont. 392, 154 P.2d 279, 281.

EXPIRE. Where term of lease has ended, either by lapse of time or by limitation, it has expired. Burnee Corporation v. Uneeda Pure Orange Drink Co., 132 Misc. 435, 230 N.Y.S. 239, 246.

EXPIRY OF THE LEGAL. In Scotch law and practice. Expiration of the period within which an adjudication may be redeemed, by paying the debt in the decree of adjudication. Bell; 3 Jurid. Styles, 3d ed. 1107.

EXPLEES. See Esplees.

EXPLETA, EXPLETIA, or EXPLECIA. In old records. The rents and profits of an estate.

EXPLICATIO. In the civil law. The fourth pleading; equivalent to the surrejoinder of the common law. Calvin.

EXPLICIT. Not obscure or ambiguous, having no disguised meaning or reservation. Eclipse Lumber Co. v. Bitler, 213 Iowa 1313, 241 N.W. 696, 698.

EXPLOITATION. Act or process of exploiting, making use of, or working up; utilization by application of industry, argument, or other means of turning to account, as the exploitation of a mine or a forest. State Finance Co. v. Hamacher, 171 Wash. 15, 17 P.2d 610, 613.

EXPLORATION. In mining law. The examination and investigation of land supposed to contain valuable minerals, by drilling, boring, sinking shafts, driving tunnels, and other means, for the purpose of discovering the presence of ore and its extent. Colvin v. Weimer, 64 Minn. 37, 65 N.W. 1079.

EXPLORATOR. A scout, huntsman, or chaser.

EXPLOSION. A sudden expansion of a liquid substance with result that gas generated by the expansion escapes with violence, usually causing a loud noise. Standard Accident Ins. Co. v. Harrison-Wright Co., 207 N.C. 661, 178 S.E. 235.

A sudden and rapid combustion, causing violent expansion of the air, and accompanied by a report. United Life, Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Foote, 22 Ohio St. 348, 10 Am. Rep. 735; Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Empire Coal Mining Co., C.C.A.Colo., 30 F.2d 794, 798. In the common acceptance of the term, it includes the sudden bursting or breaking up from an internal or other force, and is not limited to cases caused by combustion or fire. American Paper Products Co. v. Continental Ins. Co., 208 Mo.App. 87, 225 S.W. 1029, 1030. The ordinary idea is that the explosion is the cause, while the rupture is the effect. Mitchell v. Ins. Co., 183 U.S. 42, 22 S.Ct. 22, 46 L. Ed. 74.

A violent bursting or expansion with noise following the sudden production of great pressure or a sudden release of pressure. Lever Bros. Co. v. Atlas Assur. Co., C.C.A.Ind., 131 F.2d 770, 775, 776.

A violent expansion of some force, accompanied by noise. Sweeney v. Blue Anchor Beverage Co., 325 Pa. 216, 189 A. 331, 335.

Bursting of something with great noise and violence. Lever Bros. Co. v. Atlas Assur. Co., C.C.A.Ind., 131 F.2d 770, 775, 776.

Bursting with a loud noise or detonation. Bower v. Aetna Ins. Co., D.C.Tex., 54 F.Supp. 897, 898.

Sudden release of pressure such as disruption of steam boiler, Travellers' Indemnity Co. v. B. & B. Ice & Coal Co., 248 Ky. 443, 58 S.W.2d 640.

The word "explosion" is variously used in ordinary speech, and is not one that admits of exact definition. Every combustion of an explosive substance, whereby other property is ignited and consumed, would not be an "explosion," within the ordinary meaning of the term. It is not used as a synonym of "combustion." An explosion may be described generally as a sudden and rapid combustion, causing violent expansion of the air, and accompanied by a report. But the rapidity of the combustion, the violence of the expansion, and the vehemence of the report vary in intensity as often as the occurrences multiply. Hence an explosion is an idea of degrees; and the true meaning of the word, in each particular case, must be settled, not by any fixed standard or accurate measurement, but by the common experience and notions of men in matters of that sort. Insurance Co. v. Foote, 22 Ohio St. 348, 10 Am.Rep. 735. And see Insurance Co. v. Dorsey, 56 Md. 81, 40 Am.Rep. 403; Louisville Underwriters v. Durland, 123 Ind. 544, 24 N.E. 221, 7 L.R.A. 399.

The word "explosion," when used in a fire policy, is that which ordinary men, not scientists, understand an explosion to be. Roma Wine Co. v. Hardware Mut. Fire Ins. Co. of Minnesota, 31 Cal.App.2d 455, 88 P.2d 260, 262.

EXPLOSION OF ANY KIND. Under fire policy exempting insurer from liability, phrase refers not to agency producing explosion, but to kinds of material which explode. McDonald v. Royal Ins. Co., 98 Mont. 572, 40 P.2d 1005, 1006.

EXPLOSIVE. Any substance by whose decomposition or combustion gas is generated with such rapidity that it can be used for blasting or in firearms. Schwartz v. Northern Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Cal., 25 F.2d 555, 559.

"Explosive" is compound or mixture susceptible of explosive chemical reaction, as gunpowder or nitroglycerine, and has been construed not to cover specific things which do explode or contain explosive material. Henderson v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 337 Mo. 1, 84 S.W.2d 922, 925.

EXPORT, v. To carry or to send abroad. Tennessee Oil Co. v. McCanless, 178 Tenn: 683, 157 S.W. 2d 267, 271, 272. To send, take, or carry an article of trade or commerce out of the country. To transport merchandise from one country to another in the course of trade. To carry out or convey goods by sea. State v. Turner, 5 Har., Del., 501.

Transportation of goods from United States to foreign country. West India Oil Co. v. Sancho, C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 108 F.2d 144, 147.

"Export," in its primary sense, means to carry or send out of a place, and in secondary sense means to carry from one state or country. McKesson & Robbins v. Collins, 18 Cal.App.2d 648, 64 P.2d 469, 470.

While the word export technically includes the landing in as well as the shipment to a foreign country, it is often used as meaning only the shipment from this country. U. S. v. Chavez, 228 U.S. 525, 33 S.Ct. 595, 57 L.Ed. 950.

EXPORT, n, A thing or commodity exported. More commonly used in the plural.

In American law, this term is only used of goods carried to foreign countries, not of goods transported from one state te another. Swan v. U. S., 190 U.S. 143, 23 S.Ct. 702, 47 L.Ed. 984; Rothermel v. Meyerle, 136 Pa. 250, 20 A. 583, 9 L.R.A. 366.

EXPORT TAX. A tax on goods going out and which actually leave the country. Krauter v. Menchacatorre, 202 App.Div. 200, 195 N.Y.S. 361, 363.

EXPORTATION. A severance of goods from mass of things belonging to United States with intention of uniting them to mass of things belonging to some foreign country. U. S. v. Hill, C.C.A.N.Y., 34 F.2d 133, 135. The act of sending or carrying goods and merchandise from one country to another.

EXPOSE, v. To show publicly; to display; to offer to the public view; as, to "expose" goods to sale, to "expose" a tariff or schedule of rates, to "expose" the person. Comm. v. Byrnes, 158 Mass. 172, 33 N.E. 343; Adams Exp. Co. v. Schlessinger, 75 Pa. 246. To "expose for sale" means to keep and show for the purpose of selling. State v. Hogan, 212 Mo.App. 473, 252 S.W. 90; to have in stock. People ex rel. Goldstein v. Glass, 154 Misc. 569, 278 N.Y.S. 764.

To place in a position where the object spoken of is open to danger, on where it is near or accessible to anything which may affect it detrimentally; as, to "expose" a child, or to expose oneself or another to a contagious disease or to danger or hazard of any kind. In re Smith, 146 N.Y. 68, 40 N.E. 497, 28 L.R.A. 820; Davis v. Insurance Co., 81 Iowa, 496, 46 N.W. 1073, 10 L.R.A. 359; Eau Claire Sand & Gravel Co. v. Industrial Commission of Wisconsin, 173 Wis. 561, 181 N.W. 718. To cast out to chance, to place abroad, or in a situation unprotected. Shannon v. People, 5 Mich. 90.

Word "exposed" as used in pedestrian's complaint against city meant that city negligently permitted hole to remain in street open and unguarded. City of Birmingham v. Chambless, 222 Ala. 249, 132 So. 313.

EXPOSE. Fr. A statement; account; recital; explanation. The term is used in diplomatic language as descriptive of a written explanation of the reasons for a certain act or course of conduct.

EXPOSITIO. Lat. Explanation; exposition; interpretation.

EXPOSITIO QUE EX VISCERIBUS CAUSE NASCITUR, EST APTISSIMA ET FORTISSIMA IN LEGE. That kind of interpretation which is born [or drawn] from the bowels [or vitals] of a cause is the aptest and most forcible in the law. 10 Coke, 24b.

EXPOSITION. Explanation; interpretation.

EXPOSITION DE PART. In French law. The abandonment of a child, unable to take care of itself, either in a public or private place.

EXPOSITORY STATUTE. One the office of which is to declare what shall be taken to be the true meaning and intent of a statute previously enacted. Black, Const.Law (3d ed.) 89. And see Lindsay v. United States Say. & Loan Co., 120 Ala. 156, 24 So. 171, 42 L.R.A. 783; People v. Board of Sup'rs, 16 N.Y. 424.

They are often expressed thus: "The true intent and meaning of an act passed * * * be and is hereby declared to be;" "the provisions of the act shall not hereafter extend" ; or "are hereby declared and enacted not to apply," and the like. This is a common mode of legislation.

EXPOSURE. The act or state of exposing or being exposed. See Expose.

Words "exposure to unnecessary danger" and the words "unnecessary exposure to danger", include all cases of exposure to unnecessary danger attributable to insured's negligence. Oakley v. National Casualty Co., 217 N.C. 150, 7 S.E.2d 495, 496; Micca v. Wisconsin Nat. Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.I11., 75 F.2d 710, 712.

For "Indecent exposure", see Indecent.

EXPOSURE OF CHILD. Placing it (with the intention of wholly abandoning it) in such a place or position as to leave it unprotected against danger and jeopard its health or life or subject it to the peril of severe suffering or serious bodily harm. Shannon v. People, 5 Mich. 90.

EXPOSURE OF PERSON. In criminal law. Such an intentional exposure, in a public place, of the naked body or the private parts as is calculated to shock the feelings of chastity or to corrupt the morals of the community. Gilmore v. State, 118 Ga. 299, 45 S.E. 226.

EXPRESS. Clear; definite; explicit; unmistakable; not dubious or ambiguous. In re Moon's Will, 107 Vt. 92, 176 A. 410, 412. Clear, definite, plain, direct. State ex rel. Andrews v. Zangerle, 101 Ohio St. 235, 128 N.E. 165, 167. Declared in terms; set forth in words. Directly and distinctly stated. State ex rel. Ashauer v. Hostetter, 344 Mo. 665, 127 S.W.2d 697, 699. Explicit. Elliott v. Hudson, 117 W.Va. 345, 185 S.E. 465, 467; made known distinctly and explicitly, and not left to inference. Minneapolis Steel & Machinery Co. v. Federal Surety Co., C.C.A.Minn., 34 F.2d 270, 274. Manifested by direct and appropriate language, as distinguished from that which is inferred from conduct. The word is usually contrasted with "implied." State v. Denny, 118 Ind. 449, 21 N.E. 274, 4 L.R.A. 65.

"Express" necessarily implies previous knowledge of intended personal use. Burford v. Huesby, 35 Cal.App.2d 643, 96 P.2d 380, 381.

To force out by pressure; to press or squeeze out, as the juice of a fruit; to empty by pressure or squeezing. Strommen v. Prudential Ins. Co., 187 Minn. 381, 245 N.W. 632, 634.

As to express "Conditions," "Consent," "Consideration," "Contracts," "Covenants," "Dedication," "Emancipation," "Invitation," "Malice," "Notice," "Obligation," "Trust," "Waiver," and "Warranty," see those titles.

EXPRESS ABROGATION. Abrogation by express provision or enactment; the repeal of a law or provision by a subsequent one, referring directly to it.

Express abrogation is that literally pronounced by the new law either in general terms, as when a final clause abrogates or repeals all laws contrary to the provisions of the new one, or in particular terms, as when it abrogates certain preceding laws which are named.

EXPRESS ACTIVE TRUST. See Trust.

EXPRESS ASSUMPSIT. An undertaking to do some act, or to pay a sum of money to another, manifested by express terms.

An assumpsit is "express" if promisor puts his engagement in distinct and definite language. Dukes v. Rogers, 67 Ga.App. 661, 21 S.E.2d 295, 297.

An undertaking made orally, by writing not under seal, or by matter of record, to perform act or to pay sum of money to another. Holcomb v. Kentucky Union Co., 262 Ky. 192, 90 S.W.2d 25, 27; Anderson v. Biesman & Carrick Co., 287 Ill. App. 507, 4 N.E.2d 639, 640, 641.

EXPRESS TERMS. Within provision that qualified acceptance, in "express terms," varies effect of draft, "express terms" means clear, unambiguous, definite, certain, and unequivocal terms. International Finance Corp. v. Philadelphia Wholesale Drug Co., 312 Pa. 280, 167 A. 790, 792.

EXPRESSA NOCENT, NON EXPRESSA NON NOCENT. Things expressed are [may be] prejudicial; things not expressed are not. Express words are sometimes prejudicial, which, if omitted, had done no harm. Dig. 35, 1, 52; Id. 50, 17, 195. See Calvin.

EXPRESSA NON PROSUNT QUIE NON EXPRESSA PRODERUNT. 4 Coke, 73. The expression of things of which, if unexpressed, one would have the benefit, is useless. Thing expressed may be prejudicial which when not expressed will profit.

EXPRESSED. Means stated or declared in direct terms, set forth in words; not left to inference or implication. Anderson v. Board of Ed. of School Dist. No. 91, 390 Ill. 412, 61 N.E.2d 562, 567.

EXPRESSIO EORUM QU1E TACITE INSUNT NIHIL OPERATUR. The expression or express mention of those things which are tacitly implied avails nothing. 2 Inst. 365.

A man's own words are void, when the law speaketh as much. Finch, Law, b. 1, c. 3, no. 26. Words used to express what the law will imply without them are mere words of abundance. 5 Coke, 11; Broom, Max. 669, 753; 2 Pars.Contr. 28; 4 Co. 73; Andr.Steph.P1. 366; Hob. 170; 3 Atk. 138; 11 M. & W. 569; 7 Exch. 28.

EXPRESSIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERIUS. Expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Co.Litt. 210a; Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Oki. 487, 40 P.2d 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. Fazio v. Pittsburgh Rys. Co., 321 Pa. 7, 182 A. 696, 698; Saslaw v. Weiss, 133 Ohio St. 496, 14 N.E.2d 930, 932. When certain persons or things are specified, in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Little v. Town of Conway, 171 S.C. 27, 170 S.E. 447, 448.

Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded, People v. One 1941 Ford 8 Stake Truck, Engine No. 99T370053, License No. P.8410, Cal., 159 P.2d 641, 642.

EXPRESSIO UNIUS PERSONS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERHJS. Co.Litt. 210. The mention of one person is the exclusion of another. See Broom, Max. 651.

EXPRESSLY. In an express manner; in direct or unmistakable terms; explicitly; definitely; directly. Le Ballister v. Redwood Theatres, 1 Cal. App.2d 447, 36 P.2d 827; St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Hill, 336 Mo. 17, 76 S.W.2d 685, 689. In an express manner; in direct terms; with distinct purpose; particularly. Hawkins v. Mattes, 171 Okl. 186, 41 P.2d 880, 891; the opposite of impliedly. Bolles v. Toledo Trust Co., 144 Ohio St. 195, 58 N.E.2d 381, 396.

EXPRESSUM FACIT CESSARE TACITUM. That which is expressed makes that which is implied to cease, [that is, supersedes it, or controls its effect.] Thus, an implied covenant in a deed is in all cases controlled by an express covenant. 4 Coke, 80; Broom, Max. 651; 5 Bingh.N.C. 185; 6 B. & C. 609; 2 C. & M. 459; 2 E. & B. 856; Andover & Medford Turnpike Corp. v. Hay, 7 Mass. 106; Galloway v. Holmes, 1 Doug., Mich., 330.

Where a law sets down plainly its whole meaning the court is prevented from making it mean what the court pleases. Munro v. City of Albuquerque, 48 N.M. 306, 150 P.2d 733, 743.

EXPRESSUM SERVITIUM REGAT VEL DECLARET TACITUM. Let service expressed rule or declare what is silent

EXPROMISSIO. In the, civil law. The species of novation by which a creditor , accepts a new debtor, who becomes bound instead of the old, the latter being released. 1 Bouv.Inst. no. 802.

EXPROMISSOR. In the civil law. A person who assumes the debt of another, and becomes solely liable for it, by a stipulation with the creditor. He differs from a surety, inasmuch as this contract is one of novation, while a surety is jointly liable with his principal. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 538; Dig. 12, 4, 4; 16, 1, 13; 24, 3, 64, 4; 38, 1, 37, 8.

EXPROMITTERE. In the civil law. To undertake for another with the view of becoming liable in his place. Calvin.

EXPROPRIATION. This word primarily denotes a voluntary surrender of rights or claims; the act of divesting oneself of that which was previously claimed as one's own, or renouncing it. In this sense it is the opposite of "appropriation."

A meaning has been attached to the term, imported from its use in foreign jurisprudence, which makes it synonymous with the exercise of the power of eminent domain, i. e., the compulsory taking from a person, on compensation made, of his private property for the use of a railroad, canal, or other public work. Brownsville v. Pavazos, 2 Woods 293, Fed.Cas.No.2,043. In Louisiana expropriation is used as is taking under eminent domain in most of the other states. In England "compulsory purchase" Is used; Halsbury, Laws of England.

Expropriation is the compulsory realization of a debt by the creditor out of the lands of his debtor, or the usufruct thereof. When the debtor is cotenant with others, it is necessary that a partition should first be made. It is confined, in the first place, to the lands (if any) that are in hypothêque, but afterwards extends to the lands not in hypothêque. Moreover, the debt must be of a liquidated amount. Brown.

EXPULSION. A putting or driving out. Ejectment; banishment; a cutting off from the privileges of an institution or society permanently. John B. Stetson University v. Hunt, 88 Fla. 510, 102 So. 637, 639. The act of depriving a member of a corporation, legislative body, assembly, society, commercial organization, etc., of his membership in the same, by a legal vote of the body itself, for breach of duty, improper conduct, or other sufficient cause. New York Protective Ass'n v. McGrath, Super.Ct., 5 N.Y.S. 10; Palmetto Lodge v. Hubbell, 2 Strob., S.C., 462, 49 Am. Dec. 604. Also, in the law of torts and of landlord and tenant, an eviction or forcible putting out. See Expel.

"Separation" from a church by reason of a schism is not like "expulsion" or "excommunication," which terms necessarily involve involuntary and compulsory separation of members. Lindstrom v. Tell, 131 Minn. 203, 154 N.W. 969, 971.

EXPUNGE. Means to destroy or obliterate; it implies not a legal act, but a physical annihilation. Andrews v. Police Court of City of Stockton, Cal. App., 123 P.2d 128, 129. To blot out; to efface designedly; to obliterate; to strike out wholly. Webster. See Cancel.

EXPURGATION. The act of purging or cleansing, as where a book is published without its obscene passages.

EXPURGATOR. One who corrects by expurging.

EXQUIESTOR. In Roman law. One who had filled the office of qucestor. A title given to Tribonian. Inst. proem. § 3. Used only in the ablative case, (exqucestore.)

EXROGARE. (From ex, from, and rogare, to pass a law.) In Roman law. To take something from an old law by a new law. Tayl. Civil Law, 155.

EXTEND. Lends itself to .great variety of meanings, which must in each case be gathered from context. Blouch v. Stevens, 106 N.J.L. 488, 150 A. 581, 583.

It may mean to broaden the application or action of, Meyering v. Miller, 30 Mo. 885, 51 S.W.2d 65, 66; to carry forward, Loeffier v. Federal Supply Co., 187 Okl. 373, 102 P.2d 862, 864; to cause to reach or continue as from point to point, Henderson Development Co. v. United Fuel Gas Co., 121 W.Va. 284, 3 S.E.2d 217, 219; to expand, enlarge, prolong, lengthen, widen, carry out, further than the original limit; as, to extend the time for filing an answer, to extend a lease, term of office, charter, railroad track, etc., State v. Armstrong, 31 N.M. 220, 243 P. 333, 345; Lesser-Goldman Cotton Co. v. Cache River Drainage Dist., 174 Ark. 160, 294 S.W. 711, 713; State v. Scott, 113 Mo. 559, 20 S.W. 1076; Moers v. Reading, 21 Pa. 201; Keetch v. Cordner, 90 Utah 423, 62 P.2d 273, 277, 108 A.L.R. 52; to give as a privilege, Tantum v. Keller, 95 N.J.Eq. 466, 123 A. 299, 300, 301, 302; to give wider range, State ex rel. Berthot v. Gallatin County High School Dist., 102 Mont. 356, 58 P.2d 264, 266; to make more comprehensive or capricious, Meyering v. Miller, 33 Mo. 885, 51 S.W.2d 65, 66; Keetch v. Cordner, 90 Utah 423, 62 P.2d 273, 277, 108 A.L.R. 52; to stretch out or to draw out; Crane Enamelware Co. v. Smith, 168 Tenn. 203, 76 S.W.2d 644; Loeffier v. Federal Supply Co., 187 Okl. 373, 102 P.2d 862, 864.

Statute authorizing Interstate Commerce Commission to require carriers to "extend" lines is confined to extensions within undertaking of carriers to serve, and does not embrace new lines reaching new territory. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Oregon-Washington R. & Na^{y}. Co., Or., 288 U.S. 14, 53 S.Ct. 266, 77 L.Ed. 588.

To extend a charter is to give one which now exists greater or longer time to operate in than that to which it was originally limited. Fidelity & Columbia Trust Co. v. Louisville Ry. Co., 258 Ky. 817, 81 S.W.2d 896, 900.

To "extend" a lease or contract is not necessarily the same as "renew," for a stipulation to renew requires the making of a new lease, while one to extend does not. Sanders v. Wender, 205 Ky. 422, 265 S.W. 939, 941. See, also, Nenzel v. Rochester Silver Corporation, 48 Nev. 41, 226 P. 1102, 1105; Livingston Waterworks v. City of Livingston, 53 Mont. 1, 162 P. 381, 383, L.R.A.1917D, 1074; Buckland v. Tarble, 95 Vt. 87, 112 A. 217, 218. But whether a clause in a lease is a covenant of renewal or an agreement for an extension depends on the parties' intention and the use of the word "renewal"; Freiheit v. Broch, 98 Conn. 166, 118 A. 828, 829; and the two terms may be used practically synonymously; American Press v. City of St. Louis, 314 Mo. 288, 284 S.W. 482, 486; Orr v. Doubleday, Page & Co., 157 N.Y.S. 1009, 1012, 172 App.Div. 96. The word "extend" as used in a lease does not necessarily mean the same, as "renew," but context may show intent that the words be given a similar meaning. Candler v. Smyth, 168 Ga. 276, 147 S.E. 552, 554.

To extend a street means to prolong and continue it in the direction in which it already points, but does not include deflecting it from the course of the existing portion. In re Charlotte St., 23 Pa. 288; Seattle & M. Ry. Co. v. State, 7 Wash. 150, 34 P. 551, 22 L.R.A. 217.

English Practice

To value the lands or tenements of a person bound by a statute or recognizance which has become forfeited, to their full extended value. 3 Bl.Comm. 420; Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 131. To execute the writ of extent or extendi facias (q. v.). 2 Tidd, Pr. 1043, 1044.

Taxation

Extending a tax consists in adding to the assessment roll the precise amount due from each person whose name appears thereon. "The subjects for taxation having been properly listed, and a basis for apportionment established, nothing will remain to fix a definite liability but to extend upon the list or roll the several proportionate amounts, as a charge against the several taxables." Cooley, Tax'n, 2d Ed., 423.

EXTENDED. A lengthening out of time previously fixed and not the arbitrary setting of a new date. In re Parent, D.C.N.H., 30 F.Supp. 943, 945, Stretched, spread, or drawn out. Rathbone v. State Board of Land Com'rs of Montana, 100 Mont. 109, 47 P.2d 47, 49.

As used in constitutional inhibition against extending provisions of statute by reference to its title only, has reference to an attempt to add something to text of pre-existing law. Hollis & Co. v. McCarroll, 200 Ark. 523, 140 S.W.2d 420, 422.

EXTENDED INSURANCE. An option to use dividend to procure extended insurance is one to procure extension of term of insurance from date

EXTENDED LEASE. An "extended lease" is merely enlarged upon all the terms and conditions of the instrument, while a "renewed lease" is a new lease. Rathbone v. State Board of Land Com'rs of Montana, 100 Mont. 109, 47 P.2d 47, 49.

EXTENDI FACIAS. Lat. You cause to be extended. In English practice. The name of a writ of execution, (derived from its two emphatic words;) more commonly called an "extent." 2 Tidd, Pr. 1043; 4 Steph.Comm. 43.

EXTENDING as used in agreement to extend railroad siding at point of termination signified making connection with. Blouch v. Stevens, 106 N.J.L. 488, 150 A. 581, 582.

EXTENSION. A part constituting an addition or enlargement, as an annex, as to build on an extension to a house. Northwestern Light & Power Co. v. Town of Grundy Center, 220 Iowa 108, 261 N.W. 604. Addition of existing facilities. People ex rel. Anderson v. Baltimore & 0. S. W. R. Co., 359 Ill. 301, 194 N.E. 568, 569. Enlargement of main body; addition of something smaller than that to which it is attached; to cause to reach or continue as from point to point; to lengthen or prolong. City of Lancaster v. Public Service Commission, 120 Pa.Super. 597, 182 A. 781, 783. That property of a body by which it occupies a portion of space. Newark Stove Co. v. Gray & Dudley Co., D.C.Tenn., 39 F.Supp. 992, 993.

Renewal of paper is not a loan but an extension of time for payment. McRoberts v. Spaulding, D.C.Iowa, 32 F.2d 315, 318.

The word "extension" ordinarily implies the existence of something to be extended. State v. Graves, 352 Mo. 1102, 182 S.W.2d 46, 51.

Bankruptcy

An extension proposal is an agreement on part of creditors that they will extend time within which their claims are probably to be paid, In full as to secured creditors, on terms proposed by debtor and approved by court. Heldstab v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, C.C.A. Kan., 91 F.2d 655, 658.

"Extension" under Bankruptcy Act is proceeding wherein debtor merely obtains extension of time within which to pay in full. In re Thompson, D.C.Va., 51 F.Supp. 12, 14.

Proposal under which debts which were not settled in full but were merely extended in time for ultimate payment in full was an "extension proposal". Mullican v. Texas Land & Mortgage Co., C.C.A.Tex., 117 F.2d 576, 578.

Carrier's Lines

Tracks over which there are to be train movements in the sense that such movements are a part of the actual transportation haul from shipper to the oonsignee. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Chicago Great Western R. Co., 137 Kan. 217, 19 P.2d 484, 489.

Lease

An option for renewal implies giving of new lease on same terms as old lease, while an option for extension contemplates a continuance of old lease for a further period. Mutual Paper Co. v. Hoague-Sprague Corporation, 297 Mass. 294, 8 N.E.2d 802, 806.

"Renewal" and "extension," as used in leases with reference to options for renewal or for extension, are synonymous. Economy Stores v. Moran, 178 Miss. 62, 172 So. 865, 867.

The distinction between "extension" and "renewal" of lease is chiefly that, in the case of renewal, a new lease is requisite, while, in the case of extension, the same lease continues in force during additional period upon performance of stipulated act. Carrano v. Shoor, 118 Conn. 86, 171 A. 17, 20.

The word "extension," when used in its proper and usual sense in connection with a lease, means a prolongation Di the previous leasehold estate. Talbot v. Rednalloh Co., 283 Mass. 225, 186 N.E. 273, 275.

Mercantile Law

An allowance of additional time for the payment of debts. An agreement between a debtor and his creditors, by which they allow him further time for the payment of his liabilities. A creditor's indulgence by giving a debtor further time to pay an existing debt. State v. Mestayer, 144 La. 601, 80 So. 891, 892. Among the French, a similar agreement is known by the name of attermoiement. Merlin, Repert. mot Attermoiement.

Patent Law

An extension of the life of a patent for an additional period of seven years, formerly allowed by law in the United States, upon proof being made that the inventor had not succeeded in obtaining a reasonable remuneration from his patent-right. This is no longer allowed, except as to designs. See Rev.St.U.S. § 4924.

EXTENSION OF PAYMENT. To constitute "extension of payment" of obligation which would release sureties, there must be agreement between obligor and obligee supported by consideration by which obligee has precluded himself from taking action against obligor during period of extension. O'Banion v. Willis, 14 La.App. 638, 129 So. 440, 441.

EXTENSION OR RENEWAL OF NOTE. Takes place when parties agree upon valuable consideration for maturity of debt on day subsequent to that provided in original contract. Elk Horn Bank & Trust Co. v. Spraggins, 182 Ark. 27, 30 S.W.2d 858, 859.

EXTENSIVE. Widely extended in space, time, or scope; great or wide or capable of being extended. American Cannel Coal Co. v. Indiana Cotton Mills, 78 Ind.App. 115, 134 N.E. 891, 893.

EXTENSIVE RAINFALL is not same as "extraordinary rainfall," for which damages could not be recovered; word "extensive" being applicable to area embraced in circumference of particular rainfall, but not implying necessarily rainfall out of ordinary. Johnson v. Ratliff, 233 Ky. 187, 25 S.W.2d 355, 356. See Extraordinary Rainfall.

EXTENSORES. In old English law. Extenders or appraisers.

The name of certain officers appointed to appraise and divide or apportion lands. It was their duty to make a survey, schedule, or inventory of the lands, to lay them out under certain heads, and then to ascertain the value of each, as preparatory to the division or partition. Bract. fols. 72b, 75; Britt. c. 71.

EXTENT. Amount. Cox v. State Industrial Accident Commission, 121 P.2d 919, 921, 168 Or. 508, 23 P.2d 800, 159 A.L.R. 899.

English Practice

A writ of execution issuing from the exchequer upon a debt due the crown, or upon a debt due a private person, if upon recognizance or statute merchant or staple, by which the sheriff is directed to appraise the debtor's lands, and, instead of selling them, to set them off to the creditor for a term during which the rental will satisfy the judgment. Hackett v. Amsden, 56 Vt. 201; Nason v. Fowler, 70 N.H. 291, 47 A. 263. It is so called because the sheriff is to cause the lands to be appraised at their full extended value before he delivers them to the plaintiff. Fitzh.N.B. 131. The term is sometimes used in the various states of the United States to denote writs which give the creditor possession of the debtor's lands for a limited time till the debt be paid. Roberts v. Whiting, 16 Mass. 186.

Scotch Practice

The value or valuation of lands. Bell.

The rents, profits, and issues of lands. Skene.

For "Manorial Extent," see that title.

EXTENT IN AID. That kind of extent which issues at the instance and for the benefit of a debtor to the crown, for the recovery of a debt due to himself. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1045; 4 Steph.Comm. 47. This writ was much abused, owing to some peculiar privileges possessed by crown-debtors, and its use was regulated by Stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 117. See 3 Bla.Comm. 419. The writ used by a debtor of the king against his debtor to enforce the right of preference given to him because of his indebtedness to the king. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Carter, 161 Va. 381, 170 S.E. 764, 768, '90 A.L.R. 191.

EXTENT IN CHIEF. A summary process by which the king's action was commenced against his debtor and his body, personal property (tangible and intangible), and lands at once seized for the satisfaction of the king's debt. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co, v. Carter, 161 Va. 381, 170 S.E. 764, 768, 90 A.L.R. 191. The principal kind of extent, issuing at the suit of the crown, for the recovery of the crown's debt. 4 Steph.Comm. 47. An adverse proceeding by the king, for the recovery of his own debt. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1045.

EXTENT OF SUCH PAYMENT. Under statute extending right of subrogation to Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, phrase "to the extent of such payment" is equivalent to term "pro tanto" or words "as to the portion of the deposit paid". Federal Deposit Ins. Corporation v. Citizens State Bank of Niangua, C.C.A.Mo., 130 F.2d 102, 103.

EXTENTA MANERH. (The extent or survey of a manor.) The title of a statute passed 4 Edw. I. St. 1; being a sort of direction for making a survey or terrier of a manor, and all its appendages. 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 140.

EXTENUATE. To lessen; to palliate; to mitigate. Connell v. State, 46 Tex.Cr.R. 259, 81 S.W. 748.

EXTENUATING CIRCUMSTANCES. Such as render a delict or crime less aggravated, heinous, or reprehensible than it would otherwise be, or tend to palliate or lessen its guilt. Such circumstances may ordinarily be shown in order to reduce the punishment or damages.

EXTENUATION. That which renders a crime or tort less heinous than i would be without it. It is opposed to aggravation.

EXTERIOR. As used in policy means on the outside, external, pertaining to the outside part, Northwestern Casualty & Surety Co. v. Barzune, Tex.Civ.App., 42 S.W.2d 100, 103; the surface outside, Jackson Steam Laundry v. JEtna Casualty & Surety Co., 156 Miss. 649, 126 So. 478, 480.

The phrase "exterior of the building" as used in a lease of a building adjacent to another building, each having its own wall, the two against each other forming a solid double wall, means coextensive with its external parts and including the four walls. B. Siegel Co. v. Codd, 183 Mich. 145, 149 N.W. 1015, 1017.

EXTERNAL. Apparent, outward, visible from the outside, capable of being perceived. Toliver v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co., Mo. App., 47 S.W.2d 140, 141. Outward; exterior; relating to the outside, as of the body; really being without; acting from without, as the external surface of a body; and outwardly; perceptible, visible; physical or corporeal; as distinguished from mental or moral. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 18 Tenn.App. 452, 79 S.W.2d 292, 296.

In double indemnity clause of life policy, the term "external" applies to the force or means and not to the injury. Hanna v. Rio Grande Nat. Life Ins. Co., Tex.Civ. App., 181 S.W.2d 908, 911.

EXTERNAL, VIOLENT AND ACCIDENTAL MEANS. Death through "external, violent and accidental means" necessarily implies that death did not result indirectly from disease or bodily infirmity. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York v. Hassing, C.C.A.10, 134 F.2d 714, 716.

EXTERRITORIALITY. The privilege of those persons (such as foreign ministers) who, though temporarily resident within a state, are not subject to the operation of its laws. The exemption from the operation of the ordinary laws of the state accorded to foreign monarchs temporarily within the state and their retinue, to diplomatic agents and the members of their household, to consuls in non-Christian states, and to foreign men of war in port. 1 Opp. 460-469. See Capitulation; Extraterritoriality.

EXTERUS NON .HABET TERRAS. An alien holds no lands. Tray.Lat.Max. 203.

EXTINCT. Extinguished. A rent is said to be extinguished when it is destroyed and put out. Co.Litt. 147b. See Extinguishment.

EXTINCTO SUBJECTO, TOLLITUR ADJUNCTUM. When the subject [or substance] is extinguished, the incident [or adjunct] ceases. Thus, when the business for which a partnership has been formed is completed, or brought to an end, the partnership itself ceases. Inst. 3, 26, 6; 3 Kent, Comm. 52, note; Griswold v. Waddington, 16 Johns., N.Y., 438, 492.

EXTINGUISH. To put an end to. Onondaga Water Service Corporation v. Crown Mills, Inc., 132 Misc. 848, 230 N.Y.S. 691, 698. To put out, quench, stifle, as to extinguish a fire or flame. Gaily v. Wynne, 96 Cal.App. 145, 273 P. 825, 826.

EXTINGUISHMENT. The destruction or cancellation of a right, power, contract, or estate. The annihilation of a collateral thing or subject in the subject itself out of which it is derived. Prest. Merg. 9. For the distinction between an extinguishment and passing a right, see 2 Shars.Bl. Comm. 325, note.

"Extinguishment" is sometimes confounded with "merger," though there is a clear distinction between them. "Merger" is only a mode of extinguishment, and applies to estates only under particular circumstances ; but "extinguishment" is a term of general application to rights, as well as estates. 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 367, § 1487. "Extinguishment" connotes the end of a thing, precluding the existence of future life therein ; in "mergers" there is a carrying on of the substance of the thing, except that it is merged into and becomes a part of a separate thing with a new identity. McRoberts v. McRoberts, 177 Okl. 156, 57 P.2d 1175, 1177.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF COMMON. Loss of the right to have common. This may happen from various causes. 2 Steph.Com. 41; Co.Litt. 280; 1 Bacon, Abr. 628; Cro.Eliz. 594.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF COPYHOLD. In English law. A copyhold is said to be extinguished when the freehold and copyhold interests unite in the same person and in the same right, which may be either by the copyhold interest coming to the freehold or by the freehold interest coming to the copyhold. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 670, § 864; Hutt. 81; Cro.Eliz. 21; Wms.R.P. 287.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF DEBTS. This takes place by payment; by accord and satisfaction; by novation, or the substitution of a new debtor; by merger, when the creditor recovers a judgment or accepts a security of a higher nature than the original obligation; by a release; by the marriage of a feme sole creditor with the debtor, or of an obligee with one of two joint obligors; and where one of the parties, debtor or creditor, makes the other his executor.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF LEGACY. This occurs in case the identical thing bequeathed is not in existence, or has been disposed of so that it does not form part of the testator's estate, at the time of his death. Welch v. Welch, 147 Miss. 728, 113 So. 197, 198. See Ademption.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF RENT. If a person have a yearly rent of lands, and afterwards purchase those lands, so that he has as good an estate in the land as in the rent, the rent is extinguished. Termes de la Ley; Cowell; Co.Litt. 147. Rent may also be extinguished by conjunction of estates, by confirmation, by grant, by release, and by surrender. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. pp. 210-213, § 209.

EXTINGUISHMENT OF WAYS. This is usually effected by unity of possession. As if a man have a way over the close of another, and he purchase that close, the way is extinguished. 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 341,. § 384; 2 Washb.Real Prop.

EXTIRPATION. In English law. A species of destruction or waste, analogous to estrepement. See Estrepement.

EXTIRPATIONE. A judicial writ, either before or after judgment, that lay against a person who, when a verdict was found against him for land, etc., maliciously overthrew any house or extirpated any trees upon it. Reg.Jud. 13, 56.

EXTOCARE. In old records. To grub woodland, and reduce it to arable or meadow; "to stock up." Cowell.

EXTORSIVELY. A technical word used in indictments for extortion.

It is a sufficient averment of a corrupt intent, in an indictment for extortion, to allege that the defendant "extorsively" took the unlawful fee. Leeman v. State, 35 Ark. 438, 37 Am.Rep. 44. When a person is charged with extorsively taking, the very import of the word shows that he is not acquiring possession of his own, 4 Cox, Cr.Cas. 387. In North Carolina the crime may be charged without using this word, State v. Dickens, 2 N.C. 406.

EXTORT. To compel or coerce, as a confession or information by any means serving to overcome one's power of resistance, or making the confession or admission involuntary. Sutton v. Commonwealth, 207 Ky. 597, 269 S.W. 754, 757.

To gain by wrongful methods, to obtain In am unlawful manner, to compel payments by means of threats of injury to person, property, or reputation. McKenzie v. State, 113 Neb. 576, 204 N.W. 60, 61; State v. Richards, 97 Wash. 587, 167 P. 47, 48. To take from unlawfully; to exact something wrongfully by threats or putting in fear. State v. Adams, Del., 106 A. 287, 288, 7 Boyce, 335. See Extortion.

To wrest from, to exact, to take under a claim of protection. Commonwealth v. Neubauer, 142 Pa.Super. 528, 16 A.2d 450, 452.

The natural meaning of the word "extort" is to obtain money or other valuable thing either by compulsion, by actual force, or by the force of motives applied to the will, and often more overpowering and irresistible than physical force. Com. v. O'Brien, 12 Cush., Mass., 90.

EXTORTIO EST CRIMEN QUANDO QUIS COLORE OFFICH EXTORQUET QUOD NON EST DEBITUM, VEL SUPRA DEBITUIVI, VEL ANTE TEMPUS QUOD EST DEBITUM. 10 Coke, 102. Extortion is a crime when, by color of office, any person extorts that which is not due, or more than is due, or before the time when it is due.

EXTORTION. Unlawful obtaining of money from another. People v. Parkinson, 181 Misc. 603, 41 N.Y.S.2d 331, 334.

It has also been defined as corrupt demanding or receiving by a person in office of a fee for services which should be performed gratuitously; or, where compensation is permissible, of a larger fee than the law justifies, or a fee not due, 2 Bish.Crim.Law, § 390; exaction of .money by reason of oppressive conditions or circumstances, People v. Weller, 237 N.Y. 316, 143 N.E. 205, 208, 38 A.L.R. 613; obtaining of property from another, with his consent, induced by wrongful use of force or fear, or under color of official right. And see State v. Logan, 104 La. 760, 29 So. 336; In re Rempfer, 51 S.D. 393, 216 N.W. 355, 359, 55 A.L.R. 1346; Lee v. State, 16 Ariz. 291, 145 P. 244, 246, Ann.Cas.1917B, 131. Obtaining of property of another by threats to injure him and to destroy his property, State v. Phillips, 62 Idaho 656, 115 P.2d 418, 420. Taking or obtaining of anything from another by means of illegal compulsion or oppressive exaction, Daniels v. U. S., C.C.A.Cal., 17 F.2d 339, 342; whether by an officer or otherwise, United States v. Dunkley, D.C.Cal., 235 F. 1000, 1001. Unlawful taking by any officer, by color of his office, of any money or thing of value that is not due to him, or more than is due, or before it is due, 4 Bla.Comm. 141; Com. v. Saulsbury, 152 Pa. 554, 25 A. 610; 1 Russ.Cr.* 144; 2 Bish.Cr.L. 390; U. S. v. Deaver, D.C.N.C., 14 F. 595; Bush v. State, 19 Ariz. 195, 168 P. 508, 509. Wrongful exaction of money or other valuable thing, either by compulsion, actual force, or by force of motives applied at will, Commonwealth v. Donoghue, 250 Ky. 343, 63 S.W.2d 3, 89 A.L.R. 819.

A taking under color of office is of essence of offense. La Tour v. Stone, 139 Fla. 681, 190 So. 704, 709, 710.

At common law, any oppression by color or pretense of right, and particularly and technically the exaction or unlawful taking by an officer of money or thing of value, by color of his office, either when none at all is due, or not so much is due, or when it is not yet due. Preston v. Bacon, 4 Conn. 480. See People v. Barondess, 16 N.Y.S. 436, 61 Hun, 571; Murray v. State, 125 Tex.Cr.R. 252, 67 S.W.2d 274, 275; State v. Anderson, 66 N.D. 522, 267 N.W. 121, 123; Whart.Cr.L. 833.

Term applies to persons who exact money either for the performance of a duty, the prevention of injury, or the exercise of influence, and covers the obtaining of money or other property by operating on fear or credulity, or by promise to conceal the crimes of others. Commonwealth v. Mann, 111 Pa.Super. 371, 170 A. 381, 382.

Term in comprehensive or general sense signifies any oppression under color of right, and in strict or technical sense signifies unlawful taking by any officer, under color of office, of any money or thing of value not due him, more than is due, or before it is due. State v. Barts, 132 N.J.L. 74, 38 A.2d 838, 843, 844, 848; State v. Vallee, 136 Me. 432, 12 A.2d 421.

To constitute "extortion," money or other thing of value must have been wilfully and corruptly received. La Tour v. Stone, 139 Fla. 681, 190 So. 709, 710.

To constitute "extortion," the wrongful use of fear must be the operating cause producing consent. People v. Biggs, 178 Cal. 79, 172 P. 152, 153.

The distinction between "bribery" and "extortion" seems to be this: the former offense consists in the offering a present, or receiving one, if offered; the latter, in demanding a fee or present, by color of office. Jacob.

For the distinction between "extortion" and "exaction," see Exaction.

EXTRA. A Latin preposition, occurring in many legal phrases, and meaning beyond, except, without, out of, outside.

Work outside contract, performed by subcontractor was properly claimed as an "extra." United States ex rel. Park L. Davis Co. v. Matthew Cummings Co., D.C.Mass., 27 F.Supp. 405, 407, 408.

EXTRA ALLOWANCE. In New York practice. A sum in addition to costs, which may, in the discretion of the court, be allowed to the successful party in cases of unusual difficulty. See Hascall v. King, 54 App.Div. 441, 66 N.Y.S. 1112.

EXTRA COMMERCIA. Property once dedicated to public use is "extra commercia". J. B. McCrary Co. v. Town of Winnfield, D.C.La., 40 F.Supp. 427, 435.

EXTRA COMPENSATION. Within constitutional provision prohibiting Legislature from granting extra compensation to contractor, is compensation over and above that fixed by contract for agreed work, and is in nature of gratuity. Weston v. State, 262 N.Y. 46, 186 N.E. 197, 200, 88 A.L.R. 1219.

Under statutes providing for extra compensation to customs inspectors payment made by licensees to Collector at rates fixed by Secretary of the Treasury constitute "extra compensation" over and above the annual salary, and not a payment from licensees. United States v. Myers, Ct.C1., 320 U.S. 561, 64 S.Ct. 337, 341, 88 L.Ed. 312.

EXTRA COSTS. In English practice. Those charges which do not appear upon the face of the proceedings, such as witnesses' expenses, fees to counsel, attendances, court fees, etc., an affidavit of which must be made, to warrant the master in allowing them upon taxation of costs. Wharton.

EXTRA—DOTAL PROPERTY, In Louisiana this term is used to designate that property which forms no part of the dowry of a woman, and which is also called "paraphernal property." Civ. Code La. art. 2335. Fleitas v. Richardson, 147 U.S. 550, 13 S.Ct. 495, 37 L.Ed. 276.

EXTRA FEODUM. Out of his fee; out of the seigniory, or not holden of him that claims it. Co.Litt. lb; Reg.Orig. 97b.

EXTRA JUDICIUM. Extrajudicial; out of the proper cause; out of court; beyond the jurisdiction. See Extrajudicial.

EXTRA JUS. Beyond the law; more than the law requires. In jure, vel extra jus. Bract. fol. 169b.

EXTRA LEGEM. Out of the law; out of the protection of the law.

EXTRA LEGEM POSITUS EST CIVILITER MORTUUS. Co. Litt. 130. He who is placed out of the law is civilly dead. A bankrupt is, as it were, civilly dead. International Bank v. Sherman, 101 U.S. 406, 25 L.Ed. 866.

EXTRA PRIESENTIAM MARITI. Out of her husband's presence.

EXTRA QUATUOR MARIA. Beyond the four seas; out of the kingdom of England. 1 Bl. Comm. 457.

EXTRA REGNUM. Out of the realm. 7 Coke, 16a; 2 Kent, Comm. 42, note.

EXTRA SERVICES, when used with reference to officers, means services incident to the office in question, but for which compensation has not been provided by law. Miami County v. Blake, 21 Ind. 32.

EXTRA TERRITORIUM. Beyond or without the territory. 6 Bin. 353; 2 Kent, Comm. 407. Outside the territorial limits of a state. Milne v. Moreton, 6 Binn., Pa., 353, 6 Am.Dec. 466.

EXTRA TERRITORIUM JUS DICENTI IMPUNE NON PARETUR. One who exercises jurisdiction out of his territory is not obeyed with impunity. Dig. 2, 1, 20; Branch, Princ.; 10 Coke, 77; Story, Confl.Laws, § 539. He who exercises judicial authority beyond his proper limits cannot be obeyed with safety.

EXTRA VIAM. Outside the way. Where the defendant in trespass pleaded a right of way in justification, and the replication alleged that the trespass was committed outside the limits of the way claimed, these were the technical words to be used. 16 East, 343, 349.

EXTRA VIRES. Beyond powers. See Ultra Vires.

EXTRA WORK. As used in connection with construction contract, means work done not required in performance of the contract, something done or furnished in addition to or in excess of the requirement of the contract. Kansas City Bridge Co. v. State, 61 S.D. 580, 250 N.W. 343; work entirely outside and independent of contract—something not required or contemplated in its performance. Bradshaw v. Wolfe City, Tex.Civ.App., 3 S.W.2d 527, 530; while additional work on the other hand, is usually work which results from a change or alteration in plans concerning work which has to be done under a contract. De Martini v. Elade Realty Corp., Co.Ct., 52 N.Y.S.2d 487, 489; or such work as may fairly be presumed to arise in the construction, and is within the contract, although not included in the plans and specifications. Wilson v. Salt Lake City, 52 Utah, 506, 174 P. 847, 850.

But in a sewer construction contract providing that the city engineer might make such changes in the lines, grades, and dimensions which do not entail any extra expense to the contractor, the word "extra" was deemed equivalent to additional work which was required in the performance of the contract, and not necessary to such performance in the sense that the contract could not have been carried out without it, but necessary in the sense that by means of it the contract Could be more conveniently and beneficially performed in the interest of both parties thereto, and did not include work arising out of and entirely independent of the contract, something not required in its performance. City of Richmond v. Burton, 115 Va. 206, 78 S.E. 560, 563. See, also, Fetterolf v. S. & L. Const. Co., 161 N.Y.S. 549, 550, 175 App.Div. 177; McHugh v. City of Tacoma, 76 Wash. 127, 135 P. 1011, 1015.

Materials and labor not contemplated by the contract, but which are required by changes in the plans and specifications made after the contract had been entered into, are "extra work". Collins v. Hall, Tex.Civ.App., 161 S.W.2d 311, 314.

EXTRACT, v. To draw out or forth; to pull out from a fixed position. Webster.

To "extract" ore within the meaning of a royalty provision in a mining lease contemplates not only the removal of the ore from the mine and throwing it on a dump, but also the separation of the ore from the dirt and refuse in which it was found on the dump. Giersa v. Creech, Mo.App., 181 S. W. 588, 589.

EXTRACT, n. A portion or fragment of a writing. In Scotch law, the certified copy, by a clerk of a court, of the proceedings in an action carried on before the court, and of the judgment pronounced; containing also an order for execution or proceedings thereupon. Jacob; Whishaw.

EXTRACTA CURLE. In old English law. The issues or profits of holding a court, arising from the customary fees, etc.

EXTRADITION. The surrender by one state to another of an individual accused or convicted of an offense outside its own territory and within the territorial jurisdiction of the other, which, being competent to try and punish him, demands the surrender. Waller v. Jordan, 58 Ariz. 169, 118 P. 2d 450, 451.

The surrender of a criminal by a foreign state to which he has fled for refuge from prosecution to the state within whose jurisdiction the crime was committed, upon the demand of the latter state, in order that he may be dealt with according to its laws. Extradition may be accorded as a mere matter of comity, or may take place under treaty stipulations between the two nations. It also obtains as between the different states of the American Union. Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U.S. 270, 22 S.Ct. 484, 46 L. Ed. 534; Fong Yue Ting v. U. S., 149 U.S. 698, 13 S.Ct. 1016, 37 L. Ed. 905.

Extradition between the states must be considered and defined to be a political duty of imperfect obligation, founded upon compact, and requiring each state to surrender one who, having violated the criminal laws of another state, has fled from its justice, and is found in the state from which he is demanded, on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled. Abbott.

—Extradition warrant. See Executive Warrant.

EXTRAHAZARDOUS. In the law of insurance. Characterized or attended by circumstances or conditions of special and unusual danger. Reynolds v. Insurance Co., 47 N.Y. 597; Russell v. Insurance Co., 71 Iowa 69, 32 N.W. 95.

EXTRAHURA. In old English law. An animal wandering or straying about, without an owner; an estray. Spelman.

EXTRAJUDICIAL. That which is done, given, or effected outside the course of regular judicial proceedings; not founded upon, or unconnected with, the action of a court of law; as extrajudicial evidence, an extrajudicial oath.

That which, though done in the course of regular judicial proceedings, is unnecessary to such proceedings, or interpolated, or beyond their scope; as an extrajudicial opinion, (dictum.)

That which does not belong to the judge or his jurisdiction, notwithstanding which he takes cognizance of it.

EXTRAJUDICIAL CONFESSION. See Confession.

EXTRAJUDICIAL EVIDENCE is that which is used to satisfy private persons as to facts requiring proof.

EXTRAJUDICIAL OATH. One taken not in the course of judicial proceedings, or taken without any authority of law, though taken formally before a proper person. State v. Scatena, 84 Minn. 281, 87 N.W. 764.

EXTRAJUDICIALLY. The testimony of an expert witness based upon information obtained "extrajudicially", which means in any other manner than from evidence given in court, is objectionable. State v. David, 222 N.C. 242, 22 S.E.2d 633, 640.

EXTRALATERAL RIGHT. In mining law. The right of the owner of a mining claim duly located on the public domain to follow, and mine, any vein or lode the apex of which lies within the boundaries of his location on the surface, notwithstanding the course- of the vein on its dip or downward direction may so far depart from the perpendicular as *to extend beyond the planes which would be formed by the vertical extension downwards of the side lines of his location. See Rev.Stat. U.S. § 2322, 30 U.S.C.A. § 26.

EXTRAMURAL. As applied to the powers of a municipal corporation, its "extramural" powers are those exercised outside the corporate limits, as distinguished from "intramural" powers. State v. Port of Astoria, 79 Or. 1, 154 P. 399, 404.

EXTRANEOUS EVIDENCE. With reference to a contract, deed, will, or any writing, extraneous evidence is such as is not furnished by the document itself, but is derived from outside sources; the same as evidence aliunde. See, also, Aliunde.

EXTRANEOUS OFFENSE. Is one that is extra, beyond, or foreign to the offense for which the party is on trial. Ridinger v. State, 146 Tex. Cr.R. 286, 174 S.W.2d 319, 320.

EXTRANEUS.

Old English law. One foreign born; a foreigner. 7 Coke, 16.

Roman law. An heir not born in the family of the testator. Those of a foreign state. The same as alienus. Vicat; Du Cange.

EXTRANEUS EST SUBDITUS QUI EXTRA TERRAM, i. e., POTESTATEM REGIS NATUS EST. 7 Coke, 16. A foreigner is a subject who is born out of the territory, e., government of the king.

EXTRAORDINARY. Out of the ordinary; exceeding the usual, average, or normal measure or degree; beyond or out of the common order or rule; not usual, regular, or of a customary kind; remarkable; uncommon; rare. Puget Sound Traction, Light & Power Co. v. Reynolds, D.C. Wash., 223 F. 371, 378; Courtney v. Ocean Accident & Guaranty Corporation, 346 Mo. 703, 142 S.W.2d 858, 861, 130 A.L.R. 234. The word is both comprehensive and flexible in meaning. Zollman v. Baltimore & 0. S. W. R. Co., 121 N.E. 135, 140, 70 Ind.App. 395.

Beyond or out of the common order or method; exceeding the ordinary degree; not ordinary; unusual; employed for an exceptional purpose or on a special occasion; as a noun it is defined as, something extraordinary; especially, an extraordinary expense or allowance; specifically (Eng.) any allowance made to troops beyond the customary gross paid. State v. Rogers, 142 Kan. 841, 52 P.2d 1185, 1195.

EXTRAORDINARY AVERAGE. A contribution by all the parties concerned in a mercantile voyage, either as to the vessel or cargo, toward a loss sustained by some of the parties in interest for the benefit of all. Wilson v. Cross, 33 Cal. 69.

EXTRAORDINARY CARE. Synonymous with greatest care, utmost care, highest degree of care. Railroad Co. v. Baddeley, 54 Ill. 24, 5 Am.Rep. 71; Railway Co. v. Causler, 97 Ala. 235, 12 So. 439; Sorey v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co., 17 La.App. 538, 136 So. 155, 158. See Care; Diligence; Negligence.

EXTRAORDINARY CASE. "The extraordinary motions or cases contemplated by the statute are such as do not ordinarily occur in the transaction of human affairs; as, when a man has been convicted of murder, and it afterwards appears that the supposed deceased is still alive, or where one is convicted on the testimony of a witness who is subsequently found guilty of perjury in giving that testimony, or where there has been some providential cause, and cases of like character." Herrington v. State, 32 Ga.App. 83, 123 S.E. 147, 148; Farmers' Union Warehouse of Metter v. Boyd, 31 Ga.App. 104, 119 S.E. 542.

The presence of an unexplored point of law determinative of litigation makes litigation an "extraordinary case" within statute authorizing additional allowance. National Bank of Far Rockaway v. City of New York, Sup., 46 N.Y.S.2d 153, 154.

EXTRAORDINARY DANGER. In the law of master and servant, one not ordinarily incident to the service. Piorkowski v. A. Leschen & Sons Rope Co., 190 Mo.App. 597, 176 S.W. 258, 260.

EXTRAORDINARY DIVIDENDS. Cash disbursements by "wasting asset" companies are apportioned as "extraordinary dividends" where they represent, in part at least, distribution of proceeds of capital assets. In re Nirdlinger's Estate, 327 Pa. 160, 193 A. 33.

"Extraordinary dividends" may assume unusual form and amount, paid at irregular intervals from accumulated surplus or earnings. In re Nirdlinger's Estate, 327 Pa. 160, 193 A. 33.

EXTRAORDINARY EXPENSES. This term in a constitutional provision that the state may incur indebtedness for extraordinary expenses, means other than ordinary expenses and such as are incurred by the state for the promotion of the general welfare, compelled by some unforeseen condition which is not regularly provided for by law, such as flood, famine, fire, earthquake, pestilence, war, or any other condition that will compel the state to put forward its highest endeavors to protect the people, their property, liberty, or lives. State v. Davis, 113 Kan. 4, 213 P. 171, 172.

EXTRAORDINARY FLOOD. One of those unexplained visitations whose comings are not foreshadowed by the usual course of nature, Jensen v. Buffalo Drainage Dist. of Cloud County, 148 Kan. 712, 84 P.2d 961, 965; and whose magnitude and destructiveness could not have been anticipated or provided against by the exercise of ordinary foresight. Eikland v. Casey, C.C.A.Alaska, 266 F. 821, 823, 12 A.L.R. 179; Clements v. Phoenix Utility Co., 119 Kan. 190, 237 P. 1062, 1065.

One of such unusual occurrence that it could not have been foreseen by men of ordinary experience and prudence.

Soules v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 34 N.D. 7, 157 N.W. 823, 830, L.R.A.1917A, 501. A flood is not extraordinary which is such as residents of the neighborhood might expect from their observation. City of Richmond v. Cheatwood, 130 Va. 76, 107 S.E. 830, 833.

EXTRAORDINARY GRAND JURY is limited in scope of its investigation which may not go beyond terms of executive proclamation, and examination of witness must be confined within those terms, and must not be used as means of disclosing or intermeddling with extraneous matters. People v. Doe, 247 App.Div. 324, 286 N.Y.S. 343.

EXTRAORDINARY HAZARD. If hazards are increased by what other servants do, and injured servant has no part in increasing them, they are "extraordinary". Stone v. Howe, 92 N.H. 425, 32 A.2d 484, 487.

EXTRAORDINARY MOTIONS FOR NEW TRIAL are such as do not ordinarily occur. King v. State, 174 Ga. 432, 163 S.E. 168, 171.

EXTRAORDINARY OBSOLESCENCE. An extensive supersession of property used for transmission or generation of power or instrumentalities used for the transportation of passengers. State ex rel. City of St. Louis v. Public Service Commission, 341 Mo. 920, 110 S.W.2d 749, 775.

EXTRAORDINARY RAINFALL. Not such a downpour of rain as may not have been known to occur, but only such rainfall that is so unusual and extraordinary that men of ordinary prudence -vould not have anticipated and provided for. City of Portsmouth v. Weiss, 145 Va. 94, 133 S.E. 781, 787. Cf. Extensive Rainfall.

EXTRAORDINARY REMEDIES. The writs of mandamus, quo warranto, habeas corpus, and some others are sotnetimes called "extraordinary remedies," in contradistinction to the ordinary remedy by action. Receivership is also said to be an. "extraordinary remedy." Prudential Securities Co. v. Three Forks, H. & M. V. R. Co., 49 Mont. 567, 144 P. 158, 159.

EXTRAORDINARY REPAIRS. Within the meaning of a lease, such as are made necessary by some unusual or unforeseen occurrence which does not destroy the building but merely renders it less suited to the use for which it was intended. Nixon v. Gammon, 191 Ky. 175, 229 S.W. 75, 77; Courtney v. Ocean Accident & Guaranty Corporation, 346 Mo. 703, 142 S.W.2d 858, 861, 130 A.L.R. 234.

EXTRAORDINARY RISK. The expression is generally used to describe risks arising from the negligence of the master. Tenney v. Baird Machine Co., 87 Conn. 119, 87 A. 352, 354; Royal Collieries Co. v. Wells, 210 Ky. 600, 276 S.W. 515, 518. An "extraordinary risk" is one lying outside of the sphere of the normal, arising out of conditions not usual in the master's business. Brazeale v. Piedmont Mfg. Co., 184 S.C. 471, 193 S.E. 39, 43. It is one which is not normally and necessarily incident to the employment. Pollard v. Weeks, 60 Ga.App. 664, 4 S.E.2d 722, 727. It is one which is not naturally incident to occupation and grows out of future of employer to furnish safe place to work and proper and safe appliances and tools for work. Snow v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., La.App., 166 So. 200, 203. It is one which may be obviated by the exercise of reasonable care by the employer. Wheeler v. Chicago & W. I. R. Co., 267 Ill. 306, 108 N.E. 330, 336; Louisiana Ry. & Na^{y}. Co. of Texas v. Disheroon, Tex.Civ.App., 295 S.W. 250, 252. It is a risk which is only indirectly connected with the employment. Emerick v. Slaronian Roman Greek Catholic Union, 93 N.J.L. 282, 108 A. 223.

As respects assumption of risks, an "extraordinary risk" is not one which is uncommon or unusual in the sense that it is rare, but is one which arises out of unusual conditions not resulting in the ordinary course of business, as by reason of the master's negligence, Leyba v. Albuquerque & Cerrillos Coal Co., 22 N.M. 455, 164 P. 823, 825; Houston Lighting & Power Co., 1905 v. Conley, Tex.Civ.App., 171 S.W. 561, 563; it is a risk arising from the master's negligence, Simowitz v. Register, 60 Ga.App. 180, 3 S.E.2d 231, 233; it is a risk which may be obviated by exercise of reasonable care on master's part. Tyner v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 149 S.C. 89, 146 S.E. 663, 670. A servant does not assume "extraordinary risks" unless they are known to and appreciated by him, or are so obvious that ordinarily prudent person under circumstances would have observed and appreciated them, Brazeale v. Piedmont Mfg. Co., 184 S.C. 471, 193 S.E. 39, 43; unless they are known or obvious. Pollard v. Weeks, 60 Ga.App. 664, 4 S.E.2d 722, 727. If injury results from master's breach of duty of due care the risk is "extraordinary" and is assumed only if servant knew or ought to have known of dangerous condition and comprehended it or must be taken to have known of and comprehended it. Stone v. Howe, 92 N.H. 425, 32 A.2d 484, 486.

Under Federal Employers' Liability Act, "extraordinary risks" are risks not normally and necessarily incident to employment, Southern Ry. Co. v. Blanton, 63 Ga.App. 93, 10 S.E.2d 430, 434; an employee is not treated as assuming extraordinary risks arising from defects due to negligence. of employer unless he has knowledge of them or danger is so obvious that it would be appreciated by ordinarily prudent person, Snow v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., La.App., 166 So. 200, 203.

EXTRAORDINARY SERVICES. As applied to the care and attention of an old and infirm person, such services as are unusual, extra, or above those generally required or to be anticipated in usual course of things, not such services as are rendered to an old and feeble person, even though sick, which are not different from those usually required by such persons in similar circumstances. Allen v. Smith, 208 Ky. 207, 270 S.W. 782, 783.

As used in statute authorizing allowance of additional compensation to guardian, means services in addition to guardian's usual or regular services. In re Gislason's Estate, 73 N.D. 731, 19 N.W.2d 447, 451, 452.

EXTRAORDINARY STORM is not necessarily an unprecedented one, but one that happens so rarely that it is unusual and not ordinarily to be expected. Spitzer v. City of Waterbury, 113 Conn. 84, 154 A. 157, 160; Oklahoma City v. Evans, 173 Okl. 586, 50 P.2d 234, 238.

EXTRAPAROCHIAL. Out of a parish; not within the bounds or limits of any parish. 1 Bl. Comm. 113, 284.

EXTRATERRITORIALITY. The extraterritorial operation of laws; that is, their operation upon persons, rights, or jural relations, existing beyond the limits of the enacting state, but still amendable to its laws. A term used, especially formerly, to express, in lieu of the word exterritonality (q. v.), the exemption from the obligation of the laws of a state granted to foreign diplomatic agents, warships, etc. Wheaton, § 224. The term is used to indicate jurisdiction exercised by a nation in other countries, by treaty, as, by the United States in China or Egypt; or by its own ministers or consuls in foreign lands. Crime is said to be extraterritorial when committed in a country other than that of the forum in which the party is tried. See 2 Moore, Int.L.Dig.; U. S. v. Lucas, D.C.Wash., 6 F.2d 327, 328.

EXTRAVAGANTES. In canon law. Those decretal epistles which were published after the Clementines.

They were so called because at first they were not digested or arranged with the other papal constitutions, but seemed to be, as it were, detached from the canon law. They continued to be called by the same name when they were afterwards inserted in the body of the canon law. The first extravagantes are those of Pope John XXII., successor of Clement V. The last collection was brought down to the year 1483, and was called the "Common Extravagantes," notwithstanding that they were likewise incorporated with the rest of the canon law. Enc.Lond.

EXTREME. At the utmost point, edge, or border; most remote. Last; conclusive. Greatest, highest, strongest, or the like. Immoderate; violent. Webster.

EXTREME AND REPEATED CRUELTY. Acts of physical violence producing bodily harm. Holmstedt v. Holmstedt, 383 Ill. 290, 49 N.E.2d 25, 29; physical acts of violence, bodily harm or suffering, or such acts as endanger life or limb, or raise a reasonable apprehension of great bodily harm, but does not include bad temper, petulance, rude language, want of civil attentions, or angry and abusive words. Moore v. Moore, 362 Ill. 177, 199 N.E. 98, 99.

EXTREME CARE. Such care as prudent man would exercise in place of danger. Schlossstein v. Bernstein, 293 Pa. 245, 142 A. 324, 327.

EXTREME CASE. An extreme case, in which an injunction granted inadvertently or improvidently may be dissolved ex parte, means one in which the injunction was manifestly granted improperly, and its continuation until hearing in due course might cause great injury. Teacle v. Hughes, 146 La. 195, 83 So. 457, 458.

EXTREME CRUELTY is condition of extreme discomfort and wretchedness incapacitating spouse to discharge duties or seriously endangering health. McKee v. McKee, 107 N.J.Eq. 1, 151 A. 620, 622. It is grave and serious misconduct which defeats marriage relation. Kennedy v. Kennedy, 101 Fla. 239, 134 So. 201, 203.

Any habitual indulgence by one spouse, that causes mental torture, undermines the health, or tends to dethrone reason of other, is sufficient to constitute "extreme cruelty". Bergman v. Bergman, 145 Fla. 10, 199 So. 920, 922.

As respects constructive abandonment, "extreme cruelty" per se by husband is conduct which law presumes to be malicious, intended to force separation, and dangerous to life or health of wife, or ncapacitates her from performing her duties. Fallon v. Fallon, 111 N.J.Eq. 512, 162 A. 406, 409.

Extreme cruelty is conduct or treatment which : causes reasonable apprehension of bodily hurt, Chisholm v. Chisholm, 98 Fla. 1196, 125 So. 694, 702; constitutes aggravated or inhuman ill treatment, having regard to the physical and temperamental constitution of the parties and all the surrounding circumstances, Donald v. Donald, 21 Fla. 573; Blain v. Blain, 45 Vt. 544; Poor v. Poor, 8 N.H. 315, 29 Am. Dec. 664 ; damages health, Chisholm v. Chisholm, 98 Fla. 1196, 125 So. 694, 703; destroys concord, harmony, happiness, or affection, Hassell v. Hassell, 185 Okl. 154, 90 P.2d 885; destroys happiness and health and defeats the very purposes of matrimony, Hassell v. Hassell, 185 Okl. 154, 90 P.2d 885; destroys legitimate ends and objects of matrimony, Dier v. Dier, 141 Neb. 685, 4 N.W.2d 731, 734; McCarty v. McCarty, 193 Okl. 18, 141 P.2d 103, 104; destroys peace of mind, Dier v. Dier, 141 Neb. 685, 4 N.W.2d 731, 734; destroys peace of mind as to seriously impair health or endanger life, Smith v. Smith, 61 Ariz. 373, 149 P.2d 683, 684; McCarty v. McCarty, 193 Okl. 18, 141 P.2d 103, 104; Hornor v. Hornor, 151 Okl. 292, 3 P.2d 670, 671; endangers health and prevents proper discharge of matrimonial duties, Brinkerhoff v. Brinkerhoff, 106 N.J.Eq. 331, 150 A. 679, 680; endangers health or safety, MacArthur v. MacArthur, 135 N.J.Eq. 215, 37 A.2d 76; whether actually inflicted or reasonably apprehended, Rosengren v. Rosengren, 115 N.J.Eq. 283, 170 A. 660, 661; Bamberg v. Bamberg, 123 N.J.Eq. 570, 199 A. 54, 55; endangers life or health, Fallon v. Fallon, 111 N:J.Eq. 512, 162 A. 406, 408; Chisholm v. Chisholm, 98 Fla. 1196, 125 So. 694, 702; impairs bodily health, Dier v. Dier, 141 Neb. 685, 4 N.W.2d 731, 734; incapacitates one from performing marital duties, Fallon v. Fallon, 111 N.J.Eq. 512, 162 A. 406, 408; inflicts grievous bodily injury or grievous mental suffering. Civ. Code Cal. § 94, McFall v. McFall, 58 Cal.App.2d 208, 136 P.2d 580, 583; produces bodily hurt to physical system or reasonable apprehension thereof, Morris v. Morris, 132 Okl. 291, 133 Okl. 176, 270 P. 833, 835; produces continuous, intense mental pain and suffering, danger to health, or a forced abnegation of the marital relation, Currie v. Currie, 120 Fla. 28, 162 So. 152; wounds, feelings, Nelson v. Nelson, 89 Okl. 318, 117 P.2d 110, 111; Smith v. Smith, 61 Ariz. 373, 149 P.2d 683, 684; renders cohabitation intolerable, Stocker v. Stocker, 173 Okl. 64, 47 P.2d 107, 108; renders cohabitation intolerable and unsafe, Chisholm v. Chisholm, 98 Fla. 1196, 125 So. 694, 703.

Physical violence is extreme cruelty. Baker v. Baker, 94 Fla. 1001, 114 So. 661, 663. But "extreme cruelty" is not confined to physical violence. Henderson v. Henderson, 137 Fla. 770, 189 So. 24, 25; Bastien v. Bastien, 57 R.I. 176, 189 A. 37, 38.

To constitute "extreme cruelty" within divorce statute, the acts must be directed toward the other party and must be committed with a malevolent motive. Nason v. Nason, 48 Cal.App.2d 500, 120 P.2d 37, 39, 40.

Voluntary or intentional extreme cruelty is the "extreme cruelty," which is ground for divorce, Heim v. Heim, 35 Ohio App. 408, 172 N.E. 451.

EXTREME HAZARD. To constitute extreme hazard, the situation of a vessel must be such that there is imminent danger of her being lost, notwithstanding all the means that can be applied to get her off. King v. Hartford Ins. Co., 1 Conn. 421.

EXTREME LOW TIDE are tides which are lower than lower low. State v. Edwards, 188 Wash. 467, 62 P.2d 1094, 1095.

EXTREMIS. When a person is sick, beyond the hope of recovery, and near death, he is said to be in extremis.

EXTREMIS PROBATIS, PRIESUMUNTUR MEDIA. Extremes being proved, intermediate things are presumed. Tray,' Lat. Max. 207.

EXTREMITY. The furthest point. Roberts v. Hart, Tex.Civ.App., 165 S.W. 473, 476.

EXTRINSIC. Foreign; from outside sources; dehors. As to "Extrinsic Fraud", see "Fraud."

Grounds for quashing of indictment may be matters "intrinsic" to the pleading, as defects apparent upon its face, United States v. Frankfeld, D.C.D.C., 38 F.Supp. 1018, 1019.

EXTRINSIC AMBIGUITY. In a written contract is an uncertainty which does not arise by the terms of the instrument itself, but is created by some collateral matter not appearing in the instrument. Pacific Indemnity Co. v. California Electric Works, 29 Cal.App.2d 260, 84 P.2d 313, 320.

EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE is external evidence, or that which is not contained in the body of an agreement, contract, and the like. Extrinsic evidence is also said to be evidence not legitimately before the tribunal in which the determination is made. Baldwin v. City of Buffalo, 35 N.Y. 375, 382.

EXTUMZE. In old records. Relics. Cowell.

EXUERE PATRIAM. To throw off or renounce one's country or native allegiance; to expatriate one's self. Phillim. Dom. 18.

EXULARE. In old English law. To exile or banish. Nullus liber homo, exuletur, nisi, etc., no freeman shall be exiled, unless, etc. Magna Charta, c. 29; 2 Inst. 47.

EXUPERARE. To overcome; to apprehend or take. Leg. Edm. c. 2.

EY. A watery place; water. Co.Litt. 6.

EYDE. Aid; assistance; relief. A subsidy.

EYEWITNESS. A person who could testify as to what he had seen. Wigginton v. Order of United Commercial Travelers of America, C.C.A.Ind., 126 F.2d 659, 662, 665, 666, 667. One who saw the act, fact, or transaction to which he testifies. Distinguished from an ear-witness, (auritus.) Bankers' Health & Accident Ass'n v. Wilkes, Tex.Civ.App., 209 S.W. 230, 233; Pannell v. Sovereign Camp, W. O.W., 171 Tenn. 245, 102 S.W.2d 50, 52. Persons able to testify from their observation. Hayes v. Stunkard, 233 Iowa 582, 10 N.W.2d 19.

"Eye-witness" does not necessarily mean one who obtains knowledge of an act through the sense of sight alone, and may include one who is able to identify a person by his voice and who could not recognize the person on account of absence of sight. Anderson v. Commonwealth, 291 Ky. 727, 166 S.W.2d 30, 36.

EYEWITNESS RULE is that, in absence of eyewitness, or of any obtainable direct evidence as to what deceased did or failed to do by way of precaution, at and immediately before injury, presumption is that he, prompted by natural instinct, was in exercise of care for his own safety, obtains. Edwards v. Perley, 223 Iowa 1119, 274 N.W. 910, 915.

EYOTT. A small island arising in a river. Fleta, 1. 3, c. 2, § b; Bract. 1. 2, c. 2.

EYRE. A journey; a court of itinerant justices.

Justices in eyre were judges commissioned in Anglo-Norman times in England to travel systematically through the kingdom, once in seven years, holding courts in specified places for the trial of certain descriptions of causes.

EYRER. L. Fr. To travel or journey; to go about or itinerate. Britt. c. 2. See Eyre.

EZARDAR. In Hindu law. A farmer or renter of land in the districts of Hindoostan.

F

F. The sixth letter of the alphabet.

Under the old English criminal law, this letter was branded upon felons upon their being admitted to clergy; as also upon those convicted of fights or frays, or falsity. Jacob; Cowell; 2 Reeve, Eng.Law, 392; 4 Reeve, Eng.Law, 485.

F. A. A. Federal Aviation Agency.

F. A. A. In marine insurance. "Free of all average," denoting that the insurance is against total loss only. Wharton.

F. A. S. Free alongside ship. Larkin v. Geisenheimer, 201 App.Div. 741, 195 N.Y.S. 577, 578; Iwai & Co. v. Hercules Powder Co., 162 Ga. 795, 134 S.E. 763. The term implies delivery at dock for ship named. Christenson v. Gorton-Pew Fisheries Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 8 F.2d 689, 691.

A lumber contract providing that prices were f. o. b, f. a. s. is too indefinite for enforcement; the expression "f. o. b." designating that the seller should bear' the expense of loading onto the vessel, while the expression "f. a. s." denotes that the lumber should merely be placed within reach of the vessel's tackle. McGowin Lumber & Export Co. v. R. J. & B. F. Lumber Co., 192 Ala. 35, 68 So. 263, 264.

The delivery of goods under contract "F. A. S." which means free aside ship, is complete and relieves consignor of liability after the goods have been delivered in good order to dock where ship is to sail. Tex-O-Kan Flour Mills Co. v. Nord, La.App., 18 So.2d 50, 54.

F. C. A. Farm Credit Administration.

F. C. C. Federal Communications Commission.

F. C. L. means Femme Couleur Libre. Sunseri v. Cassagne, 191 La. 209, 185 So. 1, 4.

F. D. A. Food and Drug Administration.

F. D. I. C. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

F. G. A. In marine insurance. "Free from general average"; also, sometimes, "foreign general average." The precise meaning of this abbreviation must be gathered from the context. Wharton.

F. H. A. Federal Housing Administration; Farmers Home Administration.

F. H. L. B. B. Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

F. M. C. S. Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

F. N. M. A. Federal National Mortgage Association.

F. 0. B. Term "f. o. b." is an abbreviation for "free on board," and means that seller or consignor of goods will deliver them on car, vessel, or other conveyance by which they are to be transported without expense to buyer or consignee. Hatcher v. Ferguson, 33 Idaho, 639, 198 P. 680, 681, 16 A.L.R. 590; Swerdfeger v. United Acceptance Corporation, 9 Cal.App.2d 590, 50 P.2d 818, 820; Olsen v. McMaken & Pentzien, 139 Neb. 506, 297 N.W. 830, 832; Fernholtz Machinery Co. v. Wilson, 118 Cal.App. 573, 5 P.2d 679, 682.

Contract provision for shipment of goods by seller "f. o. b." place of manufacture means that they are to be delivered to carrier by seller without expense to buyer. State ex rel. Day Pulverizer Co. v. Fitts, 166 Tenn. 156, 60 S.W.2d 167; Humphries v. Frick Co., 56 Ga.App. 124, 192 S.E. 247, 248.

The term "F. 0. B." as used in contract for purchase of scrap iron from railroad for overseas shipment, might reasonably be construed as meaning merely that purchase price of scrap iron was fixed on basis that railroad would transport it free of charge and not as indicating the point of passage of title. Expression "F. 0. B." signifies generally an intention to pass title. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hyman-Michaels Co., 63 Cal.App.2d 757, 147 P.2d 692, 696.

"F. o. b. factory" means "1. o. b. railroad cars at factory," obligating seller to deliver to carrier without cost to buyer, who takes risk thereafter. Richter v. Zoccoli, 8 N.J.Misc. 289, 150 A. 1, 2.

Generally, place "f. o. b." where goods are sold is regarded as place of delivery, but effect of term "t. o. b." depends on connection in which used. Craig Brokerage Co. v. Joseph A. Goddard Co., 92 Ind. App. 234, 175 N.E. 19, 22.

The initials "f. o. b." are generally construed as an intention that the price is to be paid when the property is delivered to carrier. Rudy-Patrick Seed Co. v. Roseman, 247 Iowa 597, 13 N.W.2d 347, 349, 350.

Under contract to sell sage leaves providing for shipment "f. o, b," Greek port, buyer and not seller had the duty of supplying ship at Greek port. Carvel v. John Kellys (London), Limited, Sup., 53 N.Y.S.2d 640, 641.

When used in connection with the price of goods, the term is commonly construed as fixing only the price, and not as relating to the time, place, or mode of delivery. Lee v. Northway Motor Sales Co., R.I., 121 A. 425; Pond Creek Mill & Elevator Co. v. Clark, C.C.A.Ill., 270 F. 482, 486; Bott v. N. Snellenburg & Co., 177 Va. 331, 14 S.E.2d 372, 374.

F. P. A. In marine insurance. "Free from particular average." Wharton. See Average.

F. R. S. Federal Reserve System.

F. T. C. Federal Trade Commission.

FABRIC. With reference to the' reinforcement of concrete, a union of drawn wires made up in rows. Soule v. Northern Construction Co., 33 Cal.App. 300, 165 P. 21, 22.

A woven, felted, or krlitted material for wear or ornament, as cloth, felt, hosiery, or lace; also the material used in its making; something that has been fabricated, constructed, or put together; any complex construction; a system built up of correlated parts; structure or edifice. Guaranty Trust Co. of New York v. Johns-Manville Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 14 F.Supp. 792, 797.

Something that has been fabricated, constructed, or put together; the structure of anything or anything manufactured, and in a broad sense includes a flexible sheet metal. Johns-Manville Corporation v. National Tank Seal Co., C.C.A.Okl., 49 F.2d 142, 145.

FABRIC LANDS. In English law. Lands given towards the maintenance, rebuilding, or repairing of cathedral and other churches. Cowell; Blount. Called by the Saxons timber-lands. Spelman.

It was the custom, says Cowell, for almost every one to give by will more or less to the fabric of the cathedral or parish church where he lived. These lands so given were called fabric lands, because given ad fabricam ecclesia3 reparandam (for repairing the fabric of the church).

FABRICA. In old English law. The making or coining of money.

FABRICARE. Lat. To make. Used in old English law of a lawful coining, and also of an unlawful making or counterfeiting of coin. Used in an indictment for forging a bill of lading; 1 Salk. 341.

FABRICATE. To invent; to devise falsely. Invent is sometimes used in a bad sense, but fabricate never in any other.

To fabricate a story implies that it is so contrary to probability as to require the skill of a workman to induce belief in it. Crabbe, Syn. The word implies fraud or falsehood; a false or fraudulent concoction, knowing it to be wrong. L, R. 10 Q.B. 162.

To fabricate evidence is to arrange or manufacture circumstances or indicia, after the fact committed, with the purpose of using them as evidence, and of deceitfully making them appear as if accidental or undesigned; to devise falsely or contrive by artifice with the intention to deceive. Such evidence may be wholly forged and artificial, or it may consist in so warping and distorting real facts as to create an erroneous impression in the minds of those who observe them and then presenting such impression as true and genuine.

FABRICATED EVIDENCE. Evidence manufactured or arranged after the fact, and either wholly false or else warped and discolored by artifice and contrivance with a deceitful intent. See supra.

FABRICATED FACT. In the law of evidence. A fact existing only in statement, without any foundation in truth. An actual or genuine fact to which a false appearance has been designedly given; a physical object placed in a false connection with another, or with a person on whom it is designed to cast suspicion.

FABRICATING. .The word "fabricating," in its context, does not mean "manufacturing," but means cutting, carving, dressing, shaping and working over stone. Commonwealth v. Paul W. Bounds Co., 316 Pa. 29, 173 A. 633.

FABRICATION. "Manufacture" and "fabrication," are often, in broadest sense, interchangeable in meaning; definition in particular instance depending on environment of particular use of either. Union Wire Rope Corporation v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 66 F.2d 965, 970.

The word "fabrication," meaning "making," although not generally synonymous with "reworking," meaning a working over, was expressly so used in railroad tariff in question, as distinguished from "manufacture." Atchison, T. & S. F. IL Co. v. Union Wire Rope Corporation, D.C.Mo., 1 F.Supp. 399.

FABULA. In old European law. A contract or formal agreement; particularly used in the Lombardic and Visigothic laws to denote a marriage contract or a will. Burrill.

FACE. That which is shown by the mere language employed without any explanation, modification, or addition from extrinsic facts or evidence, the principal sum which it expresses to be due or payable, without any additions in the way of interest and costs. Cunningham v. Great Southern Life Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 66 S.W.2d 765, 773. The outward appearance or aspect of a thing.

For "Regular on its face," see that title.

The surface of anything; especially the front, upper, or outer part or surface; that which particularly offers itself to the view of a spectator. The words of a written paper In their apparent or obvious meaning, as, the face of a note, bill, bond, check, draft, judgment record, or contract; the face of a judgment for which it was rendered exclusive of interest. Cunningham v. Great Southern Life Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 66 S.W.2d 765, 773.

FACE AMOUNT. The "face amount" of an instrument is that shown by the mere language employed, and excludes any accrued interest. Burns v. Corn Exch. Nat. Bank of Omaha, Neb., 33 Wyo. 474, 240 P. 683, 687. See Face of instrument.

The face amount of a policy means the amount which is, in all events, payable under the policy as straight life insurance without regard to any additional features, such as accident or disability insurance, Smith v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, 232 Mo.App. 935, 107 S.W.2d 191, 195; face values specified in policies plus dividend additions postdating lapse, and exclusive of accidental death benefits, Valenti v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, C.C.A.Mo., 71 F.2d 229, 233.

FACE AMOUNT INSURED BY THE POLICY. Within statute relating to extended life insurance, means the amount which is, in all events, payable under the policy as straight life insurance without regard to additional features such as accident or disability insurance. Wilkins v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 350 Mo. 185, 165 S.W.2d 858, 861, 862; Wilkins v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 236 Mo.App. 586, 159 S.W.2d 354, 356.

FACE OF BOOK. Under an act providing that a public or private statute or the proceedings of any legislative body purporting on the face of the book to be printed by authority of the government of the state are evidence without further proof, the "face of the book" and the "title page" need not coincide, as "face" is used in contradistinction to "cover." Pensacola, St. A. & G. S. S. Co. v. Brooks, 14 Ala.App. 364, 70 So. 968, 970.

FACE OF INSTRUMENT. That which is shown by the language employed, without any explanation, modification, or addition from extrinsic facts or evidence. Adopted in Re Stoneman, Sur., 146 N.Y.S. 172, 175; Investors' Syndicate v. Willcuts, D.C.Minn., 45 F.2d 900, 902. Thus, if the express terms of the paper disclose a fatal legal defect, it is said to be "void on its face." Regarded as an evidence of debt, the face of an instrument is the principal sum which it expresses to be due or payable, without any additions in the way of interest or costs. Osgood v. Bringolf, 32 Iowa, 265. See, also, State v. Newby, 169 Wis. 208, 171 N.W. 953, 954.

FACE OF JUDGMENT. The sum for which it was rendered, exclusive of interest. Osgood v. Bringolf, 32 Iowa, 265. See, also, Face of instrument.

FACE OF POLICY. A phrase which, as used in a statute forbidding life insurance policies to contain provision for any mode of settlement at maturity of less value than the amount insured on the "face of the policy," does not mean merely the first page, but denotes the entire insurance contract contained in the policy, including a rider attached and referred to on the first page. Julius v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 299 Ill. 343, 132 N.E. 435, 437, 17 A.L.R. 956.

FACE OF RECORD. The entire record in a case, not merely what the judgment recites. Carson v. Taylor, Tex.Civ.App., 261 S.W. 824; San Bernardo Townsite Co. v. Hocker, Tex.Civ.App., 176 S.W. 644, 646.

The "face of the record" means, in a criminal case, the indictment and the verdict. Jones v. State, 58 Ga.App. 374, 198 S.E. 566.

The phrases "judgment roll," "judgment record," and "face of the record" are synonymous. Every part of trial proceedings reserved in courts of record under direction of court for purpose of its records constitutes the "judgment roll." Permian Oil Co. v. Smith, 129 Tex. 413, 107 S.W.2d 564, 566, 111 A.L.R. 1152, FACE VALUE. This term, in a statute taxing transfers of corporate stock, means par value. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. U. S., 273 U.S. 100, 47 S.Ct. 263, 71 L.Ed. 558. See, also In re Stoneman, Sur., 146 N.Y.S. 172, 174.

As used in statute concerning acceptance of bonds as ball means that value, written or printed on face of instrument and the unmatured coupons attached thereto, without reference to the actual or market value of bonds. Wilson v. Justice's Court of Township of San Diego, 22 Cal.App.2d 278, 70 P.2d 695, 696.

The "face value" of an interest bearing note, is the principal plus accrued interest. American Nat. Bank of Portsmouth v. Ames, 169 Va. 711, 194 S.E. 784, 798.

The value which can be ascertained from the language of the instrument without aid from extrinsic facts or evidence. Investors' Syndicate v. Willcuts, D.C.Minn., 45 F.2d 900, 902.

FACIAL DISFIGUREMENT. That which impairs or injures the beauty, symmetry, or appearance of a person, that which renders unsightly, misshapen or imperfect or deforms in some manner. Ferguson v. State Highway Department, 197 S.C. 520, 15 S.E.2d 775, 778; Poole v. Saxon Mills, 192 S.C. 339, 6 S.E.2d 761, 764.

FACIA& That you cause.

Occurring in the phrases "scare facias," (that you cause to know,) "fieri facias," (that you cause to be made,) etc. Used also in the phrases Do ut facias (I give that you may do), Facio ut facias (I do that you may do), two of the four divisions of considerations made by Blackstone, 2 Comm. 444. See Facio ut des; Facio ut facias.

FACIENDO. In doing or paying; in some activity.

FACIES. Lat. The face or countenance; the exterior appearance or view; hence, contemplation or study of a thing on its external or apparent side.

Thus, prima facie means at the first inspection, on a preliminary or exterior scrutiny. When we speak of a "prima facie case," we mean one which, on its own showing, on a first examination, or without investigating any alleged defenses, is apparently good and maintainable.

FACILE. In Scotch law. Easily persuaded; easily imposed upon. Bell.

FACILITATE. To make easy or less difficult, or to free from difficulty or impediment. Pon Wing Quong v. United States, C.C.A.Cal., 111 F.2d 751, 756. To make more easy or less difficult; free more or less completely from obstruction or hindrance; lessen the labor of: United States v. One Dodge Coupe, Motor No. D14-105424, Serial No. 30284066, D.C.N.Y., 43 F.Supp. 60, 61.

FACILITIES. That which promotes the ease of any action, operation, transaction, or course of conduct. Webster. The term denotes inanimate means rather than human agencies. Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co. v. Smith, 185 Ala. 607, 64 So. 337, 338.

Also, a name formerly given to certain notes of some of the banks in the state of Connecticut, which were made payable in two years after the close of the war of 1812. Springfield Bank v. Merrick, 14 Mass. 322.

As applied to carriers, means everything necessary for the convenience of passengers and the safety and prompt transportation of freight; everything incident to the general, prompt, safe, and impartial performance of the duties to the public at large imposed by the state, in the proper exercise of its police power, upon transportation or transmission companies. As applied to a ferry franchise, everything incident to the general, prompt, and safe carriage of passengers, boats in good repair, appliances answering the purpose, and readiness and willingness to perform the services incident to the grant. Fraters v. Keeling, 20 Cal. App.2d 490, 67 P.2d 118, 119.

As used in phrase "special facilities within the place of amusement," in statute creating amusement tax, referred to personal accommodations furnished for comfort of patron to enable him to obtain a better view of what he paid for when he entered the ground or to more conveniently do so. Martin v. F. H. Bee Shows, 271 Ky. 822, 113 S.W.2d 448, 452.

As used in statute giving Public Service Commission control over service and facilities of public service companies, means something owned by or under the control of a public utility. Borough of Swarthmore v. Public Service Commission, 277 Pa. 472, 121 A. 488, 489.

Electric company which transmitted electricity from generating plant through a line to another company which transmitted such electricity in interstate commerce, operated "facilities" subject to jurisdiction of Federal Power Commission. Jersey Central Power & Light Co. v. Federal Power Commission, C.C.A.3, 129 F.2d 183, 195.

Electric company's corporate organization, contracts, accounts, memorandum, papers, and other records constituted "facilities" within Federal Power Act. The word "facilities" embraces anything which aids or makes easier the performance of the activities involved in the business of a person or corporation. Hartford Electric Light Co. v. Federal Power Commission, C.C.A.2, 131 F.2d 953, 960, 961, 962.

Sidetracks constituting part of a transportation system are "facilities" of the railroad, even though privately owned, Lehigh Na[v]. Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission, 133 Pa.Super. 67, 1 A.2d 540, 544.

Street railroad's "facilities" include tracks and land reasonably necessary for operation of railroad and accommodation of patrons. Munoz v. Porto Rico Ry., Light & Power Co., C.C.A.Puerto Rico, 74 F.2d 816, 821.

FACILITY. In Scotch law. Pliancy of disposition. Bell.

A switch engine and crew is a "facility" within statute authorizing rental thereof by railroad. Nekoosa-Edwards Paper Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., 217 Wis. 426, 259 N.W. 618.

As ordinarily used, Is not as narrow a term as "instrumentality." Nekoosa-Edwards Paper Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., 217 Wis. 426, 259 N.W. 618.

Convenient means. Briggs Mfg. Co. v. U. S., D.C.Conn., 30 F.2d 962, 964.

Where electric company transmitted electricity to another company which transmitted it in interstate commerce, the former company's line was a "facility" subject to jurisdiction of Federal Power Commission. Jersey Central Power & Light Co. v. Federal Power Commission, 319 U.S. 61, 63 S.Ct. 953, 959, 87 L. Ed. 1258.

FACILITY OF PAYMENT CLAUSE, is appoint.. ment by assured and beneficiary of persons authorized to receive payment. French v. Lanham, App.D.C., 57 F.2d 422; Fulcher v. Parker, 169 Va. 479, 194 S.E. 714, 716. It confers on insurer an option as to whom it will make payment, Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Brown for Use and Benefit of Fleming, 25 Tenn.App. 514, 160 S.W.2d 434, 438; Rohde v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 233 Mo.App. 865, 111 S.W.2d 1006.

Such clause in group policy giving employer under certain contingencies power to designate beneficiary controls only where no other beneficiary is named. Potter v. Young, 193 Ark. 957, 104 S.W.2d 802, 804.

FACING. In deed containing building restrictions applicable to lots "facing" and "having a frontage" on named street, quoted words as applied to oblong lots referred to the street which buildings to be erected on the lots were intended to face. Aller v. Berkeley Hall School Foundation, 40 Cal.App.2d 31, 103 P.2d 1052, 1054.

FACINUS QUOS INQUINAT)SQUAT. Guilt makes equal those whom it stains.

FACIO UT DES. (Lat. I do that you may give.)

A species of contract in the civil law (being one of the innominate contracts) which occurs when a man agrees to perform anything for a price either specifically mentioned or left to the determination of the law to set a value on it; as when a servant hires himself to his master for certain wages or an agreed sum of money. 2 B1.Comm. 445. Also, the consideration of that species of contract.

FACIO UT FACIAS. (Lat. I do that you may do.)

The consideration of that species of contract in the civil law, or the contract itself (being one of the innominate contracts), which occurs when I agree with a man to do his work for him if he will do mine for me; or if two persons agree to marry together, or to do any other positive acts on both sides; or it may be to forbear on one side in consideration of something done on the other. 2 Bl.Comm. 444.

FACSIMILE. An exact copy, preserving all the marks of the original.

FACSIMILE PROBATE. In England, where the construction of a will may be affected by the appearance of the original paper, the court will order the probate to pass in facsimile, as it may possibly help to show the meaning of the testator. 1 Williams, Ex'rs, 7th Ed., 331, 386, 566.

FACT. A thing done; an action performed or an incident transpiring; an event or circumstance; an actual occurrence. An actual happening in time or space or an event mental or physical. Fowler-Curtis Co. v. Dean, 203 App.Div. 317, 196 N.Y.S. 750, 754; German-American Ins. Co. v. Huntley, 62 Okl. 39, 161 P. 815, 817; Rost v. Kessler, 267 App.Div. 686, 49 N.Y.S.2d 97, 99. That which has taken place, not what might or might not have taken place. Churchill v. Meade, 92 Or. 626, 182 P. 368, 371.

A fact is either a state of things, that is, an existence, or a motion, that is, an event. 1 Benth.Jud.Ev. 48.

Fact (factum, fait) stands in lawbooks for : 1. An act; 2. For a completed and operative transaction brought about by sealing and executing a certain sort of writing, and so for the instrument itself, a deed (factuin); 3. As designating what exists, in contradistinction to what should exist (de facto as contrasted with de jure); 4. As indicating things, events, actions, conditions, as happening, existing, really taking place. Thayer, Evid. 190.

"Fact" was formerly used almost exclusively in the sense of "action" or "deed." This usage survives in phrases such as "accessory before the fact."

As used in statute providing that malice shall be presumed from publication of matter not privileged, unless the "fact" and the testimony rebut such presumption, means the act, the thing done, the circumstance, the publication itself. Reininger v. Prickett, 192 Okl. 486, 137 P.2d 595, 597.

As used in statute requiring statement of facts constituting cause of action, "facts" mean narrative of events, acts, and things done which show legal liability of defendant to plaintiff. Rhoads v. Columbia Fire Underwriters' Agency, 128 Neb. 710, 260 N.W. 174.

"Facts" to which Supreme Court is limited on certiorari to quash Court of Appeals' decision for conflict comprise record before Court of Appeals, evidence, documentary and oral, and instructions and pleadings. State ex rel. Horspool v. Haid, 328 Mo. 327, 40 S.W.2d 611, 613.

Good reputation of an accused when proved is a "fact". State v., Fenimore, 3 Terry 183, 29 A.2d 170, 171. Intent is a "fact". Majestic Securities Corporation v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.8, 120 F.2d 12, 14. "Knowledge" is a "fact", and an "assertion of knowledge", when knowledge does not exist, is an assertion not in accordance with the facts. Eastern States Petroleum Co. v. Universal Oil Products Co., 24 Del.Ch. 11, 3 A.2d 768, 775. Representations as to boundaries of land are representations of "fact". Algee v. Hillman Inv. Co., 12 Wash.2d 672, 123 P.2d 332, 334. Where knowledge is possible, one who represents a mere belief as knowledge misrepresents a "fact", Sovereign Pocohontas Co. v. Bond, 74 App.D.C. 175, 120 F.2d 39, 40.

Law and Fact as Distinguishable

"Fact" is very frequently used in opposition or contrast to "law."

Thus, questions of fact are for the jury; questions of law for the court. So an attorney at law is an officer of the courts of justice; an attorney in fact is appointed by the written authorization of a principal to manage business affairs usually not professional. Fraud in fact consists in an actual intention to defraud, carried into effect; while fraud imputed by law arises from the man's conduct in its necessary relations and consequences.

A "fact", as distinguished from the "law", may be taken as that out of which the point of law arises, that which is asserted to be or not to be, and is to be presumed or proved to be or not to be for the purpose of applying or refusing to apply a rule of law. Hinckley v. Town of Barnstable, 311 Mass. 600, 42 N.E.2d 581, 584.

Law is a principle; fact is an event. Law is conceived; fact is actual. Law is a rule of duty; fact is that which has been according to or in contravention of the rule. The distinction Is well illustrated in the rule that the existence of foreign laws is matter of fact. Within the territory of its jurisdiction, law operates as an obligatory rule which judges must recognize and enforce; but, in a tribunal outside that jurisdiction, it loses its obligatory force and its claim to judicial notice. The fact that it exists, if important to the rights of parties, must be alleged and proved the same as the actual existence of any other institution. Abbott.

Law of Evidence

A circumstance, event or occurrence as it actual.. ly takes or took place; a physical object or appearance, as it actually exists or existed. An actual and absolute reality, as distinguished from mere supposition or opinion; a truth, as distinguished from fiction or error. Burrill, Circ.Ev. 218.

"Circumstances" are but minor facts, Scott v. State, 57 Ga.App. 489, 195 S.E. 923, 924. Facts admitted upon trial of cause become "evidence". American Extension School of Law v. Ragland, 232 Mo.App. 763, 112 S.W.2d 110, 113. Facts judicially noticed are equivalent to evidence. Zickefoose v. Thompson, 347 Mo. 579, 148 S.W.2d 784, 792.

"Facts" and "evidence" are sometimes used interchangeably. Mackey v. First Nat. Bank, Mo.App., 293 S.W. 66, 71. But the terms are not really synonymous; evidence, broadly defined, being means from which an inference may logically be drawn as to existence of a fact. Tjernstrom v. Ford Motor Co., 285 Mich. 450, 280 N.W. 823, 825. Yet, although "facts" and the "evidence" are quite different, it sometimes may happen that they constitute one and the same thing. Gates v. Haw, 150 Ind. 370, 50 N.E. 299.

Hypothetical question propounded to plaintiff's witness in which an assumed fact was that a test made by another expert had a specified result referred to a "fact" and not an "opinion" of the expert. Cody v. Toiler Drug Co., 232 Iowa 475, 5 N.W.2d 824, 828.

In rule 41(b), providing for motion for dismissal at close of plaintiff's evidence in nonjury case on ground that upon the facts and the law plaintiff has shown no right to relief, the "facts" referred to are the prima facie facts shown by plaintiff's evidence viewed in light most favorable to him. Schad v. Twentieth Cehtury-Fox Film Corporation, C.C.A. Pa., 136 F.2d 991, 993.

Ownership of property is, generally, a "fact" to which a witness may testify. Diamond v. Grath, 46 Cal.App.2d 443, 116 P.2d 114, 116.

Statement that cause of death was a gunshot wound was a statement of "fact" but further statements ,,that such wound was self-inflicted and that death was suicide were mere expressions of "opinion". Kentucky Home Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Watts, 298 Ky. 471, 183 S.W.2d 499, 502.

Where person states matter which might otherwise be only an "opinion" as an existing fact material to the transaction, the statement clearly becomes a statement of "fact". Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York v. J. D. Pittman Tractor Co., 244 Ala. 354, 13 So.2d 669, 672.

Words "facts" and "circumstances" are used interchangeably in the phrase circumstantial evidence. Pulliam v. State, 196 Ga. 782, 28 S.E.2d 139, 147.

Workmen's compensation claimant's testimony that he was well related to a "fact" and not to an "opinion". Texas Employers Ins. Ass'n v. Griffis, Tex.Civ.App., 141 S.W.2d 687, 690.

Truth and Fact Distinguished

The terms "fact" and "truth" are often used in common parlance as synonymous, but, as employed in reference to pleading, they are widely different. A fact in pleading is a circumstance, act, event, or incident; a truth is the legal principle which declares or governs the facts and their operative effect. Admitting the facts stated in a complaint, the truth may be that the plaintiff is not entitled, upon the face of his complaint, to what he claims. The mode in which a defendant sets up that truth for his protection is a demurrer. Drake v. Cockroft, 4 E. D. Smith, N.Y., 37.

For "Collateral Facts," "Dispositive Facts," "Evidentiary Facts," "Finding of Fact," "Immaterial Facts," "Jurisdictional Facts," "Material Fact," "Principal Fact," and "Ultimate Facts," see those heads.

FACT MATERIAL TO RISK. See Material Fact.

FACTA. In old English law. Deeds. Facta armorum, deeds or feats of arms; that is, jousts or tournaments. Cowell.

Facts. Facta et casus, facts and cases. Bract. fol. 1b.

FACTA SUNT POTENTIORA VERBIS. Deeds [or facts] are more powerful than words.

FACTA TENENT MULTA QUIE FIERI PROHIBENTUR. 12 Coke, 124. Deeds contain many things which are prohibited to be done.

FACTIO TESTAMENTI. In the civil law. The right, power, or capacity of making a will; called "factio activa." Inst. 2, 10, 6.

The right or capacity of taking by will; called "f actio passiva." Inst. 2, 10, 6; Vicat, Voc.Jur.

FACTO. In fact; by an act; by the act or fact. Ipso facto, by the act itself ; by the mere effect of a fact, without anything superadded, or any proceeding upon it to give it effect. 3 Kent, Comm. 55, 58.

FACTO ET ANIMO. In fact and intent. Northwestern Mortgage & Security Co. v. Noel Const. Co., 71 N.D. 256, 300 N.W. 28, 31,

FACTOR. A commercial agent, employed by a principal to sell merchandise consigned to him for that purpose, for and in behalf of the principal, but usually in his own name, being intrusted with the possession and control of the goods, and being remunerated by a commission, commonly called "factorage." Howland v. Woodruff, 60 N.Y. 80; In re Rabenau, D.C.Mo., 118 F. 474; Graham v. Duckwall, 8 Bush, Ky., 17; Pal.Ag. 13; Sto.Ag. § 33; Com.Dig. Merchant, B; Malynes, Lex Merc. 81; Beawes, Lex Merc. 44; 3 Chit.Com.L. 193; 2 Kent 622; 1 Bell, Comm. 385, § 408; 2 B. & Ald. 143.

In Scotch law, a person appointed to transact business or manage affairs for another, but more particularly an estate-agent or one intrusted with the management of a landed estate, who finds tenants, makes leases, collects the rents, etc.

In some of the states, the person who is elsewhere called "garnishee" or "trustee." See Factorizing Process.

A commercial agent to whom the possession of personalty is entrusted by or for the owner, to be sold, for a compensation, in pursuance of the agent's usual trade or business, with title to goods remaining in principal and the "factor" being merely a bailee for the purposes of the agency. Neild v. District of Columbia, 71 App.D.C. 306, 110 F.2d 246, 259.

An agent employed to sell goods for principal, The Robin Gray, D.C.N.Y., 53 F.2d 1037, 1041. An agent employed to sell goods for his principal which are in his possession for a commission and ordinary consignment contract create relation of factor and principal. Robertson v. State, 207 Ind. 374, 192 N.E. 887, 888.

An agent employed to sell goods or merchandise consigned or delivered to him, by or for his principal, for a compensation, commonly called factorage or commission, and an agent for the sale of goods in his possession or consigned to him. Hughes v. Young, 17 Tenn.App. 24, 65 S.W.2d 858.

An agent, who, in pursuance of his usual trade or business, and for compensation, sells goods or merchandise consigned or intrusted to his possession for that purpose by or

An agent who, in the pursuit of an independent calling, is employed by another to sell property for him, and is vested by the latter with the possession or control of the property, or authorized to receive payment therefor from the purchaser. Civ.Code Cal. § 2026; Comp.Laws N.D.1913, § 6145; Comp.Laws S.D.1929, § 1288; Leland v. Oliver, 82 Cal.App. 474, 255 P. 775, 777.

One who, In pursuance of business, receives goods from principal and sells them for compensation called factorage or commission. Holleman v. Taylor, 200 N.C. 618, 158 S.E. 88, 89.

One whose business is to receive and sell goods for a commission, being intrusted with the possession of the goods to be sold, and usually selling in his own name. City of Atlanta v. York Mfg. Co., 155 Ga. 33, 116 S.E. 195, 199; Tyson v. Jennings Produce Co., 16 Ala.App. 374, 77 So. 986, 987; G. H. Hammond Co. v. Joseph Mercantile Co., 144 Ark. 108, 222 S. W. 27, 28.

In the old law, one to whom goods are consigned to sell by a merchant at a distance from the place of sale. Eames v. H. B. Claflin Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 239 F. 631, 635.

Broker and Factor Distinguished

A factor differs from a "broker" in that he is intrusted with the possession, management, and control of the goods, (which gives him a special property in them,) ; while a broker acts as a mere intermediary without control or possession of the property. A factor may buy and sell in his own name, as well as in that of the principal, while a broker, as such, cannot ordinarily buy or sell in his own name. Commercial Inv. Trust v. Stewart, 235 Mich. 502, 209 N.W. 660, 661; Sutton & Cummins v. Kiel Cheese & Butter Co., 155 Ky. 465, 159 S.W. 950, 951; Hughes v. Young, 17 Tenn.App. 24, 65 S.W.2d 858; Gadsden County Tobacco Co. v. Corry, 103 Fla. 217, 137 So. 255, 257. A factor or commission merchant has a lien upon the goods for his charges, advances, and commissions, while the broker has no control of the property and is responsible only for bad faith. McCornick & Co., Bankers v. Tolmie Bros., 42 Idaho 1, 243 P. 355, 358.

A factor or commission merchant is one who has the actual or technical possession of goods or wares of another for sale. A "merchandise broker" is one who negotiates the sale of merchandise without having it in his possession or control. He is simply an agent with very limited powers, J. M. Robinson, Norton & Co. v. Cotton Factory, 124 Ky. 435, 99 S.W. 305, 102 S.W. 869, 8 L.R.A.,N.S., 474.

Commission Merchants and Factors as Synonymous

Factors are also frequently called "commission merchants;" and it is said that there is no difference in the meaning of these terms, the latter being perhaps more commonly used in America. Thompson v. Woodruff, 7 Cold. 410; Duguid v. Edwards, 50 Barb., N.Y., 288; Lyon v. Alvord, 18 Conn. 80. See, also, Commission Merchant.

Domestic and Foreign Factors

Factors are called "domestic" or "foreign" according as they reside and do business in the same state or country with the principal or in a different state or country.

A domestic factor is sometimes called a "home" factor. Ruffner v. Hewitt, 7 W.Va. 585; 1 Term 112; 4 Maule & S. 576.

A "foreign factor," as understood in marine matters, was a person who had charge of the cargo to handle it, dispose of it, convert it into money, or exchange it for other property, but who had nothing to do with the management of the boat when he sailed thereon, at which time he was called a "supercargo." Gilchrist Transp. Co. v. Worthington & Sill, 193 App.Div. 250, 184 N.Y.S. 81, 83; Beawes, Lex Mere. 44; Liverm.Ag. 69; 1 Domat, b. 1, t. 16, § 3, art. 2.

Judicial Factor

In Scotch law. A factor appointed by the courts in certain cases where it becomes necessary to intrust the management of property to another than the owner, as, where the latter is insane or imbecile or the infant heir of a decedent.

Supercargo as a Factor

Where an owner of goods to be shipped by sea consigns them to the care of an agent, who sails on the same vessel, has charge of the cargo on board, sells it abroad, and buys a return cargo out of the proceeds, such agent is strictly and properly a "factor," though in maritime law and usage he is commonly called a "supercargo." Beawes, Lex Merc. 44, 47; Liverm.Ag. 69, 70.

FACTORAGE. The wages, allowance, or commission paid to a factor for his services. Winne v. Hammond, 37 Ill. 103; State v. Thompson, 25 S.W. 346, 120 Mo. 12.

FACTORING is a system involving notice to the trade debtors, and is confined principally to the textile industry. Corn Exchange Nat. Bank & Trust Co., Philadelphia, v. Klauder, Pa., 318 U.S. 434, 63 S.Ct. 679, 682, 87 L.Ed. 884, 144 A.L.R. 1189.

FACTORIZING PROCESS. In American law. A process by which the effects of a debtor are attached in the hands of a third person. A term peculiar to the practice in Vermont and Connecticut. Otherwise termed "trustee process," "garnishment," and process by "foreign attachment." Cross v. Brown, 19 R.I. 220, 33 A. 147; Drake, Attach. § 451.

FACTORS' ACTS. The name given to several English statutes (6 Geo. IV. c. 94; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39; 40 & 41 Vict. c. 39) by which a factor is enabled to make a valid pledge of the goods, or of any part thereof, to one who believes him to be the bona fide owner of the goods. Similar legislation is not uncommon in the United States.

FACTORY,

American Law

A building or group of buildings appropriated to the manufacture of goods, including the machinery necessary to produce the goods, and the engine or other power by which the machinery is propelled; the place where workers are employed in fabricating goods, wares, or utensils. Cent. Diet.; Mayhew v. Hardesty, 8 Md. 479. A structure where something is made or manufactured. People v. R. F. Stevens Co., 178 App.Div. 306, 165 N.Y.S. 39.

An undertaking in which the business of working at commodities is carried on with power-driven machinery. Gowey v. Seattle Lighting Co., 108 Wash. 479, 184 P. 339.

Any mill, workshop, or any manufacturing or business establishment, and all buildings, sheds, structures, or other places used for or in connection therewith where one or more persons are employed at labor. Under such statute, the term includes a machine shop, People v. Transit Development Co., 165 N.Y.S. 114, 115, 178 App.Div. 288; and a theatrical company; Ursprung v. Winter Garden Co., 169 N.Y.S. 738, 745, 183 App.Div. 718; but not a butche: shop; O'Connor v. Webber, 219 N.Y. 439, 114 N.E. 799.

Any premises where steam, water, or other mechanical power is used in the aid of any manufacturing process without reference to whether it is inclosed in a building. Casey v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co., C.C.A.Wash., 202 F. 1, 5.

Any premises wherein power is used in manufacturing, making, altering, adapting, ornamenting, finishing, repairing, or renovating articles for purpose of trade or gain, or of business carried on therein. Bradley v. Blakley, La.App., 147 So. 709, 710; Menke v. Hauber, 99 Kan. 171, 160 P. 1017, 1018.

The word does not necessarily mean a single building or edifice, but may apply to several, where they are used in connection with each other, for a common purpose, and stand together in the same inclosure. Liebenstein v. Insurance Co., 45 Ill. 303. And see Hernischel v. Texas Drug Co., 26 Tex.Civ.App. 1, 61 S.W. 419; Schott v. Harvey, 105 Pa. 227, 51 Am.Rep. 201; Amberg v. Kinley, 214 N.Y. 531, 108 N.E. 830, 833, L.R.A.1915E, 519.

To bring acts within statutory definition of "factory" as used in statute relating to employees' rest each week, the acts must be manufacturing ones. People v. Middletown & U. R. Co., 169 Misc. 773, 8 N.Y.S.2d 193, 195, 196.

English Law and Statutes

The term includes all buildings and premises wherein, or within the close or curtilage of which, steam, water, or any mechanical power is used to move or work any machinery employed in preparing, manufacturing, or finishing cotton, wool, hair, silk, flax, hemp, jute, or tow. So defined by the statute 7 Vict. c. 15, § 73.

By later acts this definition has been extended to various other manufacturing places. Mozley & Whitley.

Also a place where a considerable number of factors reside, in order to negotiate for their masters or employers. Enc. Brit.

Scotch Law

A species of contract or employment which falls under the general designation of "agency," but which partakes both of the nature of a mandate and of a bailment of the kind called "locatio ad operandum." 1 Bell, Comm. 259.

FACTORY ACTS. Laws enacted for the purpose of regulating the hours of work, and the sanitary condition, and preserving the health and morals, of the employes, and promoting the education of young persons employed at such labor.

FACTORY PRICES. The prices at which goods may be bought at the factories, as distinguished from the prices of goods bought in the market after they have passed into the hands of third persons or shop-keepers. Whipple v. Levett, 2 Mason, 90, Fed.Cas.No.17,518.

FACTORY RATING. Of carrying capacity of motortrucks as used in statute imposing license fee means customary public announcement of manufacturer in placing motortrucks on market. Memphis Steam Laundry Co. v. Crenshaw, 166 Tenn. 168, 61 S.W.2d 669.

FACTS. See Fact.

FACTS CANNOT LIE. 18 How.State Tr. 1187; 17 How.State Tr. 1430; but see Best, Ev. 587.

FACTS IN ISSUE. Those matters of fact on which the plaintiff proceeds by his action, and which the defendant controverts in his pleadings. Maeder Steel Products Co. v. Zanello, 109 Or. 562, 220 P. 155, 158; King v. Chase, 15 N.H. 9, 41 Am. Dec. 675; Caperton v. Schmidt, 26 Cal. 494, 85 Am.Dec. 187.

FACTS INCOMPLETE. A certificate of trial judge to bill of exceptions not certifying to correctness of any recital therein and only certifying that the bill "is facts incomplete", that is, not finished, not perfect, defective, verifies nothing and brings nothing before the Court of Appeals for review. Loving v. Kamm, 34 N.E.2d 591.

FACTS OF THE CASE. With which Supreme Court will deal in case brought from Court of Appeal by writ of review, are facts that were proved or admitted, not deductions or conclusions as to duty of parties or negligence. Llorens v. McCann, 187 La. 642, 175 So. 442, 444.

FACTS WELL PLEADED are those of a substantive nature necessary to the framing of the issue submitted. Bushman v. Barlow, 321 Mo. 1052, 15 S.W.2d 329, 331.

FACTUM. Lat. With respect to change of domicile, "factum" is person's physical presence in new domicile. Guilfoil v. Hayes, 169 Va. 548, 194 S.E. 804, 807.

Civil Law. Fact; a fact; a matter of fact, as distinguished from a matter of law. Dig. 41, 2, 1, 3.

French Law. A memoir which contains concisely set down the fact on which a contest has happened, the means on which a party founds his pretensions, with the refutation of the means of the adverse party. Vicat.

Old English Law. A deed; a person's act and deed. A culpable or criminal act; an act not founded in law. Anything stated or made certain; a deed of conveyance; a written instrument under seal: called, also, charta. Spelman; 2 Bla. Comm. 295. A fact; a circumstance; particularly a fact in evidence. Bract. fol. lb. Factum probandum (the fact to be proved). 1 Greenl. Ev. § 13.

Old European Law. A portion or allotment of land; otherwise called a hide, bovata, etc. Spelman.

Testamentary Law. The execution or due execution of a will. The factum of an instrument means not barely the signing of it, and the formal publication or delivery, but proof that the party well knew and understood the contents thereof, and did give, will, dispose, and do, in all things, as in the said will is contained. Weatherhead v. Baskerville, 11 How. 354, 13 L.Ed. 717.

FACTUM CUIQUE SUUM NON ADVERSARIO, NOCERE DEBET. Dig. 50, 17, 155. A party's own act should prejudice himself, not his adversary.

FACTUM INFECTUM FIERI NEQUIT. A thing done cannot be undone. 1 Kames, Eq. 96, 259.

FACTUM JURIDICUM. A juridical fact. Denotes one of the factors or elements constituting an obligation.

FACTUM NEGANTIS NULLA PROBATIO SIT. Cod. 4, 19, 23. There is no proof incumbent upon him who denies a fact.

"FACTUM" NON DICITUR QUOD NON PERSEVERAT. That is not called a "deed" which does not continue operative. That is not said to be done which does not last. 5 Coke, 96; Shep. Touch., Preston ed. 391.

FACTUM PROBANDUM. Lat. In the law of evidence. The fact to be proved; a fact which is in issue, and to which evidence is to be directed. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 13.

FACTUM PROBANS. A probative or evidentiary fact; a subsidiary or connected fact tending to prove the principal fact in issue; a piece of circumstantial evidence.

FACTUM UNIUS ALTERI NOCERI NON DEBET. Co. Litt. 152. The deed of one should not hurt another.

FACULTAS PROBATIONUM NON EST ANGUSTANDA. The power of proofs [right of offering or giving testimony] is not to be narrowed. 4 Inst. 279.

FACULTATIVE COMPENSATION is that which operates by the will of the parties, when one of them removes an obstacle preventing compensation, resulting from the dispositions of the law. In re Interstate Trust & Banking Co., La.App., 194 So. 35, 40, 42.

FACULTATIVE REINSURANCE. Under type designated "facultative", the reinsurer has the option of accepting the tendered part of the original insurer's risk. Lincoln Nat. Life Ins. Co. v. State Tax Commission, 196 Miss. 82, 16 So.2d 369.

FACULTIES. In the law of divorce. The capability of the husband to render a support to the wife in the form of alimony, whether temporary or permanent, including not only his tangible property, but also his income and his ability to earn money. 2 Bish. Mar. & Div. § 446; Lovett v. Lovett, 11 Ala. 763; Wright v. Wright, 3 Tex. 168; Fowler v. Fowler, 61 Okl. 280, 161 P. 227, 230, L. R.A.1917C, 89. See Allegation of Faculties.

FACULTIES, COURT OF. In English ecclesiastical law. A jurisdiction or tribunal belonging to the archbishop.

It does not hold pleas in any suits, but creates rights to pews, monuments, and particular places, and modes of burial. It has also various powers under 25 Hen. VIII. c. 21, in granting licenses of different descriptions, as a license to marry, a faculty to erect an organ in a parish church, to level a church-yard, to remove bodies previously buried. 4 Inst. 337.

FACULTIES, MASTER OF THE. An official in the archdiocese of Canterbury who granted dispensations. 4 Inst. 337. See Arches Court.

FACULTY.

Ecclesiastical Law. A license or authority; a privilege granted by the ordinary to a man by favor and indulgence to do that which by law he may not do; e. g., to marry without banns, to erect a monument in a church, etc. Termes de la Ley.

Faculties are of two kinds : first, when the grant is to a man and his heirs in gross; second, when it is to a person and his heirs as appurtenant to a house which he holds in the parish; 1 Term 429, 432; 12 Co. 106.

Scotch Law. A power founded on consent, as distinguished from a power founded on property. 2 Karnes, Eq. 265.

FACULTY OF A COLLEGE OR UNIVERSITY. The corps of professors, instructors, tutors, and lecturers. To be distinguished from the board of trustees, who constitute the corporation.

The teaching body. West v. Board of Trustees of Miami University and Miami Normal School, 41 Ohio App. 367, 181 N.E. 144, 150.

FACULTY OF ADVOCATES. The college or society of advocates in Scotland.

FADE THE GAME. Means that spectators of a game of "craps" bet on the success of actual participants. Sullivan v. State, 146 Tex.Cr.R. 79, 171 S.W.2d 353.

FADERFIUM. In old English law. A marriage gift coming from the father or brother of the bride. Spelman.

FZEDER-FEOH. In old English law. The portion brought by a wife to her husband, and which reverted to a widow, in case the heir of her deceased husband refused his consent to her second marriage; i. e., it reverted to her family in case she returned to them. Wharton.

FIESTING-MEN. Approved men who were strong-armed; habentes homines or rich men, men of substance; pledges or bondsmen, who, by Saxon custom, were bound to answer for each other's good behavior. Cowell; Du Cange.

FAGGOT. A badge worn in popish times by persons who had recanted and abjured what was then adjudged to be heresy, as an emblem of what they had merited. Cowell.

FAGGOT VOTE. A term applied to votes manufactured by nominally transferring land to persons otherwise disqualified from voting for members of parliament.

A faggot vote occurs where a man is formally possessed of a right to vote for members of parliament, without possessing the substance which the vote should represent; as if he is enabled to buy a property, and at the same moment mortgage it to its full value, for the mere sake of the vote. See 7 & 8 Wm. III. c. 25, § 7. Wharton.

FAIDA. In Saxon law. Malice; open and deadly hostility; deadly feud.

The word designated the enmity between the family of a murdered man and that of his murderer, which was recognized, among the Teutonic peoples, as justification for vengeance taken by any one of the former upon any one of the latter. Du Cange; Spelman.

FAIL. Fault, negligence, or refusal. Walker v. Sheffield Steel Corporation, 224 Mo.App. 849, 27 S.W.2d 44, 48; Anderson v. Commercial Credit Co., 110 Mont. 333, 101 P.2d 367, 369.

It also means:

Involuntarily to fall short of success or the attainment of one's purpose. See Cobb v. Morrison, 197 Ala. 550, 73 So. 42; Pennsylvania Co. v. Good, 56 Ind.App. 562, 103 N.E. 672, 673; lapse, Gredig v. Sterling, C.C.A.Tex., 47 F.2d 832, 834; Wilmington Trust Co. v. Wilmington Trust Co., 25 Del.Ch. 204, 15 A.2d 830, 834; to become insolvent and unable to meet one's obligations as they mature. Davis v. Campbell, 3 Stew., Ala., 321; Mayer v. Hermann, 16 Fed. Cas. 1,242; to come short of ; lack; to prove ineffective or inoperative; to become or be found deficient or wanting, In re Merritt's Will, 14 N.Y.S.2d 103, 107, 171 Misc. 812; to decline, Buffalo County v. Phelps County, 129 Neb. 268, 261 N.W. 360; to keep or cease from an appointed, proper, expected, or required action, Romero v. Department of Public Works, 17 Ca1.2d 189, 109 P.2d 662, 665; to lapse, as a legacy which has never vested or taken effect, Sherman v. Richmond Hose Co., No. 2, 230 N.Y. 462, 130 N.E. 613; to leave unperformed; to omit; to neglect; to be wanting in action, Buffalo County v. Phelps County, 129 Neb. 268, 261 N.W. 360; A. Widemann Co. v. Digges, 21 Cal.App. 342, 131 P. 882, 883; Ginnochio v. Hydraulic Press Brick Co., D.C.Ohio, 266 F. 564, 569.

The difference between "fail" and "refuse" is that the latter involves an act of the will, while the former may be an act of inevitable necessity. Taylor v. Mason, 9 Wheat. 344, 6 L.Ed. 101. See Stallings v. Thomas, 55 Ark. 326, 18 S.W. 184; Persons v. Hight, 4 Ga. 497; Maestas v. American Metal Co. of New Mexico, 37 N.M. 203, 20 P.2d 924, 928.

The words "fail to comply," however, have in general the same operation in law as the words "refuse to comply." Ginnochio v. Hydraulic Press Brick Co., D.C.Ohio, 266 F. 564, 569. And an allegation in an indictment that defendant "failed and refused" to comply with a statute should not be expanded to carry the implication that there was a deliberate, intentional, and inexcusable refusal, especially where the indictment is not good without such expansion. Mackey v. U. S., C.C.A.Tenn., 290 F. 18, 21.

The term may imply an inopportunity to act. Worthington Pump & Machinery Corporation v. City of Cudahy, 182 Wis. 8, 195 N.W. 717.

FAILING CIRCUMSTANCES. Insolvency, that is, the lack of sufficient assets to pay one's debts. Brown v. State, 71 Tex.Cr.R. 353, 162 S.W. 339, 346. A person (or a corporation or institution) is said to be in failing circumstances when he is about to fail, that is, when he is actually insolvent and is acting in contemplation of giving up his business because he is unable to carry it on. Appeal of Millard, 62 Conn. 184, 25 A. 658; Utley v. Smith, 24 Conn. 310, 63 Am.Dec. 163.

A bank is in "failing circumstances" when, from any cause, it is unable to pay its debts in the ordinary or usual course of business, Sanders v. Owens, Mo.App., 47 S.W.2d 132, 134; when in state of uncertainty as to whether it will be able to sustain itself, depending on favorable or unfavorable contingencies, over which its officers have no control. Graf v. Allen, 230 Mo.App. 721, 74 S.W.2d 61, 66.

FAILING OF RECORD. When an action is brought against a person who alleges in his plea matter of record in bar of the action, and avers to prove it by the record, but the plaintiff saith nul tiel record, viz., denies there is any such record, upon which the defendant has a day given him by the court to bring it in, if he fail to do it, then he is said to fail of his record, and the plaintiff is entitled to sign judgment. Termes de la Ley.

FAILLITE. In French law. Bankruptcy; failure; the situation of a debtor who finds himself unable to fulfill his engagements. Code de Com. arts. 442, 580; Civil Code La. art. 3556, No. 11; 3 Masse, Droit Comm. 171; Guyot, R6pert.

FAILS TO ATTEND AT THE TRIAL. Must be such a prolonged absence and failure to attend as to hinder and delay the orderly business of the court. Smith v. State, 42 Okl.Cr. 308, 275 P. 1071, 1072.

FAILURE. Abandonment or defeat, State v. Summers, 320 Mo. 189, 6 S.W.2d 883, 885. Deficiency, want, or lack; ineffectualness; inefficiency as measured by some legal standard; an unsuccessful attempt. State v. Butler, 81 Minn. 103, 83 N.W. 483; In re Moore, 79 Ind.App. 470, 138 N.E. 783. Lapse. Wilmington Trust Co. v. Wilmington Trust Co., 25 Del.Ch. 204, 15 A.2d 830, 834. See, also, Fail.

As used in municipal charter concerning "failure" to fill certain office by certain methods, the term presupposes efforts that had proved fruitless, and demands a bona fide and seasonable attempt to select by such methods. Scott v. Suitor, 103 Vt. 175, 152 A. 801, 802.

Discontinuance of business from insolvency, bankruptcy, or the like. State v. Thompson, 333 Mo. 1069, 64 S.W.2d 277.

"Failure" of appeal tax court to reduce assessment giving right of appeal means failure to reduce after application by owner asking that assessment be reduced. Aejis Co. v. Ray, 156 Md. 590, 144 A. 842, 844.

Insolvency. Goess v. A. D. H. Holding Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 85 F.2d 72, 74.

"Failure" is not always synonymous with "insolvency." State v. Tunnicliffe, 98 Fla. 731, 124 So. 279, 281.

Suspension or abandonment of business by a merchant, manufacturer, bank, etc., in consequence of insolvency, American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Carrolton Furniture Mfg. Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 95 F. 115, 36 C.C.A. 671; Terry v. Calman, 13 S.C. 220; State v. Lewis, 42 La.Ann. 847, 8 So. 602.

The failure to note action for trial is a "neglect" or "failure" within practice rule relating to dismissal of action without prejudice for want of prosecution. State ex rel. Woodworth & Cornell v. Superior Court for King County, 9 Wash.2d 37, 113 P.2d 527, 530.

The neglect of any duty may be a "failure." See Christhilf v. City of Baltimore, 152 Md. 204, 136 A. 527, 528; Washington v. State, 22 Okl.Cr. 69, 209 P. 967, 968. Compare, however, In re Green, 192 Cal. 714, 221 P. 903, 905. But to constitute a statutory offense, such as the failure to work on public roads, the term may imply willfulness and the absence of sufficient excuse. Jones v. State, 7 Ala. App. 180, 62 So. 306, 307.

FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION. As applied to notes, contracts, conveyances, etc., this term does not mean a want of consideration, but implies that a consideration, originally existing and good, has since become worthless or has ceased to exist or been extinguished, partially or entirely. Shirk v. Neible, 156 Ind. 66, 59 N.E. 281, 83 Am.St.Rep. 150; Williamson v. Cline, 40 W.Va. 194, 20 S.E. 920.

It means that sufficient consideration was contemplated by the parties at time contract was entered into, but either on account of some innate defect in the thing to be given or nonperformance in whole or in part of that which the promisee agreed to do or forbear nothing of value can be or is received by the promisee. Holcomb v. Long Beach Inv. Co., 129 Cal.App. 285, 19 P.2d 31, 36.

It occurs where the thing expected to be received by one party and given by the other party cannot be or has not been given without fault of the party contracting to give it. Edmund D. Cook, Inc. v. Commercial Casualty Ins. Co., 15 N.J.Misc. 256, 190 A. 99, 101.

"Fraud" cannot be pleaded as defense to note on ground that it amounts to "failure of consideration." Fraud is in. Its essence a tort, while "failure of consideration" ordinarily involves no actionable wrong, but occurs by reason of accident or mistake. Kothmann v. Southwest Co., Tex. Civ.App., 92 S.W.2d 272, 276.

Want of consideration as synonymous or distinguishable

"Failure of consideration" is in fact simply a want of consideration. Farrell v. Third Nat. Bank, 20 Tenn.App. 540, 101 S.W.2d 158, 163.

"Want of consideration" embraces transactions or instances where no consideration was intended to pass while "failure of consideration" implies that a valuable consideration moving from obligee to obligor was contemplated. In re Conrad's Estate, 333 Pa. 561, 3 A.2d 697, 699; Rauschenbach v. McDaniel's Estate, 122 W.Va. 632, 11 S.E.2d 852, 854.

There is "want of consideration" when nothing of value has ever been received, and "failure of consideration" where something of value was originally received which has since lost its value. Columbia Restaurant v. Sadnovick, La.App., 157 So. 280, 282.

FAILURE OF EVIDENCE. Judicially speaking, a total "failure of evidence" means not only the utter absence of all evidence, but it also means a failure to offer proof, either positive or inferential, to establish one or more of the many facts, the establishment of all of which is indispensable to the finding of the issue for the plaintiff. Cole v. Hebb, 7 Gill & J., Md., 28.

FAILURE OF GOOD BEHAVIOR. Enumerated in statute as ground for removal of a civil service employee means behavior contrary to recognized standards of propriety and morality, misconduct or wrong conduct. State ex rel. Ashbaugh v. Bahr, 68 Ohio App. 308, 40 N.E.2d 677, 680, 682.

FAILURE OF ISSUE. The failure at a fixed time, or the total extinction, of issue to take an estate limited over by an executory devise. A definite failure of issue is when a precise time is fixed by the will for the failure of issue, as in the case where there is a devise to one, but if he dies without issue or lawful issue living at the time of his death, etc. An indefinite failure of issue is the period when the issue or descendants of the first taker shall become extinct, and when there is no longer any issue of the issue of the grantee, without reference to any particular time or any particular event. 4 Kent, Comm. 275; Huxford v. Milligan, 50 Ind. 546; Parkhurst v. Harrower, 142 Pa. 432, 21 A. 826, 24 Am.St.Rep. 507; Woodlief v. Duckwall, 19 Ohio Cir.Ct.R. 564.

FAILURE OF JUSTICE. The defeat of a particular right, or the failure of reparation for a particular wrong, from the lack or inadequacy of a legal remedy for the enforcement of the one or the redress of the other. The term is also colloquially applied to the miscarriage of justice which occurs when the result of a trial is so palpably wrong as to shock the moral sense.

FAILURE OF PROOF. In this phrase, the word "failure" is of broader significance than either "want" or "lack." State v. Davis, 154 La. 295, 97 So. 449, 456.

A "failure of proof"' consists in failure to prove the cause of action or defense in its entire scope and meaning. Breslin-Grifiltt Carpet Co. v. Asadorian, Mo.App., 145 S.W.2d 494, 496.

An omission of a material fact from special finding is deemed a "failure of proof". Kelley, Glover & Vale v. Heitman, 220 Ind. 625, 44 N.E.2d 981, 984.

As used in a statute authorizing dismissal of suit without prejudice on account of failure of proof, the term does not mean failure to convince the court by preponderance of evidence, but failure to make prima facie case. Crim v. Thompson, 112 Or. 399, 229 P. 916, 920; Wolke v. Schmidt, 112 Or. 99, 228 P. 921, 923.

Under a statute pertaining to variance, a "failure of proof" results when the evidence offered so far departs from the cause of action pleaded that it may be said fairly that the allegations of the pleading in their general scope and meaning are unproved. Chealey v. Purdy, 54 Mont. 489, 171 P. 926, 927; Nelson v. Dowgiallo, 73 Or. 342, 143 P. 924, 925.

Where evidence is such as would support either of two contradictory inferences, or presumptions, respecting the ultimate facts, there is a "failure of proof". Muesenfechter v. St. Louis Car Co., Mo.App., 139 S.W.2d 1102, 1106.

Where time is not of essence of offense, showing that crime, which information alleged was committed "on or about" certain day, was committed on next day, was not a failure of proof, even had words "on or about" been omitted. State v. Woodall, Mo., 300 S.W. 712, 713.

FAILURE OF RECORD. Failure of the defendant to produce a record which he has alleged and relied on in his plea.

See Failing of Record.

FAILURE OF TITLE. The inability or failure of a vendor to make good title to the whole or a part of the property which he has contracted to sell. See Alger-Sullivan Lumber Co. v. Union Trust Co., 207 Ala. 138, 92 So. 254, 257.

FAILURE OF TRUST. The lapsing or nonefficiency of a proposed trust, by reason of the defect or insufficiency of the deed or instrument creating it, or on account of illegality, indefiniteness, or other legal impediment.

FAILURE OTHERWISE THAN UPON MERITS. Imports some action by court by which plaintiff is defeated without a trial upon the merits. Kimberlin v. Stoley, 49 Ohio App. 1, 194 N.E. 885.

FAILURE TO ACT. Under statute setting up system of classification of offices and giving incumbent right to an administrative appeal in case of any failure to act by officers in charge of the classification plan, the words "failure to act" referred to duties in connection with classification of offices. Dolan v. Suffolk County, 310 Mass. 318, 37 N.E.2d 998, 1000.

FAILURE TO BARGAIN COLLECTIVELY. An employer's refusal to discuss with union, as employees' bargaining agency, questions involving conditions of employment and interpretation of contract constituted a "failure to bargain collectively" with union. FAINT PLEADER. A fraudulent, false, or collusive manner of pleading to the deception of a third person.

FAIR, n. In English law. A greater species of market; a privileged market. Cowell; Cunningham, Law Dict. It is an incorporeal hereditament, granted by royal patent, or established by prescription presupposing a grant from the crown. A public mart or place of buying or selling. 1 Bla.Comm. 274.

Though etymologically signifying a market for buying and selling exhibited articles, it includes a place for the exhibition of agricultural and mechanical products. State v. Long, 46 Ohio St. 509, 28 N.E. 1038.

A fair is usually attended by a greater concourse of people than a market, for the amusement of whom various exhibitions are gotten up. McCulloch, Comm.Dict.; Wharton, Dict.

A fair is a franchise which is obtained by a grant from the crown. 2d Inst. 220; 3 Mod. 123; 1 Ld.Raym. 341; 2 Saund. 172; 1 Rolle, Abr. 106; Tomlin; Cunningham, Law Dict.

In the earlier English law, the franchise to hold a fair conferred certain important privileges; and fairs, as legally recognized institutions, possessed distinctive legal characteristics. Most of these privileges and characteristics, however, are now obsolete. In America, fairs, in the ancient technical sense, are unknown, and, in the modern and popular sense, they are entirely voluntary and nonlegal, and transactions arising in or in connection with them are subject to the ordinary rules governing sales, etc.

FAIR, adj. Equitable as a basis for exchange; reasonable; a fair value. Utah Assets Corporation v. Dooley Bros. Ass'n, 92 Utah 577, 70 P.2d 738, 741. Honest. East Bay Municipal Utility Dist. v. Kieffer, 99 Cal.App. 240, 278 P. 476, 482. Impartial, free from suspicion, bias, etc. Looney v. Elliott, Tex.Civ.App., 52 S.W.2d 949, 952. Just; equitable; even-handed; equal, as between conflicting interests.

FAIR AND EQUITABLE. A proposed plan to dissolve parent public utility holding company and to reclassify its preferred and voting common stock is "fair and equitable", if preferred stockholders' rights are transmuted into their equitable equivalents. In re Securities and Exchange Commission, C.C.A.Del., 142 F.2d 411, 419.

As condition of confirmation under provisions of Bankruptcy Act relating to corporate reorganization, signify that the final arrangement must conform to principle that unsecured creditors are entitled to priority over stockholders to full extent of their debts and that any scaling down of claims of creditors without fair compensating advantage to them which is prior to rights of stockholders is inadmissible. Securities and Exchange Commission v. United States Realty & Improvement Co., 310 U.S. 434, 60 S.Ct. 1044, 1051, 84 L.Ed. 1293; In re Janson Steel & Iron Co., D.C.Pa., 47 F.Supp. 652, 655, 656.

Statutory requirements of "fair and equitable" railroad reorganization are satisfied so long as creditors receive full compensatory treatment and each group shares in securities of the whole enterprise on an equitable basis. Ecker v. Western Pac. R. R. Corporation, 318 U.S. 448, 63 S.Ct. 692, 713, 87 L.Ed. 892.

FAIR AND EQUITABLE VALUE. In a contract to purchase a waterworks plant at fair and equitable value, the amount is to be determined not by capitalization of the earnings nor limited to the cost of reproducing the plant, but allowance should be made for the additional value created by connection with and supply of buildings, although the company did not own the connections. National Waterworks Co. V. Kansas City, Mo., 62 F. 863.

FAIR AND FEASIBLE. As test in determining whether corporate reorganization plan should be approved means economically expedient, without discrimination or destruction of vested rights. In re Stanley Drug Co., D.C.Pa., 22 F.Supp. 664, 665.

A fair and impartial trial by a jury of one's peers contemplates counsel to look after one's defense, compulsory attendance of witnesses, if need be, and a reasonable time in the light of all prevailing circumstances to investigate, properly prepare, and present the defense. Christie v. State, 94 Fla. 469, 114 So. 450, 451.

One wherein defendant is permitted to be represented by counsel and neither witnesses nor counsel are intimidated. George v. Kanape, 284 Ill.App. 648, 3 N.E.2d 149. One wherein no undue advantage is taken by the district attorney or any one else. People v. Nationwide News Service, 16 N.Y.S.2d 277, 279, 172 Misc. 752. One wherein witnesses of litigants are permitted to testify under rules of court within proper bounds of judicial discretion, and under law governing testimony of witnesses with right in parties to testify, if qualified, and of counsel to be heard. Fessenden v. Fessenden, 32 Ohio App. 16, 165 N.E. 746, 748.

Defendant has a "fair and impartial trial" when opportunity is given him to object and except to what is done to his prejudice upon the trial. State v. Burns, 181 Iowa 1098, 165 N.W. 346, 347.

Such a trial contemplates a trial before a jury of 12 impartial and unbiased men, neither more nor less, in the presence and under the superintendence of a judge having the power to instruct them as to the law and advise them in respect to the facts, and the establishment of guilt by a unanimous verdict of such jury. Baker v. Hudspeth, C.C.A. Kan., 129 F.2d 779, 782, 783. It contemplates counsel, compulsory attendance of witnesses, and time in which to prepare for trial. Wood v. State, 155 Fla. 256, 19 So.2d 872, 875. It excludes jurors who have an opinion on the merits of the case, based on such testimony as may reasonably be expected to be presented on the trial, or an opinion founded on personal ill will towards the accused. Murphy v. State, 72 Okl.Cr. 1, 112 P.2d 438, 453, 454. It includes a reasonable opportunity to prepare for trial. Cruthirds v. State, 190 Miss. 892, 2 So.2d 145, 146.

It requires that the jury of 12 men chosen to sit in judgment shall have no fixed opinion concerning the guilt or innocence of one on trial. Baker v. Hudspeth, C.C.A.Kan., 129 F.2d 779, 782, 783. There must not only be fair and impartial jury, and learned and upright judge, but there should be atmosphere of calm in which witnesses can deliver their testimony without fear and intimidation, in which attorneys can assert accused's rights freely and fully, and in which the truth may be received and given credence without fear of violence. Raney v. Commonwealth, 287 Ky. 492, 153 S.W.2d 935, 937, 938.

FAIR AND PROPER LEGAL ASSESSMENT. Such as places the value of property on a fair, equal, and uniform basis with other property of like character and value throughout the county and state. Edward Hines Yellow Pine Trustees v. Knox, 144 Miss. 560, 108 So. 907, 911.

FAIR AND REASONABLE COMPENSATION. Full compensation. Pfeiffer v. Schee, Mo.App., 107 S.W.2d 170, 175.

FAIR AND REASONABLE CONTRACT. One which, when made with an infant, must not be one wasting the infant's estate, but must be a provident one, advantageous to the minor. Berglund v. American Multigraph Sales Co., 135 Minn. 67, 160 N.W. 191, 193.

FAIR AND REASONABLE MARKET VALUE. FAIR AND REASONABLE VALUE. This phrase in a statute imposing a tax on property means the best price obtainable at a voluntary sale, to be paid at once in money, and excluding any additional amount that might be had were credit or terms allowed. State v. Woodward, 208 Ala. 31, 93 So. 826.

Provision of statute for appraisal of farm debtor's property at "fair and reasonable value, not necessarily market value," for purpose of discharging debtor from his obligations, means that market value is minimum value to be found, beyond which other circumstances may be considered to arrive at "fair and reasonable value". Louisville Joint Stock Land Bank v. Radford, C.C.A.Ky., 74 F.2d 576, 582.

FAIR AND VALUABLE CONSIDERATION. One which is a substantial compensation for the property conveyed, or which is reasonable, in view of the surrounding circumstances and conditions, in contradistinction to an adequate consideration. Jones v. Wey, 124 Okl. 1, 253 P. 291, 292; Lucas v. Coker, 189 Okl. 95, 113 P.2d 589, 590.

FAIR CASH MARKET VALUE. Terms "cash market value", "fair market value", "reasonable market value" or "fair cash market value" are substantially synonymous. Housing Authority of Birmingham Dist. v. Title Guarantee Loan & Trust Co., 243 Ala. 157, 8 So.2d 835, 837. Terms "market value," "fair market value," "cash market value," and "fair cash market value" are synonymous. Fort Worth & D. N. Ry. Co. v. Sugg, Tex.Civ.App., 68 S.W.2d 570, 572.

FAIR CASH VALUE. The phrase is practically synonymous with "reasonable value," and "actual cash value," meaning the fair or reasonable cash price for which the property can be sold on the market. Montesano Lumber & Mfg. Co. v. Portland Iron Works, 94 Or. 677, 186 P. 428, 432; State v. Woodward, 208 Ala. 31, 93 So. 826, 827.

The words "fair cash value" and the words "fair market value" are frequently treated as synonymous. Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation v. Boston Edison Co., 310 Mass. 674, 39 N.E.2d 584, 593.

"Fair cash value" of dissenting stockholder's stock is the intrinsic worth of the stock and not necessarily its market price. Miller v. Canton Motor Coach, 58 Ohio App. 94, 16 N.E.2d 486, 488; Adams v. U. S. Distributing Corp., 184 Va. 134, 34 S.E.2d 244, 250, 162 A.L.R. 1227.

For tax purposes "fair cash value", means the highest price the property would bring free of incumbrances, at a fair and voluntary private sale for cash. Commonwealth v. Sutcliffe, 287 Ky. 809, 155 S.W.2d 243, 245. The price that an owner willing but not compelled to sell ought to receive from one willing but not compelled to buy. Assessors of Quincy v. Boston Consolidated Gas Co., 309 Mass. 60, '34 N.E.2d 623, 626. The price, that the property would bring at a voluntary sale where the owner is ready, willing and able to sell but not compelled to do so. In re 168 Adams Bldg. Corporation, C.C.A.I11., 105 F.2d 704, 708; People ex rel. McGaughey v. Wilson, 367 Ill. 494, 12 N.E.2d 5, 6; the price which some one will pay for it in open market. Donovan v. City of Haverhill, 141 N.E. 564, 565, 247 Mass. 69, 30 A.L.R. 358.

It is ascertained by a consideration of all elements making it attractive for valuable use to one under no compulsion to purchase, but yet willing to buy for a fair price, attributing to each element of value the amount it adds to the price likely to be offered by such a buyer. Massachusetts General Hospital v. Inhabitants of Belmont, 233 Mass. 190, 124 N.E. 21, 26.

FAIR COMMENT. A term used in the law of libel, applying to statements made by a writer in an honest belief of their truth, relating to official acts, even though the statements are not true in fact. People v. Hebbard, 96 Misc. 617, 162 N.Y.S. 80, 92. In a privileged communication the words used, if defamatory and libelous, are excused, while in "fair comment" the words are not a defamation and not libelous. Van Lonkhuyzen v. Daily News Co., 203 Mich. 570, 170 N.W. 93, 99.

Defense of "fair comment" is not destroyed by circumstance that jury may believe that the comment is logically unsound, but it suffices that a reasonable man may honestly entertain such opinion, on facts found. Cohalan v. New York Tribune, 172 Misc. 20, 15 N.Y.S.2d 58, 60, 61.

"Fair comment" must be based on facts truly stated, must not contain imputations of corrupt or dishonorable motives except as warranted by the facts, and must be honest expression of writer's real opinion. Cohalan v. New York World-Telegram Corporation, 16 N.Y.S.2d 706, 712, 172 Misc. 1061; Hall v. Binghamton Press Co., 33 N.Y.S.2d 840, 848, 263 App.Div. 403.

Imputation to official of corrupt or dishonorable motives is justified as "fair comment" if it is inference which fair-minded man might reasonably draw from facts. Tanzer v. Crowle[y] Pub. Corporation, 240 App.Div. 203, 268 N.Y.S. 620.

Mere exaggeration, slight irony, or wit, or all those delightful touches of style going to make article readable, do not push beyond limitations of fair comment. Briarcliff Lodge Hotel v. Westchester Newspapers, 260 N.Y. 106, 183 N.E. 193, 197.

FAIR COMPETITION. Open, equitable, Just competition, which is fair as between competitors and as between any of them and his customers. U. S. v. Sutherland, D.C.Mo., 9 F.Supp. 204, 205; U. S. v. Di Maio v. Reid, 132 N.J.L. 17, 37 A.2d 829, 830. One conducted in substantial conformity to law. Sunderland v. U. S., C.C.A.Neb., 19 F.2d 202, 216; People v. Ephraim, 77 Cal.App. 29, 245 P. 769, 774. One where accused's legal rights are safeguarded and respected. Levinson v. Mooney, 128 N.J.L. 569, 27 A.2d 9, 10; Garrett v. State, 187 Miss. 441, 193 So. 452, 458; Johnson v. City of Wildwood, 116 N.J.L. 462, 184 A. 616.

A full and fair trial, required in order that a foreign judgment against a citizen be accorded credit in the courts of the United States, means not a summary proceeding, though sanctioned by the law of the forum, but an opportunity to be heard on the proof, where it is apparent that the cause involves questions of fact, and to have it considered by an unprejudiced court. Banco Minero v. Ross, 106 Tex. 522, 172 S.W. 711, 714.

Essential factors are a fair and impartial jury and a learned and upright judge to instruct jury and pass upon legal questions, and an atmosphere of calm in which witnesses can deliver their testimony without fear and intimidation, in which attorneys can assert defendant's rights freely and fully, and in which truth may be received and given credence without fear of violence, Floyd v. State, 166 Miss. 15, 148 So. 226, 232. A trial before an impartial judge, an impartial jury, and in an atmosphere of judicial calm; that, while the judge may and should direct and control the proceedings, and may exercise his right to comment on the evidence, yet he may not extend his activities so far as to become in effect either an assisting prpsecutor or a thirteenth juror, Goldstein v. U. S., C.C.A.Mo., 63 F.2d 609, 613; an adequate hearing and an impartial tribunal, free from any interest, bias, or prejudice. The Reno, C.C. A.N.Y., 61 F.2d 966, 968.

FAIR USAGE. The doctrine of "fair usage" means that the matter which was under copyright was neither copied nor adopted, but that the uncopyrightable underlying idea was used, since a theme or idea is not copyrightable. Towle v. Ross, D.C.Or., 32 F.Supp. 125, 127.

FAIR VALUATION. Present market value; such sum as the property will sell for to a purchaser desiring to buy, the owner wishing to sell; such a price as a capable and diligent business man could presently obtain from the property after conferring with those accustomed to buy such property; the amount the property would bring at a sale on execution shown to have been in all respects fair and reasonable; the fair market value of the property as between one who wants to purchase and one who wants to sell the prop. erty. Market St. Nat. Bank v, Huff, 319 Pa. 286, 179 A. 582, 583.

As used in Bankruptcy Act the term means fair cash value or fair market value of property as between one who wants to purchase and one who wants to sell, Harman v. Defatta, 182 La. 463, 162 So. 44; Trenton Trust Co. v. Carlisle Tire Corporation, 110 Conn. 125, 147 A. 366, 367; fair market value, or value that can be made promptly effective by owner of property for payment of debts, Nicolai-Neppach Co. v. Smith, 154 Or. 450, 58 P.2d 1016, 1019, 107 A.L.R. 1124; In re Sedalia Farmers' Coop. Packing & Produce Co., D.C.Mo., 268 F. 898, 900; present market value of property and the value that the debtor might realize thereon if permitted to continue in business, Arnold v. Knapp, 75 W.Va. 804, 84 S.E. 895, 899; value of property taken in relation to business of debtor as a going concern, In re Gibson Hotels, D.C.W.Va., 24 F.Supp. 859, 863. It is not the value that would or did prevail at sacrified or forced sale. Bank of Forest v. Capital Nat. Bank, 176 Miss. 163, 169 So. 193, 198. Where no definite market value can be established and expert testimony must be relied on, fair valuation is the amount which the property ought to give to a going concern as a fair return, if sold to some one who is willing to purchase under ordinary selling conditions. In re Kobre, D.C.N.Y., 224 F. 106, 117. The term is not synonymous with "salable value." In re Crystal Ice & Fuel Co., D.C.Mont., 283 F. 1007, 1009.

In determining "fair valuation" of property, court should consider all elements entering into the intrinsic value, as well as the selling value, and also the earning power of the property. In re Gibson Hotels, D.C.W.Va., 24 F.Supp. 859, 863; the "fair valuation" of accounts is what with reasonable diligence can be realized from their collection within a reasonable time, Matthews v. Concrete Engineering Co., 228 Iowa 493, 292 N.W. 64, 65, 133 A.L.R. 1270.

FAIR VALUE. Present market value; such sum as the property will sell for to a purchaser desiring to buy, the owner wishing to sell; such a price as a capable and diligent business man could presently obtain from the property after conferring with those accustomed to buy such property; the amount the property would bring at a sale on execution shown to have been in all respects fair and reasonable; fair market value of the property as between one who wants to purchase and one who wants to sell the property. Market St. Nat. Bank v. Huff, 319 Pa. 286, 179 A. 582, 583.

"Actual value," "market value," "fair value," and the like, may be used as convertible terms. Kerr v. Clinchfield Coal Corporation, 169 Va. 149, 192 S.E. 741, 744.

In determining depreciation, "fair value" implies consideration of all factors material in negotiating sale and purchase of property, such as wear, decay, deterioration, obsolescence, inadequacy, and redundancy. Idaho Power Co. v. Thompson, D.C.Idaho, 19 F.2d 547, 566.

Price which a seller, willing but not compelled to sell, would take, and a purchaser, willing but not compelled to buy, would pay, Masonite Corporation v. Robinson-Slagle Lumber Co., D.C.La., 3 F.Supp. 754, 755; U. S. v. Crary, D.C.Va., 2 F.Supp. 870, 879. Price which buyers of the class which would be interested in buying property would be justified in paying for it. In re Crane's Estate, 344 Pa. 141, 23 A.2d 851, 855. Value which willing purchaser and seller would likely agree on. In re Aranoff & Son, D.C.Ga., 1 F.Supp. 708, 710.

As affecting stockholder's right to participate in reorganization plan, "fair value" of corporate debtor's property, connotes fair market value in dealing with certain kinds of property, and in certain cases stock exchange quotations are the best index of value, but bonds of Republic of Cuba, secured by apparently adequate pledges of revenues, should be valued at par rather than market price in absence of specific showing that Cuba might default. In re Warren Bros. Co., D.C.Mass., 39 F.Supp. 381, 384, 385.

Dissenting stockholder is entitled on combination or merger of corporations to "fair value" of stock determined by an ascertainment of all assets and liabilities of corporation, intrinsic value of stock, and not merely its market value, when traded in by the public. American General Corporation v. Camp, 171 Md. 629, 190 A. 225, 228.

For purpose of credit upon a deficiency claim arising out of a mortgage foreclosure proceeding, that sum which the mortgagee purchaser ought, under all circumstances, reasonably expect to realize from the acquired premises either by way of sale in the future or upon the basis of a permanent investment. Fidelity Union Trust Co. v. Ritz Holding Co., 126 N.J.Eq. 148, 8 A.2d 235, 245.

Reproduction cost of a public utility's property is an essential element in ascertainment of its "fair value". Peoples Natural Gas Co. v. Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission, 153 Pa.Super. 475, 34 A.2d 375, 380.

Under Deficiency Judgment Act, fair market value at time of execution sale as based on testimony of qualified witnesses. Market St. Nat. Bank v. Huff, 319 Pa. 286, 179 A. 582, 583.

Within a Revenue Act levying an excise tax on corporations measured by the fair value of their capital stock, "fair value" is the exact equivalent of "actual value." Central Union Trust Co. of New York v. Edwards, C.C.A. N.Y., 287 F. 324, 327.

Within statute requiring fair value of mortgaged premises to be credited on mortgage debt, interest, and costs before confirmation of foreclosure sale or rendition of deficiency judgment, that amount which under all circumstances of case will not shock conscience of court. Northwestern Loan & Trust Co. v. Bidinger, 226 Wis. 239, 276 N.W. 645, 648.

Rate Purposes

"Fair value" rule requires that consideration be given to original cost of construction, amount expended in permanent improvements, amount and market value of bonds and stock, present cost of construction, probable earning capacity under rates prescribed, operating expenses, accrued depreciation, market value of land, working capital, going concern value, and future costs of construction. State ex rel. and to Use of City of St. Louis v. Public Service Commission, 326 Mo. 751, 34 S.W.2d 507, 510.

A "fair value" for rate making is not the value for exchange, but such a value found after considering all relevant facts as will give the public utility a reasonable return and the public a reasonable rate. It is one which will enable the public utility to realize the expense of operating and keeping up its road and meeting its financial obligations for investments with a reasonable excess for dividends and ordinary contingencies. City of Rochester v. New York State Rys., 127 Misc. 766, 217 N.Y.S. 452, 458.

"Fair value" must include increase in value over original. cost. Northern States Power Co. v. Public Service Commission, 73 N.D. 211, 13 N.W.2d 779, 786, 787.

"Fair value of the property" is not necessarily synonymous with "reconstruction cost depreciated." State ex rel. Oregon-Washington Water Service Co. v. Department of Public Works of Washington, 184 Wash. 45, 51 P.2d 610, 612.

Historical cost, provided consideration is given to changes in price level, reproduction cost at time of inquiry, less accrued depreciation, provided reproduction cost of components can be found with reasonable certainty, financial history of utility, and other relevant facts, may be considered in determining "fair value" of a utility's property. State v. Tri-State Telephone & Telegraph Co., 204 Minn. 516, 284 N.W. 294, 306.

Reproduction cost of a utility is an element in ascertainment of "fair value". Solar Electric Co. v. Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission, 137 Pa.Super. 325, 9 A.2d 447, 456, 460, 463, 464, 466.

Reproduction cost of telephone company's property, less actual depreciation, is not the legal equivalent of "fair value" but is merely evidence of value. New York Telephone Co. v. Prendergast, D.C.N.Y., 36 F.2d 54, 59.

The book cost of a telephone company's exchange plant b.nd the "reproduction cost new" basis are recognized methods of ascertaining "fair value" of the company's property. Application of Northwestern Bell Tel. Co., 69 S.D. 36, 6 N.W.2d 165, 169.

The "fair value" as a rate base and the "value" in money for purposes of taxation of a public utility are not necessarily the same. State ex rel. Public Service Commission v. Southern Pac. Co., 95 Utah 84, 79 P.2d 25, 34.

The "fair value" of a utility's property is the cost of reproduction, less depreciation at time in question, whether more or less than original cost. Citizens' Gas Co. of Hannibal v. Public Service Commission of Missouri, D.C.Mo., 8 F.2d 632, 633. It is the reasonable value of property, used and useful, for the service of the public at the time the property is being so used. Northern States Power Co. v. Board of Railroad Com'rs, 71 N.D. 1, 298 N.W. 423, 431.

Value of additions completed and in use by a utility should be allowed in rate case in determining "fair value". Northern States Power Co. v. Board of Railroad Com'rs, 71 N.D. 1, 298 N.W. 423, 431.

FAIRLY. Equitably, honestly, impartially. Looney v. Elliott, Tex.Civ.App., 52 S.W.2d 949, 952. In good faith, People v. Mancuso, 255 N.Y. 463, 175 N.E. 177, 179. Justly; rightly. With substantial correctness. Reasonably. Conway v. Robinson, 216 Ala. 495, 113 So. 531, 533. Equitably. Satcher v. Satcher's Adm'r, 41 Ala. 40, 91 Am.Dec. 498. "Fairly merchantable" conveys the idea of mediocrity in quality, or something just above it. Warner v. Ice Co., 74 Me. 479.

"Fairly" is not synonymous with "truly," and "truly" should not be substituted for it in a commissioner's oath, to take testimony fairly. Language may be truly, yet unfairly, reported; that is, an answer may be truly written down, yet in a manner conveying a different meaning from tliat intended and conveyed. And language may be fairly reported, yet not in accordance with strict truth. Lawrence v. Finch, 17 N.J.Eq. 234.

FAIRWAY. A strip of land, where the grass is kept mowed, and at the opposite ends of which are a green and a tee. Page v. Unterreiner, Mo. App., 106 S.W.2d 528, 532.

The middle and deepest or most navigable channel. Water on which vessels of commerce habitually move; Horst v. Columbia Contract Co., 89 Or. 344, 174 P. 161, 163.

The word "thalweg" (q.v.), from which it is apparently derived, has reference more particularly to navigable channels as boundaries. Johnnsson v. American Tugboat Co., 147 P. 1147, 85 Wash. 212.

FAIT. L. Fr. Anything done. A deed; act; fact.

A deed lawfully executed. Corn. Dig.

FAIT JURIDIQUE. In French law. A juridical fact. One of the factors or elements constitutive of an obligation.

FAITH. Confidence; credit; reliance. Thus, an act may be said to be done "on the faith" of certain representations.

Belief ; credence; trust. Thus, the constitution provides that "full faith and credit" shall be given to the judgments of each state in the courts of the others.

Purpose; intent; sincerity; state of knowledge or design. This is the meaning of the word in the phrases "good faith" and "bad faith."

Scotch Law. A solemn pledge; an oath. "To make faith" is to swear, with the right hand uplifted, that one will declare the truth. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 4, p. 235.

FAITHFUL. Trusty, honest, trustworthy. Wright v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, 176 Okl. 274, 54 P.2d 1084, 1087.

As used in the rule that executors must be "faithful," means that they must act in good faith. In re McCafferty's Will, 147 Misc. 179, 264 N.Y.S. 38.

The guaranty required by statute and bond of "faithful" discharge of school district treasurer's duties is a guaranty not only of treasurer's personal honesty but also of his competency, skill and diligence in discharge of his duties. Thurston County, to Use of Vesely, v. Chmelka, 138 Neb. 696, 294 N.W. 857, 863, 132 A.L.R. 1077.

Where a public officer gives a bond for the "faithful" discharge of his duties, "faithful" implies that he has assumed that measure of responsibility laid on him by law had no bond been given. Thurston County, to Use of Vesely, v. Chmelka, 138 Neb. 696, 294 N.W. 857, 863, 132 A.L.R. 1077; London & Lancashire Indemnity Co. of America v. Community Savings & Loan Ass'n, 102 Ind.App. 665, 4 N.E. 2d 688, 693.

FAITHFULLY. Conscientious diligence or faithfulness, adequate to due execution of object of bailment, or just regard of adherence to duty, or due observance of undertaking of contract. Commonwealth v. Polk, 256 Ky. 100, 75 S.W.2d 761, 765. Diligently, and without unnecessary delay;—not synonymous with "fairly" or "impartially." Den v. Thompson, 16 N.J.L. 72, 73. Truthfully, sincerely, accurately. Kansas City, M. & 0. R. Co., of Texas v. Whittington & Sweeney, Tex.Civ.App., 153 S.W. 689, 690.

As used in bonds of public and private officers, this term imports not only honesty, but also a punctilious discharge of all the duties of the office, requiring competence, diligence, and attention, without any malfeasance or nonfeasance, aside from mere mistakes. State v. Chadwick, 10 Or. 468; Hoboken v. Evans, 31 N.J.L. 343; Harris v. Hanson, 11 Me. 245.

FAITOURS. Idle persons; idle livers; vagabonds. Termes de la Ley; Cowell; Blount; Cunningham, Law Dict.

FALCIDIA. In Spanish law. The Falcidian portion; the portion of an inheritance which could not be legally bequeathed away from the heir, viz., one-fourth.

FALCIDIAN LAW. In Roman law. A law on the subject of testamentary disposition.

It was enacted by the people during the reign of Augustus, in the year of Rome 714, on the proposition of the tribune Falcidius. By this law, the testator's right to burden his estate with legacies was subjected to an important restriction. It prescribed that no one could bequeath more than three-fourths of his property in legacies, and that the heir should have at least one-fourth of the estate, and that, should the testator violate this prescript, the heir may have the right to make a proportional deduction from each legatee, so far as necessary. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 771; Inst. 2, 22; Heinecc.Elem. lib. 2, tit. 22.

A similar principle exists in Louisiana. See Legitime. In some of the states the statutes authorizing bequests and devises to charitable corporations limit the amount which a testator may give, to a certain fraction of his estate.

FALCIDIAN PORTION. That portion of a testator's estate which, by the Falcidian law, was required to be left to the heir, amounting to at least one-fourth.

FALDA. Span. In Spanish law. The slope or skirt of a hill. Fossat v. United States, 2 Wall. 673, 17 L.Ed. 739.

FALDIE CURSUS. In old English law. A fold-course; the course (going or taking about) of a fold. Spelman. A sheep walk, or feed for sheep. 2 Vent. 139.

FALDAGE. The privilege which anciently several lords reserved to themselves of setting up folds for sheep in any fields within their manors, the better to manure them, and this not only with their own but their tenants' sheep. Called, variously, "recta faldare," "fold-course," "free-hold," "faldagii." Cowell; Spelman; Cunningham, Law Dict.

Tebbs, C.C.A.Utah, 107 F.2d 853, 855.

Court's substitution in charge of term "fraudulent" in place of term "false" held not misleading. Wood v. Williams, Tex.Civ.App., 46 S.W.2d 332, 334.

In law, this word usually means something more than untrue; it means something designedly untrue and deceitful, and implies an intention to perpetrate some treachery or fraud. Hatcher v. Dunn, 102 Iowa, 411, 71 N.W. 343, 36 L.R.A. 689; Masofi. v. Association, 18 U.C.C.P. 19; State v. Leonard, 73 Or. 451, 144 P. 113, 118; State v. Smith, 63 Vt. 201, 22 A. 604. It implies either conscious wrong or culpable negligence, and signifies knowingly or negligently untrue. United States v. Ninety-Nine Diamonds, C.C.A. Minn., 139 F. 961, 72 C.C.A. 9, 2 L.R.A.,N.S., 185.

The word "false" has two distinct and well-recognized meanings ; (1) intentionally or knowingly or negligently untrue; (2) untrue by mistake or accident, or honestly aftet the exercise of reasonable care. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Adams, D.C.Mun.App., 37 A.2d 345, 350. In jurisprudence, "false" and "falsely" are oftenest used to characterize a wrongful or criminal act, such as involves an error or untruth, intentionally or knowingly put forward. A thing is called "false" when it is done, or made, with knowledge, actual or constructive, that it is untrue or illegal, or is said to be done falsely when the meaning is that the party is in fault for its error. Fouts v. State, 113 Ohio St. 450, 149 N.E. 551, 554; Monahan v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, 192 Wis. 102, 212 N.W. 269, 271.

The word "false" in its juristic use implies something more than a mere untruth, Dombroski v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 126 N.J.L. 545, 19 A.2d 678, 680.

FALSE ACTION, See Feigned Action.

FALSE AND FRAUDULENT. The phrase "false and fraudulent" in Food and Drugs Act of 1906 means that the statement must have been made with actual intent to deceive. United States v. Dr. David Roberts Veterinary Co., C.C.A.Wis., 104 F.2d 785, 788.

To amount to actionable "false and fraudulent representations", they must have been as to existing fact or known by one making them, from his superior knowledge, to have been untrue when made. Burlison v. Weis, Mo. App., 152 S.W.2d 201, 203.

FALSE AND MISLEADING STATEMENT. Failure to state material fact made letter a "false and misleading statement" within rule of Securities and Exchange Commission. Securities and Exchange Commission v. Okin, C.C.A.N.Y., 132 F.2d 784, 787.

FALSE ANSWER. In pleading. A sham answer; one which is false in the sense of being a mere pretense set up in bad faith and without color of fact. Howe v. Elwell, 57 App.Div. 357, 67 N.Y. Supp. 1108; Farnsworth v. Halstead, Sup., 10 N.Y. S. 763.

FALSE ARREST. Any unlawful physical restraint by one of another's liberty, whether in prison or elsewhere. Gariety v. Fleming, 121 Kan. 42, 245 P. 1054, 1055; Russell v. Levinsohn, 5 N.J. Misc. 765, 138 A. 205; Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. v. Phillips, 253 Ky. 126, 69 S.W.2d 5.

FALSE CHARACTER. Personating the master or mistress of a servant, or any representative of such master or mistress, and giving a false character to the servant is an offense punishable in England with a fine of £20. St. 32 Geo. III. c. 56.

FALSE CHECKS. Obtaining money by means and use of a check upon a bank, in which the drawer at the time had no funds or credit with which to meet the same, and which he had no reason to believe would honor such check upon presentation at said bank for payment, is obtaining money by use of a false check. Gunther v. State, 42 Okl.Cr. 129, 276 P. 237, 238.

FALSE CLAIM, in the forest law, was where a man claimed more than his due, and was amerced and punished for the same. Manw. c. 25; Tomlins.

As used in a statute making it a felony to present to any state, county, or city board or officer a false or fraudulent claim, a "false claim" is something more than a merely excessive claim. Burke v. Knox, 59 Utah, 596, 206 P. 711, 714. The act of knowingly making untruthful statements of material facts in "reasons for refund" of excise taxes, supported by fictitious copies of letters and cards attached thereto, constitutes "false claim" against government, within Criminal Code, § 35 (18 T.JSCA §§ 80, 82-86). Evans v. U. S., C.C.A.S.C., 11 F.2d 37, 39.

FALSE DECRETALS. A collection of canon law, dated about the middle of the 9th century, probably by a Frankish ecclesiastic who called himself Isadon. It continued to be the chief repertory of the canon law till the 15th century when its untrustworthy nature was demonstrated.

FALSE DEMONSTRATION. Where description of person or thing in will is partly true and partly false, if part which is true describes subject or object of gift with sufficient certainty, untrue part may be rejected and gift sustained, under doctrine of "false demonstration." In re Heins' Estate, 132 Cal.App. 131, 22 P.2d 549.

FALSE ENTRY. An entry in books of a bank or trust company which is intentionally made to represent what is not true or does not exist, with intent either to deceive its officers or a bank examiner or to defraud the bank or trust company. Agnew v. U. S., 165 U.S. 36, 17 S.Ct. 235, 41 L.Ed. 624; Fricke v. State, 112 Neb. 767, 201 N.W. 667, 670; Commonwealth v. Bardolph, 111 Pa.Super. 85, 169 A. 574, 575; U. S. v. Mulloney, D.C.Mass., 5 F.Supp. 77, 79.

An untrue statement of items of account by written words, figures, or marks. United States v. Herrig, D.C. Mont., 204 F. 124, 125. One making an original false entry makes a false entry in every book which is made up in regular course from the entry or entries from the original book of entry. State v. Davidson, 46 N.D. 564, 180 N.W. 31, 32.

Where entry upon books of bank of matter contained in deposit slip is not true it is a "false entry," Adams v. State, 179 Ark. 1047, 20 S.W.2d 130, 133.

Entries made by cashier of balance in insurance company's account after deducting unauthorized withdrawals made by cashier as agent of insurance company held "false entries" within statute. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1005. Laws v. U. S., C.C.A.Okl., 66 F.2d 870, 873.

FALSE FACT. In the law of evidence. A feigned, simulated, or fabricated fact; •a fact not founded in truth, but existing only in assertion; the deceitful semblance of a fact.

FALSE IMPERSONATION. To impersonate another falsely, and iri such assumed character to do any act whereby any benefit might accrue to the offender or to another person. People v. Horkans, 109 Colo. 177, 123 P.2d 824.

FALSE IMPRISONMENT. See Imprisonment.

FALSE INSTRUMENT. A counterfeit; one made in the similitude of a genuine instrument and purporting on its face to be such. U. S. v. Howell, 11 Wall. 435, 20 L.Ed. 195; U. S. v. Owens, C.C.Tenn., 37 Fed. 115; State v. Willson, 28 Minn. 52, 9 N.W. 28.

FALSE JUDGMENT. In old English law. A writ which lay when a false judgment had been pronounced in a court not of record, as a county court, court baron, etc. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 17, 18. In old French law. The defeated party in a suit had the privilege of accusing the judges of pronouncing a false or corrupt judgment, whereupon the issue was determined by his challenging them to the combat or duellum. This was called the "appeal of false judgment." Montesq. Esprit des Lois, liv. 28, c. 27.

FALSE LATIN. When law proceedings were written in Latin, if a word were significant though not good Latin, yet an indictment, declaration, or fine should not be made void by it; but if the word were not Latin, nor allowed by the law, and it were in a material point, it made the whole vicious. (5 Coke, 121; 2 Nels. 830.) Wharton.

FALSE LIGHTS AND SIGNALS. Lights and signals falsely and maliciously displayed for the purpose of bringing a vessel into danger. See stat. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, § 47; 18 U.S.C.A. § 488.

FALSE MAKING. An essential element of forgery, where material alteration is not involved. Term has reference to manner in which writing is made or executed rather than to its substance or effect. A falsely made instrument is one that is fictitious, not genuine, or in some material particular something other than it purports to be and without regard to truth or falsity of facts stated therein. Wright v. U. S., C.A.Ariz., 172 F.2d 310, 311.

FALSE NEWS. Spreading false news, whereby discord may grow between the queen of England and her people, or the great men of the realm, or which may produce other mischiefs, still seems to be a misdemeanor, under St. 3 Edw. I. c. 34. Steph. Cr. Dig. § 95.

FALSE OATH. To defeat discharge in bankruptcy "false oath" must contain all the elements involved in "perjury" at common law, namely, an intentional untruth in matter material to a material issue, In re Bergman, D.C.N.Y., 6 F.Supp. 898, 901, it must have been knowingly and fraudulently made. In re Stone, D.C.N.H., 52 F.2d 639, 641. See, also, Perjury.

FALSE OR FRAUDULENT CLAIM. A "false or fraudulent claim" within meaning of statute providing for punishment of any one receiving proceeds of fraudulent audit or payment, since to be "false or fraudulent," must be a claim for services or materials not actually rendered or furnished. People v. Dally, 175 Misc. 680, 24 N.Y.S.2d 692, 695.

FALSE PAPER. In a statute defining an offense of willfully and knowingly subscribing to "false papers" to deceive bank examiners, the term refers not to one which is forged or spurious, but to a paper duly subscribed by the person purporting to sign it, and containing an untrue statement in the body of the instrument. State v. Pierson, 101 Wash. 318, 172 P. 236, 238.

FALSE PERSONATION. The criminal offense of falsely representing some other person and acting in the character thus unlawfully assumed, in order to deceive others, and thereby gain some profit or advantage, or enjoy some right or privilege belonging to the one so personated, or subject him to some expense, charge, or liability. See 4 Steph. Comm. 181, 290.

FALSE PLEA, See Sham Plea.

FALSE PRETENSES. Designed misrepresentation of existing fact or condition whereby person obtains another's money or goods. People v. Gould, 363 Ill. 348, 2 N.E.2d 324.

Elements of offense include actual fraud, State v. Nuser, 199 Minn. 315, 271 N.W. 811, 812; State v. Mayer, 196 N.C. 454, 146 S.E. 64, 65; assertion of a present or past fact, Slaughter v. Commonwealth, 222 Ky. 225, 300 S.W. 619, 621, 56 A.L.R. 1209; State v. Nuser, 199 Minn. 315, 271 N.W. 811, 812, falsity of representation, State v. Mayer, 196 N.C. 454, 146 S.E. 64, 65; People v. Leaverton, 107 Cal. App. 51, 289 P. 890, 892; intent to cheat and defraud. Commonwealth v. Campbell, 116 Pa.Super. 180, 176 A. 246, 250; State v. Johnson, 195 N.C. 506, 142 S.E. 775, 776; knowledge of the falsity, fraud. Couch v. State, 31 Ala.App. 586, 20 So.2d 57, 58; Dennis v. Thomson, 240 Ky. 727, 43 S.W.2d 18, 25; obtaining of property or something of value. State v. Johnson, 195 N.C. 506, 142 S.E. 775, 776; Couch v. State, 31 Ala.App. 586, 20 So.2d 57, 58; perpetration of fraud by means of such false pretenses, State v. Hintz, 200 Wis. 636, 229 N.W. 54, 55; reliance on representation, State v. Howley, 220 N.C. 113, 16 S.E.2d 705, 708, 709; use of pretenses or false representations, Dennis v. Thomson, 240 Ky. 727, 43 S.W.2d 18, 25; State v. Mayer, 196 N.C. 454, 146 S.E. 64, 65.

Other definitions of "false pretenses" include:

False representation of existing fact or condition by which a party obtains property of another, People ex rel. Courtney v. Sullivan, 363 Ill. 34, 1 N.E.2d 206, 208; false representation of existing fact, whether by oral or written words or conduct, calculated to deceive, intended to deceive, and does in fact deceive, whereby one person obtains value from another without compensation, Commonwealth v. Johnson, 312 Pa. 140, 167 A. 344, 345, 89 A.L.R. 333; State v. Alick, 62 S.D. 220, 252 N.W. 644; false representation of existing or past fact calculated to induce confidence on part of one to whom representation is made, and accompanied by or blended with a promise to do something in future, State v. Parkinson, 181 Wash. 69, 41 P.2d 1095, 1097; false representation of existing fact, made with knowledge of falsity, with intent that party to whom it is made should act upon it, and acted upon by such party to his detriment. Griffith v. State, 93 Ohio St. 294, 112 N.E. 1017, 1018; State v. Hathaway, 168 Wis. 518, 170 N.W. 654, 656; State v. Whitney, 43 Idaho, 745, 254 P. 525, 526; Smith v. State, 74 Fla. 594, 77 So. 274, 276; false representation of past or existing fact, made with knowledge of falsity, with intent to deceive and defraud, and which is adapted to deceive person to whom made, State v. Alick, 62 S.D. 220, 252 N.W. 644; false representations and statements, made with a fraudulent design to obtain money, goods, wares, or merchandise, with intent to cheat, 2 Bouv. Inst. no. 2308; false statement made with knowledge of its falsity, which is intended to deceive, and which in fact does deceive, and injury results, Morris Plan Bank of Richmond v. Henderson, D.C.N.C., 57 F.2d 326, 327; fraudulent representation of fact by one who knows it not to be true as is adapted to induce person to whom made to part with something of value, Fisher v. State, 161 Ark. 586, 256 S.W. 858, 860; State v. Tanner, 22 N.M. 493, 164 P. 821, 822, L.R.A.1917E, 849; State v. Luff, 1 Boyce (Del.) 152, 74 A. 1079, 1080; State v. Barr, 63 Idaho 59, 117 P.2d 282, 286; misrepresentation of past fact, knowingly made to induce another to part with his property, People v. Martin, 372 Ill. 484, 24 N.E.2d 380, 381, 382; misstatement of fact, Carr v. State, 60 Ga.App. 590, 4 S.E.2d 500, 501; representation of some fact or circumstance, calculated to mislead or deceive, which is not true, State v. Grant, 86 Iowa 216, 53 N.W. 120; Commonwealth v. McKnight, 289 Mass. 530, 195 N.E. 499, 506.

A "false pretense" must be as to an existing or past fact. State v. Neal, 350 Mo. 1002, 169 S.W.2d 686, 689; Commonwealth v. Becker, 151 Pa.Super. 169, 30 A.2d 195, 197.

A pretense is the holding out or offering to others something false and feigned. This may be done either by words or actions, which amount to false representations. In fact, false representations are inseparable from the idea of a pretense. Without a representation which is false there can be no pretense. State v. Joaquin, 43 Iowa, 132.

Gist of offense of "obtaining money by false pretenses" is the fraud and deception by the perpetrator, his motive, and the result-the fact that a person was deceived and defrauded. Frazier v. Commonwealth, 291 Ky. 467, 165 S.W.2d 33, 34.

Giving of worthless check is, in itself, "false pretense". State v. Augustine, 114 W.Va. 143, 171 S.E. 111, 113; Laird v. Employers Liability Assur. Corporation, Limited, of London, England, 2 Terry 216, 18 A.2d 861, 862.

In "false pretenses" owner intends to part with his property in money or chattel but it is obtained from him by fraud. People v. Santora, 51 Cal.App.2d 707, 125 P.2d 606, 608.

One distinction between "embezzlement" and "false pretenses" is that in the former case the defendant does not have title to the property, while in the latter, he has. State v. Serkau, 128 Conn. 153, 20 A.2d 725, 727.

Confidence game distinguished

A "confidence game" is any swindling operation in which advantage is taken of the confidence reposed by the victim in the swindler. It consists of gaining the possession of money or property by means of some trick, device, or swindling operation in which advantage is taken of the confidence of the victim reposed in the swindler. In obtaining money by "false pretenses," the false pretenses used must have been believed and relied on by the defrauded party and been the means of inducing the victim to part with his property. People v. Blume, 345 Ill. 524, 178 N.E. 48, 52.

"Confidence game" is not established by mere proof that property has been obtained by false pretense. Clark v. State, 53 Ariz. 416, 89 P.2d 1077, 1080.

Larceny and false pretenses distinguished

In larceny owner has no intention to part with his property, although he may intend to part with possession, while in false pretenses the owner does intend to part with the property but it is obtained from him by fraud. People v. Shwartz, 43 Cal.App. 696, 185 P. 686, 687. Roberta v. State, 181 Ind. 520, 104 N.E. 970, 971.

In larceny owner has no intention to part with title to and possession of property taken, while in false pretenses he does so intend, but it is obtained from him by fraud. Simmons v. State, 165 Md. 155, 167 A. 60, 64.

Only a very narrow distinction exists between "larceny" and "false pretense"; the character of the crime depending on the intention of the parties. Riley v. State, 64 Okl. Cr. 183, 78 P.2d 712, 716.

The intention of owner of property not to part with title when relinquishing possession of property is vital point to be determined in distinguishing between "larceny by fraud" and obtaining property by "false pretenses". Dobson v. State, 74 Okl.Cr. 341, 126 P.2d 95, 101.

Obtaining money or property by false pretenses

Elements are intent to defraud, actual fraud, false pretense, and fraud resulting therefrom, Simmons v. State, 165 Md. 155, 167 A. 60, 64; false pretenses, that property was obtained thereby, that false pretenses were made with intent to cheat and defraud, and that money was paid in reliance upon and under inducement of false pretenses, People v. Sloane, 165 Misc. 444, 300 N.Y.S. 1032, 1035.

It is sufficient if false pretenses are a part of the moving cause, and, without them, the defrauded party would not have parted with the property. State v. Faulkner, 139 Kan. 665, 33 P.2d 175, 177.

The distinction between "obtaining money by false pretenses" and forgery is that in the former, the acquisition of the money is the principal thing, while in forgery the making, altering, uttering, or publishing of the written instrument is the principal part, and money need not necessarily be obtained. State v. Hobl, 108 Kan. 261, 194 P. 921, 924.

The false representations may be made by implication. Johnson v. People, 110 Colo. 283, 133 P.2d 789, 792.

The "false pretense" may be the failure to speak when it was necessary to do so. People v. Etzler, 292 Mich. 489, 290 N.W. 879, 880.

The "false pretense" must relate to existing fact, or to fact which has theretofore occurred. Jones v. State, 236 Ala. 30, 182 So. 404, 405.

FALSE RECORD. The Fair Labor Standards Act prohibiting the making of "false records" refers to falsification of payroll records customarily made available to a wage and hour inspector. United States v. Selman-Reinstein, Inc., D.C. Minn., 52 F.Supp. 208, 209, 210.

FALSE REPRESENTATION. A representation which is untrue, willfully made to deceive another to his injury. See, also, Deceit and Fraud.

A deceitful representation, or one contrary to the fact, made knowingly and with the design and effect of inducing the other party to enter into the contract to which it relates; a declaration of present intention, false when made, to perform act in future, Pease & Elliman v. Wegeman, 223 App.Div. 682, 229 N.Y.S. 398, 400; a representation known to be false by person making it, or made without knowledge as a positive statement of known fact upon which another relied and acted, Platte Valley Bank v. Lemke, 141 Neb. 218, 3 N.W.2d 396, 399; a representation of what is true, which nevertheless creates an impression which is false. Newark Trust Co. v. Lackawanna Inv. Co., 88 N.J.Eq. 541, 103 A. 168, 169; McClellan v. Tobin, Ind., 219 Ind. 563, 39 N.E.2d 772, 774; an assertion of knowledge which in fact one does not have, Tone v. Halsey, Stuart & Co., 286 Ill.App. 169, 3 N.E.2d 142, 147; an assertion of something as true which one does not know to be true, Hargrove v. Henderson, 108 Cal.App. 667, 292 P. 148; such representations as will deceive persons of ordinary prudence. Union Central Life Ins. Co. v. Kerron, 128 Or. 70, 264 P. 453, 455; Holmberg v. Prudential Savings & Loan Ass' n, 130 Or. 1, 278 P. 943, 945.

A "false representation" may arise from any conduct capable of being turned into a statement of fact. Bundesen v. Lewis, 291 Ill.App. 83, 9 N.E.2d 327, 334.

A "false representation" may be made scienter, so as to afford a right of action in damages, in any of the following ways : (1) With actual knowledge of its falsity; (2) without knowledge either of its truth or falsity; or (3) under circumstances in which the person making it ought to have known if he did not know of its falsity. Horton v. Tyree, 104 W.Va. 238, 139 S.E. 737, 738; Sebastian County Bank v. Gann, 121 Ark. 145, 180 S.W. 754, 755.

A false representation, within Bankruptcy Act not affected by discharge, must involve moral turpitude or intentional wrong. Hisey v. Lewis-Gale Hospital, D.C.Va., 27 F.Supp. 20, 23.

False statements although future in form may be "false representations" of existing facts and conditions. National Theatre Supply Co. v. Rigney, Mo.App., 130 S.W.2d 258, 263.

To maintain an action for damages for "false representation," the plaintiff, in substance, must allege and must prove by a preponderance of the evidence the following elements: (1) What representation was made; (2) that it was false; (3) that the defendant knew it was false, or else made it without knowledge as a positive statement of known fact; (4) that the plaintiff believed the representation to be true; (5) that the plaintiff relied on and acted upon the representation; (6) that the plaintiff was thereby injured; and (7) the amount of the damages. Peterson v. Schaberg, 116 Neb. 346, 217 N.W. 586, 587.

FALSE RETURN. See Return.

FALSE STATEMENT. Under statutory provision, making it unlawful for officer or director of corporation to make any false statement in regard to corporation's financial condition, the phrase means something more than merely untrue or erroneous, but implies that statement is designedly untrue and deceitful, and made with intention to deceive person to whom false' statement is made or exhibited. State v. Johnston, 149 S.C. 138, 146 S.E. 657, 660.

As used in bankruptcy statute provision concerning discharge, these words denote or connote guilty scienter on part of bankrupt, In re Krulewitch, D.C.N.J., 60 F.2d 1039, 1041; Wilensky v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., C.C.A. Mass., 67 F.2d 389, 390. They mean an incorrect statement made or acquiesced in with knowledge of incorrectness or with reckless indifference to actual facts and with no reasonable ground to believe it correct. International Shoe Co. v. Lewine, C.C.A.Miss., 68 F.2d 517, 518; statement false to bankrupt's knowledge and made with fraudulent intent, In re Johnson, D.C.Conn., 1 F.Supp. 649, 651; statement knowingly false, or made recklessly without honest belief in its truth, and with purpose to mislead or deceive, Third Nat. Bank v. Schatten, C.C.A.Tenn., 81 F.2d 538, 540; In re Venturella, D.C.Conn., 25 F.Supp. 332. They mean more than erroneous or untrue and import intention to deceive, Schapiro v. Tweede Footwear Corporation, C.C.A.Pa., 131 F.2d 876, 878.

Bank's statement which gives result showing bank substantially stronger than it is in fact; constitutes "false statement" within statute defining offense of making or publishing false statement. Rosenberg v. State, 212 Wis. 434, 249 N.W. 541.

FALSE SWEARING. The essential elements of "false swearing" consist in willfully, knowingly, absolutely and falsely swearing under oath or affirmation on a matter concerning which a party could legally be sworn and on oath 'administered by one legally authorized to administer it. Smith v. State, 66 Ga.App. 669, 19 S.E.2d 168, 169.

To constitute "false swearing", it must appear that matter sworn to was judicially pending or was being investigated by grand jury, or was a subject on which accused could legally have been sworn, or on which he was required to be sworn. Capps v. Commonwealth, 294 Ky. 743, 172 S.W.2d 610, 611. The oath need not be taken in a matter judicially pending or any matter material to any point in question. Capps v. Commonwealth, 294 Ky. 743, 172 S.W.2d 610, 611. See, also, Perjury.

As used in provision concerning denial of liability under policy, means false statement willfully made with respect to a material matter with intention of thereby deceiving insurer, Sands v. Bankers' Fire Ins. Co., 168 Va. 645, 192 S.E, 617; false statements made knowingly and willfully, with intent to deceive insurer concerning matter material to insurance, Buccola v. National Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., 18 La.App. 353, 137 So. 346, 350; knowingly and intentionally stating upon oath what is not true, or statement of a fact as true, which the party does not know to be true, Harwood v. United States Fire Ins. Co., 136 Me. 223, 7 A.2d 899, 902; knowingly and willfully false swearing to deceive or mislead insurers, Young v. California Ins. Co., 55 Idaho 682, 46 P.2d 718, 722; misstatement in proofs of loss willfully made, Palace Cafe v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., C.C.A.Ind., 97 F.2d 766, 769; statements which are not only untrue but knowingly and intentionally made with knowledge of their untruthfulness or those statements which are made as the truth when party did not know them to be true and had no reasonable grounds for believing them to be true, and statements must be made for purpose of defrauding insurer, United States Fire Ins. Co. v. Merrick, 171 Md. 476, 190 A. 335, 342; swearing knowingly and intentionally false and not through mere mistake. Knight v. Boston Ins. Co., 113 N.J.L. 132, 172 A. 594, 595.

"Perjury" and "false swearing" may be interchangeable. Ray v. Times Pub. Co., Tex.Com.App., 12 S.W.2d 165, 166.

The misdemeanor committed in English law by a person who swears falsely before any person authorized to administer an oath upon a matter of public concern, under such circumstances that the false swearing would have amounted to perjury if committed in a judicial proceeding; as where a person makes a false affidavit under the bills of sale acts. Steph.Cr.Dig. p. 84. And see O'Bryan v. State, 27 Tex.App. 339, 11 S.W. 443. In Texas, it is not necessary, to complete the offense, that the affidavit be used for the purpose for which it was intended. Welch v. State, 71 Tex. Cr.R. 17, 157 S.W. 946. Under the Texas and Kentucky statutes, however, "false swearing" is distinct from the common-law crime of perjury; Commonwealth v. Hinkle, 177 Ky. 22, 197 S.W. 455, 456; Shipp v. State, 81 Tex.Cr.R. 328, 196 S.W. 840, 842; inasmuch as "false swearing" consists in making a false oath on a subject about which the party could legally be sworn, and before a person legally authorized to administer the oath; Commonwealth v. Bradshaw, 210 Ky. 405, 276 S.W. 124, 125; it not being necessary, as in perjury, that the testimony be material; Sullivan v. Commonwealth, 158 Ky. 536, 165 S.W. 696, 697.

FALSE TOKEN. In criminal law. A false document or sign of the existence of a fact,—in general used for the purpose of fraud. See 3 Term, 98; 2 Starkie, Ev. 563; 1 Bish. Cr. L. 585; People v. Haynes, 14 Wend., N.Y., 570, 28 Am.Dec. 530; Smith v. State, 74 Fla. 594, 77 So. 274, 276; State v. Renick, 33 Or. 584, 56 P. 275, 44 L.R.A. 266.

A written release of fictitious claim was a "false token" People v. Beilfuss, 59 Cal.App.2d 83, 138 P.2d 332, 339.

FALSE VERDICT. See Verdict.

FALSE WEIGHTS. False weights and measures are such as do not comply with the standard prescribed by the state or government, or with the custom prevailing in the place and business in which they are used.

FALSE WITNESS. One who is intentionally rather than merely mistakenly false. State v. Weston, 109 Or. 19, 219 P. 180, 189.

FALSE WORDS, which may be eliminated from descriptions in wills, deeds, etc., are misdescriptions of property that are not applicable to any property owned or intended to be devised or conveyed. Brown v. Ray, 314 Ill. 570, 145 N.E. 676, 679; Armstrong v. Armstrong, 327 III. 85, 158 N.E. 356, 358.

Deception; fraud. Id. pt. 3, tit. 32, l. 21.

FALSEHOOD. A statement or assertion known to be untrue, and intended to deceive. A willful act or declaration contrary to the truth. Putnam v. Osgood, 51 N.H. 207.

The term is perhaps generally used in the second sense here given. It is committed either by the wilful act of the party, or by dissimulation, or by words.

Crabbe thus distinguishes between falsehood and untruth: "The latter is an untrue saying, and may be unintentional, in which case it reflects no disgrace on the agent. A falsehood and a lie are intentional false sayings, differing only in degree of the guilt of the offender; falsehood being not always for the express purpose of deceiving, but a lie always for the worst of purposes." See Rosc.Cr.Ev. 362; Deceit; Fraud; Misrepresentation.

A fabrication. Werner v. Southern Cal. Associated Newspapers, Cal.App., 206 P.2d 952, 961.

Scotch Law

A fraudulent imitation or suppression of truth, to the prejudice of another. Bell. "Something used and published falsely." An old Scottish nomen juris. "Falsehood is undoubtedly a nominate crime, so much so that Sir George Mackenzie and our older lawyers used no other term for the falsification of writs, and the name 'forgery' has been of modern introduction." "If there is any distinction to be made between 'forgery' and 'falsehood,' I would consider the latter to be more comprehensive than the former." 2 Broun, 77, 78.

FALSELY. In a false manner, erroneously, not truly, perfidiously or treacherously. Dombroski v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 126 N.J.L. 545, 19 A. 2d 678, 680. Knowingly affirming without probable cause. Hicks v. State, 67 Ga.App. 475, 21 S.E. 2d 113, 118. See, also, False.

As applied to making or altering a writting in order to make it forgery, implies that the paper or writing is not genuine; that in itself it is false or counterfeit. People v. Kramer, 352 Ill. 304, 185 N.E. 590, 591.

The use of the word falsely in a statute (against counterfeiting) implies that there must be a fraudulent or criminal intent in the act; U. S. v. King, 5 McLean 208, Fed. Cas.No.15,535. See, also, 4 B. & C. 329; 6 Com.Dig. 58; Stark, Cr.P1. 86.

The word "falsely", particularly in a criminal statute, suggests something more than a mere untruth and includes perfidiously or treacherously or with intent to defraud. United States v. Achtner, C.C.A.N.Y., 144 F.2d 49, 52.

Usually used in the sense of designedly untrue and deceitful, and as implying an intention to perpetrate some treachery or fraud. Fouts v. State, 113 Ohio St. 450, 149 N.E. 551, 554; State v. Merlo, 92 Or. 678, 173 P. 317, 319; McDonald v. McNeil, 92 Vt. 356, 104 A. 337, 339; Cro.Eliz. 201; 7 D. & R. 665. But see 1 Den.C.C. 157.

FALSELY IMPERSONATE. To "falsely impersonate" may mean to pretend to be a particular person without lawful authority. People v. Horskans, 109 Colo. 177, 123 P.2d 824, 826.

FALSELY MAKE, means to make an instrument which has no original as such and no genuine maker whose work is copied, although in form it may resemble a type of recognized security. Pines v. United States, C.C.A.Iowa, 123 F.2d 825, 828.

FALSI CRIMEN. Fraudulent subornation or concealment, with design to darken or hide the truth, and make things appear otherwise than they are. It is committed (1) by words, as when a witness swears falsely; (2) by writing, as when a person antedates a contract; (3) by deed, as selling by false weights and measures. Wharton. See Crimen Falsi.

FALSIFICATION. In equity practice. The showing an item in the debit of an account to be either wholly false or in some part erroneous. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 525. And see Phillips v. Belden, 2 Edw. Ch. 23; Pit v. Cholmondeley, 2 Ves. Sr. 565; Tate v. Gairdner, 119 Ga. 133, 46 S.E. 73; Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat., U.S., 237, 6 L.Ed. 468.

FALSIFY. To disprove; to prove to be false or erroneous; to avoid or defeat; spoken of verdicts, appeals, etc. Co. Litt. 104b.

To counterfeit or forge; to make something false; to give a false appearance to anything. To make false by mutilation or addition; to tamper with; as, to falsify a record or document. Pou v. Ellis, 66 Fla. 358, 63 So. 721, 722.

To show, as in an accounting before a master in chancery, that a charge has been inserted which is wrong; that is, either wholly false or in some part erroneous. Pull. Accts. 162; 1 Story, Eq.Jur. § 525. See Shores-Mueller Co. v. Bell, 21 Ga.App. 194, 94 S.E. 83, 84; Falsification.

The word "falsify" may be used to convey two distinct meanings-either that of being intentionally or knowingly untrue, made with intent to defraud, or mistakenly and accidentally untrue. Washer v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Savings Ass'n, 21 Ca1.2d 822, 136 P.2d 297, 301.

FALSIFYING A JUDGMENT. A term sometimes used for reversing a judgment. See 4 Steph. Com. 553.

FALSIFYING A RECORD. A high offense against public justice, punishable in England by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, §§ 27, 28, and in the United States, generally, by statute. See U. S. Rev.Stat. § 5394, 18 U.S.C.A. § 1506.

FALSING. In Scotch law. False making; forgery. "Falsing of evidentis." 1 Pitc. Crim. Tr. pt. 1, p. 85.

Making or proving false.

FALSING OF DOOMS. In Scotch law. The proving the injustice, falsity, or error of the doom or sentence of a court. Tomlins; Jacob. The reversal of a sentence or judgment; an action to set aside a decree. Skene. Protesting against a sentence and taking an appeal to a higher tribunal. Bell, Dict.

FALSITY implies more than erroneous or untrue; it indicates knowledge of untruth. Abercrombie v. Hair, 185 Ga. 728, 196 S.E. 447, 451.

FALSO RETORNO BREVIUM. In old English. law. A writ which formerly lay against the sheriff who had execution of process for false returning of writs. Reg. Jud. 43b; Cunningham, Law Dict.

FALSONARIUS. A forger; a counterfeiter. Hov. 424.

FALSUM. Lat. In the civil law. A false or forged thing; a fraudulent simulation; a fraudulent counterfeit or imitation, such as a forged signature or instrument. Also falsification, which may be either by falsehood, concealment of the truth, or fraudulent alteration, as by cutting out or erasing part of a writing.

FALSUS. Lat. False; fraudulent; erroneous. Deceitful; mistaken.

In the sense of "deceiving" or "fraudulent," it is applied to persons in respect to their acts and conduct, as well as to things; and in the sense of "erroneous," it is applied to persons on the question of personal identity.

FALSUS IN UNO, FALSUS IN OMNIBUS. False in one thing, false in everything. Commonwealth v. Billings, 97 Mass. 406; Mercer v. Wright, 3 Wis. 645; State v. Williams, 47 N.C. 257; Dawson v. Bertolini, 70 R.I. 325, 38 A.2d 765, 768.

The doctrine means that, if testimony of a witness on a material issue is willfully false and given with an intention to deceive, jury may disregard all the witness' testimony. Hargrave v. Stockloss, 127 N.J.L. 262, 21 A.2d 820, 823.

The maxim deals only with weight of evidence, Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Wright, 190 Miss. 53, 199 So. 289, 290. It does not relieve jury from passing on credibility of the whole testimony of a false swearing witness or excuse jury from weighing the whole testimony. State v. Willard, 346 Mo. 773, 142 S.W.2d 1046, 1052. It is a mere rule of evidence affirming a rebuttable presumption of fact, under which the jury must consider all the evidence of the witness, other than that which is found to be false, and it is their duty to give effect to so much of it, if any, as is relieved from the presumption against it and found to be true. Levine Bros. v. Mantell, 90 W.Va. 166, 111 S.E. 501, 504; Shecil v. United States, C.C.A.Wis., 226 F. 184, 187. It is not a rule of law and false statement, State v. Sturchio, 127 N.J.L. 366, 22 A.2d 235, 237. It is not a rule of the law of evidence, but is merely an aid in weighing and sifting of evidence. Dawson v. Bertolini, 70 R.I. 325, 38 A.2d 765, 768. It is particularly applied to the testimony of a witness who, if he is shown to have sworn falsely in one detail, may be considered unworthy of belief as to all the rest of his evidence. Grimes v. State, 63 Ala. 168; Wilson v. Coulter, 51 N.Y.S. 804, 29 App. Div. 85; White v. Disher, 67 Cal. 402, 7 P. 826.

The rule is merely permissive and not mandatory. Bankers' Health & Life Ins. Co. v. Nichols, 44 Ga.App. 536, 162 S.E. 161.

Where a party is clearly shown to have embezzled one article of property, it is a ground of presumption that he may have embezzled others also. The Boston, 1 Sumn. 328, 356, Fed.Cas.No.1,673; The Santissima Trinidad, 7 Wheat. 339, 5 L. Ed. 454.

FAMA. Lat. Fame; character, reputation; report of common opinion.

FAMA, FIDES ET OCULUS NON PATIUNTUR LUDUM. 3 Bulst. 226. Fame, faith, and eyesight do not suffer a cheat.

FAMA QU1E SUSPICIONEM INDUCIT, ORIRI DEBET APUD BONOS ET GRAVES, NON QUIDEM MALEVOLOS ET MALEDICOS, SED PROVIDAS ET FIDE DIGNAS PERSONAS, NON SEMEL SED SIEPIUS, QUIA CLAMOR MINUIT ET DEFAMATIO MANIFESTAT. 2 Inst. 52. Report, which induces suspicion, ought to arise from good and grave men; not, indeed, from malevolent and malicious men, but from cautious and credible persons; not only once, but frequently; for clamor diminishes, and defamation manifests.

FAMACIDE. A killer of reputation; a slanderer.

FAMILIA.

Old English Law. A household; the body of household servants; a quantity of land, otherwise called "mansa," sufficient to maintain one family. Du Cange; Cowell; Cunningham, Law Dict.; Creasy, Church Hist.

Roman Law. A household; a family. On the composition of the Roman family, see Agnati; Cognati; and see Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 144.

Family right; the right or status of being the head of a family, or of exercising the patria potestas over others. This could belong only to a Roman citizen who was a "man in his own right," (homo sui juris.) Mackeld.Rom.Law, §§ 133, 144.

Spanish Law. A family, which might consist of domestics or servants. It seems that a single person owning negroes was the "head of a family," within the meaning of the colonization laws of Coahuila and Texas. State v. Sullivan, 9 Tex. 156.

FAMILLE EMPTOR. In Roman law. An intermediate person who purchased the aggregate inheritance when sold per ces et libram, in the process of making a will under the Twelve Tables. This purchaser was merely a man of straw, transmitting the inheritance to the hceres proper. Brown.

FAMILLE ERCISCUNDIE. In Roman law. An action for the partition of the aggregate succession of a familia, where that devolved upon cohceredes. It was also applicable to enforce a contribution towards the necessary expenses incurred on the familia. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 499; Stair, Inst. 1. 1, tit. 7, § 15.

FAMILIAR. The word is equivalent to the word "know." Smiley v. Lenane, 363 Ill. 66, 1 N.E.2d 213, 216.

FAMILIARES REGIS. Persons of the king's household. The ancient title of the "six clerks" of chancery in England. Crabb, Com. Law, 184; 2 Reeve, Eng. Law, 249, 251.

FAMILIARITY. Acquaintance expresses less than "familiarity"; familiarity less than intimacy. Acquaintance springs from occasional intercourse, familiarity from daily intercourse, intimacy from unreserved intercourse; acquaintance, having some knowledge, familiarity, from long habit, intimacy, by close connection. Atkins Corporation v. Tourny, 6 Cal.2d 206, 57 P.2d 480, 483.

FAMILY. The word is used to designate many relationships. Collins v. Northwest Casualty Co., 180 Wash. 347, 39 P.2d 986, 989, 97 A.L.R. 1235; State ex rel. Kemp v. Arnold, 234 Mo. 154, 113 S. W.2d 143, 146.

In broad or primary sense "family" means: a collective body of any two persons living together in one house as their common home for the time; In re Barnes' Estate, 149 Misc. 149, 267 N.Y.S. 634; a collective body of persons, living together in one home, in a permanent and domestic character, under one head or management,

State ex rel. Kemp v. Arnold, 234 Mo. 154, 113 S. W.2d 143, 146; a collective body of persons who live in one house and under one head or management, Fratellanza Italiana v. Nugnes, 114 N.J.Eq. 185, 168 A. 589, 590; a group of blood-relatives; all the relations who descend from a common ancestor, or who spring from a common root, Civil Code La. art. 3556, no. 12; 9 Ves. 323; a group of kindred persons, Hartley v. Bohrer, 52 Idaho 72, 11 P.2d 616, 618; husband and wife and their children. Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Shadid, Tex. Com.App., 68 S.W.2d 1030, 1032.

In most common use, the word implies father, mother and children, immediate blood relatives. Collins v. Northwest Casualty Co., 180 Wash. 347, 39 P.2d 986, 989, 97 A.L.R. 1235.

In narrow or restricted sense "family" means: a father, mother, and children, whether living together or not, Higgins v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore, 127 Md. 171, 96 A. 322, 323., group of parents and children founded on principle of monogamy, In re Schmidt's Estate, 159 Misc. 373, 289 N.Y.S. 247, 250; husband and wife and their children, State ex rel. Kemp v. Arnold, 234 Mo.App. 154, 113 S.W.2d 143, 146.

In ordinary conversation, the word is descriptive of a person's wife and children. Adams v. Carrie F. Wright Hospital, 82 N.H. 260, 132 A. 525, 526.

In restricted sense, the word "family" may be used interchangeably with household. Collins v. Northwest Casualty Co., 180 Wash. 347, 39 P.2d 986, 989, 97 A.L.R. 1235.

In secondary meaning, "family" means those who are of the same lineage, or descend from one common progenitor. Fratellanza Italiana v. Nugnes, 114 N.J.Eq. 185, 168 A. 589, 590.

The word conveys the notion of some relationship, blood or otherwise. Collins v. Northwest Casualty Co., 180 Wash. 347, 39 P.2d 986, 989, 97 A.L.R. 1235.

The word may mean: a body of persons who live in one house and under one head or manager, Lumbermens Mut. Casualty Co. v. Pulsifer, D.C.Me., 41 F.Supp. 249, 252; Collins v. Northwest Casualty Co. 180 Wash. 347, 39 P.2d 986, 989, 97 A.L.R. 1235. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 145 S.W.2d 315, 318; group of parents and children founded on principle of monogamy, In re Schmidt's Estate, 289 N.Y.S. 247, 250, 159 Misc. 373; husband and wife, In re De Nisson's Guardianship, 197 Wash. 265, 84 P.2d 1024, 1027, 1028; Boston-Edison Prctective Ass'n v. Paulist Fathers, 306 Mich. 253, 10 N.W.2d 847, 849; Hinds v. Buck, 177 Tenn. 444, 150 S.W.2d 1071, 1072; husband and wife and their children, Franklin Fire Ins. Co.

v. Shadid, Tex.Com.App., 68 S.W.2d 1030, 1032; State ex rel. Kemp v. Arnold, 234 Mo.App. 154, 113 S.W.2d 143, 146; husband or wife and children. In re Keegan's Estate, Sur., 37 N.Y.S.2d 368, 370, 371; parents, In re Schmidt's Estate, 289 N.Y.S. 247, 250, 159 Misc. 373; parents and children, In re Schmidt's Estate, 289 N.Y.S. 247, 250, 159 Misc. 373; Uden v. B. F. Goodrich Co., 58 Ohio App. 151, 16 N.E.2d 277, 279; parents, children, and servants, and, as the case may be, lodgers or boarders, Cleaves v. Funk, D.C.Okl., 3 F.Supp. 804, 805; In re Schmidt's Estate, 289 N.Y.S. 247, 250, 159 Misc. 373; parents or children, or other relatives, or domestics and servants, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; parents with their children whether they dwell together or not, In re Schmidt's Estate, 289 N.Y.S. 247, 250, 159 Misc. 373; Higgins v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore, 127 Md. 171, 96 A. 322, 323; spouse and the issue of designated person, and no other persons, Restatement, Property, § 293; uncles, In re Schmidt's Estate, 289 N.Y.S. 247, 250, 159 Misc. 373.

Sisters of a religious order who were employed in hospital and lived together in a community as members of a "family". Goss v. Klipfel, 112 Colo. 87, 146 P.2d 217, 218.

Son-in-law is not a member of father-in-law's family, nor is his daughter, after she becomes son-in-law's wife. Bryant v. Keen, 43 Ga.App. 251, 158 S.E. 445, 446.

Widow who lived with her children in her father-in-law's house and received board for herself and children for keeping house was member of father-in-law's "family". Ho111-baugh v. School Dist. No. 89, 131 Neb. 727, 269 N.W. 819, 820.

Allowances

Where marriage between decedent and his widow occurred years before decedent's death, parties lived together for about three weeks and never resumed their relationship as husband and wife, widow was not entitled to statutory allowance for the benefit of decedent's family. In re Feciuch's Estate, Sur., 26 N.Y.S.2d 390, 391.

Widow constitutes "family" within statute providing for allowance for maintenance from husband's estate. In re Hilleware's Estate, 159 Wash. 580, 294 P. 230, 231.

Word "family" in code provision authorizing family allowance where property set apart is insufficient for support of widow and children, does not include husband, Hills v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, 207 Cal. 666, 279 P. 805, 806, 65 A.L.R. 266.

Beneficial and fraternal associations

As used in beneficial association's by-law providing that death benefit should be payable to member's family, the word means next of kin, including widow. Fratellanza Italiana v. Nugnes, 114 N.J.Eq. 185, 168 A. 589, 590.

As used in statutes or charters relating to who may become beneficiaries in fraternal associations, the word is not to receive a restrictive construction, and it may include stepchildren. Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen v. Hogan, D.C.Minn., 5 F.Supp. 598, 603.

When used in constitution of benefit society, declaring its purpose among others as that of aiding the families of members, the word means such persons as habitually reside under one roof and form one domestic circle, or such persons as are dependent on each other for support or among whom there is legal or equitable obligation to furnish support and in its widest scope it would include all descendants of a common progenitor, Logan v. St. Louis Police Relief Ass'n, Mo.App., 133 S.W.2d 1048, 1049, 1050.

Compensation Law

A collective body of persons who live in one house and under one head or management is the significance ordinarily attributed to the word "family". Roney's Case, 316 Mass. 732, 56 N.E.2d 859, 864, 866.

Deceased adult son was a member of his parents' "family" though at time of his death he lived apart from his parents but contributed to support of parents. Baker v. Western Power & Light Co., 147 Kan. 571, 78 P.2d 36, 40.

Persons related by kinship or marriage, though not living in same household, may be members of "family". Moore's Case, 294 Mass. 557, 3 N.E.2d 5.

Descent and descendants

As used in act changing descent as between relatives of half blood, "family" comprehends only the descendants of ancestor, those who have his blood running in their veins; in that sense is nearly if not quite of same import as the word "issue." Ryder v. Myers, 113 N.J.Eq. 360, 167 A. 22, 24.

The word "family" may mean: all descendants of a common progenitor, Logan v. St. Louis Police Relief Ass'n, Mo.App., 133 S.W.2d 1048, 1049, 1050; In re Lund 's Estate, 26 Ca1.2d 472, 159 P.2d 643, 645; those who are of the same lineage, or descend from one common progenitor. Fratellanza Italiana v. Nugnes, 114 N.J.Eq. 185, 168 A. 589, 590.

Homestead and exemption laws

A "family" is a collection of persons living together under one head, Holsomback v. Slaughter, 177 Miss. 553, 171 So. 542. 543; a collection of persons living together, where there is an obligation, legal or moral, on head of the house to support the others or some of them, Logue v. Von Almen, 379 Ill. 208, 40 N.E.2d 73, 80, 140 A.L.R. 251; a collective body of persons, consisting of parents or children, or other relatives, domestics, or servants, residing together in one house or upon the same premises, and person to be member of family must be member in good faith, Lobban v. Vander Vries Realty & Mortgage Co., 48 Ariz. 180, 60 P.2d 933, 935; a collective body of persons who live in one house and under one head or manager, Hurt v. Perryman, 173 Tenn. 646, 122 S.W.2d 426, 427; a group of two or more persons dwelling together under one head, and which cannot consist of but one person, Zuniga v. Evans, 87 Utah, 198, 48 P.2d 513, 524, 101 A.L.R. 532.

A husband dying leaving a wife from whom he was not judicially separated left a "family". In re Zalewski's Estate, 30 N.Y.S.2d 658, 664, 177 Misc. 384.

An unmarried adult daughter who remains continuously with the "family" is member. Reconstruction Finance Corporation v. Burgess, Tex.Civ.App., 155 S.W.2d 977, 980.

Constitution and statute exempting homestead in each "head of a family" include not only a father, or husband, in his lifetime, but a widow, and after death of both, any minor children. Whitfield v. People's Union Bank & Trust Co., 168 Tenn. 24, 73 S.W.2d 690, 691.

"Family", continues to exist so long as widow lives and remains widow. Miers v. Miers, 160 Miss. 746, 133 So. 133, 134.

Husband who, after wife had abandoned him and remarried without obtaining divorce, purchased release of wife's right in his estate and abandoned her held not entitled to exemption provided on death of person leaving family. In re Schmidt's Estate, 287 N.Y.S. 44, 47, 247 App.Div. 505.

Husband, who had lived apart from wife prior to her death and had not contributed to her support held entitled to exemption provided on death of person having family. In re Gluer's Will, 278 N.Y.S. 994, 155 Misc. 41.

Persons who may constitute a family include: husband and wife. Bigelow v. Dunphe, 144 Fla. 330, 198 So. 13; husband and wife living together, Miller v. Finegan, 26 Fla. 29, 7 So. 140, 6 L.R.A. 813; Oppenheim v. Myers, 99 Va. 582, 39 S.E. 218; Dye v. Cooke, 88 Tenn. 275, 12 S.W. 631, 17 Am.St.Rep. 882; husband and wife so long as marriage continues in existence, In re Brown's Will, 274 N.Y.S. 924, 153 Misc. 282; mother and children living under father's authority, Washington Bank & Trust Co. v. Carrier, 178 La. 902, 152 So. 560, 561; school teacher on whom moral obligation rested to support and care for her sister. Standard Paving Co. v. Tolson, Tex.Civ.App., 86 S.W.2d 789, 791. Sister, owning property, and semi-invalid brother, who was cared for and supported by sister, and younger sister, who contributed to household expenses. Real Estate Land Title & Trust Co. v. Street, Tex.Civ.App., 85 S.W.2d 341, 342; stepchildren and stepfather living together after stepfather's divorce from children's mother, Smith Bros. v. Lucas, Tex.Com.App., 26 S.W.2d 1055, 1056. With particular reference to homestead laws, one parent and his or her children; Carle v. Bamberger, 53 Okl. 777, 158 P. 599, 600; Solnar v. Solnar, 205 Iowa, 701, 216 N.W. 288, 290; and even a widow or widower, though without children; Coleman v. Bosworth, 180 Iowit, 975, 164 N.W. 238, 240; may constitute a "family." See, also, In re Hooper's Estate, 117 Wash. 463, 201 P. 740, 742.

Test of whether husband has a "family" within statute providing for exemptions to widow if husband dies having a family cannot be measured by number of years husband and wife lived apart nor by distance of miles separating them. In re Brown's Will, 274 N.Y.S. 924, 153 Misc. 282.

To constitute family, status must be social and head of family must be legally or morally obligated to support other members, who must be dependent on such support. United Fidelity Life Ins. Co. v. Plainview Building & Loan Ass'n, Tex.Civ.App., 81 S.W.2d 1092, 1093; Lobban v. Vander Vries Realty & Mortgage Co., 48 Ariz. 180, 60 P.2d 933, 935.

To constitute family there must be one whom law designates or recognizes as head of family who by natural ties or by legal or moral obligation is under duty to support others of the household. Owens v. Altsheller & Co., 263 Ky. 727, 93 S.W.2d 844, 846.

To constitute persons living with another in same house a "family", it must appear that they are being supported by that other in whole or in part, and are dependent on him therefor, and that he is under a natural or moral obligation to render such support. Poffinbarger v. Administrator of Poffinbarger's Estate, 206 Iowa 961, 221 N.W. 550.

Where relatives live together because such arrangement is more convenient or economical, or for reasons of friendship or affection, such relation does not constitute them "family". Rock Island Bank & Trust Co. v. Lamont, 361 Ill. 432, 198 N.E. 430.

Household

A "family" is a collective body of persons who form one household under one head and one domestic government, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; a collective body of persons forming one household under one head and domestic government, having reciprocal, natural and moral duties to care for one another. Hartley v. Bohrer, 52 Idaho 72, 11 P.2d 616, 618; Krug v. Mills, 159 Md. 670, 152 A. 493, 495; a household, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; a household composed of parents or children or other relatives, or domestics and servants, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; all members of the household living together under the authority of the head thereof, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; all persons who dwell together under a common head as a household, Hoff v. Hoff, 132 Pa.Super. 431, 1 A.2d 506, 508; an entire Household, Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619; the immediate members of one's household, as wife, children, brothers, and sisters or father and mother. Niemes v. Niemes, 97 Ohio St. 145, 119 N.E. 503, 506; those who live in same household subject to general management and control of the head thereof, McGee v. Crawford, 205 N.C. 318, 171 S.E. 326, 327.

Family and household are substantially synonymous, Umbarger v. State Farm Mut. Automobile Ins. Co., 218 Iowa 203, 254 N.W. 87; the words are often used interchangeably, Indemnity Ins. Co. of North America v. Sanders, 169 Okl. 378, 36 P.2d 271, 273 ; Brovdy v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, 145 Pa.Super. 602, 21 A.2d 437, 438; while in a restricted sense the word "family" may be used interchangeably with "household," there is a difference in the ideas suggested by the two words, Collins v. Northwest Casualty Co., 180 Wash. 347, 39 P.2d 986, 989, 97 A.L.R. 1235.

Insane Persons

Under statute providing for support of family of insane person out of his estate, "family" includes those whom insane person under normal circumstances would be under legal duty to support, such as wife and children, and under some circumstances may include others. Woman who had become insane person's stepmother when he was infant and had cared for him during his infancy and to whose support he had contributed during his minority and until he joined Army held member of his "family" so as to be entitled to support. In re Freeman's Estate, 171 Miss. 147, 157 So. 253.

Insurance

Accident policy condition that insurer should have opportunity to be present at autopsy performed with consent of insured's "family" held to apply to person who, as surviving wife or husband, or next of kin, had right of possession of body. If insured left no wife, and sister was nearest kin, sister held "family" within such condition. Sheehan v. Commercial Travelers' Mut. Acc. Ass'n, 283 Mass. 543, 186 N.E. 627, 631, 88 A.L.R. 975.

Pauper

Duty of town to support "family" of pauper includes only those persons whom head of family is bound by law to support. Town of St. Johnsbury v. Town of Sutton, 102 Vt. 451, 150 A. 133, 135.

Reservation lands

Words "family" and "heirs," within statute providing for holding of reservation lands by Seneca Indians, mean family and heirs which Indians themselves recognize. Woodin v. Seeley, 141 Misc. 207, 252 N.Y.S. 818, 826.

Servants

A family is a body of persons who live in one household under one head or management; a household including parents, children and servants, and, as the case may be, lodgers or boarders. Cleaves v. Funk, D.C.Okl., 3 F.Supp. 804, 805.

Domestic servants, when living in establishment, are included in term "family" for purposes of serving summons. Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619.

Service of Process

A domestic servant may be included in term "family." Sullivan v. Walburn, 9 N.J.Misc. 280, 154 A. 617, 619.

Defendant's mother, who maintained permanent home, but who usually visited in defendant's home during winter months, held not a member of defendant's "family." Cleaves v. Funk, C.C.A.Okl., 76 F.2d 828, 829.

The word "family", as used in acts regulating service of process, is given its restricted meaning and held to include only a father, a mother, and their children, but the relationship between the person receiving a 'copy of the summons and the person on whom service is attempted must be more confidential and intimate than in most employer and employee or master and servant relationships in order that the receipt by the former may be deemed valid service on the latter. Moore v. Kasishke, 189 Okl. 336, 117 P.2d 113, 115, 136 A.L.R. 1502.

Support of persons

A "family" is a collection of persons living together under one head, under such circumstances or conditions that the head is under a legal or moral obligation to support the other members, and the other members are dependent upon him for support, Hurt v. Perryman, 173 Tenn. 646, 122 S.W.2d 426, 427; those entitled by law to look to person for support and protection, In re Fulton's Estate, 15 Cal. App.2d 202, 59 P.2d 508, 510; those members of the household who are dependent on the householder to whom he owes some duty, Brokaw v. Ogle, 170 Ill. 115, 48 N.E. 394; those whom it is the natural or moral duty of one to support, or who are dependent on him for support, Finn v. Eminent Household of Columbia Woodmen, 163 Ky. 187, 173 S. W. 349, 350.

Bankrupt whose minor children were living separately from him in custody of his divorced wife held person having "family dependent on him for support". In re McFarland, D.C.Wash., 49 F.2d 342, 343.

"Family," within statute imposing liability for articles going to support of "family," held to include wife as well as children. Baledes v. Greenbaum, 112 Conn. 64, 151 A. 333, 334.

He upon whom law imposes duty to support growing out of status and not out of contract, and persons to whom he owes this duty if dwelling together in a domestic establishment constitute a "family" of which he is the head. Owens v. Altsheller & Co., 263 Ky. 727, 93 S.W.2d 844, 846.

Householder's sister and her husband living with householder and dependent upon him may constitute "family". Rock Island Bank & Trust Co. v. Lamont, 361 III. 432, 198 N.E. 430.

Moral duty to support arising from ties of blood or possibly other similar relations will be sufficient to support claim that one is head of a family. Owens v. Altsheller & Co., 263 Ky. 727, 93 S.W.2d 844, 846.

Sister on whom moral obligation rested to support her sister and such sister constituted "family." Standard Paving Co. v. Tolson, Tex.Civ.App., 86 S.W.2d 789, 791.

To constitute "family" within homestead or exemption provision there must be legal or moral or natural obligation of one to support other members and corresponding dependence of others. L. E. Whitham & Co. v. Briggs' Estate, Tex.Com.App., 58 S.W.2d 49; Lobban v. Vander Vries Realty & Mortgage Co., 48 Ariz. 180, 60 P.2d 933, 935; Wineblood v. Payne, 129 Okl. 103, 263 P. 669, 671.

Town of residence of head of "family" held not liable to reimburse another town for support furnished stepchildren. Town of St. Johnsbury v. Town of Sutton, 102 Vt. 451, 150 A. 133, 135.

Wills

As respects construction of will, the word "family" denotes a group of persons related to each other by marriage or blood living together under a single roof and comprising a household whose head is usually the father or husband, but the word is not one of inflexible meaning and its significance to a large extent depends upon the context and the purpose for which it is employed. The word "family" includes those who have left father's home and have married and established their own homes when context and purpose indicate such significance should be attributed to the word. Magill v. Magill, 317 Mass. 89, 56 N.E.2d 892, 894, 896, 154 A.L.R. 1406.

Testamentary precatory trust created in favor of any of testatrix' "family" held to comprehend those who would take under statute of distribution. Ryder v. Myers, 113 N. J.Eq. 360, 167 A. 22, 24.

Testatrix in creating trust for benefit of granddaughter during her life and providing that upon granddaughter's death without issue principal should go to then living members of granddaughter's father's "family" did not use word family to designate those who comprised her son's household, where testatrix knew when she executed will that son was dead and that his widow and daughter made their homes with testatrix and his other children lived separate from each other. Magill v. Magill, 317 Mass. 89, 56 N.E.2d 892, 894, 896, 154 A.L.R. 1406.

The use of the word "family" disclosed a testamentary intent to make a gift to a class including those who would have been distributees of the deceased brothers of testatrix had such brothers died as of the date of death of testatrix and included therein the widows of such brothers. In re Keegan's Estate, Sur., 37 N.Y.S.2d 368, 370, 371.

Under will of widow, providing that "I wish my husband's family to share and share alike the remainder of my property," the word "family" is equivalent to "heirs," In re McCrum's Estate, 97 Cal.App. 576, 275 P. 971, 972.

When the word "family" is used to designate those entitled to receive a legacy, the intended meaning of the word depends upon the context of the will and upon a showing as to whom were the objects of the testator's bounty by reason of kinship or friendship. Where a legacy was to a class, consisting of family of testatrix' deceased brother who was survived by widow and three children, each of which children maintained separate households, "family" included widow and three children. In re Keegan's Estate, Sur., 37 N.Y.S.2d 368, 370, 371.

Where testatrix created trust for benefit of granddaughter during her life and, knowing that one of granddaughter's brothers was already dead, provided that any issue granddaughter might leave should share equally with then living members of granddaughter's father's "family" in division of principal of trust and thereafter upon death of another grandson leaving a widow and two infant children executed a codicil giving grandson's legacy under another provision of will to his widow, word "family" was used to designate lineal descendants of granddaughter's father where such construction was consistent with provisions of the will and carried out intention of testatrix. Magill v. Magill, 317 Mass. 89, 56 N.E.2d 892, 894, 896, 154 A.L.R. 1406.

FAMILY ARRANGEMENT. A term denoting an. agreement between a father and his children, or between the heirs of a deceased father, to dispose of property, or to partition it in a different manner than that which would result if the law alone directed it, or to divide up property without administration. In these cases, frequently, the mere relation of the parties will give effect to bargains otherwise without adequate consideration. 1 Chit. Pr. 67; 1 Turn. & R. 13; Boyd v. Robinson, 93 Tenn. 1, 23 S.W. 72; De Hatre v. De Hatre, 50 Mo. App. 1.

FAMILY AUTOMOBILE DOCTRINE. The doctrine is that one who owns and maintains an automobile for the general use of his household makes use of automobile for such purposes a part of his business so that any member using automobile for those purposes under general authority to do so becomes his representative, for whose negligence he is responsible. Durso v. A. D. Cozzolino, Inc., 128 Conn. 24, 20 A.2d 392, 394.

It is an extension of the principle of respondeat superior to the relation created by operation of family use automobile. Buss v. Wachsmith, 190 Wash. 673, 70 P.2d 417, 421. See, also, Family Car Doctrine and Family Purpose Doctrine.

It is based on theory that members of family were engaged in a joint enterprise or that child was agent of parents. Paulson v. McMillan, 8 Wash.2d 295, 111 P.2d 983, 989.

If an automobile is owned and maintained by a family corporation for general use of a family, such as that of corporation's manager and one of its principal stockholders, corporation may be held liable under the "family automobile doctrine" to third parties. Durso v. A. D. Cozzolino, Inc., 128 Conn. 24, 20 A.2d 392, 394.

FAMILY BIBLE. A Bible containing a record of the births, marriages, and deaths of the members of a family. As to its admissibility in evidence, see Whart. Ev. § 219; Tayl. Ev. 572; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 104; L. R. 1 Ex. 255; Greenleaf v. R. Co., 30 Iowa, 301; Southern Life Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 53 Ga. 535; Weaver v. Leiman, 52 Md. 709.

FAMILY CAR. Automobile used to send owner's children to school was "family car." Coleman v. Rollo, Tex.Civ.App., 50 S.W.2d 391, 392.

FAMILY CAR DOCTRINE. The doctrine rests upon the basis that the automobile is furnished by the husband in his individual capacity and as common-law head of the family for the use of the family, and not as the agent of the community. Donn v. Kunz, 52 Ariz. 219, 79 P.2d 965. It rests on theory that operator is husband's agent and runs automobile in husband's "business," Hart v. Hogan, 173 Wash. 598, 24 P.2d 99; that wife is husband's agent in carrying out one of the purposes for which the automobile is purchased and owned, Moffitt v. Krueger, 11 Wash.2d 658, 120 P. 2d 512, 513.

Under the doctrine, a father furnishing automobile for pleasure and convenience of family makes the use of automobile by family his business and any member of family driving automobile with father's express or implied consent is the father's agent and the father is liable for the member's negligence. Donn v. Kunz, 52 Ariz. 219, 79 P.2d 965, 966, 967.

See, alsp, Family Automobile Doctrine and Family Purpose Doctrine.

The person upon whom it is sought to fasten liability under the doctrine must own, provide, or maintain an automobile for the general use, pleasure, and convenience of the family. Liability under the doctrine is not confined to owner or driver. It depends upon control and use. A widow, wife, or mother may be liable as well as a husband or father. Hart v. Hogan, 173 Wash. 598, 24 P.2d 99. To bring a case within doctrine, it must be shown that automobile was in fact a family pleasure automobile, but automobile purchased and used for business purposes may come within the doctrine, where it is also used for family pleasure. ; Dillon v. Burnett, 197 Wash. 371, 85 P.2d 656, 658.

FAMILY COUNCIL. See Family Arrangement; Family Meeting; Conseil de Famille.

FAMILY DEPENDENT UPON HIM FOR SUPPORT. Bankrupt whose minor children were living separately from him in custody of his divorced wife held to have "family dependent on him for support." In re McFarland, D.C.Wash., 49 F.2d 342, 343.

FAMILY EXPENSES. Obligations incurred for something intended for the use or comfort of the collection spoken of as the family, as distinguished from individual or personal expenses. Vose v. Myott, 141 Iowa, 506, 120 N.W. 58, 21 L.R.A.,N.S., 277.

Purchase price of team of horses used on farm was a "family expense". Wall v. Crawford, 103 Colo. 66, 82 P.2d 749, 750.

Tuition for education of children of taxpayer held "family expense". Channing v. U. S., D.C.Mass., 4 F.Supp. 33, 34.

FAMILY GROUP, within purview of the family car doctrine, is not confined to persons related to the owner, but includes members of the collective body of persons living in his household for whose convenience the car is maintained and who have authority to use it. Smart v. Bissonette, 106 Conn. 447, 138 A. 365, 366; Hart v. Hogan, 173 Wash. 598, 24 P.2d 99. See Family Purpose Doctrine, infra.

The children of trust settlor including an adult son are members of the settlor's "family group" for income tax purposes. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Wilson, C. C.A.?, 125 F.2d 307, 310.

FAMILY HOTEL. A "family hotel", as distinguished from an ordinary "public hotel", in construction of covenant, is designed primarily for the accommodation of permanent guests. Kew Gardens Corporation v. Ciro's Plaza, 175 Misc. 475, 23 N.Y.S.2d 957, 959.

FAMILY LIBRARY. Which one spouse cannot mortgage without consent of other may be composed of such books as family or head of family chooses to select. Lupton v. Merchants' Nat. Bank of Topeka, 140 Kan. 615, 38 P.2d 125, 127.

FAMILY MEETING. An institution of the laws of Louisiana, being a council of the relatives (or, if there are no relatives, of the friends) of a minor, for the purpose of advising as to his affairs and the administration of his property.

The family meeting is called by order of a judge, and presided over by a justice or notary, and must consist of at least five persons, who are put under oath. In re Bothick, 44 La.Ann. 1037, 11 So. 712; Civ. Code La. art. 305. It corresponds to the "conseil de famille" of French law, q. v. See Lemoine v. Ducote, 45 La.Ann. 857, 12 So. 939; Commaux v. Barbin, 6 Mart.La. N.S. 455.

FAMILY PHYSICIAN. A physician who regularly attends and is consulted by the members of the family as their medical adviser; but he need not attend in all cases or be consulted by all the members of the family. Price v. Ins. Co., 17 Minn. 519, Gil. 473, 10 Am.Rep. 166; Reid v. Ins. Co., 58 Mo. 424; Cromeens v. Sovereign Camp, W. O. W., Mo.App., 247 S.W. 1033, 1034.

FAMILY POOL. A species of contract that must Lave something to stand on besides wishful thinking, and the parties to it must be conscious that they are in it and contributing to it to be bound by it. Sherman v. Florida Tar & Creosote Corp., 160 Fla. 696, 36 So.2d 267, 269.

FAMILY PURPOSE DOCTRINE. A doctrine that the owner of a car, who gives it over to the use of his family and permits it to be operated by the members thereof, is liable for the injuries inflicted while being operated by a member of the family. Turoff v. Burch, 60 App.D.C. 221, 50 F.2d 986, 987; McNamara v. Prother, 277 Ky. 754, 127 S.W.2d 160, 161; Schwartz v. Johnson, 152 Tenn. 586, 28a S.W. 32, 33, 47 A.L.R. 323. The doctrine, that the owner of an automobile purchased or maintained for the pleasure of his family is liable for injuries inflicted by the machine while being used by the members of the family for their own pleasure. Doss v. Monticello Electric Light & Power Co., 193 Ky. 499, 236 S.W. 1046, 1047; Thompson v. Kansas City Rys. Co., 113 Kan. 74, 213 P. 633.

See, also, Family Automobile Doctrine; Family Car Doctrine; Family Group.

The doctrine imputes relationship of principal and agent where one maintains an automobile for pleasure or other use of member of his family. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Brann, 297 Ky. 381, 180 S.W.2d 102, 104; it is based on theory that each family member in using such car for own pleasure is carrying out the purpose for which it is furnished, and is the owner's agent or servant, Behseleck v. Andrus, 60 S.D. 204, 244 N.W. 268, 269, 88 A.L.R. 596; Hackley v. Robey, 170 Va. 55, 195 S.E. 689, 692; Ener v. Gandy, Tex.Civ.App., 141 S.W.2d 772, 775. It is founded upon principles of agency or of master and servant. Kalil v. Spivey, 70 Ga.App. 84, 27 S.E.2d 475, 479; Baptist v. Slate, 162 Va. 1, 173 S.E. 512, 515; It is restricted to automobiles maintained by owner for comfort, pleasure, and convenience of members of his family. Mitchell v. Mullen, 45 Ga.App. 285, 164 S:E. 278, 280; Commonwealth of Kentucky, for Use and Benefit of Kern, v. Maryland Casualty Co. of Baltimore, Md., C.C.A.Ky., 112 F.2d 352, 356.

A father is not liable merely because he is head of family, but the one who owns or provides the automobile is liable. McNamara v. Prather, 277 Ky. 754, 127 S.W.2d 160, 161, 162. A wife may be held liable for the torts of her husband under the doctrine. Goldstein v. Johnson, 64 Ga. App. 31, 12 S.E.2d 92, 94. Agency is the very genesis of the doctrine, Vaughn v. Booker, 217 N.C. 479, 8 S.E.2d 603, 604, 605; Grandmother standing in loco parentis to grandson was liable under the doctrine for grandson's negligent operation of her automobile. Rutherford v. Smith, 284 Ky. 592, 145 S.W.2d 533, 536; Where wife owned automobile, husband was not liable under "family purpose doctrine," for minor son's negligent operation of the automobile, notwithstanding husband paid part of gasoline and garage bills. McNamara v. Prather, 277 Ky. 754, 127 S.W.2d 160, 161, 162.

It has been said that the family purpose doctrine has been accepted by the courts of about half of the states. Jacobsen v. Dailey, 36 N.W.2d 711, 228 Minn. 201. Among those states are Georgia, Nebraska, North Carolina, and Oregon.

On the other hand, the doctrine has been specifically rejected, or not adopted, by fully one-half of the states, including California, Illinois, Mississippi, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Wisconsin. In Minnesota it has been held that the doctrine has been superseded by a financial responsibility statute (M.S.A. § 170.54). Ellingboe v. Guerin, 36 N.W.2d 598, 228 Minn. 211. For a full discussion of the subject, see Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm.Ed., § 3111 et seq.

FAMILY RELATION. A relationship which may exist between one taken into the family by the head of the family, notwithstanding the absence of blood relationship or of legal adoption. Nelson v. Poorman's Estate, Mo.App., 215 S.W. 753, 754.

Such relation exists : between two sisters when there Is moral obligation on part of one to support and care for the other and when necessity for such care and support exists, Standard Paving Co. v. Tolson, Tex.Civ.App., 86 S. W.2d 789, 791; when child, receives from parent services, maintenance, or gifts reasonably frequent to lead to expectation of future enjoyment thereof. Gaydos v. Domabyl, 301 Pa. 523, 152 A. 549, 551; Where brother owes moral obligation to support sister and necessity for such support exists, Central Life Assur. Soc. (Mutual) v. Gray, Tex.Civ.App., 32 S.W.2d 259, 260. FARM LAND. A term applicable to all the land contained in a farm, and not necessarily merely to land which has been plowed. De Woffe v. Kupers, 106 Or. 176, 211 P. 927, 930.

FARM LEASE. A contract upon a printed lease form, containing all provisions of standard Nebraska farm leases, was a "farm lease," notwithstanding inserted provision that first party employed second party to farm the premises and would pay second party half the corn and hay. In re Mulligan, D.C.Neb., 45 F.Supp. 763, 766.

FARM LET. Technical words in a lease creating a term for years. Co. Litt. 45 b; 1 Washb. R. Pr. Index, Lease. Operative words in a lease, which strictly mean to let upon payment of a certain rent in farm; e., in agricultural produce.

FARM OUT. To let for a term at a stated rental.

Among the Romans the collection of revenue was farmed out, and the same system existed in France before the revolution of 1789; in England the excise taxes were farmed out, and thereby their evils were greatly aggravated. The farming of the excise was abolished in Scotland by the union, having been before that time abandoned in England. In all these cases the custom gave rise to great abuse and oppression of the people, and in France most of the farmers-general, as they were called, perished on the scaffold.

FARM PRODUCTS. Include swine, horses, meat cattle, sheep, manure, cordwood, hay, as well as vegetables, fruit, eggs, milk, butter, lard, and other provisions for the mouth. Keeney v. Beasman, 169 Md. 582, 182 A. 566, 569, 103 A.L.R. 1515.

Persons employed to pack tobacco in warehouses by corporation which grew its own tobacco were engaged in "farming operations" where there was no market for tobacco at time it was brought to warehouses. American Sumatra Tobacco Corporation v. Tone, 127 Conn. 132, 15 A.2d 80, 82.

FARMING PRODUCTS. All things are considered as "farming products" or "agricultural products" which have a situs of their production upon the farm and which are brought into condition for uses of society by labor of those engaged in agricultural pursuits as contradistinguished from manufacturing or other industrial pursuits. In re Rodgers, 134 Neb. 832, 279 N.W. 800, 803.

FARMING PURPOSES. These words are not limited in meaning to mere cultivation of soil and maintenance of improvements thereon for such purposes, but include raising of live stock, as well as production of farm crops directly from soil. State v. Superior Court for Walla Walla County, 168 Wash. 142, 10 P.2d 986, 987.

FARO. An unlawful game of cards, in which all the other players play against the banker or dealer, staking their money upon the order in which the cards will lie and be dealt from the pack. Webster; Ward v. State, 22 Ala. 19; U. S. v. Smith, 27 Fed.Cas. 1149; Patterson v. State, 12 Tex.App. 224.

FARO LAY—OUT. A board commonly covered with green cloth to which the entire spade suit is affixed in a certain order. State v. Williams, 157 P. 957, 52 Mont. 369.

FARRAGO LIBELLI. Lat. An ill-composed book containing a collection of miscellaneous subjects not properly associated nor scientifically arranged. Wharton.

FARRIER. One who takes upon himself the public employment of shoeing horses. See 1 B1.Comm. 431; 2 Salk. 440; Hanover, Horses 215.

FARTHING. The fourth part of an English penny.

FARTHING OF _GOLD. An ancient English coin, containing in value the fourth part of a noble. 9 Hen. V. c. 7.

FARTHING OF LAND. A great quantity of land, differing much from farding-deal, q. v.

FARVAND. Standing by itself, this word signifies "passage by sea or water." In charter-parties, it means voyage or passage by water. 18 C.B. 880.

FARYNDON INN. The ancient designation of Serjeants' Inn, Chancery Lane, London.

FAS. Lat. Right; justice; the divine law. 3 BL Comm. 2; Calvin.

In primitive times it was the will of the gods, embodied in rules regulating not only ceremonials but the conduct of all men, Taylor, Science of Jurispr. 65.

FASCISM. Is defined as the principles and organization of the patriotic and anti-communist movement in Italy started during the great war, culminating in the virtual dictatorship of Signor Mussolini and imitated by fascist or blackshirt organizations in other countries. Luotto v. Field, Sup., 49 N.Y.S.2d 785, 788.

FASCIST. A member of the Fascisti, pertaining to, sponsored by or embodying the principles of the Fascisti, which principles are described as nationalist and conservative and embodying principles of syndicalism, whether applied to an Italian party or to a similar party in other countries. Luotto v. Field, Sup., 49 N.Y.S.2d 785, 788.

A totalitarian; a believer in the corporate state; one opposed to the exercise of democratic methods or of civil liberties; high handed. A name of opprobium sometimes given to those who oppose proposed reforms or who are conservative in their political views.

FASIUS. In old English law. A faggot of wood.

FAST BILL OF EXCEPTIONS. One which may be taken in Georgia in injunction suits and similar cases, at such time and in such manner as to bring the case up for review with great expedition. It must be certified within twenty days from the rendering of the decision. Sewell v. Edmonston, 66 Ga. 353.

FAST-DAY. A day of fasting and penitence, or of mortification by religious abstinence. As to counting it in legal proceedings, see 1 Chit. Archb. Pr., 12th Ed., 160, et seq.

FAST ESTATE. See Estate.

FASTERMANS, FASTERMANNES, or FASTINGMEN. Men in repute and substance; pledges, sureties, or bondsmen, who, according to the Saxon polity, were fast bound to answer for each other's peaceable behavior. Spelman; Enc. Lond.

FASTL In Roman law. Lawful. Dies fasti, lawful days; days on which justice could lawfully be administered by the prEetor. See Dies Fasti.

FAT SPOT. A "fat spot" is a spot where there is an excessive amount of bituminous material on the surface of the pavement. Karl v. State, 279 N.Y. 555, 18 N.E.2d 852, 853.

FATAL ERRORS. Are such only as may reasonably be held to have worked injury to complaining party. Willard v. Stauffer, 91 Ind.App. 119, 170 N.E. 332, 334.

FATAL INJURY. A term embracing injuries resulting in death, which, as used in accident and disability insurance policies is distinguished from "disability," which embraces injuries preventing the insured from performing the work in which he is usually employed, but not resulting in death. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Johnson, Tex.Civ.App., 235 S.W. 650, 652.

FATAL VARIANCE. A variance tending to mislead defendant in making defense or one preventing plea of former jeopardy. Burke v. U. S., C.C. A.Cal., 58 F.2d 739, 741.

A variance in order to be "fatal" must be material. Whittier v. Leifert, 72 N.D. 528, 9 N.W.2d 402, 405; People v. Mizer, 37 Cal.App.2d 148, 99 P.2d 333, 335, 336; it must be misleading or serve to mislead the adverse party, Lorenz v. Santa Monica City High School Dist., 51 Cal.App.2d 393, 124 P.2d 846, 851; it must be substantial and material, Miller v. Arliskas, 324 Ill.App. 588, 58 N.E. 2d 743.

Attempt to introduce evidence of special damages from breach of tort or breach of contract, under general averment of damage is a "fatal variance". W. C. Hardesty Co. v. Schaefer, Mo.App., 139 S.W.2d 1031, 1035.

The general rule with respect to proof of time when an offense is committed is that there is no "fatal variance" from the allegation that it was committed on a particular date, to show that it was actually committed on or about or near that date unless the variance results in misleading defendant so as to prevent him from making his defense to the charge or to deprive him of the benefit of a plea of former jeopardy in event of another trial for the same offense. People v. Tracy, 50 Cal.App.2d 460, 123 P.2d 138, 140, 141.

FATETUR FACINUS QUI JUDICIUM FUGIT. He who flees judgment confesses his guilt. 3 Inst. 14; 5 Co. 109b. But see Best, Pres. § 248.

FATHER. A male parent. In re Clark's Estate, 228 Iowa 75, 290 N.W. 13, 32. He by whom a child is begotten. Natural father; procreator of a child. In re Dexheimer's Estate, 197 Wis. 145, 221 N.W. 737. For "Putative Father," see that title.

As used in law, this term may (according to the context and the nature of the instrument) include a putative as well as a legal father, also a stepfather, an adoptive father, or a grandfather, but is not as wide as the word "parent," and cannot be so construed as to include a female. Thornburg v. American Strawboard Co., 141 Ind. 443, 40 N.E. 1062, 50 Am.St.Rep. 334; McGaughey v. Grand Lodge, A. 0. U. W. of State of Minnesota, 148 Minn. 136, 180 N.W. 1001; Fienup v. Stamer, Mo.App., 28 S.W.2d 437, 439. The term may, however, be so limited as to mean only the father of a legitimate child. People v. Wolf, 216 App.Div. 771, 215 N.Y.S. 95, 96; Howard v. U. S., D.C.Ky., 2 F.2d 170, 173.

As used in law, this term may mean natural father and not adoptive parent. McKinney v. Minkler, Tex.Civ.App., 102 S.W.2d 273, 279; Jackson's Adm'x v. Alexiou, 223 Ky. 95, 3 S.W.2d 177, 178, 56 A.L.R. 1345.

As used in statute providing that father may inherit from his illegitimate children, includes heirs of the father. State v. Chavez, 42 N.M. 569, 82 P.2d 900, 906.

As used in statutes relating to duty of a father and other relatives to support adult children likely to become public charges, refers to foster father after adoption, Betz v. Horr, 276 N.Y. 83, 11 N.E.2d 548, 550, 114 A.L.R. 491.

The appellation "Father" indicates that the one to whom it is applied is a priest of the Catholic Church, Sweeney v. Newspaper Printing Corporation, 177 Tenn. 196, 147 S.W.2d 406, 407.

The word may be used in will as equivalent of "parent," which is defined as meaning father and mother. In re Frist's Estate, 18 Del.Ch. 409, 161 A. 918.

FATHER-IN-LAW. The father of one's wife or husband.

FATHOM. A nautical measure of six feet in length. Occasionally used as a superficial measure of land and in mining, and in that case it means a square fathom or thirty-six square feet. Nahaolelua v. Kaaahu, 9 Hawaii, 601.

FATUA MULIER. A whore. Du Fresne.

FATUITAS. In old English law. Fatuity; idiocy. Reg. Orig. 266.

FATUM. Lat. Fate; a superhuman power; an event or cause of loss, beyond human foresight or means of prevention.

FATUOUS PERSON. In Scotch law. One entirely destitute of reason; is qui omnino desipit. Ersk. Inst. 1, 7, 48. An idiot. Jacob. One who is incapable of managing his affairs, by reason of a total defect of reason. He is described as having uniform stupidity and inattention of manner and childishness of speech. Bell's Law Dict.

FATUUM JUDICIUM. A foolish judgment or verdict. As applied to the latter it is one rather false by reason of folly than criminally so, or as amounting to perjury. Bract. fol. 289.

FATUUS. An idiot or fool. Bract. fol. 420b. Foolish; silly; absurd; indiscreet; or ill considered. See Fatuum judicium.

FATUUS, APUD JURISCONSULTOS NOSTROS, ACCIPITUR PRO NON COMPOS MENTIS; ET FATUUS DICITUR, QUI OMNINO DESIPIT. 4 Coke, 128. Fatuous, among our jurisconsults, is understood for a man not of right mind; and he is called "fatuus" who is altogether foolish.

FATUUS PRZESUMITUR QUI IN PROPRIO NOMINE ERRAT. A man is presumed to be simple who makes a mistake in his own name. Code, 6, 24, 14; Van Alst v. Hunter, 5 Johns. Ch., N.Y. 148, 161.

FAUBOURG. In French law, and in Louisiana. A district or part of a town adjoining the prin. cipal city; a suburb. See City Council of Lafayette v. Holland, 18 La. 286.

FAUCES TERR1E. (Jaws of the land.) Narrow headlands and promontories, inclosing a portion or arm of the sea within them. 1 Kent, Comm. 367, and note; Hale, De Jure Mar. 10; The Harriet, 1 Story, 251, 259, Fed. Cas. No. 6,099; 16 Yale L.J. 471.

FAULT.

American Law. Negligence; an error or defect of judgment or of conduct; any deviation from prudence, duty, or rectitude; any shortcoming, or neglect of care or performance resulting from inattention, incapacity, or perversity; a wrong tendency, course, or act; bad faith or mismanagement; neglect of duty. School Dist. v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co., 102 Mass. 553, 3 Am.Rep. 502; Dorr v. Harkness, 49 N.J.Law, 571, 10 A. 400, 60 Am. Rep. 656; Cochrane v. Forbes, 257 Mass. 135, 153 N.E. 566, 570; Continental Oil Co. v. Horsey, 175 Md. 609, 3 A.2d 476, 478; Continental Ins. Co. v. Sabine Towing Co., C.C.A.Tex., 117 F.2d 694, 697.

As respects wife's fault as ground for divorce, it means more than a deviation from the rules of propriety and also means a blemish or impairment of excellence. Barnett v. Barnett, 292 Ky. 672, 167 S.W.2d 845, 847.

As used in statute respecting suits for separate maintenance, means voluntary separation, or failure of duty or misconduct materially contributing to disruption of marital relation. Amberson v. Amberson, 349 Ill. 214, 181 N.E 825, 826.

As used in Unemployment Qompensation Act protecting persons unemployed through no fault of their own, means failure or volition, White v. Review Board of Indiana Employment Security Division, 114 Ind.App. 383, 52 N.E.2d 500, 502.

The word "fault," the primary lexical meaning of which is defect or failing, in the language of the law and in the interpretation of statutes signifies a failure of duty, and Is the equivalent of negligence. Milliken v. Fenderson, 110 Me. 306, 86 A. 174, 175; Marston v. Pickwick Stages, 78 Cal.App. 526, 248 P. 930, 933. But see Liberty Highway Co. v. Callahan, 24 Ohio App. 374, 157 N.E. 708, 714.

Civil Law. Negligence; want of care. An improper act or omission, injurious to another, and transpiring through negligence, rashness, or ignorance.

There are in law three degrees of faults,—the gross, the slight, and the very slight fault. The gross fault is that which proceeds from inexcusable negligence or ignorance; it is considered as nearly equal to fraud. The slight fault is that want of care which a prudent man usually takes of his business. The very slight fault is that which is excusable, and for which no responsibility is incurred. Civil Code La. art. 3556, par. 13.

Commercial Law. Defect; imperfection; blemish. See With All Faults.

Mining Law. A dislocation of strata; particularly, a severance of the continuity of a vein or lode by.the dislocation of a portion of it.

FAUTOR. Old English law. A favorer or supporter of others; an abettor. Cowell; Jacob. A partisan. One who encouraged resistance to the execution of process.

Spanish Law. Accomplice; the person who aids or assists another in the commission of a crime.

FAUX.

Civil Law. The fraudulent alteration of the truth. The same with the Latin falsum or crimen falsi.

French Law. A falsification or fraudulent alteration or suppression of a thing by words, by writings, or by acts without either. Biret.

"Faux may be understood in three ways. In its most extended sense it is the alteration of truth, with or without intention; it is nearly synonymous with 'lying.' In a less extended sense, it is the alteration of truth, accompanied with fraud, mutatio veritatis cum dolo facta. And lastly, in a narrow*, or rather the legal, sense of the word, when it is a question to know if the faux be a crime, it is the fraudulent alteration of the truth in those cases ascertained and punished by the law." Touillier, t. 9, n. 188.

Old English Law. False; counterfeit. Faux action, a false action. Litt. § 688. Faux money, counterfeit money. St. Westm. 1, c. 15. Faux peys, false weights. Britt. c. 20. Faux serement, a false oath. St. Westm. 1, c. 38.

FAVOR, n. An act of kindness or generosity, as distinguished from one that is inspired by regard for justice, duty, or right. Ross v. Davis, 138 Misc. 863, 248 N.Y.S. 441, 443. Bias; partiality; lenity; prejudice. See Challenge.

FAVOR, v. To regard with favor; to aid or to have the disposition to aid; to show partiality or unfair bias towards;—practically synonymous with "support." United States v. Schulze, D.C.

Cal., 253 F. 377, 379. The word implies a mental attitude or intent. Schulze v. United States, C.C.A.Cal., 259 F. 189, 190.

FAVORABILIA IN LEGE SUNT FISCUS, DOS, VITA, LIBERTAS. Jenk. Cent. 94. Things favorably considered in law are the treasury, dower, life, liberty.

FAVORABILIORES REI, POTIUS QUAM ACTORES, HABENTUR. The condition of the defendant must be favored, rather than that of the plaintiff. In other words, melior est condiao defendentis. Dig. 50, 17, 125; Broom, Max. 715. See Hunt v. Rousmanier's Adm'r, 8 Wheat. U.S. 195, 196, 5 L.Ed. 589.

FAVORABILIORES SUNT EXECUTIONES ALIIS PROCESSIBUS QUIBUSCUNQUE. Co. Litt. 289. Executions are preferred to all other processes whatever.

FAVORED BENEFICIARY. Within rule that confidential relations and activity by favored beneficiary in the execution of the will raises a prima facie presumption of undue influence, is one who in the circumstances has been favored over others having equal claims to testator's bounty. Mindler v. Crocker, 245 Ala. 578, 18 So.2d 278, 281.

FAVORES AMPLIANDI SUNT; ODIA RESTRINGENDA. Jenk. Cent. 186. Favors are to be enlarged; things hateful restrained.

FEAL. Faithful; truthful; true. Tenants by knight service swore to their lords to be teal and Zeal; e., faithful and loyal. Feal homager, faithful subject.

FEAL AND DIVOT. A right in Scotland, similar to the right of turbary in England, for fuel, etc. Wharton; Ersk. ii. tit. ix. s. 17.

FEALTY. In feudal law. Fidelity; allegiance to the feudal lord of the manor; the feudal obligation resting upon the tenant or vassal by which he was bound to be faithful and true to his lord, and render him obedience and service. See De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 497, 57 Am.Dec. 470; Littleton §§ 117, 131; Wright, Ten. 35; Termes de la Ley; 1 Washb. R. P. 19; 1 Poll. & Maitl. 277-287; Stubbs, Const. Hist. § 462 n; Co. Lit. 67b; 3 Kent 510.

This fealty was of two sorts: that which is general, and is due from every subject to his prince; the other special, and required of such only as in respect of their fee are tied by this oath to their landlords; 1 Bla.Comm. 367; Cowell.

Fealty signifies fidelity, the phrase "feal and leal" meaning simply "faithful and loyal." Tenants by knights' service and also tenants in socage were required to take an oath of fealty to the king or others, their immediate lords; and fealty was one of the conditions of their tenure, the breach of which operated a forfeiture of their estates. Brown.

Although foreign jurists considered fealty and homage as convertible terms, because in some continental countries they are blended so as to form one engagement, yet they are not to be confounded in our country, for they do not imply the same thing, homage being the acknowledgment of tenure, and fealty, the vassal oath of fidelity, being the essential feudal bond, and the animating principle of a feud, without which it could not subsist. Wharton.

FEAR. Apprehension of harm; dread; consciousness of approaching danger.

Apprehension of harm or punishment, as exhibited by outward and visible marks of emotion. An evidence of guilt in certain cases. See Burrill, Circ. Ev. 476.

The "fear" which renders evidence of female's utmost resistance unnecessary to support conviction of "rape" is a fear of death or great bodily harm, or a fear that so overpowers female that she dares not resist, or a fear and terror so extreme as to preclude resistance, or a fear which renders female's mind well nigh incapable of continuing her resistance. State v. Hoffman, 228 Wis. 235, 280 N.W. 357, 359, 361.

Statutes defining crime of extortion and providing punishment therefor must be read together, and "fear," within statute defining term as obtaining of property from another with his consent induced by "fear," must be induced by threats, and hence threat is necessary ingredient of crime. State v. Anderson, 66 N.D. 522, 267 N.W. 121, 124.

FEASANCE. A doing; the doing of an act; a performing or performance. See Malfeasance; Misfeasance; Nonfeasance.

A making; the making of an indenture, release, or obligation. Litt. § 371; Dyer, (Fr. Ed.) 56b. The making of a statute. Keilw. lb.

FEASANT. Doing, or making, as, in the term "damage feasant," (doing damage or injury,) spoken of cattle straying upon another's land.

FEASIBLE. Capable of being done, executed, or affected. Lowe v. Chicago Lumber Co. of Omaha, 135 Neb. 735, 283 N.W. 841, 844.

It also means: capable of being successfully done or accomplished. Gilmartin v. D. & N. Transp. Co., 123 Conn. 127, 193 A. 726, 729, 113 A.L.R. 1322; fit to be dealt with successfully, Hinchman v. City Water Co., 179 Tenn. 545, 167 S.W.2d 986, 990; practically possible or capable of being managed, utilized, or dealt with successfully, In re Washakie Needles Irr. Dist., 52 Wyo. 518, 76 P.2d 617, 621.

A "feasible method of liquidation", as used in section of Bankruptcy Act setting out conditions precedent to confirmation of agricultural extension proposal, means that court must be convinced before confirming proposal that proposal to creditors is one that probably can be carried out by debtor and result in liquidation to secured creditors and rehabilitation for farmer, and that it is to best interests of all creditors. Heldstab v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of United States, C.C.A.Kan., 91 F.2d 655, 659.

The word "feasible", within meaning of rule that a plan of corporate reorganization must be feasible, does not connote absolute insurance of success but only reasonable assurance of success. In re Waern Bldg. Corporation, C.C.A. Ill., 145 F.2d 584, 588.

FEASOR. Doer; maker. Feasors del estatute, makers of the statute. , Dyer, 3b. Also used in the compound term, "tort-feasor," one who commits or is guilty of a tort.

FEASTS. Certain established festivals or holidays in the ecclesiastical calendar. These days were anciently used as the dates of legal instruments, and in England the quarter-days, for paying rent, are four feast-days. The terms of the courts, in England, before 1875, were fixed to begin on certain days determined with reference to the occurrence of four of the chief feasts.

FECIAL LAW. The nearest approach to a system of international law known to the ancient world. It was a branch of Roman jurisprudence, concerned with embassies, declarations of war, and treaties of peace. It received this name from the feciales, (q. v.,) who were charged with its administration.

FECIALES. Among the ancient Romans, that order of priests who discharged the duties of ambassadors. Subsequently their duties appear to have related more particularly to the declaring war and peace. Calvin.; 1 Kent, Comm. 6.

FEDERAL.

American Law. Belonging to the general government or union of the states. Founded on or organized under the constitution or laws of the United States.

The United States has been generally styled, in American political and judicial writings, a "federal government." The term has not been imposed by any specific constitutional authority, but only expresses the general sense and opinion upon the nature of the form of government. In recent years, there is observable a disposition to employ the term "national" in speaking of the government of the Union. Neither word settles anything as to the nature or powers of the government. "Federal" is somewhat more appropriate if the government is considered a union of the states; "national" is preferable if the view is adopted that the state governments and the Union are two distinct systems, each established by the people directly, one for local and the other for national purposes. See United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542, 23 L.Ed. 588; Abbott; Mills, Representative Government 301; Freeman, Fed. Gov't.

Constitutional Law. A term commonly used to express a league or compact between two or more states, to become united under one central government. Montana Auto Finance Corporation v. British & Federal Underwriters of Norwich Union Fire Ins. Soc., 72 Mont. 69, 232 P. 198, 199, 36 A.L.R. 1495.

FEDERAL CENSUS. A census of each state or territory or of a certain state or of any subdivision or portion of any state, provided it is taken by and under the direction and supervision of the Census Bureau of the United States, and approved and certified by it as the census of that state or subdivision. In re Cleveland's Claim, 72 Okl. 279, 180 P. 852, 885.

FEDERAL COMMON LAW is a body of decisional law developed by the federal courts untrammeled by state court decisions. O'Brien v. Western Union Telegraph Co., C.C.A.Mass., 113 F.2d 539, 541.

FEDERAL COURTS. The courts of the United States. See Courts of the United States.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT. The system of government administered in a state formed by the union or confederation of several independent or quasi, independent states; also the composite state so formed.

In strict usage, there is a distinction between a confederation and a federal government. The former term denotes a league or permanent alliance between several states, each of which is fully sovereign and independent, and each of which retains its full dignity, organization, and sovereignty, though yielding to the central authority a controlling power for a few limited purposes, such as external and diplomatic relations. In this case, the component states are the units, with respect to the confederation, and the central government acts upon them, not upon the individual citizens. In a federal government, on the other hand, the allied states form a union,—not, indeed, to such an extent as to destroy their separate organization or deprive them of quasi sovereignty with respect to the administration of their purely local concerns, but so that the central power is erected into a true state or nation, possessing sovereignty both external and internal,—while the administration of national affairs is directed, and its effects felt, not by the separate states deliberating as units, but by the people of all, in their collective capacity, as citizens of the nation. The distinction is expressed, by the German writers, by the use of the two words "Staatenbund" and "Bundesstaat;" the former denoting a league or confederation of states, and the latter a federal government, or state formed by means of a league or confederation.

FEDERAL INSTRUMENTALITY. A means or agency used by the federal government. Capitol Building & Loan Ass'n v. Kansas Commission of Labor and Industry, 148 Kan. 446, 83 P.2d 106, 107, 118 A.L.R. 1212. A government agency immune from state control. Waterbury Sa^{y}. Bank v. Danaher, 128 Conn. 78, 20 A.2d 455, 458.

FEDERAL PROHIBITION OFFICER. An officer of the federal government charged with the enforcement of the national prohibition statute. De Marco v. U. S., C.C.A.Va., 296 F. 667, 668.

FEDERAL QUESTION. Cases arising under Constitution of United States, Acts of Congress, or treaties, and involving their interpretation and application, and of which jurisdiction is given to federal courts, are commonly described as involving a "federal question." McAllister v. St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal Ry. Co., 324 Mo. 1005, 25 S.W.2d 791, 792.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION. An administrative body created by statute, with only the duties and powers granted expressly or by fair implication. Chamber of Commerce of Minneapolis v. Federal Trade Commission, C.C.A.8, 13 F.2d 673, 683. See 15 U.S.C.A. §§ 41-51.

FEDERALIST, THE. A series of 85 essays by Alexander Hamilton, James Ma disc :, and John Jay, expounding and advocating the adoption of the Constitution of the United States. All but six of the essays were first published in the "Independent Journal" of New York City from October, 1787, to April, 1788. Webster, New Int. Dict. "The opinion of the Federalist has always [been] considered as of great authority." Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 418, 5 L.Ed. 257.

FEDERATION. Ordinarily, an unincorporated association of persons for a common purpose. Hughes v. State, 109 Ark. 403, 160 S.W. 209.

FEE. A charge fixed by law for services of public officers or for use of a privilege under control of government. Fort Smith Gas Co. v. Wiseman, 189 Ark. 675, 74 S.W.2d 789, 790. A recompense for an official or professional service or a charge or emolument or compensation for a particular act or service. Craig v. Shelton, 201 Ky. 790, 258 S.W. 694. A fixed charge or perquisite charged as recompense for labor and trouble, a reward, compensation, or wage given to a person for performance of professional services or something done or to be done. People v. Goulding, 275 Mich. 353, 266 N.W. 378, 379.

A contingent fee is a fee stipulated to be paid to an attorney for his services in conducting a suit or other forensic proceeding only in case he wins it; it may be a percentage of the amount recovered. Adopted in Gray v. Stern, 85 Wash. 645, 149 P. 26, 28.

For docket fee, see Docket.

Estates

Ordinarily, word "fee" or "fee simple" is applied to an estate in land, but term is applicable to any kind of hereditament, corporeal or incorporeal, and is all the property in thing referred to or largest estate therein which person may have. In re Forsstrom, 44 Ariz. 472, 38 P.2d 878, 888.

A freehold estate in lands, held of a superior lord, as a reward for services, and on condition of rendering some service in return for it. The true meaning of the word "fee" is the same as that of "feud" or "fief," and in its original sense it is taken in contradistinction to "allodiurn," which latter is defined as a man's own land, which he possesses merely in his own right, without owing any rent or service to any superior. 2 Bl.Comm. 105. See Wendell v. Crandall, 1 N.Y. 491.

In modern English tenures, "fee" signifies an estate of inheritance, being the highest and most extensive interest which a man can have in a feud; and when the term is used simply, without any adjunct, or in the form "fee-simple," it imports an absolute inheritance clear of any condition, limitation, or restriction to particular heirs, but descendible to the heirs general, male or female, lineal or collateral. 2 Bl.Comm. 106; Cowell; Termes de la Ley; 1 Washb.R.P. 51; Co.Litt. 1 b; 1 Prest. Est. 420; 3 Kent 514.

Base fee. A determinable or qualified fee; an estate having the nature of a fee, but not a fee simple absolute. In re Douglass' Estate, 94 Neb. 280, ,143 N. W. 299, 302.

Conditional fee. An estate restrained to some particular heirs, exclusive of others, Blume v. Pearcy, 204 S.C. 409, 29 S.E.2d 673, 674, as to the heirs of a man's body, by which only his lineal descendants were admitted, in exclusion of collateral; or to the heirs male of his body, in exclusion of heirs female, whether lineal or collateral. It was called a "conditional fee," by reason of the condition expressed or implied in the donation of it that, if the donee died without such particular heirs, the land should revert to the donor. 2 Bl.Comm. 110. The term includes a fee that is either to commence or determine on some condition, 10 Co. 950; Prest.Est. 476; Fearne, Cont.Rem. 9; and is sometimes used interchangeably with "base fee," that is, one to determine or be defeated on the happening of some contingent event or act. Citizens' Electric Co. v. Susquehanna Boom Co., 270 Pa. 517, 113 A. 559, 561; Glass v. Johnson, 297 111. 149, 130 N.E. 473, 474.

Determinable fee. Also called a "base" or "qualified" fee. Stubbs v. Abel, 114 Or. 610, 233 P. 852, 859. One which has a qualification subjoined to it, and which must be determined whenever the qualification annexed to it is at an end. Littleton § 254; Co.Litt. 27a, 220; 1 Prest.Est. 449; 2 Bla.Comm. 109; Cruise, Dig. tit. 1, § 82. An estate in fee which is liable to be determined by some act or event expressed on its limitation to circumscribe its continuaAce, or inferred by law as bounding its extent. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 62; McLane v. Bovee, 35 Wis. 36. An estate which may last forever is a "fee," but if it may end on the happening of a merely possible event, it is a "determinable," or "qualified fee." Reichard v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 231 Iowa 563, 1 N.W.2d 721, 727.

Determinable fee or fee simple. Estate created with special limitation which delimits duration of estate in land. P C K Properties, Inc., v. City of Cuyahoga Falls, 176 N.E.2d 441, 444, 112 Ohio App. 492.

Fee damages. See Damages.

Fee expectant. A name sometimes applied to an estate created where lands are given to a man and his wife and the heirs of their bodies. See also Frank-Marriage.

Fee simple defeasible. Title created in trustees where legal title in fee simple to active trust estate is by will placed in trustees who are required to distribute property in fee simple upon happening of event. Also called a "determinable fee", "base fee", or "qualified fee". Kanawha Val. Bank v. Hornbeck, W.Va., 151 S.E.2d 694, 700.

Great fee. In feudal law, the designation of a fee held directly from the crown.

Knight's fee. See Knight's Fee,

Limited fee. An estate of inheritance in lands, which is clogged or confined with some sort of condition or qualification. Such estates are base or qualified fees, conditional fees, and fees-tail. The term is opposed to "fee-simple." 2 Bl.Comm. 109; Lott v. Wyckoff, 1 Barb., N.Y., 575; Paterson v. Ellis, 11 Wend., N.Y., 259.

Plowman's fee. In old English law, was a species of tenure peculiar to peasants or small farmers, somewhat like gavelkind, by which the lands descended in equal shares to all the sons of the tenant.

Qualified fee. In English law. A fee having a qualification subjoined thereto, and which must be determined whenever the qualification annexed to it is at an end; otherwise termed a "base fee." 2 Bl.Comm. 109; 1 Steph. Comm. 225. An interest which may continue forever, but is liable to be determined, without the aid of a conveyance, by some act or event, circumscribing its continuance or extent. 4 Kent, Comm. 9; Moody v. Walker, 3 Ark. 190; U. S. v. Reese, 27 Fed.Cas. 744. An interest given to a man and certain of his heirs at the time of its limitation. • See Kelso v. Stigar, 75 Md. 397, 24 A. 18.

Quasi fee. An estate gained by wrong. Wharton.

Also, the land which is held in fee.

American Law

An estate of inheritance without condition, belonging to the owner, and alienable by him or transmissible to his heirs absolutely and simply, and is an absolute estate in perpetuity and the largest possible estate a man can have, being, in fact, allodial in its nature. Stanton v. Sullivan, 63 R.I. 216, 7 A.2d 696, 698, 699.

Every estate which is not for life, for years or at will. Chance v. Weston, 96 Or. 390, 190 P. 155, 157.

Terms "fee," "fee simple," and "fee simple absolute," are equivalent. Boon v. Boon, 348 Ill. 120, 180 N.E. 792, 794.

FEE AND LIFE-RENT. In Scotch law, two estates in land—the first of which is the full right of proprietorship, the second the limited right of usufruct during life—may be held together, or may co-exist in different persons at the same time. See Bell, Prin. § 1712; Ersk. Prin. 420; Fiar.

FEE-FARM. A species of tenure, where land is held of another in perpetuity at a yearly rent, without fealty, homage, or other services than such as are specially comprised in the feoffment. It corresponds very nearly to the "emphyteusis" of the Roman law. Cowell. Fealty, however, was incident to a holding in fee-farm, according to some authors. Spelman; Termes de la Ley.

Fee-farm is where an estate in fee is granted subject to a rent in fee of at least one-fourth of the value of the lands at the time of its reservation. Such rent appears to be called "fee-farm" because a grant of lands reserving so considerable a rent is indeed only letting lands to farm in fee-simple, instead of the usual method of life or years. 2 Bl. Comm. 43; 1 Steph.Comm. 676.

Fee-farms are lands held in fee to render for them annually the true value, or more or less; so called because a farm rent is reserved upon a grant in fee. Such estates are estates of inheritance. They are classed among estates in fee-simple. No reversionary interest remains in the lessor, and they are therefore subject to the operation of the legal principles which forbid restraints upon alienation in all cases where no feudal relation exists between grantor and grantee. De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 497, 57 Am.Dec. 470.

FEE-FARM RENT. The rent reserved on granting a fee-farm. It might be one-fourth the value of the land, according to Cowell; one-third, according to other authors. Spelman; Termes de la Ley; 2 Bl. Comm. 43. Fee-farm rent is a rent-charge issuing out of an estate in fee; a perpetual rent reserved on a conveyance in fee-simple. De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467, 495, 57 Am.Dec. 470.

FEE SIMPLE.

Absolute

A fee simple absolute is an estate limited absolutely to a man and his heirs and assigns forever without limitation or condition. Rathbun v. State, 284 Mich. 521, 280 N.W. 35, 40.

Conditional

At the common law, an estate in fee simple conditional was a fee limited or restrained to some particular heirs, exclusive of others. But the statute "De Donis" converted all such estates into estates tail. 2 Bl. Comm. 110.

American Law

An absolute or fee-simple estate is one in which the owner is entitled to the entire property, with unconditional power of disposition during his life, and descending to his heirs and legal representatives upon his death intestate. Code Ga. 1882, § 2246 (Civ.Code 1910, § 3657). Friedman v. Steiner, 107 Ill. 131; Woodberry v. Matherson, 19 Fla. 785; Lyle v. Richards, 9 Serg. & R., Pa. 374. Unlimited as to duration, disposition, and descendibility. Slayden v. Hardin, 257 Ky. 685, 79 S.W. 2d 11, 12.

The estate which a man has where lands are given to him and to his heirs absolutely without any end or limit put to his estate. 2 Bl. Comm. 106; Plowd. 557; 1 Prest. Est. 425; Litt. § 1. The word "fee," used alone, is a sufficient designation of this species of estate, and hence "simple" is not a necessary part of the title, but it is added as a means of clearly distinguishing this estate from a fee-tail or from any variety of conditional estates.

Fee-simple signifies a pure fee; an absolute estate of inheritance clear of any condition or restriction to particular heirs, being descendible to the heirs general, whether male or female, lineal or collateral. It is the largest estate and most extensive interest that can be enjoyed in land. Haynes v. Bourn, 42 Vt. 686; Powers v. Trustees of Caledonia County Grammar School, 93 Vt. 220, 106 A. 836, 841; Smith v. Smith's Ex'r, 122 Va. 341, 94 S.E. 777, 779. When a person owns in common with another, he does not own the entire fee,—a fee-simple; it is a fee divided or shared with another. Brackett v. Ridlon, 54 Me. 426.

Terms "fee," "fee simple," and "fee simple absolute," are equivalent. Boon v. Boon, 348 Ill. 120, 180 N.E. 792, 794.

English Law

A freehold estate of inheritance, absolute and unqualified. It stands at the head of estates as the highest in dignity and the most ample in extent; since every other kind of estate is derivable thereout, and mergeable therein. It may be enjoyed not only in land, but also in advowsons, commons, estovers, and other hereditaments, as well as in personalty, as an annuity or dignity, and also in an upper chamber, though the lower buildings and soil belong to another. Wharton; Co.Litt. 1 b; 2 Bla. Comm. 106.

FEE TAIL. A freehold estate in which there is a fixed line of inheritable succession limited to the issue of the body of the grantee or devisee, and in which the regular and general succession of heirs at law is cut off. Coleman v. Shoemaker, 147 Kan. 689, 78 P.2d 905, 907.

An estate tail; an estate of inheritance given to a man and the heirs of his body, or limited to certain classes of particular heirs. It corresponds to the feudum talliatum of the feudal law, and the idea is believed to have been borrowed from the Roman law, where, by way of fldei commissa, lands might be entailed upon children and freedmen and their descendants, with restrictions as to alienation. 1 Washb.Real Prop. *66. For the varieties azad special characteristics of this kind of estate, see Tail, Estate in.

FEED. To lend additional support; to strengthen ex post facto. "The interest when it accrues feeds the estoppel." Christmas v. Oliver, 5 Mood. & R. 202. Similarly, a subsequent title acquired by the mortgagor is said "to feed the mortgage."

The word is used in its ordinary sense with reference to cattle and hogs which are said to be made marketable by feeding. Brockway v. Rowley, 66 Ill. 102.

It is also used in the phrase feeding of a cow by and on the land to signify from the land while there is food on it, and with hay by the owner of the land at other times; 2 Q. B. Div. 49.

FEGANGI. In old English law, a thief caught while escaping with the stolen goods in his possession. Spelman.

FEHMGERICHTE. The name given to certain secret tribunals which flourished in Germany from the end of the twelfth century to the middle of the sixteenth, usurping many of the functions of the governments which were too weak to maintain law and order, and inspiring dread in all who came within their jurisdiction. Enc. Brit. Such a court existed in Westphalia (though with greatly diminished powers) until finally suppressed by Jerome Bonaparte in 1811. See Bork, Geschichte der Westphaelischen Vehmgerichte; Paul Wigand, Das Fehmgericht Westphaleus.

FEIGNED. Fictitious; pretended; supposititious; simulated.

FEIGNED ACCOMPLICE. One who pretends to consult and act with others in the planning_Dr commission of a crime, but only for the purpose of di$covering their plans and confederates and securing evidence against them. State v. Ver--ganadis, 50 Nev. 1, 248 P. 900, 903; People v. Bolanger, 71 Cal. 17, 11 P. 800.

FEIGNED ACTION. In- practice, an action brought on a pretended right, when the plaintiff has no true cause of action, for some illegal purpose. In a feigned action the words of the writ are true. It differs from false action, in which case the words of the writ are false. Co. Litt. 361.

FEIGNED DISEASES. Simulated maladies. Diseases are generally feigned from one of three causes,—fear, shame, or the hope of gain.

FEIGNED ISSUE. An issue framed to try questions of fact. Miles v. Layton, 8 W.W.Harr. 411, 193 A. 567, 574, 112 A.L.R. 786.

An issue made up by the direction of a court of equity, (or by consent of parties,) and sent to a common-law court, for the purpose of obtaining the verdict of a jury on some disputed matter of fact which the court has not jurisdiction, or is unwilling, to decide. It rests upon a supposititious wager between the parties. See 3 Bl.Comm. 452. Under the reformed codes of some states issues may be framed in certain exceptional cases. In England, the practice has been disused since the passing of the stat. 8 and 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 19, permitting any court to refer any question of fact to a jury in a direct form. The act 21 and 22 Vict. c. 27, provided for trial by jury in the court of chancery.

FELAGUS. In Saxon law, one bound for another by oath; a sworn brother. A friend bound in the decennary for the good behavior of another. One who took the place of the deceased. Thus, if a person was murdered, the recompense due from the murderer went to the felagus of the slain, in default of parents or lord. Cunningham; Cowell; Du Cange.

FELD. A field; in composition, wild. Blount.

FELE, FEAL. L. Fr. Faithful. See Feal.

FELLATIO, or FELLATION. The offense committed with the male sexual organ and the mouth. State v. Murry, 136 La. 253, 66 So. 963. See Sodomy.

FELLOW. A co-worker; a partaker or sharer of; a companion; one with whom we consort; one joined with another in some legal status or relation; a member of a college or corporate body.

FELLOW-HEIR. A co-heir; partner of the same inheritance.

FELLOW SERVANT. One who serves and is controlled by the same master. Walsh v. Eubanks, 183 Ark. 34, 34 S.W.2d 762, 764.

Those engaged in the same common pursuit, under the same general control. Cooley, Torts 541. Those who derive authority and compensation from the same common source, and are engaged in the same general business, though it may be in different grades or departments of it. 2 Thomp. Neg. p. 1026, § 31; Southern Ry. Co. v. Taylor, 57 App.D.C. 21, 16 F.2d 517, 519; Brush Electric Light Co. v. Wells, 110 Ga. 192, 35 S.E. 365. When servants are employed and paid by the same master, and their duties are such as to bring them into such relation that negligence of one in doing his work may injure other in performance of his, then they are engaged in the same common business, and are "fellow servants." Hercules Powder Co. v. Hammack, 145 Miss. 304, 110 So. 676, 677. But it has been held that an inferior employee is not a "fellow servant" of a superior employee. McDonald v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 232 Ky. 734, 24 S.W.2d 585, 587.

Convicts in involuntary servitude, having no power to refuse to enter upon the service to which they have been hired out by the state, or to quit it, are not "fellow servants." Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co. v. Weir, 179 Ala. 227, 60 So. 851, 853.

FELLOW-SERVANT RULE. The rule that the master is not liable for injuries to a servant, caused by the negligence of a fellow servant engaged in the same general business, where the master has exercised due care in selection of servants. Setzkorn v. City of Buffalo, 219 App.Div. 416, 219 N.Y.S. 351, 352.

FELO DE SE. A felon of himself; a suicide ar murderer of himself.

Where a man of the age of discretion (14 years at common law) and compos mentis voluntarily kills himself. Southern Life & Health Ins. Co. v. Wynn, 29 Ala.App. 207, 194 So. 421, 422. One who commits some unlawful or malicious act which results in his own death. Hale, P.C. 411; 4 Bl.Comm. 189; Life Ass'n v. Waller, 57 Ga. 536.

FELON. A person who commits a felony. In re La Grange, 153 Misc. 236, 274 N.Y.S. 702. One convicted of felony.

But a person who has committed a felony, been convicted, served his sentence, and been discharged, may be deemed, at least for some purposes, to be no longer a felon; 3 Exch. Div. 352.

FELONIA. Felony. The act or offense by which a vassal forfeited his fee. Spelman; Calvin. Per feloniam, with a criminal intention. Co. Litt. 391.

FELONIA, EX VI TERMINI SIGNIFICAT QUODLIBET CAPITALE CRIMEN FELLEO ANIMO PERPETRATUM. Co. Litt. 391. Felony, by force of the term, signifies any capital crime perpetrated with a malignant mind.

FELONIA IMPLICATUR IN QUALIBET PRODITIONE. 3 Inst. 15. Felony is implied in every treason.

FELONICE. Feloniously. Cunningham, Law Dict.

Anciently an indispensable word in indictments for felony, and classed by Lord Coke among those voces artis (words of art) which cannot be expressed by any periphrasis or circumlocution. 4 Coke, 39; Co.Litt. 391a; 4 Bl.Comm. 307.

FELONIOUS. A technical word of law which means done with intent to commit crime; of the grade or quality of a felony; such an assault on the person as, if consummated, would subject party making it, on conviction, to punishment of a felony. Martin v. State, 163 Miss. 454, 142 So. 15, 16. Malicious; villainous; traitorous. People v. Knapp, 152 Misc. 368, 274 N.Y.S. 85. Malignant. People v. Moore, 37 Hun, N.Y., 93. Wrongful. State v. Uhler, 32 N.D. 483, 156 N.W. 220, 226. Proceeding from an evil heart or purpose. Gatewood v. Commonwealth, 215 Ky. 360, 285 S.W. 193, 194. Wickedly and against the admonition of the law; unlawfully. State v. Allister, 317 Mo.

348, 295 S.W. 754, 757. In the law of larceny, "felonious" is synonymous with fraudulent; State v. Albert, 117 Or. 179, 242 P. 1116, 1117; and means done "animo furandi," that is, with intent to steal. Fountain v. State, 92 Fla. 262, 109 So. 463, 464.

FELONIOUS ASSAULT. Such an assault upon the person as, if consummated, would subject the party making it, upon conviction, to the punishment of a felony, that is, to imprisonment in the penitentiary. Hinkle v. State, 94 Ga. 595, 21 S.E. 595.

FELONIOUS HOMICIDE. Killing of human being without justification or excuse. State v. Plumlee, 171 La. 687, 149 So. 425, 431. There are two degrees: manslaughter and murder. It may include killing oneself. 4 Bl. Comm. 188, 190; 4 Steph. Comm. 108, 111; State v. Symmes, 40 S.C. 383, 19 S.E. 16.

FELONIOUSLY. Of, pertaining to, or having, the quality of felony. People v. Thomas, 58 Cal. App. 308, 208 P. 343, 344.

Means proceeding from an evil heart or purpose done with a deliberate intention of committing a crime. Golden v. Commonwealth, 245 Ky. 19, 53 S.W.2d 185, 186. Without color of right or excuse. State v. Enanno, 96 Conn. 420, 114 A. 386, 387. Malignantly; maliciously. State v. Horne, 62 Utah, 376, 220 P. 378, 381. Wickedly and against the admonition of the law. State v. Young, 314 Mo. 612, 286 S.W. 29, 34. With a felonious intent.

An indispensable word at common law in indictments for felony, as felonice was in the Latin forms. 4 Bl.Comm. 307; State v. Jesse, 19 N.C. 300; Com.Dig. Indictment (G 6) ; Bac.Abr. Indictment (G 1) ; 2 Hale, Pl.Cr. 172, 184; 1 Ben. & H. Lead. Cr.Cas. 154. It is still necessary in describing a common-law felony, or where its use is prescribed by statute; Whart.Cr.P1. § 260; Bowler v. State, 41 Miss. 570; Cain v. State, 18 Tex. 387.

FELONY. A crime of a graver or more atrocious nature than those designated as misdemeanors. Ex parte Ramirez, 49 Cal.App.2d 709, 122 P. 2d 361, 362. Generally an offense punishable by death or imprisonment in penitentiary. People v. Pointer, 348 Ill. 277, 180 N.E. 796, 797, or state prison. State v. Harwood, 206 N.C. 87, 173 S.E. 24, 25. And at common law, an offense occasioning total forfeiture of either land or goods to which capital or other punishment might be superadded according to degree of guilt. Bell v. Commonwealth, 167 Va. 526, 189 S.E. 441, 443.

Felony, compounding of. See Compounding Felony.

Misprision of felony. See Misprision.

Reducible felony. A felony upon conviction of which the offender may be punished as for a misdemeanor, upon recommendation of the jury. Atkins v. State, 154 Ga. 540, 114 S.E. 878.

American Law

The term has no very, definite or precise meaning, except in some cases where it is defined by statute. In general, what is felony under the English common law is such under ours, 1 Bish.Cr.L. § 617; Clark, Cr.L. 33. A crime is not a felony unless so declared by statute, or it was such at the common law; State v. Murphy, 17 R.I. 698, 24 A.. 473, 16 L.R.A. 550.

Whether an offense is a "felony" depends on whether the offense may be punished by confinement in the penitentiary and not on whether such punishment of necessity follows conviction of that offense. Lashley v. State, 236 Ala. 1. 1.80 So. 717, 718, 719. Sentence actually given determines nature of offense. People v. Brown, 52 Cal.App.2d 428, 126 P.2d 406, 408.

Under U. S. Cr. Code, § 335, 18 U.S.C.A. § 1, offenses punishable by death or imprisonment for a term exceeding one year are felonies. Joplin Mercantile Co. v. United States, C.C.A.Mo., 213 F. 926, 935, Ann.Cas.1916C, 470.

This term meant originally the state of having forfeited lands and goods to the crown upon conviction for certain offenses, and then, by transition, any offense upon conviction for which such forfeiture followed, in addition to capital or any other punishment prescribed by law; as distinguished from a "misdemeanor," upon conviction for which no forfeiture followed. All indictable offenses are either felonies or misdemeanors, but a material part of the distinction is taken away by St. 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, which abolishes forfeiture for felony. Wharton; 4 B1&Comm. 94; 1 Russ.Cr. 78; Co.Litt. 391; 1 Hawk Pl.Cr. c. 37; U. S. v. Smith, 5 Wheat., U. S., 153, 5 L.Ed. 57; 1 Bish. New Cr.L. § 616.

At early common law the term was applied to describe the more serious offenses cognizable in the royal courts, conviction for which entailed forfeiture of life, limb and chattels and escheat of lands to the felon's lord after a year and a day in the king's hands. Subsequently, however, the classification was so greatly enlarged that many offenses not involving moral turpitude were included therein. In re Donegan, 282 N.Y. 285, 26 N.E.2d 260, 261.

Feudal Law

An act or offense on the part of the vassal, which cost him his fee, or in consequence of which his fee fell into the hands of his lord; that is, became forfeited.' (See Felonia.) Perfidy, ingratitude, or disloyalty to a lord.

FELONY ACT. The statute 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, abolishing forfeitures for felony, and sanctioning the appointment of interim curators and administrators of the property of felons. Mozley & Whiteley; 4 Steph. Comm. 10, 459.

FELONY-MURDER RULE. Any homicide committed while perpetrating or attempting felony is first-degree murder. Payne v. State, 406 P.2d 922, 924, 81 Nev. 503; Element of legal malice is supplied from the commission of the felony. Corn. v. Cater, 152 A.2d 259, 261, 396 Pa. 172.

FELTING. In the process of "felting," as applied to the manufacture of fur felt hats, the fur fibers become interlocked with the wool fibers, or with other fibers of fur, for their whole length. Matteawan Mfg. Co. v. Emmons Bros. Co., C.C.A. Mass., 253 F. 372, 375. See, also, Werk v. Parker, C.C.A.Pa., 231 F. 121, 123.

FEMALE. The sex which conceives and gives birth to young. Also a member of such sex. The term is generic, but may have the specific meaning of "woman," if so indicated by the context. State v. Hemm, 82 Iowa, 609, 48 N.W. 971; State v. Phillips, 26 N.D. 206, 144 N.W. 94, 95, 49 L.R.A., N.S., 470, Ann.Cas.1916A, 320.

Unmarried female, is a term descriptive not only of those who have never married, but also of widows and divorced women. People v. Weinstock, 27 N.Y.Cr.R. 53, 140 N.Y.S. 453, 458.

FEME, FEMME. L. Fr. A woman. Ducre v. Milner, La.App., 146 So. 734, 736. Also, a wife, as in the phrase "baron et feme" (q. v.).

FEME COVERT. A married woman. Generally used in reference to the legal disabilities of a married woman, as compared with the condition of a feme sole. Hoker v. Boggs, 63 I11.161.

FEME SOLE. A single woman, including those who have been married, but whose marriage has been dissolved by death or divorce, and, for most purposes, those women who are judicially separated from their husbands. Mozley & Whiteley; 2 Steph. Comm. 250. Kirkley v. Lacey, 7 Houst. Del. 213, 30 A. 994.

FEME SOLE TRADER. In English law, a married woman, who, by the custom of London, trades on her own account, independently of her husband; so called because, with respect to her trading, she is the same as a feme sole. Jacob; Cro. Car. 68. The term is applied also to women deserted by their husbands, who do business as femes sole. Rhea v. Rhenner, 1 Pet. 105, 7 L.Ed. 72.

The custom was recognized as common law in South Carolina, but did not extend beyond trading in merchandise; McDaniel v. Cornwell, 1 Hill, S.C., 429; Newbiggin v. Pillans, 2 Bay, S.C., 164. By statute in several states a similar custom is recognized, as in Pennsylvania, by act of Feb. 22, 1718, 48 P.S. § 41. Black v. Tricker, 59 Pa. 13; People's Sa^{y}. Bank v. Denig, 131 Pa. 241, 18 A. 1083.

FEMICIDE. The killing of a woman. Wharton. One who kills a woman.

FEMININE. Of or belonging to females.

FEMME COULEUR LIBRE. Up to the time of Civil War, term applied to all persons not of the white race, including Indians. Sunseri v. Cassagne, 191 La. 209, 185 So. 1, 4.

FENATIO (or FEONATIC). In forest law, the fawning of deer; the fawning season. Spelman.

FENCE, v. In old Scotch law, to defend or protect by formalities.

To "fence a court" was to open it in due form, and interdict all manner of persons from disturbing their proceedings. This was called "fencing," q. d., defending or protecting the court. Pitcairn, Cr.Law, pt. 1, p. 75.

FENCE, n. A hedge, structure, or partition, erected for the purpose of inclosing a piece of land, or to divide a piece of land into distinct portions, or to separate two contiguous estates. Kimball v. Carter, 95 Va. 77, 27 S.E. 823, 38 L.R.A. 570; Estes v. Railroad Co., 63 Me. 309.

An enclosure about a field or other space, or about any object; especially an enclosing structure of wood, iron or other materials, intended to prevent intrusion from without or straying from within. Mutual Lumber Co. v. Sheppard, Tex.Civ.App., 173 S.W.2d 494, 499.

A colloquial characterization of a receiver of stolen property. People v. Fishel, 270 Mich. 82, 258 N.W. 217.

FENCE COUNTY. A county where the stock law has not been adopted. McKenzie v. Powell, 68 Ga.App. 285, 22 S:E.2d 735, 736.

FENCE-MONTH, or DEFENSE-MONTH. In old English law, a period of time, occurring in the middle of summer, during which it was unlawful to hunt deer in the forest, that being their fawning season. Probably so called because the deer were then defended from pursuit or hunting. Manwood; Cowell; Spelman.

FENCING PATENTS. Patents procured in an effort to broaden the scope of the invention beyond the article or process which is actually intended to be manufactured or licensed. Special Equipment Co. v. Coe, 79 U.S.App.D.C. 133, 144 F. 2d 497, 499.

FENDER. A guard or protection against danger. Cape May, D. B. & S. P. R. Co. v. Cape May, 59 N.J.L. 396, 36 A. 696, 36 L.R.A. 653. A safety device sometimes called life guard, on street cars. Tampa Electric Co. v. Bazemore, 85 Fla. 164, 96 So. 297, 298; Galveston Electric Co. v. Swank, Tex.Civ.App., 188 S.W. 704, 706.

FENERATION. Usury; the gain of interest; the practice of increasing money by lending. Sometimes applied to interest on money lent. See Colebrook, Dig. Hindu Law, I. 7.

FENGELD. In Saxon law, a tax or imposition, exacted for the repelling of enemies. Spelman.

FENIAN. A champion, hero, giant. This word, in the plural, is generally used to signify invaders or foreign spoilers. The modern meaning of "Fenian" is a member of an organization of persons of Irish birth, resident in the United States, Canada, and elsewhere, having for its aim the overthrow of English rule in Ireland. Webster.

FEOD. The same as feud or fief. 2 Bla. Comm. 45; Spelman.

FEODAL. Belonging to a fee or feud; feudal. More commonly used by the old writers than feudal.

FEODAL ACTIONS. Real actions. 3 Bla. Comm. 117.

FEODAL SYSTEM. See Feudal System.

FEODALITY. Fidelity or fealty. Cowell. See Fealty.

FEODARUM (or FEUDARAM) CONSUETUDINES. The customs of feuds. The name of a compilation of feudal laws and customs made at Milan in the twelfth century. It is the most ancient work on the subject, and was always regarded, on the continent of Europe, as possessing the highest authority.

FEODARY. An officer of the court of wards, appointed by the master of that court, under 32 Hen. VIII. c. 26, whose business it was to be present with the escheator in every county at the finding of offices of lands, and to give evidence for the king, as well concerning the value as the tenure; and his office was also to survey the land of the ward, after the office found, and to rate it.

He also assigned the king's widows their dower; and received all the rents, etc. Abolished by 12 Car. II. c. 24. Wharton; Kennett, Gloss.; Cowell.

FEODATORY, or FEUDATORY. In feudal law, the grantee of a feod, feud, or fee; the vassal or tenant who held his estate by feudal service. Termes de la Ley. Blackstone uses "feudatory!' 2 B1. Comm. 46.

FEODI FIRMA. In old English law, fee-farm (q. v.).

FEODI FIRMARIUS. The lessee of a fee-farm.

FEODUM. This word (meaning a feud or fee) is the one most commonly used by the older English law-writers, though its equivalent, "feudum" (q. v.), is used generally by the more modern writers and by the feudal law-writers. Litt. § 1; Spelman.

There were various classes of feoda, among which may be enumerated the following: Feodum laicum, a lay fee. Feodum militare, a knight's fee.. Feodum improprium, an improper or derivative fee. Feodum proprium, a proper and original fee, regulated by the strict rules of feudal succession and tenure. Feodum simplex, a simple or pure fee; fee-simple. Feodum talliatum, a fee-tail. See 2 BI.Comm. 58, 62; Litt §§ 1, 13; Bract. fol. 175; Glan. 13, 23.

In old English law, a seigniory or jurisdiction. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 63, § 4. A fee, a perquisite or compensation for a service. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 7.

FEODUM ANTIQUUM. A feud which devolved upon a vassal from his intestate ancestor.

FEODUM EST QUOD QUIS TENET EX QUACUNQUE CAUSA SIVE SIT TENEMENTUM SIVE REDDITUS. Co. Litt. 1. A fee is that which any one holds from whatever cause, whether tenement or rent.

FEODUM NOBILE. A fief for which the tenant did guard and owed homage. Spelman.

FEODUM NOVUM. A feud acquired by a vassal himself.

FEODUM SIMPLEX QUIA FEODUM IDEM EST QUOD ILEREDITAS, ET SIMPLEX IDEM EST QUOD LEGITIMUM VEL PURUM; ET SIC FEODUM SIMPLEX IDEM EST QUOD HAZEREDITAS LEGITIMA VEL H1EREDITAS PURA. Litt. § 1. A fee-simple, so called because fee is the same as inheritance, and simple is the same as lawful or pure; and thus fee-simple is the same as a lawful inheritance, or pure inheritance.

FEODUM TALLIATUM, I. e., HIEREDITAS IN QUANDAM CERTITUDINEM LIMITATA. Litt. § 13. Fee-tail, e., an inheritance limited in a definite descent.

FEOFFAMENTUM. A feoffment. 2 Bl. Comm. 310.

FEOFFARE. To enfeoff; to bestow a fee. The bestower was called "feoffator," and the grantee or feoffee, "feoffatus." 1 Reeve, Hist. Eng. Law, 91.

FEOFFATOR. In old English law, a feoffer or feoffor; one who gives or bestows a fee; one who makes a feoffment. Bract. fols. 12b, 81.

FEOFFATUS. In old English law, a feoffee; one to whom a fee is given, or a feoffment made. Bract. fols. 17b, 44b.

FEOFFEE. He to whom a fee is conveyed. Litt. § 1; 2 Bl. Comm. 20.

FEOFFEE TO USES. A person to whom land was conveyed for the use of a third party. (The latter was called "cestui que use.") One holding the same position with reference to a use that a trustee does to a trust. 1 Greenl. Cruise, Dig. 333. He answers to the hares fiduciarius of the Roman law.

FEOFFMENT. The gift of any corporeal hereditament to another (2 Bl. Comm. 310), operating by transmutation of possession, and requiring, as essential to its completion, that the seisin be passed (Watk. Con[y]. 183), which might be accomplished either by investiture or by livery of seisin. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 33. Thatcher v. Omans, 3 Pick., Mass., 532; French v. French, 3 N.H. 260. A gift of a freehold interest in land accompanied by livery of seisin. The essential part is the livery of seisin, 3 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 187.

Also the deed or conveyance by which such corporeal hereditament is passed.

A feoffment originally meant the grant of a feud or fee; that Is, a barony or knight's fee, for which certain services were due from the feoffee to the feoffor. By custom it came afterwards to signify also a grant (with livery of seisin) of a free inheritance to a man and his heirs, referring rather to the perpetuity of the estate than to the feudal tenure. 1 Reeve, Eng.Law, 90, 91. It was for ages the only method (in ordinary use) for conveying the freehold of land in possession, but has now fallen in great measure into disuse, even in England, having been almost entirely supplanted by some of that class of conveyances founded on the statute law of the realm. 1 Steph.Comm. 467, 468; Dane, Abr. c. 104; Stearn, Real Act. 2; Green v. Liter, 8 Cranch, U.S., 229, 3 L. Ed. 545.

FEOFFMENT TO USES. A feoffment of lands to one person to the use of another.

In such case the feoffee was bound in conscience to hold the lands according to the use, and could himself derive no benefit. Sometimes such feoffments were made to the use of the feoffer. The effect of such conveyance was entirely changed by the statute of uses. See Wms.R.P., 6th Ed., 155; 2 Sand.Us. 13; Watk.Conv. 288.

FEOFFOR. The person making a feoffment, or enfeoffing another in fee. 2 Bl. Comm. 310; Litt. §§ 1, 57.

FEOH. This Saxon word meant originally cattle, and thence property or money, and, by a second transition, wages, reward, or fee. It was probably the original form from which the words "feod," "feudum," "fief," "feu," and "fee" (all meaning a feudal grant of land) have been derived. Spelman, Feuds.

FEONATIO, In forest law, the fawning season of deer.

FEORME. A certain portion of the produce of the land due by the grantee to the lord according to the terms of the charter. Spel. Feuds, c. 7.

FERZE BESTIIE. Wild beasts.

FERIE NATURIE, Lat. Of a wild nature or disposition.

Animals which are by nature wild are so designated, by way of distinction from such as are naturally tame, the latter being called "dotnitce natu,rce." Fleet v. Hegeman, 14 Wend., N.Y., 43; State v. Taylor, 27 N.J.L. 119, 72 Am. Dec. 347; Gillet v. Mason, 7 Johns., N.Y., 17.

FERCOSTA. Ital. A kind of small vessel or boat. Mentioned in old Scotch law, and called "fercost." Skene.

F'ERDFARE. Sax. A summons to serve in the army. An acquittance from going into the army. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 47, § 23.

FERDINGUS. A term denoting, apparently, a freeman of the lowest class, being named after the cotsetti. Anc. Inst. Eng.

FERDWITE. In Saxon law, an acquittance of manslaughter committed in the army; also a fine imposed on persons for not going forth on a military expedition. Cowell.

FERIA. In old English law, a weekday; a holiday; a day on which process could not be served;. a fair; a ferry. Cowell; Du Cange; Spelman; 4 Reeve, Hist. Eng. Law 17.

FERLIE. In Roman law, holidays; generally speaking, days or seasons during which free-born Romans suspended their political transactions and their lawsuits, and during which slaves enjoyed a cessation from labor.

All ferice were thus dies nefasti. All fence were divided into two classes,—"ferice publicce" and "ferice privatce." The latter were only observed by single families or individuals, in commemoration of some particular event which had been of importance to them or their ancestors. Smith, Diet. Anti q.

Numerous festivals were called by this name in the early Roman empire. In the later Roman empire the single days occurring at intervals of a week apart, commencing with the seventh day of the ecclesiastical year, were so called. Du Cange.

FERIAL DAYS. Originally and properly, days free from labor and pleading; holidays. In statute 27 Hen. VI. c. 5, working-days; weekdays, as distinguished from Sunday. Cowell.

FERITA. In old European law, a wound; a stroke. Spelman.

FERLING. In old records, the fourth part of a penny; also the quarter of a ward in a borough.

FERLINGATA. A fourth part of a yard-land.

FERLINGUS, or FERLINGUM. A furlong. Co. Litt. 5 b.

FERM, or FEARM. A house or land, or both, let by lease. Cowell.

FERME. A farm; a rent; a lease; a house or land, or both, taken by indenture or lease. Plowd. 195; Vicat; Cowell. See Farm.

FERMENTATION. A decomposition produced in an organic substance by the physiological action of a living organism, or by certain unorganized agents. U. S. v. Dodson, D.C.Cal., 268 F. 397, 403.

FERMENTED LIQUORS. Beverages produced by, or which have undergone, a process of alcoholic fermentation, to which they owe their intoxicating properties, including beer, wine, hard cider, and the like, but not spirituous or distilled liquors. State v. Lemp, 16 Mo. 391; State v. Biddle, 54 N. H. 383; People v. Foster, 64 Mich. 715, 31 N.W. 596; Hill v. State, 174 Md. 137, 197 A. 795, 799.

FERMER, FERMOR. A lessee; a farmer. One who holds a term, whether of lands or an incorporeal right, such as customs or revenue.

FERMIER. In French law, one who farms any public revenue.

FERMISONA. In old English law, the winter season for killing deer.

FERMORY. In old records, a place in monasteries, where they received the poor, (hospicio excipiebant,) and gave them provisions (ferm, firma.) Spelman. Hence the modern infirmary, used in the sense of a hospital.

FERNIGO. In old English law, a waste ground, or place where fern grows. Cowell.

FERRATOR. A farrier (q. v.).

FERRI. In the civil law, to be borne; that is on or about the person. This was distinguished from portari, (to be carried,) which signified to be carried on an animal. Dig. 50, 16, 235.

FERRIAGE. The toll or fare paid for the transportation of persons and property across a ferry.

Literally speaking, it is the price or fare fixed by law for the transportation of the traveling public, with such goods and chattels as they may have with them, across a river, bay, or lake. People v. San Francisco & A. R. Co., 35 Cal. 606.

FERRIFODINA. In old pleading, an iron mine. Townsh.Pl. 273.

FERRUERE, or FERRURA. The shoeing of horses. Kelham. See Ferrum.

FERRUM. Iron. In old English law, a horseshoe. Ferrura, shoeing of horses.

FERRY. A place of transit across a river or arm of the sea. Woolr.Ways 217. In law it is treated as a franchise, and defined as the exclusive right to carry passengers across a river, or arm of the sea, from one vill to another, or to connect a continuous line of road leading from township or vill to another. Canadian Pac. Ry. Co. v. U..S., C.C.A. Wash., 73 F.2d 831, 832.

A continuation of the highway from one side of the water over which it passes to the other, for transportation of passengers or of travelers with their teams and vehicles and such other property as they may carry or have with them. U. S. v. Puget Sound Na^{y}. Co., D.C.Wash., 24 F.Supp. 431, 432.

A liberty to have a boat on a stream, river, arm of the sea, lake, or other body of water for the transportation of men, horses, and vehicles with their contents, for a reasonable toll. Sometimes limited to the landing place. State Highway Commission v. Smith, 250 Ky. 269, 62 S.W.2d 1044.

It may be said to be necessary service by specially constructed boat to carry passengers and property across rivers or bodies of water from place on one shore to point conveniently opposite on other shore and continuation of highway making connection with thoroughfare at each terminus. U. S. v. Canadian Pac. Ry. Co., D.C.Wash., 4 F.Supp. 851, 853. It comprises not merely the exclusive privilege of transportation, but also the use for that purpose of the respective landings, with the outlets therefrom. Hale v. Record, 74 Old. 77, 176 P. 756, 757.

A public ferry is one to which all the public have the right to resort, for which a regular fare is established, and the ferryman is a common carrier, bound to take over all who apply, and bound to keep his ferry in operation and good repair. Hudspeth v. Hall, 111 Ga. 510, 36 S.E. 770; Broadnax v. Baker, 94 N.C. 681, 55 Am.Rep. 633.

A private ferry is one mainly for the use of the owner, and though he may take pay for ferriage, he does not follow it as a business. His ferry is not open to the public at its demand, and he may or may not keep it in operation. Hudspeth v. Hall, supra; St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Harrison, 140 Ark. 158, 215 S.W. 698.

FERRY FRANCHISE. The public grant of a right to maintain a ferry at a particular place; a right conferred to land at a particular point and secure toll for the transportation of persons and property from that point across the stream. Mills v. St. Clair County, 7 Ill. 208. A grant to a named person empowering him to continue an interrupted land highway over the interrupting waters. U. S. v. Puget Sound Na^{y}. Co., D.C.Wash., 24 F. Supp. 431, 432.

FERRYBOAT. A vessel traversing any of the waters of the state between two constant points regularly employed for the transfer of passengers and freight, authorized by law so to do, and also any boat employed as a part of the system of a railroad for the transfer of passengers and freight plying at regular and stated periods between two points. Pol.Code Cal. § 3643; Lake Tahoe Ry. & Transp. Co. v. Roberts, 168 Cal. 551, 143 P. 786, 789, Ann.Cas.1916E, 1196.

FERRYMAN. One employed in taking persons across a river or other stream, in boats or other contrivances, at a ferry. Covington Ferry Co. v. Moore, 8 Dana, Ky., 158; State v. Clarke, 2 McCord, S.C., 48, 13 Am.Dec. 701.

FESTA IN CAPPIS. In old English law, grand holidays, on which choirs wore caps. Jacob.

FESTINATIO JUSTITLE EST NOVERCA INFORTUNII. Hob. 97. Hasty justice is the stepmother of misfortune.

FESTING–MAN. In old English law, a bondsman; a surety; a frank-pledge, or one who was surety for the good behavior of another. Monasteries enjoyed the privilege of being "free from festing-men," which means that they were "not bound for any man's forthcoming who should transgress the law." Cowell. See Frank-Pledge.

FESTING--PENNY. Earnest given to servants when hired or retained. The same as arles-penny. Cowell.

FESTINUM REMEDIUM. Lat. A speedy remedy.

A term applied to those cases where the remedy for the redress of an injury is given without any unnecessary delay. Bacon, Abr. Assise, A. The action of dower is festinum remedium. The writ of assise was also thus characterized (in comparison with the less expeditious remedies previously available) by the statute of Wdstminster 2 (13 Edw. I. c. 24.)

FESTUCA. In Frankish law, a rod or staff or (as described by other writers) a stick, on which imprecatory runs were cut, which was used as a gage or pledge of good faith by a party to a contract, or for symbolic delivery in the conveyance or quit-claim of land, before a court of law, anterior to the introduction of written documents by the Romans. 2 Poll. & Maitl. 86, 184, 190; Maitl. Domesday Book and Beyond 323.

FETICIDE. In medical jurisprudence, destruction of the fetus; the act by which criminal abortion is produced. 1 Beck, Med.Jur. 288; Guy, Med. Jur. 133. See, also, Prolicide.

FETTERS. Chains or shackles for the feet; irons used to secure the legs of convicts, unruly prisoners, etc. Similar chains securing the wrists are called "handcuffs."

FEU. In Scotch law, a holding or tenure where the vassal, in place of military service, makes his return in grain or money. Distinguished from "wardholding," which is the military tenure of the country. Bell; Erskine, Inst. lib. tit. 3, § 7.

FEU ANNUALS. In Scotch law, the reddendo, or annual return from the vassal to a superior in a feu holding. Wharton, Diet., 2d Lond.Ed.

FEU ET LIEU. Fr. In old French and Canadian law, hearth and home. A term importing actual settlement upon land by a tenant.

FEU HOLDING. A holding by tenure of rendering grain or money in place of military service. Bell.

FEUAR. In Scotch law, the tenant or vassal of a feu; a feu-vassal. Bell.

FEUD. Feudal law. An estate in land held of a superior on condition of rendering him services. 2 Bl.Comm. 105. An inheritable right to the use and occupation of lands, held on condition of rendering services to the lord or proprietor, who himself retains the property in the lands. See Spel. Feuds, c. 1.

In this sense the word is the same as "feod," "feodum," "feudum," "fief," or "fee." 1 Sullivan

Lect. 128; 1 Spence, Eq.Jur. 34; Dalrymple, Feud. Pr. 99; 1 Washb.R.P. 18; Mitch.R.P. 80.

Saxon and Old German Law

An enmity, or species of private war, existing between the family of a murdered man and the family of his slayer. In Scotland and the north of England, a combination of all the kin to revenge the death of any of the blood upon the slayer and all his race. Termes de la Ley; Whishaw. See Deadly Feud; Faida.

Military Feuds

The genuine or original feuds which were in the hands of military men, who performed military duty for their tenures.

FEUDA. Feuds or fees.

FEUDAL. Pertaining to feuds or fees; relating to or growing out of the feudal system or feudal law; having the quality of a feud, as distinguished from "allodial."

FEUDAL ACTIONS. An ancient name for real actions, or such as concern real property only. 3 Bl.Comm. 117.

FEUDAL COURTS. In the 12th century a lord qua lord had the right to hold a court for his tenants.

In the 13th century, they became of less importance and for three reasons: The feudal principle would have led to a series of courts one above the other, and the dominions of the large landowners were usually scattered, so that great feudal courts became impossible. The growth of the jurisdiction of the king's court removed the necessity for feudal courts. All the incidents of the feudal system came to be regarded in a commercial spirit-as property. Its jurisdiction became merely appendant to landowning. 1 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 64.

FEUDAL LAW. The body of jurisprudence relating to feuds; the real-property law of the feudal system; the law anciently regulating the property relations of lord and vassal, and the creation, incidents, and transmission of feudal estates.

The body of laws and usages constituting the "feudal law" was originally customary and unwritten, but a compilation was made in the twelfth century, called "Feodarum Consuetudines," which has formed the basis of later digests. The feudal law prevailed over Europe from the twelfth to the fourteenth century, and was introduced into England at the Norman Conquest, where it formed the entire basis of the law of real property until comparatively modern times. Survivals of the feudal law, to the present day, so affect and color that branch of jurisprudence as to require a certain knowledge of the feudal law in order to the perfect comprehension of modern tenures and rules of real-property law.

FEUDAL POSSESSION. The equivalent of "seisin" under the feudal system.

FEUDAL SYSTEM. The system of feuds. A political and social system which prevailed throughout Europe during the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth centuries, and is supposed to have grown, out of the peculiar usages and policy of the Teutonic nations who overran the continent after the fall of the Western Roman Empire, as developed by the exigencies of their military domination, and possibly furthered by notions taken from the Roman jurisprudence,

It was introduced into England, in its completeness, by William I., A. D. 1085, though it may have existed in a rudimentary form among the Saxons before the Conquest. It formed the entire basis of the real-property law of England in medieval times; and survivals of the system,- in modern days, so modify and color that branch of jurisprudence, both in England and America, that many of its principles require for their complete understanding a knowledge of the feudal system. The feudal system originated in the relations of a military chieftain and his followers, or king and nobles, or lord and vassals, and especially their relations as determined by the bond established by a grant of land from the former to the latter. From this it grew into a complete and intricate complex of rules for the tenure and transmission of real estate, and of correlated duties and services; while, by tying men to the land and to those holding above and below them, it created a close-knit hierarchy of persons, and developed an aggregate of social and political institutions. For an account of the feudal system in its juristic relations, see 2 Bl.Comm. 44; 1 Steph.Comm. 160; 3 Kent, Comm. 487; Spel.Feuds; Litt.Ten.; Su11.Lect. ; Spence, Eq.Jur.; 1 Washb.Real. Prop. 15; Dalr.Feu.Prop. For its political and social relations, see Hall, Middle Ages; Maine, Anc.Law; Rob. Car. V.; Montesq. Esprit des Lois, bk. 30; Guizot, Hist.Civilization.

FEUDAL TENURES. The tenures of real estate under the feudal system, such as knight-service, socage, villenage, etc.

FEUDALISM. The feudal system; the aggregate of feudal principles and usages.

It is a vague term to describe a congeries of customs and legal relations by no means uniform throughout Europe and never static. But feudalism had one basic characteristic traceable through all its variations: It rested on relations to land, the primary factor in a relatively primitive agrarian civilization. United States v. Forness, C.C.A. N.Y., 125 F.2d 928, 933.

FEUDALIZE. To reduce to a feudal tenure; to conform to feudalism. Webster.

FEUDARY. A tenant who holds by, feudal tenure, (also spelled "feodatory" and "feudatory.") Held by feudal service. Relating to feuds or feudal tenures.

FEUDBOTE. A recompense for engaging in a feud, and the damages consequent, it having been the custom in ancient times for all tale kindred to engage in their kinsman's quarrel. Jacob.

FEUDE. An occasional early form of "feud" in the sense of private war or vengeance. Termes de la Ley. See Feud.

FEUDIST. A writer on feuds, as Cujacius, Spelman, etc.

FEUDO. In Spanish law, feud or fee. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 2, c. 2.

FEUDORUM LIBER. The book of feuds.

This was a compilation of feudal law, prepared by order of the emperor Frederick I., and published at Milan in 1170. It comprised five books, of which only the first two are now extant with fragmentary portions of the others, printed at the end of modern editions of the Corpus Juris Civilis. Giannone, b. 13, c. 3; Cruise, Dig. prel. diss. c. 1, 31.

FEUDORUM LIBEL The Books of Feuds published during the reign of Henry about the year 1152.

The particular customs of Lombardy as to feuds began about the year 1152, to be the standard of authority to other nations, by reason of the greater refinement with which that branch of learning had been there cultivated. This compilation was probably known in England, but does not appear to have had any other effect than to influence English lawyers to the more critical study of their own tenures, and to induce them to extend the learning of real property so as to embrace more curious matter of similar kind. 2 Reeves, Hist.Eng.Law, 55.

FEUDUM. L. Lat. A feud, fief, or fee. A right of using and enjoying forever the lands of another, which the lord grants on condition that the tenant shall render fealty, military duty, and other services. Spelman. It is not properly the land, but a right in the land.

This form of the word is used by the feudal writers. The earlier English writers generally prefer the form feodum. There was an older word feum.

Its use by the Normans is exceedingly obscure. "Feudal" was not in their vocabulary. Usually it denoted a stretch of land, rarely a tenure or mass of rights. It came to be applied to every person who had heritable rights in land. Maitl.Domesday Book and Beyond 152.

FEUDUM ANTIQUUM. An ancient feud or fief; a fief descended to the vassal from his ancestors. 2 Bl.Comm. 212, 221. A fief which ancestors had possessed for more than four generations. Spelman; Priest v. Cummings, 20 Wend. N.Y. 349.

FEUDUM APERTUM. An open feud or fief; a fief resulting back to the lord, where the blood of the person last seised was utterly extinct and gone or where the tenant committed a crime, or gave other legal cause. Spelman; 2 Bl.Comm. 245.

FEUDUM FRANCUM. A free feud. One which was noble and free from talliage and other subsidies to which the plebeia feuda (vulgar feuds) were subject. Spelman.

FEUDUM HAUBERTICUM. A fee held on the military service of appearing fully armed at the ban and arriere ban. Spelman.

FEUDUM IMPROPRIUM. An improper or derivative feud or fief. 2 Bl.Comm. 58.

FEUDUM INDIVIDUUM. An indivisible or impartible feud or fief; descendible to the eldest son alone. 2 Bl.Comm. 215.

FEUDUM LAICUM. A lay fee.

FEUDUM LIGIUM. A liege feud or fief; a fief held immediately of the sovereign; one for which the vassal owed fealty to his lord against all persons. 1 Bl.Comm. 367; Spelman.

FEUDUM MATERNUM. A maternal fief; a fief descended to the feudatory from his mother. 2 Bl.Comm. 212.

FEUDUM MILITARE. A knight's fee, held by knight service and esteemed the most honorable species of tenure. 2 Bla.Comm. 62.

FEUDUM NOBILE. A fee for which the tenant did guard and owed fealty and homage. Spelman.

FEUDUM NOVUM. A new feud or fief; a fief which began in the person of the feudatory, and did not come to him by succession. Spelman; 2 Bl.Comm. 212; Priest v. Cummings, 20 Wend. N.Y. 349.

FEUDUM NOVUM UT ANTIQUUM. A new fee held with the qualities and incidents of an ancient one. 2 Bl.Comm. 212.

FEUDUM PATERNUM. A fee which the paternal ancestors had held for four generations. Calvin.; Spelman. One descendible to heirs on the paternal side only. 2 Bl.Comm. 223. One which might be held by males only. Du Cange.

FEUDUM PROPRIUM. A proper, genuine, and original feud or fief; being of a purely military character, and held by military service. 2 Bl. Comm. 57, 58.

FEUDUM TALLIATUM. A restricted fee. One limited to descend to certain classes of heirs. 2 Bl.Comm. 112, note; 1 Washb. Real Prop. 66; Spelman.

FEUM. An older form of feudum. Maitl. Domesday Book and Beyond 152.

FEW. Not many; of small number. U. S. V. Margolis, C.C.A.N.J., 138 F.2d 1002, 1003. An indefinite expression for a small or limited number. Pittsburgh, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Broderick, 56 Ind.App. 58, 102 N.E. 887, 893. Indicating a small number of units or individuals which constitute a whole. Provident Loan Bank v. Parham, 137 Tenn. 483, 194 S.W. 570. A relative term of great elasticity of meaning. Klann v. Minn, 161 Wis. 517, 154 N.W. 996.

FF. A Latin abbreviation for "Fragmenta," designating the Digest or Pandects in the Corpus Juris Civilis of Justinian; so called because that work is made up of fragments or extracts from the writings of numerous jurists. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 74.

FI. FA. An abbreviation for fieri facias, (which see.)

FIANCER. L. Fr. To pledge one's faith. Kelham.

FIANZA. Sp. In Spanish law, trust, confidence, and correlatively a legal duty or obligation arising therefrom.

The term is sufficiently broad in meaning to include both a general obligation and a restricted liability under a single instrument. Martinez v. Runkle, 57 N.J.L. 111, 30 A. 593. But in a special sense, it designates a surety or guarantor, or the contract or engagement of suretyship; the contract by which one person engages to pay the debt or fulfil the obligations of another if the latter should fail to do so.

FIAR. In Scotch law, he that has the fee or feu. The proprietor is termed "flar," in contradistinction to the life renter. 1 Karnes, Eq. Pref. One whose property is charged with a life-rent. Where a right is taken to a husband and wife in conjunct fee and life-rent, the husband, as the persona dignior, is the only flan Ersk. Prin. 421.

FIARS PRICES. The value of grain in the different counties of Scotland, fixed yearly by the respective sheriffs, in the month of February, with the assistance of juries. These regulate the prices of grain stipulated to be sold at the fiar prices, or when no price has been stipulated. Ersk. 1, 4, 6.

FIAT. (Lat. "Let it be done.") In English practice, a short order or warrant of a judge or magistrate directing some act to be done; an authority issuing from some competent source for the doing of some legal act. See 1 Tidd Pr. 100.

One of the proceedings in the English bankrupt practice, being a power, signed by the lord chancellor, addressed to the court of bankruptcy, authorizing the petitioning creditor to prosecute his complaint before it. 2 Steph.Comm. 199. By the statute 12 & 13 Vict. c. 116, fiats were abolished.

Joint fiat. In English law, a fiat in bankruptcy, issued against two or more trading partners.

FIAT JUSTITIA. Let justice be done. On a petition to the king for his warrant to bring a writ of error in parliament, he writes on the top of the petition, "Fiat justitia," and then the writ of error is made out, etc. Jacob.

FIAT JUSTITIA, RUAT C(ELUM. Let right be done, though the heavens should fall. Branch, Princ. 161.

FIAT PROUT FLERI CONSUEVIT, (NIL TEMERE NOVANDUM.) Let it be done as it hath used to be done, (nothing must be rashly innovated.) Jenk. Cent. 116, case 39; Branch, Princ.

FIAT UT PETITUR. Let it be done as it is asked. A form of granting a petition.

FLAUNT. An order; command. See Fiat.

FICTIO. In Roman law, a fiction; an assumption or supposition of the law.

"Fictio" in the old Roman law was properly a term of pleading, and signified a false averment on the part of the plaintiff which the defendant was not allowed to traverse; as that the plaintiff was a Roman citizen, when in truth he was a foreigner. The object of the fiction was to give the court jurisdiction. Maine, Anc.Law, 25.

FICTIO CEDIT VERITATI. FICTIO JURIS NON EST UBI VERITAS. Fiction yields to truth. Where there is truth, fiction of law exists not 11 Co. 51.

FICTIO EST CONTRA VERITATEM, SED PRO VERITATE HABETUR. Fiction is against the truth, but it is to be esteemed truth.

FICTIO JURIS NON EST UBI VERITAS. Where truth is, fiction of law does not exist.

FICTIO LEGIS INIQUE OPERATUR ALICUI DAMNUM VEL INJURIAM. A legal fiction does not properly work loss or injury. 2 Coke, 35; 3 Coke, 36; Broom, Max. 129; Gilb. 223. Fiction of law is wrongful if it works loss or injury to anyone.

FICTIO LEGIS NEMINEM L/EDIT. A fiction of law injures no one. 2 Rolle, 502: 3 Bl.Comm. 43; Low v. Little, 17 Johns. N.Y. 348.

FICTION. An assumption or supposition of law that something which is or may be false is true, or that a state of facts exists which has never really taken place. New Hampshire Strafford Bank v. Cornell, 2 N.H. 324; Hibberd v. Smith, 67 Cal. 547, 4 P. 473, 56 Am.Rep. 726; Murphy v. Murphy, 190 Iowa 874, 179 N.W. 530, 533. An assumption, for purposes of justice, of a fact that does not or may not exist. Dodo v. Stocker, 74 Colo. 95, 219 P. 222, 223.

A rule of law which assumes as true, and will not allow to be disproved, something which is false, but not impossible. Best, Ev. 419.

These assumptions are of an innocent or even beneficial character, and are made for the advancement of the ends of justice. They secure this end chiefly by the extension of procedure from cases to which it is applicable to other cases to which it is not strictly applicable, the ground of inapplicability being some difference of an immaterial character. Brown.

Fictions are to be distinguished from presumptions of law. By the former, something known to be false or unreal is assumed as true ; by the latter, an inference is set up, which may be and probably is true, but which, at any rate, the law will not permit to be controverted. It may also be said that a presumption is a rule of law prescribed for the purpose of getting at a certain conclusion, though arbitrary, where the subject is intrinsically liable to doubt from the remoteness, discrepancy, or actual defect of proofs.

Fictions are also to be distinguished from estoppels; an estoppel being the rule by which a person is precluded from asserting a fact by previous conduct inconsistent therewith on his own part or the part of those under whom he claims, or by an adjudication upon his rights which he cannot be allowed to question.

Best distinguishes legal fictions from presumptions juris et de jure, and divides them into three kinds,—affirmative or positive fictions, negative fictions, and fictions by relation. Best, Pres. p. 27, 24.

FICTITIOUS. Founded on a fiction; having the character of a fiction; pretended; counterfeit. People v. Carmona, 79 Cal.App. 159, 251 P. 315, 317; State v. Tinnin, 64 Utah 587, 232 P. 543, 545, 43 A.L.R. 46. Feigned, imaginary, not real, false, not genuine, nonexistent. Bill alleging that amount of mortgage sought to be canceled was "fictitious" held to allege that mortgage was without consideration. Kinney v. Kinney, 230 Ala. 558, 161 So. 798, 800. Arbitrarily invented and set up, to accomplish an ulterior object. West Virginia Mortgage & Discount Corporation v. Newcomer, 101 W.Va. 292, 132 S.E. 748, 749.

FICTITIOUS ACTION. An action brought for the sole purpose , of obtaining the opinion of the court on a point of law, not for the settlement of any actual controversy between the parties. Smith v. Junction Ry. Co., 29 Ind. 551.

FICTITIOUS NAME. A counterfeit, feigned, or pretended name taken by a person, differing in some essential particular from his true name, (consisting of Christian name and patronymic,) with the implication that it is meant to deceive or mislead. Pollard v. Fidelity F. Ins. Co., 1 S.D. 570, 47 N.W. 1060; Carlock v. Cagnacci, 88 Cal. 600, 26 P. 597; Mangan v. Schuylkill County, 273 Pa. 310, 116 A. 920, 921.

FICTITIOUS PAYEE. Negotiable instrument is drawn to fictitious payee whenever payee named in it has no right to it, and its maker does not intend that such payee shall take anything by it; whether name of payee used by maker is that of person living or dead or one who never existed is immaterial. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. of California v. Wells Fargo Bank & Union Trust Co., 1 Cal.App.2d 694, 37 P.2d 483.

"Fictitiousness" depends on the intention to pay, rather than on the payee's existence. Norton v. City Bank & Trust Co., C.C.A.Va., 294 F. 839, 844; Mueller & Martin v. Liberty Ins. Bank, 187 Ky. 44, 218 S.W. 465, 466.

FICTITIOUS PERSON. A person, who, though named as payee in a check has no right to it or its proceeds because the drawer of it so intended. Johnston v. Exchange Nat. Bank of Tampa, 152 Fla. 228, 9 So.2d 810, 811, 812.

FICTITIOUS PLAINTIFF. A person appearing in the writ or record as the plaintiff in a suit, but who in reality does not exist, or who is ignorant of the suit and of the use of his name in it. It is a contempt of court to sue in the name of a fictitious party. See 4 Bl.Comm. 134.

FICTITIOUS PROMISE. See Promise.

FIDE-COMMISSARY. A term derived from the Latin "fidei-commissarius," and occasionally used by writers on equity jurisprudence as a substitute for the law French term "cestui, que trust," as being more elegant and euphonious. See Brown v. Brown, 83 Hun, 160, 31 N.Y.S. 650.

FIDEI-COMMISSARIUS. In the civil law, this term corresponds nearly to our "cestui que trust?' It designates a person who has the real or beneficial interest in an estate or fund, the title or administration of whieh is temporarily confided to another. See Story, Eq.Jur. § 966; 1 Greenl.Cruise, Dig. 295.

According to Du Cange, the term was sometimes used to denote the executor of a will.

FIDEI-COMMISSUM. In the civil law, a species of trust; being a gift of property (usually by will) to a person, accompanied by a request or direction of the donor that the recipient will transfer the property to another, the latter being a person not capable of taking directly under the will or gift. In re Courtin, 144 La. 971, 81 So. 457, 459; Succession of Reilly, 136 La. 347, 67 So. 27, 33; Gortario v. Cantu, 7 Tex. 44.

FIDE-JUBERE. In the civil law, to order a thing upon one's faith; to pledge one's self; to become surety for another. Fide-jubes? Fide-jubeo: Do you pledge yourself ? I do pledge myself. Inst. 3, 16, L One of the forms of stipulation.

FIDE-JUSSIO. An act by which any one binds himself as an additional security for another. This giving security does not destroy the liability of the principal, but adds to the security of the surety. Vicat, Voc.Jur.; Hallifax, Annals, b. 2, c. 16, n. 10.

FIDE-JUSSOR. In Roman law, a guarantor; one who becomes responsible for the payment of another's debt, by a stipulation which binds him to discharge it if the principal debtor fails to do so. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 452; 3 Bl.Comm. 108. He differs from a co-obligor in this, that the latter is equally bound to a debtor, with his principal, while the former is not liable till the principal has failed to fulfil his engagement; Dig. 12, 4, 4; 16, 1, 13; 24, 3, 64; 38, 1, 37; 50, 17, 110; 6, 14, 20; Hall, Pr. 33; Dunl.Adm.Pr. 300; Clerke, Prax. tit. 63.

The obligation of the fide-jussor was an accessory contract; for, if the principal obligation was not previously contracted, his engagement then took the name of mandate. Lec. Elem. § 872; Code Nap. 2012.

The sureties taken on the arrest of a defendant, in the court of admiralty, were formerly denominated "fide jussors." 3 Bl.Comm. 108.

FIDE-PROMISSOR. See Fide-Jussor.

FIDELITAS. Fealty; fidelity. See Fealty.

FIDELITAS. DE NULLO TENEMENTO, QUOD TENETUR AD TERMINUM, FIT HOMAGII; FIT TAMEN INDE FIDELITATIS SACRAMENTUM. Co.Litt. 676. Fealty. For no tenement which is held for a term is there the oath of homage, but there is the oath of fealty.

FIDELITY BOND. Contract of fidelity insurance. Runcie v. Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co., Sup., 6 N.Y.S.2d 616, 620. A guaranty of personal honesty of officer furnishing indemnity against his defalcation or negligence. Phillips v. Board of Education of Pineville, 283 Ky. 173, 140 S.W.2d 819, 822.

FIDELITY INSURANCE. See Insurance.

FIDEM MENTIRI. Lat. To betray faith or fealty. A term used in feudal and old English law of a feudatory or feudal tenant who does not keep that fealty which he has sworn to the lord. Leg. Hen. L c. 53.

FIDES. Lat. Faith; honesty; confidence; trust; veracity; honor. Occurring in the phrases "bona fides" (good faith), "mala fides" (bad faith), and "uberrima fides," (the utmost or most abundant good faith.)

FIDES EST OBLIGATIO CONSCEENTLE ALICUJUS AD INTENTIONEM ALTERIUS. Bacon. A trust is an obligation of conscience of one to the will of another.

FIDES FACTA. Among the Franks and Lombards undertakings were guaranteed by "making one's faith"—fides facta. This was symbolized by such formal acts as the giving of a rod; in suretyship giving the "festuca" or "vadium." 2 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 73.

FIDES SERVANDA EST. Faith must be observed. An agent must not violate the confidence reposed in him. Story, Ag. § 192; Coolidge v. Brigham, 1 Metc., Mass., 551.

FIDES SERVANDA EST; SIMPLICITAS JURIS GENTIUM PRIEVALEAT. Faith must be kept; the simplicity of the law of nations must prevail. A rule applied to bills of exchange as a sort of sacred instruments. 3 Burrows, 1672; Story, Bills, § 15.

FU)UCIA. In Roman law, an early form of mortgage or pledge, in which both the title and possession of the property were passed to the creditor by a formal act of sale, (properly with the solemnities of the transaction known as mancipatio,) there being at the same time an express or implied agreement on the part of the creditor to reconvey the property by a similar act of sale provided the debt was duly paid; but on default of payment, the property became absolutely vested in the creditor without foreclosure and without any right of redemption.

In course of time, this form of security gave place to that known as hypotheca, while the contemporary contract of *gnus or pawn underwent a corresponding development. See Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 334; Tomk. & J. Mod.Rom.Law, 182; Hadley, Rom.Law, 201-203; Pothier, Pand. tit. "Fiducia."

FIDUCIAL. An adjective having the same meaning as "fiduciary;" as, in the phrase "public or fiducial office." Ky.St. § 3752; Moss v. Rowlett, 112 Ky. 121, 65 S.W. 153.

FIDUCIARIUS HIERES. See Fiduciary Heir.

FIDUCIARIUS TUTOR. In Roman law, the elder brother of an emancipated pupillus, whose father had died leaving him still under fourteen years of age.

FIDUCIARY. The term is derived from the Roman law, and means (as a noun) a person holding the character of a trustee, or a character analogous to that of a trustee, in respect to the trust and confidence involved in it and the scrupulous good faith and candor which it requires. Svanoe v. Jurgens, 144 Ill. 507, 33 N.E. 955; Stoll v. King, 8 How.Prac.,N.Y., 299. A person having duty, created by his undertaking, to act primarily for another's benefit in matters connected with such undertaking. Haluka v. Baker, 66 Ohio App. 308, 34 N.E.2d 68, 70. As an adjective it means of the nature of a trust; having the characteristics of a trust; analogous to a trust; relating to or founded upon a trust or confidence.

FIDUCIARY CAPACITY. One is said to act in a "fiduciary capacity" or to receive money or contract a debt in a "fiduciary capacity," when the business which he transacts, or the money or property which he handles, is not his own or for his own benefit, but for the benefit of another person, as to whom he stands in a relation implying and necessitating great confidence and trust on the one part and a high degree of good faith on the other part. The term is not restricted to technical or express trusts, but includes also such offices or relations as those of an attorney at law, a guardian, executor, or broker, a director of a corporation, and a public officer. Templeton v. Bockler, 73 Or. 494, 144 P. 405, 409; Madison Tp. v. Dunkle, 114 Ind. 262, 16 N.E. 593. As used in the Bankruptcy Act, § 17, subd. 4, 11 U.S.C.A. § 35, however, the term imports a technical trust, actually and expressly constituted, and not such merely as the law implies, and has no application to debts or obligations merely because they were created under circumstances in which trust or confidence in the popular sense of those terms was reposed in debtor. Culp v. Robey, Tex.Civ.App., 294 S.W. 647, 651; American Agricultural Chemical Co. v. Berry, 110 Me. 528, 87 A. 218, 45 L.R.A., N.S., 1106, Ann.Cas.1915A, 1293.

FIDUCIARY CONTRACT. An agreement by which a person delivers a thing to another on the condition that he will restore it to him. Cicero, de Offle, lib. 3, cap. 17; Lee. du Dr.Civ.Rom. § 237. See Chapman v. Forsyth, 2 How., U.S., 202, 11 L. Ed. 236; Fisk v. Sarber, 6 W. & S., Pa., 18; McGinn v. Shaeffer, 7 Watts, Pa., 415.

FIDUCIARY DEBT. A debt founded on or arising from some confidence or trust as distinguished from a "debt" founded simply on contract. Montgomery v. Phillips Petroleum Co., Tex.Civ.App., 49 S.W.2d 967, 973.

FIDUCIARY DEBTORS. Only public officers and trustees, not agents, factors, commission men, and the like, within the meaning of Bankruptcy Act, § 14, subd. 4, 11 U.S.C.A. § 32. Keefauver v. He[illegible]

FIDUCIARY HEIR. The Roman laws called a fiduciary heir the person who was instituted heir, and who was charged to deliver the succession to a person designated by the testament. Merlin, Rëpert. But Pothier, Pand. vol. 22, says that fiduciarius hceres properly signifies the person to whom a testator has sold his inheritance under the condition that he should sell it to another.

FIDUCIARY OR CONFIDENTIAL RELATION. A very broad term embracing both technical fiduciary relations and those informal relations which exist wherever one man trusts in or relies upon another. State v. Gautier, 108 Fla. 390, 147 So. 240, 242. One founded on trust or confidence reposed by one person in the integrity and fidelity of another. Kerrigan v. O'Meara, 71 Mont. 1, 227 P. 819, 821.

The origin of the confidence and the source of the influence are immaterial. Quinn v. Phipps, 93 Fla. 805, 113 So. 419, 420, 54 A.L.R. 1173. The relations and duties involved need not be legal but may be moral, social, domestic, or merely personal. Trustees of Jesse Parker Williams Hospital v. Nisbet, 191 Ga. 821, 14 S.E.2d 64, 76. See also, Fiduciary Relation.

FIDUCIARY RELATION. An expression including both technical fiduciary relations and those informal relations which exist whenever one man trusts and relies upon another. Peckham v. Johnson, Tex.Civ.App., 98 S.W.2d 408, 416. It exists where there is special confidence reposed in one who in equity and good conscience is bound toact in good faith and with due regard to interests of one reposing the confidence. Neagle v. McMullen, 334 Ill. 168, 165 N.E. 605, 608. A relation subsisting between two persons in regard to a business, contract, or piece of property, or in regard to the general business or estate of one of them, of such a character that each must repose trust and confidence in the other and must exercise a corresponding degree of fairness and good faith.

Out of such a relation, the law raises the rule that neither party may exert influence or pressure upon the other, take selfish advantage of his trust, or deal with the subject-matter of the trust in such a way as to benefit himself or prejudice the other except in the exercise of the utmost good faith and with the full knowledge and consent of that other, business shrewdness, hard bargaining, and astuteness to take advantage of the forgetfulness or negligence of another being totally prohibited as between persons standing in such a relation to each other. Examples of fiduciary relations are those existing between attorney and client, guardian and ward, principal and agent, executor and heir, trustee and cestui que trust, landlord and tenant, etc. Robins v. Hope, 57 Cal. 497; Thomas v. Whitney, 186 Ill. 225, 57 N.E. 808; Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 104 U.S. 68, 26 L.Ed. 693. The relation need not be legal, but may be moral, social, domestic, or merely personal. Miranovitz v. Gee, 163 Wis. 246, 157 N.W. 790, 792; Higgins v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 312 Ill. 11, 143 N.E. 482, 484. It is one in which, if a wrong arise, the same remedy exists against the wrongdoer on behalf of the principal as would exist against a trustee on behalf of a cestui que trust. Smith v. Smith, 222 Mass. 102, 109 N.E. 830, 832. Sometimes confidential and fiduciary relations are regarded as synonymous; In re Cover's Estate, 188 Cal. 133, 204 P. 583, 588; but on the other hand, a technical distinction may be taken between a "fiducial relation" which is more correctly applicable to legal relationships between parties, such as guardian and ward, administrator and heirs, and other similar relationships, and a "confidential relation" which includes the legal relationships, and also every other relationship wherein confidence is rightfully reposed and is exercised. Roberts v. Parsons, 195 Ky. 274, 242 S.W. 594, 596.

FIEF. A fee, feod, or feud.

FIEF D'HAUBERT (or D'HAUBERK). Fr. In Norman feudal law, a fief or fee held by the tenure of knight-service; a knight's fee. 2 Bl.Comm. 62. A fee held on the military tenure of appearing fully armed on the ban and arrière-ban. Feudum hauberticum. Spelman; Calvinus, Lex.; Du Cange.

FIEF-TENANT. In old English law, the holder of a fief or fee; a feeholder or freeholder.

FIEL. In Spanish law, a sequestrator; a person in whose hands a thing in dispute is judicially deposited; a receiver. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 9, l. 1.

FIELD. A cultivated tract of land; State v. Mack, 92 Vt. 103, 102 A. 58, 59; but not a one-acre lot used for cultivating vegetables; Simons v. Lovell, 7 Heisk., Tenn., 510. This term might well be considered as definite and certain a description as "close," and might be used in law; but it is not a usual description in legal proceedings. 1 Chit.Gen.Pr, 160.

A decision upon a question of fact reached as the result of a judicial examination or investigation by a court, jury, referee, coroner, etc. Benton v. Roberts, 53 Ga.App. 121, 185 S.E. 292, 294. A recital of the facts as found. Crighton v. Jacobs, 100 Conn. 281, 123 A. 437, 438. The word commonly applies to the result reached by a judge, Maeder Steel Products Co. v. Zanello, 109 Or. 562, 220 P. 155, 158; it being sometimes, however, as a matter of interpretation, treated as a ruling of law, Garden Cemetery Corporation v. Baker, 218 Mass. 339, 105 N.E. 1070, 1072, Ann.Cas.1916B, 75.

FINDING OF FACT. A determination of a fact by the court, averred by one party and denied by the other, and founded on evidence in case. C.I.T. Corp. v. Elliott, 66 Idaho 384, 159 P.2d 891, 897. A conclusion by way of reasonable inference from the evidence. Barker v. Narragansett Racing Ass'n, 65 R.I. 489, 16 A.2d 495, 497. Also the answer of the jury to a specific interrogatory propounded to them as to the existence or non-existence of a fact in issue. Miles v. McCallan, 1 Ariz. 491, 3 P. 610; Murphy v. Bennett, 68 Cal. 528, 9 P. 738.

The term is not applicable, with special reference to review on appeal, to a mere conclusion that the evidence is insufficient to authorize relief, Monetaire Mining Co. v. Columbus Rexall Consol. Mines Co., 53 Utah, 413, 174 P.

172, 174; nor to the opinion of the trial court, delivered in announcing judgment, Rogers v. Harris, 76 Okl. 215, 184 P. 459, 462; nor to a memorandum of the decision of the trial judge, Preston v. Preston, 102 Conn. 96, 128 A. 292, 296; nor to a transcript of the evidence, State v. Chin Lung, 106 Conn. 701, 139 A. 91, 97.

A general finding by a court is a general statement that the facts are in favor of a party or entitle him to judgment. It is a complete determination of all matters, and is a finding of every special thing necessary to be found to sustain the general finding. Miller v. Thompson, 80 Okl. 70, 194 P. 103, 105.

A special finding is a specific setting forth of the ultimate facts established by the evidence and which are determinative of the judgment which must be given. Rhodes v. United States Nat. Bank, Ill., 66 F. 514, 13 C.C.A. 612, 34 L.R.A. 742; Humphreys v. Third Nat. Bank, Ohio, 75 F. 856, 21 C.C.A. 538. It is only a determination of the ultimate facts on which the law must be determined, Societe Nouvelle d'Armement v. Barnaby, C.C.A.Wash;, 246 F. 68, 70. A special finding may also be said to be one limited to the fact issue submitted. Ex parte Woodward Iron Co., 212 Ala. 220, 102 So. 103, 106.

The term "fact" in the phrase "finding of fact" denotes the inferences drawn by the trior from ascertained facts. Porter v. Industrial Commission of Wisconsin, 173 Wis. 267, 131 N.W. 317, 318.

FINE, v. To impose a pecuniary punishment or mulct.

To sentence a per-son convicted of an offense to pay a penalty in money. Goodman v. Durant B. & L. Ass'n, 71 Miss. 310, 14 So. 146; State v. Belle, 92 Iowa 258, 60 N.W. 525.

FINE, n. A sum of money paid at the end, to make an end of a transaction, suit, or prosecution; mulct; penalty. Railroad Co. v. State, 22 Kan. 15; Sunderland Bros. Co. v. Chicago, B. & I. R. Co., 104 Neb. 319, 177 N.W. 156, 157. A forfeit or forfeiture. Keinath, Schuster & Hudson v. Reed, 18 N.M. 358, 137 P. 841, 844; Bryant v. Rich's Grill, 216 Mass. 344, 103 N.E. 925, 927, Ann.Cas.1915B, 869.

Conveyancing

An amicable composition or agreement of a suit, either actual or fictitious, by leave of the court, by which the lands in question become, or are acknowledged to be, the right 'of one of the parties. 2 Bl.Comm. 349; Christy v. Burch, 25 Fla. 942, 2 So. 258; Hitz v. Jenks, 123 U.S. 297, 8 S.Ct. 143, 31 L.Ed. 156. Fines were abolished in England by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 74, substituting a disentailing deed. (q. v.).

A fine is so called because it puts an end not only to the suit thus commenced, but also to all other suits and controversies concerning the same matter. The party who parted with the land, by acknowledging the right of the other, was said to levy the fine, and was called the "cognizor" or "conusor," while the party who recovered or received the estate was termed the "cognizee" or "conusee," and the fine was said to be levied to him.

Criminal Law

A pecuniary punishment imposed by lawful tribunal upon person convicted of crime or misdemeanor. In re Chester School District's Audit, 301 Pa. 203, 151 A. 801, 808. A pecuniary penalty. Hanks v. Shreveport Yellow Cabs, La.App., 187 So. 817, 819. It may include a forfeiture or penalty recoverable in a civil action. Vitelli v. Mayor and • Council of Wilmington, 9 W.W.Harr. 336, 199 A. 283, 287.

The word "penalty" is broader than word "fine", which is always a penalty; whereas, a penalty may be a fine or it may designate some other form of punishment. McHugh v. Placid Oil Co., 206 La. 511, 19 So.2d 221.

Executed Fine

See Executed.

Joint Fine

In old English law. "If a whole vill is to be fined, a joint fine may be laid, and it will be good for the necessity of it; but, in other cases, fines for offenses are to be severally imposed on each particular offender, and not jointly upon all of them." Jacob.

Law of Tenure

A money payment made by a feudal tenant to his lord.

The most usual fine is that payable on the admittance of a new tenant, but there are also due in some manors fines upon alienation, on a license to demise the lands, or on the death of the lord, or other events. Elton, Copyh. 159; De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 495, 57 Am.Dec. 470.

FINE AND RECOVERY ACT. The English statutes 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 74, for abolishing fines and recoveries. 1 Steph.Comm. 514, et seq.

FINE ANULLANDO LEVATO DE TENEMENTO QUOD FUIT DE ANTIQUO DOMINICO. An abolished writ for disannulling a fine levied of lands in ancient demesne to the prejudice of the lord. Reg.Orig. 15.

FINE CAPIENDO PRO TERRIS. An obsolete writ which lay for a person who, upon conviction by jury, had his lands and goods taken, and his body imprisoned, to be remitted his imprisonment, and have his lands and goods redelivered to him, on obtaining favor of a sum of money, etc. Reg. Orig. 142.

FINE FOR ALIENATION. A fine anciently payable upon the alienation of a feudal estate and substitution of a new tenant. It was payable to the lord by all tenants holding by knight's service or tenants in capite by socage tenure. Abolished by 12 Car. II. c. 24. See 2 BI.Comm. 71, 89; De Peyster v. Michael, 6 N.Y. 467, 495, 57 Am.Dec. 470.

FINE FOR ENDOWMENT. A fine anciently payable to the lord by the widow of a tenant, without which she could not be endowed of her husband's lands. Abolished under Henry I., and by Magna Charta. 2 Bl.Comm. 135; Mozley & Whitley.

FINE NON CAPIENDO PRO PULCHRE PLACITANDO. An obsolete writ to inhibit officers of courts to take fines for fair pleading.

FINE PRO REDISSEISINA CAPIENDO. An old writ that lay for the release of one imprisoned for a redisseisin, on payment of a reasonable fine. Reg.Orig. 222.

FINE ROLLS. See Oblate Rolls,

FINE SUR COGNIZANCE DE DROIT, CUM CEO QUE IL AD DE SON DONE. A fine upon acknowledgment of the right of the cognizee as that which he hath of the gift of the cognizor. By this the deforciant acknowledged in court a former feoffment or gift in possession to have been made by him to the plaintiff. 2 Bl.Comm. 352.

FINE SUR COGNIZANCE DE DROIT TANTUM. A fine upon acknowledgment of the right merely, and not with the circumstance of a preceding gift from the cognizor.

This was commonly used to pass a reversionary interest which was in the cognizor, of which there could be no feoffment supposed. 2 Bl.Comm. 353; 1 Steph.Comm. 519; Jacob, Law Diet.; Corn., Dig.

FINE SUR CONCESSIT. A fine upon concessit (he hath granted). A species of fine, where the cognizor, in order to make an end of disputes, though he acknowledged no precedent right, yet granted to the cognizee an estate de novo, usually for life or years, by way of supposed composition. 2 Bl.Comm. 353; 1 Steph.Comm. 519.

FINE SUR DONE GRANT ET RENDER. A double fine, comprehending the fine sur cognizance de droit come ceo and the fine sur concessit.

It might be used to convey particular limitations of estates, whereas the fine sur cognizance de droit come ceo, etc., conveyed nothing but an absolute estate, either of inheritance, or at least freehold. In this last species of fines, the cognizee, after the right was acknowledged to be in him, granted back again or rendered to the cognizor, or perhaps to a stranger, some other estate in the premises. 2 Bl.Comm. 353; Viner, Abr. Fine; Comyns, Dig. Fine.

FINE-FORCE. An absolute necessity or inevitable constraint. Plowd. 94; 6 Coke, 11; Cowell; Old N.B. 78.

FINEM FACERE. To make or pay a fine. Bract. 106; Skene.

FIRE. The effect of combustion. The juridical meaning of the word does not differ from the vernacular. 1 Pars.Mar.Law, 231, et seq.

The word "fire," as used in insurance policies, does not have the technical meaning developed from analysis of its nature, but more nearly the popular meaning, being an effect rather than an elementary principle, and is the effect of combustion, being equivalent to ignition or burning, but heat is not fire, though fire may proximately cause loss from heat. Lavitt v. Hartford County Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 105 Conn. 729, 136 A. 572.

The ordinary meaning of the word as used in an insurance policy includes the idea of visible heat or light. Security Ins. Co. of New Haven, Conn., v. Choctaw Cotton Oil Co., 149 Okl. 140, 299 P. 882, 884. Damage to wool by spontaneous combustion with smoke and great heat, but without any visible flame or glow, is held not to be fire. The "fire is always caused by combustion, but combustion does not always cause fire." Western Woolen Mill Co. v. Assurance Co., Kan., 139 F. 637, 72 C.C.A. 1.

Under a fire policy it must be a "hostile fire," that is one which becomes uncontrollable or breaks out from where it was intended to be and becomes a hostile element. Mode, Limited, v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 62 Idaho 270, 110 P.2d 840, 842, 133 A.L.R. 791.

FIRE AND SWORD, LETTERS OF. In old Scotch law, letters issued from the privy council in Scotland, addressed to the sheriff of the county, authorizing him to call for the assistance of the county to dispossess a tenant retaining possession, contrary to the order of a judge or the sentence of a court. Wharton; Bell, Dict.

FIREARM. An instrument used in the propulsion of shot, shell, or bullets by the action of gunpowder exploded within it. A weapon which acts by force of gunpowder. People v. Simons, 124 Misc. 28, 207 N.Y.S. 56, 57. This word comprises all sorts of guns, fowling-pieces, blunderbusses, pistols, etc.; Harris v. Cameron, 81 Wis. 239, 51 N.W. 437, 29 Am.St.Rep. 891; Atwood v. State, 53 Ala. 509; Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 38 N.Y.Super.Ct. 563; fountain pen primarily intended for discharge of tear gas, People v. Anderson, 236 App.Div. 586, 260 N.Y.S. 329; but not an air pistol. People v. Schmidt, 221 App.Div, 77, 222 N.Y.S. 647, 650.

FIREBARE. A beacon or high tower by the seaside, wherein are continual lights, either to direct sailors in the night, or to give warning of the approach of an enemy. Cowell.

FIREBOTE. Allowance of wood or estovers to maintain competent firing for the tenant. A sufficient allowance of wood to burn in a house. 1 Washb.Real Prop. 99.

FIREBUG. A popular phrase referring to persons guilty of the crime of arson; commonly understood to mean an incendiary or pyromaniac. Blechner v. Kraser, Co.Ct., 157 N.Y.S. 256.

FIRE DAMP. "Fire damp" consists of light carburated hydrogen, and is so called from its tendency to explode when mixed with atrpospheric air and brought into contact with flame. Wells' Adm'r v. Sutherland Coal & Coke Co., 116 Va. 1003, 83 S.E. 384, 385.

FIRE DISTRICT. One of the districts into which a city may be (and commonly is) divided for the purpose of more efficient service by the fire department in the extinction of fires. Des Moines v. Gilchrist, 67 Iowa 210, 25 N.W. 136. Under a statute, a territorial subdivision of the state, established to provide protection against fire within its limits, maintain street lights, etc., and, although composed of one or more towns, it is in substance a quasi municipal corporation of definitely restricted powers, and as such it may raise money by taxation for its legitimate uses. President, etc., of Williams College v. Inhabitants of Town of Williamstown, 219 Mass. 46, 106 N.E. 687, 688.

FIRE DOOR. A fireproof barrier for closing openings to prevent the spread of fire. People v. One Hundred and Thirty-One Boerum St. Co., 233 N.Y. 268, 135 N.E. 327, 328.

FIRE ESCAPE. An apparatus constructed to afford a safe and convenient method of escape from a burning building. The term includes fire ladders of such sort and location as to permit safe descent of persons caught in a building on fire, but not a balcony or an interior staircase in a hotel. West v. Spratling, 204 Ala. 478, 86 So. 32, 36.

FIRE EXIT. A reasonable, practicable, safe exit. Keefe v. Annpaul Realty Co., 215 App.Div. 301, 213 N.Y.S. 637, 642.

FIRE FIGHTING MACHINE. An instrument of public utility designed and used exclusively for putting out fires; the average or normal fire-fighting machine is in all its parts essentially designed for that purpose. American-La France Fire Engine Co. v. Riordan, C.C.A.N.Y., 6 F.2d 964, 966.

FIRE INSURANCE. See Insurance.

FIREMAN. A person engaged in the fighting and extinguishment of fires. City of Galveston v. Fredrickson, Tex.Civ.App., 174 S.W.2d 994, 995.

FIRE ORDEAL. See Ordeal.

FIRE POLICY. A contract for payment of indemnity to insured in case of loss. Converse v. Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co., 315 Mass. 544, 53 N.E.2d 841, 843. See Insurance.

FIRE-PROOF. Incombustible; not in danger from the action of fire.

To say of a building that it is fire-proof excludes the idea that it is of wood, and necessarily implies that it is of some substance fitted for the erection of fire-proof buildings. To say of a certain portion of a building that it is fire-proof warrants conclusion that it is of a different material. Hickey v. Morrell, 102 N.Y. 459, 7 N.E. 321, 55 Am. Rep. 824. A "fire-proof safe" within an insurance policy is one which, in the judgment of prudent men in locality of property insured, is sufficient, National Liberty Ins. Co. of America v. Spharler, 172 Ark. 715, 290 S.W. 594, 596; or one which is of the kind commonly regarded as fire-proof; Knoxville Fire Ins. Co. v. Hird, 4 Tex.Civ.App. 82, 23 S. W. 393.

FIRE RAISING. In Scotch law, the wilfully setting on fire buildings, growing or stored cereals, growing wood, or coalheughs. Ersk.Pr. 577, See Arson.

FIRE WALL. This term, as used in a municipal building code, has been held to refer to a wall that is noncombustible, and to require that such quality adhere to the openings in the wall as well as the solid wall itself. Robenson v. Turner, 199 Ky. 642, 251 S.W. 857, 860.

FIRE-WOOD. Wood suitable for fuel, not including standing or felled timber which is suitable and valuable for other purposes. Hogan v. Hogan, 102 Mich. 641, 61 N.W. 73.

FIREWORKS. Contrivances of inflammable and explosive materials combined of various proportions for purpose of producing in combustion beautiful or amusing scenic effects, or to be used as night signal, on land or sea or for 'various purposes in war. Henderson v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 337 Mo. 1, 84 S.W.2d 922, 925.

FIRKIN. A measure of capacity, equal to nine gallons. The word is also used to designate a weight, used for butter and cheese, of fifty-six pounds avoirdupois.

FIRLOT. A Scotch measure of capacity, containing two gallons and a pint. Spelman.

FIRM. The word "firm" is conventional term, applicable only to persons who are members of firm on particular occasion when name is used, and means name, title, or style under which a company transacts business, a partnership of two or more persons, or a commercial house, and is synonymous with "company", "house", "partnership", and "concern". Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. v. Webb, 207 Ark. 820, 182 S.W.2d 941, 943; 1 Chitty, Bailm. 49.

FIRM NAME. The name or title of a firm in business.

FIRMA. In old English law, the contract of lease or letting; also the rent (or farm) reserved upon a lease of lands, which was frequently payable in provisions, but sometimes in money, in which latter case it was called "alba firma," white rent. Spelman, Gloss.; Cunningham, Law Dict.

A messuage with the house, garden, or lands, etc., connected therewith. Co.Litt. 5 a; Shepp. Touchst. 93.

A banquet; supper; provisions for the table. Du Cange.

A tribute or custom paid towards entertaining the king for one night. Domesday; Cowell.

FIRMA BURGI. The right, in medieval days, to take the profits of a borough, paying for them a fixed sum to the crown or other lord of the borough. 2 Holdsw.Hist.E.L. 276.

FIRMA FEODI. In old English law, a farm or lease of a fee; a fee-farm.

FIRMAN. A Turkish word denoting a decree or grant of privileges, or passport to a traveler. A passport granted by the Great Mogul to captains of foreign vessels to trade within the territories over which he has jurisdiction; a permit.

FIRMARATIO. The right of a tenant to his lands and tenements. Cowell.

FIRMARIUM. In old records, a place in monasteries, and elsewhere, where the poor were received and supplied with food. Spelman. Hence the word "infirmary."

FIRMARIUS. L. Lat. A fermor. A lessee of a term. Firmarii comprehend all such as hold by lease for life or lives or for year, by deed or without deed. 2 Inst. 144, 145; 1 Washb.Real Prop. 107; Sackett v. Sackett, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 312; 7 Ad. & E. 637.

FIRMATIO. The doe season. Also a supplying with food. Cowell.

FIRME. In old records, a farm.

FIRMIOR ET POTENTIOR EST OPERATIO LEGIS QUAM DISPOSITIO HOMINIS. The operation of the law is firmer and more powerful [or efficacious] than the disposition [or will] of man. Co.Litt. 102a.

FIRMITAS. In old English law, an assurance of some privilege, by deed or charter.

FIRMLY. A statement that an affiant "firmly believes" the contents of the affidavit imports a strong or high degree of belief, and is equivalent to saying that he "verily" believes it. Bradley v. Eccles, 1 Browne, Pa., 258; Thompson v. White, 4 Serg. & R., Pa., 137. The operative words in a bond or recognizance, that the obligor is held and "firmly bound," are equivalent to an acknowledgment of indebtedness and promise to pay. Shattuck v. People, 5 Ill. 477.

FIRMURA. In old English law, liberty to scour and repair a mill-dam, and carry away the soil, etc. Blount.

FIRST. Preceding all others; foremost; used as an ordinal of one, as earliest in time or succession or foremost in position; in front of or in advance of all others. Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.Del., 130 F.2d 913, 915. Initial; leading; chief; entitled to priority or preference above others. Redman v. Railroad Co., 33 N.J.Eq. 165; Thompson v. Grand Gulf R. & B. Co., 3 How. Miss. 247, 34 Am.Dec. 81; Hapgood v. Brown, 102 Mass. 452.

The word commonly, but not necessarily, connotes precedence. Hill v. Prior, 79 N.H. 188, 106 A. 641; Beckley v. Ailing, 91 Conn. 362, 99 A. 1034, 1035. Thus, under a contract that, if the purchaser should "first" make payment, the vendor would convey, payment was to precede the execution of the conveyance. Walker v. Hewitt, 109 Or. 366, 220 P. 147, 151, 35 A.L.R. 100. But in a will the word "first" may not import precedence of one bequest over another. Everett v. Carr, 59 Me. 330; Swasey v. American Bible Society, 57 Me. 523.

As to first "Cousin," "Distress," and "Mortgage," see those titles.

FIRST BLUSH. By the phrase "first blush," within the rule that damages, to justify reversal, must be so great as to strike the mind at first blush as having been superinduced by passion or prejudice on the part of the jury, is meant that immediately the judicial mind is shocked and surprised at the great disproportion of the size of the verdict to what the facts of the case would authorize. Cole & Crane v. May, 185 Ky. 135, 214 S.W. 885, 887.

FIRST-CLASS. Of the most superior or excellent grade or kind; belonging to the head or chief or numerically precedent of several classes into which the general subject is divided. See Pacific Feed Co. v. Kennel, 63 Cal.App. 108, 218 P. 274, 275.

FIRST-CLASS MAIL-MATTED. In the postal laws, all mailable matter containing writing and all else that is sealed against inspection.

FIRST-CLASS ℹ In English law. Under the prisons act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, § 67) prisoners in the county, city, and borough prisons convicted of misdemeanor, and not sentenced to hard labor, are divided into two classes, one of which is called the "first division;" and it is in the discretion of the court to order that such a prisoner be treated as a misdemeanant of the first division, usually called "first-class misdemeanant," and as such not to be deemed a criminal prisoner, i. e., a prisoner convicted of a crime.

FIRST-CLASS TITLE. A marketable title, shown by a clean record, or at least not depending on pre-sumptions that must be overcome or facts that are uncertain. Vought v. Williams, 120 N.Y. 253, 24 N.E. 195, 8 L.R.A. 591, 17 Am.St.Rep. 634.

FIRST DEGREE BURN. One which produces an inflammation of the outer layer of the skin, like a sunburn. Smith v. Beard, 56 Wyo. 375, 110 P. 2d 260, 261, 262.

FIRST DOMESTIC PROCESSING. Refining or saponification of coconut oil is a "processing" or use thereof, and if the refining or saponification is the first processing or use of the oil in the United States, and occurs in the course of the manufacture or production of any article intended for sale, it is the "first domestic processing" within the statute taxing the first domestic processing. Revenue Act of 1934, § 602 1/2 (a), 26 U.S.C.A. § 2470(a). Cincinnati Soap Co. v. U. S., D.C.Ohio, 22 F.Supp. 141.

FIRST FRUITS. In English ecclesiastical law, the first year's whole profits of every benefice or spiritual living, anciently paid by the incumbent to the pope, but afterwards transferred to the fund called "Queen Anne's Bounty," for increasing the revenue from poor livings.

In feudal law, one year's profits of land which belonged to the king on the death of a tenant in capite; otherwise called "primer seisin." One of the incidents to the old feudal tenures. 2 Bl. Comm. 66, 67.

FIRST HEIR. The person who will be first entitled to succeed to the title to an estate after the termination of a life estate or estate for years. Winter v. Perratt, 5 Barn. & C. 48.

FIRST IMPRESSION. First examination. First presentation to a court for examination or decision. A case is said to be "of the first impression" when it presents an entirely novel question of law for the decision of the court, and cannot be governed by any existing precedent.

FIRST IN, FIRST OUT RULE. It is not a rule of law nor of logic, but a rule of thumb. It is a presumption of fact and really a regulation of the burden of proof. What is first sold is presumed to be what was first bought. Ninth Bank & Trust Co. v. U. S., D.C.Pa., 15 F.Supp. 951, 952.

FIRST INVENTOR. Within the meaning of that phrase as used in the fourth paragraph of Rev.St. § 4920 (35 U.S.C.A. § 69), providing that it shall be a defense to a suit for infringement that the patentee was not the original or first inventor, a person who perfects his invention, the only evidence of such perfected invention ordinarily derivable from any patent being a union of disclosure and claim. Davis-Bournonville Co. v. Alexander Milburn Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 1 F.2d 227, 232.

FIRST LIEN. One which takes priority or precedence over all other charges or incumbrances upon the same piece of property, and which must be satisfied before such other charges are entitled to participate in the proceeds of its sale.

FIRST MEETING. As used in a statute providing that, for insulting words or conduct to reduce homicide to manslaughter, killing must occur immediately or at "first meeting" after slayer is informed thereof, quoted words mean first time parties are in proximity under such circumstances as would enable slayer to act in the premises. Smith v. State, 288 S.W. 458, 462, 105 Tex.Cr.R. 327.

FIRST OF EXCHANGE. Where a set of bills of exchange is drawn in duplicate or triplicate, for greater safety in their transmission, all being of the same tenor, and the intention being that the exceptance and payment of any one of them (the first to arrive safely) shall cancel the others of the set, they are called individually the "first of exchange," "second of exchange," etc. See Bank of Pittsburgh v. Neal, 22 How. 96, 110, 16 L.Ed. 323.

FIRST POLICY YEAR. This phrase in a statute eliminating suicide of insured after such year as defense, means year for which policy, annually renewed, was first issued. Carter v. Standard Acc. Ins. Co., 65 Utah, 465, 238 P. 259, 267, 41 A.L.R. 1495. The year beginning with the issuance of the policy. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Thompson, Tex.Civ.App., 186 S.W. 254, 255.

FIRST PROCESSING. The processing that first results in a marketable product. Hendricks v. Di Giorgio Fruit Corporation, D.C.Cal., 49 F.Supp. 573, 575, 576.

FIRST PURCHASER. In the law of descent, this term signifies the ancestor who first acquired (in any other manner than by inheritance) the estate which still remains in his family or descendants. Blair v. Adams, C.C.Tex., 59 F. 247.

FIRST RETURN. The "first return", within statute as to depletion deduction is a first return listing items of gross income and deductions arising out of the property. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Alta Mines, C.C.A.10, 139 F.2d 580, 582.

FIRST TRIAL. Under a statute providing when a case at law is tried by a jury, and the successful party excepts to the granting of a new trial for insufficiency of the evidence, and the evidence is certified, the appellate court, if there have been two trials below, shall first look to the evidence and proceedings on the first trial, and, if the setting aside of the first verdict was error, all proceedings subsequent thereto shall be annulled, and judgment rendered thereon, the "first trial" means the first at-which exceptions to the granting of a new trial were taken. Chesapeake & 0. Ry. Co. v. Parker's Adm'r, 116 Va. 368, 82 S.E. 183, 187.

FISC. A treasury of a kingdom or state; a money chest. Daly v. Beery, 45 N.D. 287, 178 N.W. 104, 109. An Anglicized form of the Latin "fiscus," (which see.)

FISCAL. Of or pertaining to the public treasury or revenue, of or pertaining to financial matters generally. Wall v. Close, 203 La. 345, 14 So. 2d 19, 26. Belonging to the fisc, or public treasury. Relating to accounts or the management of revenue. Of or pertaining to the public finances of a government. Daly v. Beery, 45 N.D. 287, 178 N.W. 104, 109. Financial. Armstrong v. State Bank of Mayville, 177 App.Div. 265, 165 N.Y.S. 5, 8.

FISCAL AGENT. This term does not necessarily imply a depositary of the public funds, so as, by the simple use of it in a statute, without any directions in this respect, to make it the duty of the state treasurer to deposit with him any moneys in the treasury. State v. Dubuclet, 27 La.Ann. 29.

FISCAL COURT. A ministerial and executive body in some states. Stone v. Winn, 165 Ky. 9, 176 S.W. 933, 941.

FISCAL JUDGE. A public officer named in the laws of the Ripuarians and some other Germanic peoples, apparently the same as the "Graf," "reeve," "comes," or "count," and so called because charged with the collection of public revenues, either directly or by the imposition of fines. See Spelman, voc. "Grafio."

FISCAL OFFICERS. Those charged with the collection and distribution of public money, as, the money of a state, county, or municipal corporation.

FISCAL YEAR. The year by or for which accounts are reckoned, or the year between one annual time of settlement or balancing of accounts and another. People ex rel. Pollastrini v. Whealan, 353 Ill. 500, 187 N.E. 491, 494. An accounting period of 12 months. U. S. v. Mabel Elevator Co. D.C.Minn., 17 F.2d 109, 110; U. S. v. Carroll Chain Co., D.C.Ohio, 8 F.2d 529, 530. A period of twelve months (not necessarily concurrent with the calendar year) with reference to which appropriations are made and expenditures authorized, and at the end of which accounts are made up and the books balanced. Shaffner v. Lipinsky, 194 N.C. 1, 138 S.E. 418, 419.

FISCUS. Roman law. The treasury of the prince or emperor, as distinguished from "cerarium," which was the treasury of the state. Spelman; Paillet, Droit Public, 21, n. This distinction was not observed in France. In course of time the Fiscus absorbed the cerarium and became the treasury of the state. Gray, Nature and Sources of Law 58. See Law 10, ff. De jure Fisci.

The treasury or property of the state, as distinguished from the private property of the sovereign.

English law. The king's treasury, as the repository of forfeited property.

The treasury of a noble, or of any private person. Spelman.

FISH. An animal which inhabits the water, breathes by means of gills, swims by the aid of fins, and is oviparous. The term includes crabs, State v. Savage, 96 Or. 53, 184 P. 567, 570; escallops, State v. Dudley, 182 N.C. 822, 109 S.E. 63, 65; and mussels and other shellfish, Gratz v. McKee, C.C.A.Mo., 258 F. 335, 336.

The object to be removed from oil well is known as a "fish." Raymond v. Wickersham, Cust. & Pat.App., 110 F.2d 863, 864.

FISH COMMISSIONER. A public officer of the United States, created by act of congress of February 9, 1871, R.S. § 4395, whose duties principally concerned the preservation and increase throughout the country of fish suitable for food. Office of Commissioner of Fisheries was abolished and functions were transferred to the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, 16 U.S.C.A. § 241 notes.

FISH POTS. Contrivances in the nature of screens and traps, placed at the junction of low dams or walls extending out from each shore and somewhat down stream, in such a way as to collect the water and send it through the pot, so that fish may be screened out there. Middlekauff v. Le Compte, 149 Md. 621, 132 A. 48.

Cf. Pound Net.

FISH ROYAL. These were the whale and the sturgeon, which, when thrown ashore or caught near the coast of England, became the property of the king by virtue of his prerogative and in recompense for his protecting Ole shore from pirates and robbers. Brown; 1 Bl.Comm. 290. Arnold v. Mundy, 6 N.J.L. 86, 10 Am.Dec. 356. Some authorities include the porpoise. Hale, De Jure Mar. pt. 1, c. 7; Plowd. 305; Bracton, L 3, c. 3.

FISHERY. A place prepared for catching fish with nets or hooks. This is commonly applied to the place of drawing a seine or net. Hart v. Hill, 1 Whart., Pa., 131, 132,

A right or liberty of taking fish; a species of incorporeal hereditament, anciently termed "piscary," of which there are several kinds. 2 Bl. Comm. 34, 39; 3 Kent, Comm. 409-418; Arnold v. Mundy, 6 N.J.L. 22, 10 Am.Dec. 356; Gould v. James, 6 Cow., N.Y., 376; Hart v. Hill, 1 Whart., Pa., 124.

Common fishery. A fishing ground where all persons have a right to take fish. Bennett v. Costar, 8 Taunt. 183; Albright v. Park Com'n, 68 N.J.L. 523, 53 A. 612. Not to be confounded with "common of fishery," as to which see Common, n.

Free fishery. A franchise in the hands of a subject, existing by grant or prescription, distinct from an ownership in the soil. It is an exclusive right, and applies to a public navigable river, without any right in the soil. 3 Kent, Comm. 410. Arnold v. Mundy, 6 N.J.L. 87, 10 Am. Dec. 356.

Right of fishery. The general and common right of the citizens to take fish from public waters, such as the sea, great lakes, etc. Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U.S. 1, 14 S.Ct. 548, 38 L. Ed. 331.

Several fishery. A fishery of which the owner is also the owner of the soil, or derives his right from the owner of the soil. 2 Bl.Com. 39, 40; 1 Steph.Corrun. 671, note. One by which the party claiming it has the right of fishing, independently of all other, so that no person can have a coextensive right with him in the object claimed; but a partial and independent right in another, or a limited liberty, does not derogate from the right of the owner. 5 Burr. 2814.

FISHERY LAWS. A series of statutes passed in England for the regulation of fishing, especially to prevent the destruction of fish during the breeding season, and of small fish, spawn, etc., and the employment of improper modes of taking fish. 3 Steph.Comm. 165.

FISHGARTH. A dam or weir in a river for taking fish. Cowell.

Or seeking disclosure by adversary of facts supporting suit. Puget Sound Na^{y}. Co. v. Associated Oil Co., D.C.Wash., 56 F.2d 605, 606. A discovery sought on general, loose, and vague allegations. Story, Eq.P1. § 325; In re Pacific Ry. Com'n, C.C.Cal., 32 F. 263; or on suspicion, surmise, or vague guesses. Marietta Mfg. Co. v. Hedges-Walsh-Weidner Co., 9 W.W.Harr. 511, 2 A.2d 922, 926.

Where purpose of proposed examination of witness was to examine books and records to determine status of an account on which petitioner expected to sue, the proceeding was a "fishing expedition". State ex rel. Pitcher v. District Court of Fifth Judicial Dist. in and for Madison County, 114 Mont. 128, 133 P.2d 350, 353.

FISK. In Scotch law, the fiscus or fist. The revenue of the crown. Generally used of the personal estate of a rebel which has been forfeited to the crown. Bell.

FISSURE VEIN. In mining law, a vein or lode of mineralized matter filling a pre-existing fissure or crack in the earth's crust extending across the strata and generally extending indefinitely downward. See Crocker v. Manley, 164 Ill. 282, 45 N.E. 577, 56 Am.St.Rep. 196.

FISTUCA, or FESTUCA. In old English law, the rod or wand, by the delivery of which the property in land was formerly transferred in making a feoffment. Called, also, "baculum," "virga," and lustis." Spelman. See Festuca.

FISTULA. In the civil law, a pipe for conveying water. Dig. 8, 2, 18.

FIT. Suitable or appropriate. Whisnant v. State, 39 Okl.Cr. 214, 264 P. 837, 839. Conformable to a duty. Adapted to, designed, prepared. Thomas v. State, 34 Okl.Cr. 49, 244 P. 816. Proper. Hanes v. Southern Public Utilities Co., 191 N.C. 13, 131 S.E. 402, 406.

FIT, n. In medical jurisprudence, an attack or spasm of muscular convulsions, generally attended with loss of self-control and of consciousness; particularly, such attacks occurring in epilepsy. In a more general sense, the period of an acute attack of any disease, physical or mental, as, a fit of insanity. See Gunter v. State, 83 Ala. 96, 3 So. 600. Also used in the plural, in which sense it is a layman's term for epilepsy. Westphal' v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 27 Cal.App. 734, 151 P. 159, 162.

FITZ. A Norman word, meaning "son." It is used in law and genealogy; as Fitzherbert, the son of Herbert; Fitzjames, the son of James; Fitzroy, the son of the king. It was originally applied to illegitimate children.

FIVE-MILE ACT. An act of parliament, passed in 1665, against non-conformists, whereby ministers of that body who refused to take the oath of non-resistance were prohibited from coming within five miles of any corporate town, or place where they had preached or lectured since the passing of the act of oblivion in 1660, nullified by act of 1689. Brown.

FIX. Adjust or regulate. McKann v. Town of Irvington, 133 N.J.L. 63, 42 A.2d 391, 393. Determine; settle. Bunn v. Kingsbury County, 3 S.D. 87, 52 N.W. 673; In re McLure's Estate, 68 Mont. 556, 220 P. 527, 530. Make permanent. Kendall v. Stafford, 178 N.C. 461, 101 S.E. 15, 17. It imports finality and stability. MacNeill v. Bazemore, 194 Ga. 406, 21 S.E.2d 414, 416. Certainty and definiteness. Commercial Casualty Ins. Co. v. State Board of Tax Appeals, 119 N.J.L. 94, 194 A. 390, 391.

To liquidate or render certain. To fasten a liability upon one. To transform a possible or contingent liability into a present and definite liability. Zimmerman v. Canfield, 42 Ohio St. 468; Polk v. Minnehaha County, 5 Dak. 129, 37 N.W. 93; Logansport & W. V. Gas Co. v. Peru, C.C.Ind., 89 F. 187.

FIX UP. A promise by a debtor to visit his creditor and "fix it up" with him was not a sufficient promise to pay to toll the statute of limitations, as the expression "fix it" would ordinarily be understood as meaning "make some kind of agreement or adjustment that may dispose of it." Shaw v. Bubier, 119 Me. 83, 109 A. 373, 374.

FIXED. In a charter entered into by the captain of a ship, containing the condition, "Provided ship not fixed previously," "fixed" was equivalent to "tied up," "closed," "not free." Richichi v. James B. Drake & Sons, D.C.Me., 280 F. 421, 424.

Prices are "fixed" when they are agreed upon. United States v. Masonite Corporation, N.Y., 316 U.S. 265, 62 S.Ct. 1070, 1076, 86 L.Ed. 1461.

FIXED ASSET. An asset essential to continuance of undertaking and proper operation of business. Ruden v. City of Platte, 62 S.D. 175, 252 N.W. 32.

FIXED CAPITAL. Cost of total plant and general equipment. Lindheimer v. Illinois Bell Telephone Co., Ill., 292 U.S. 151, 54 S.Ct. 658, L.Ed. 1182.

FIXED LIABILITIES. Those certain and definite as to both obligation and amount. National Commercial Title & Mortgage Guaranty Co. v. City of Newark, 18 N.J.Misc. 186, 11 A.2d 759, 763.

FIXED OPINION. A conviction, prejudgment, disqualifying juror to impartially consider whole evidence and apply free from bias law as given in charge by court. Peterson v. State, 227 Ala. 361, 150 So. 156, 159.

FIXED PRICES. Agreed prices. United States v. Food and Grocery Bureau of Southern California, D.C.Cal., 43 F.Supp. 966, 972.

FIXED SALARY. One which is definitely ascertained and prescribed as to amount and time of payment, and does not depend upon the receipt of fees or other contingent emoluments; not necessarily a salary which cannot be changed by competent authority. Sharpe v. Robertson, 5 Grat., Va., 518; Hedrick v. U. S., 16 Ct.C1. 101. Established or settled, to remain for a time. Board of Sup'rs of Yavapai County v. Stephens, 177 P. 261, 262, 20 Ariz. 115.

FIXING BAIL. In practice, rendering absolute the liability of special bail.

FIXTURE. A chattel attached to realty, In re Triborough Bridge Approach, City of New York, 159 Misc. 617, 288 N.Y.S. 697, 707. Becoming accessory to it and part and parcel of it. Farmers & Merchants Bank v. Sawyer, 26 Ala.App. 520, 163 So. 657. And ordinarily the property of the owner of the land. Hill.; Atlantic Refining Co. v. Feinberg, 1 W.W.Harr., Del., 183, 112 A. 685, 687; Red Diamond Clothing Co. v. Steidemann, 169 Mo. App. 306, 152 S.W. 609, 617.

A. thing is deemed to be affixed to land when it is attached to it by roots, imbedded in it, permanently resting upon it, or permanently attached to what is thus permanent, as by means of cement, plaster, nails, bolts, or screws. Civ.Code Cal. § 660; Big Sespe Oil Co. v. Cochran, C.C.A.Cal., 276 F. 216, 225.

Ordinarily, requisites are actual annexation to realty, or something appurtenant thereto, appropriation to use or purpose of realty, and intention to make article permanent accession to freehold as gathered from nature of articles affixed, relation and situation of person making annexation, structure and mode of annexation, and purpose or use for which it has been made. Bankers Life Ins. Co. v. Ohrt, 131 Neb. 858, 270 N.W. 497, 502.

It has been said, however, that a "fixture" formerly meant any chattel which on becoming affixed to the soil became a part of the realty; but it now means those things which formed an exception to that rule and can be removed by the person who affixed them to the soil, L.R. 4 Ex. 328; if they can be taken away without material injury to the realty. Boise Ass'n of Credit Men v. Ellis, 26 Idaho, 438, 144 P. 6, 9, L.R.A.1915E, 917.

It has also been said that it is generally understood to comprehend any article which a tenant has the power to remove. Sheen v. Rickie, 5 Mees. & W. 174; Rogers v. Gilinger, 30 Pa. 185, 189, 72 Am. Dec. 694.

The general result seems to be that three views have been taken. One is that "fixture" means something which has been affixed to the realty, so as to become a part of it; it is fixed, irremovable. An opposite view is that "fixture" means something which appears to be a part of the realty, but is not fully so; it is only a chattel fixed to it, but removable. An intermediate view is that "fixture" means a chattel annexed, affixed, to the realty, but imports nothing as to whether it is removable; that is to be determined by considering its circumstances and the relation of the parties. Abbott; New Castle Theater Co. v. Ward, 57 Ind.App. 473, 104 N.E. 526, 527; Review Printing Co. v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 133 Minn. 213, 158 N.W. 39, 40.

Things fixed or affixed to other things. The rule of law regarding them is that which is expressed in the maxim, "accessio cedit principali," "the accessory goes with, and as part of, the principal subject-matter." Brown.

That which is fixed or attached to something permanently as an appendage, and not removable. Webster. Something fixed or immovable. Worcester.

A piece of metal having the same function as a jig, except that the operation upon the casting, which it is designed to facilitate, is an operation of grooving and planing, instead of drilling holes. Commonwealth Trust Co. of Pittsburgh v. Harkins, 312 Pa. 402, 167 A. 278, 280.

Agricultural fixtures. Those annexed for the purpose of farming. In re Shelar, D.C.Pa., 21 F.2d 136, 138.

Domestic fixtures. All such articles as a tenant attaches to a dwelling house in order to render his occupation more comfortable or convenient, and which may be separated from it without doing substantial injury, such as furnaces, stoves, cupboards, shelves, bells, gas fixtures, or things merely ornamental, as painted wainscots, pier and chimney glasses, although attached to the walls with screws, matble chimney pieces, grates, beds nailed to the walls, window blinds and curtains. Wright v. Du Bignon, 40 S.E. 747, 114 Ga. 765, 57 L.R.A. 669.

Trade fixtures. Articles placed in or attached to rented buildings by the tenant, to prosecute the trade or business for which he occupies the premises, or to be used in connection with such business, or promote convenience and efficiency in conducting it. Herkimer County L. & P. Co. v. Johnson, 37 App.Div. 257, 55 N.Y.Supp. 924; Brown v. Reno Electric L. & P. Co., C.C.Nev., 55 F. 231; Northwestern Lumber & Wrecking Co. v. Parker, 125 Minn. 107, 145 N.W. 964, 965. Such chattels as merchants usually possess and annex to the premises occupied by them to enable them to store, handle, and display their goods, which are generally removable without material injury to the premises. Lovett v. Bermingham-Seaman-Patrick Co., 192 Mich. 372, 158 N.W. 881, 883.

FLACO. A place covered with standing water.

FLAG. A national standard on which are certain emblems; ark ensign; a banner.

It is carried by soldiers, ships, etc., and commonly displayed at forts and many other suitable places.

In common parlance, the word "flag," when used as denoting a signal, does not necessarily mean the actual use of a flag, but by figure of speech the word is used in the secondary sense and signifies a signal given as with a flag, that is to say, as by a waiving of the hand for the purpose of communicating information. Bergfeld v. Kansas City Rys. Co., 285 Mo. 654, 227 S.W. 106, 110.

FLAG, DUTY OF THE. This was an ancient ceremony in acknowledgment of British sovereignty over the British seas, by which a foreign vessel struck her flag and lowered her top-sail on meeting the British flag.

FLAG, LAW OF. In maritime law. The law of that nation or country whose flag is flown by a particular vessel.

A shipowner who sends his vessel into a foreign port gives notice by his flag to all who enter into contracts with the master that he intends the law of that flag to regulate such contracts, and that they must either submit to its operation or not contract with him. Ruhstrat v. People, 185 Ill. 133, 57 N.E. 41, 49 L.R.A. 181, 76 Am.St.Rep. 30.

FLAG OF THE UNITED STATES. By the act entitled "An act to establish the flag of the United States," (Rev.St. §§ 1791, 1792), it was provided "that, from and after the fourth day of July next, the flag of the United States be thirteen horizontal stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be twenty stars, white in a blue field; that, on the admission of every new state into the Union, one star be added to the union of the flag; and that such addition shall take effect on the fourth day of July then next succeeding such admission." See Act July 30, 1947, c. 389, §§ 1, 2, 61 Stat.. 641; 4 U.S.C.A. §§ 1, 2.

FLAG OF TRUCE. A white flag displayed by one of two belligerent parties to notify the other party that communication and a cessation of hostilities are desired.

Davis, 18 Cal. 2d 389, 115 P.2d 821, 823, 824.

Where a stream coming out of the mouth of a canyon has left a cone of detritus and flows down one side thereof, but in a time of high water it breaks out of its channel to flow down the other slope of the cone, such waters are "flood waters", it being immaterial that the escaping waters have made for themselves a channel or follow some natural channel, gulley, or depression. Horton v. Goodenough, 184 Cal. 451, 194 P. 34, 35 ; Motl v. Boyd, 116 Tex. 82, 286 S.W. 458, 468; Herminghaus v. Southern California Edison Co., 200 Cal. 81, 252 P. 607, 610.

FLOOR. A section of a building between horizontal planes. Lowell v. Strahan, 145 Mass. 1, 12 N.E. 401, 1 Am.St.Rep. 422. A story, including outer walls. Leominster Fuel Co. v. Scanlon, 243 Mass. 126, 137 N.E. 271, 24 A.L.R. 1459.

The word "floor" may mean the mere bottom plane of an inclosure or artificial structure, the surface on which we walk, ride, or travel, or it may mean such surface or plane, together with the timbers, framework, and materials which enter into and form part of its construction. So of the word "flooring," If used without reference to a structure in its completed form, it would ordinarily convey the idea of materials suitable for use in constructing a floor, or in a narrower sense the boards or planks for covering the framework of a floor. When used with reference to a completed structure, it may mean either the materials of which the floor is composed, or the completed floor structure. When not attempting to speak with technical, exactness, the words "floor" and "flooring" may be, and often are, used as synonymous or interchangeable terms, Cedar Rapids & M. C. R. Co. v. City of Cedar Rapids, 173 Iowa 386, 155 N.W. 842; Missouri Pac, R. Co. v. Holt, C.C.A. Ark. 293 F. 155, 157.

A term used metaphorically, in parliamentary practice, to denote the exclusive right to address the body in session.

A member who has been recognized by the chairman, and who is in order, is said to "have the floor," until his remarks are concluded. Similarly, the "floor of the house" means the main part of the hall where the members sit, as distinguished from the galleries, or from the corridors or lobbies.

In England, the floor of a court is that part between the judge's bench and the front row of counsel. Litigants appearing in person, in the high court or court of appeal, are supposed to address the court from the floor.

FOLC-GEMOTE (spelled, also, folkmote, folcmote, folkgemote; from folc, people, and gemote, an assembly). In Saxon law, a general assembly of the people in a town or shire.

It appears to have had judicial functions of a limited nature, and also to have discharged political offices, such as deliberating upon the affairs of the commonwealth or complaining of misgovernment, and probably possessed considerable powers of local self-government. The name was also given to any sort of a popular assembly. See Spelman; Manwood; Cunningham.

FOLC-LAND. In Saxon law, land of the folk or people. Land belonging to the people or the public.

Folc-land was the property of the community. It might be occupied in common, or possessed in severalty; and, in the latter case, it was probably parceled out to individuals in the folc-gemote or court of the district, and the grant sanctioned by the freemen who were there present. But, while it continued to be folc-land, it could not be alienated in perpetuity; and therefore, on the expiration of the term for which it had been granted, it reverted to the community, and was again distributed by the same authority. It was subject to many burdens and exactions from which boc-land was exempt. Wharton.

FOLC-RIGHT. The common right of all the people. 1 Bl.Comm. 65, 67.

FOLGERS. Menial servants or followers. Cowell.

FOLGOTH. Official dignity.

FOLIE BRIGHTIQUE, See Insanity.

FOLIE CIRCULAERE, See Insanity.

FOLIO. A leaf. In the ancient lawbooks it was the custom to number the leaves, instead of the pages; hence a folio would include both sides of the leaf, or two pages. The references to these books are made by the number of the folio, the letters "a" and "b" being added to show which of the two pages is intended; thus "Bracton, fol. 100a."

A large size of book, the page being obtained by folding the sheet of paper once only in the binding. Many of the ancient lawbooks are folios.

When used in connection with legal documents, it means a certain number of words varying from 72 to 100, but generally in the United States consisting of 100. Reed v. Sackett, 135 Okl. 69, 273 P. 1002, 1004.

In pleading denying allegations of a specified folio, it refers to a division in a document for purpose of measurement or reference. Mahin v. Mahin, 131 Fla. 546, 179 So. 651.

FORBARRER. L.Fr. To bar out; to preclude; hence, to estop.

FORBATUDUS. In old English law, the aggressor slain in combat. Jacob.

FORBEARANCE. Act by which creditor waits for payment of debt due him by debtor after it becomes due. Upton v. Gould, 64 Cal.App.2d 814, 149 P.2d 731, 733. A delay in enforcing rights. Shaw v. Philbrick, 129 Me. 259, 151 A. 423, 74 A. L.R. 290. Indulgence granted to a debtor. Dry Dock Bank v. American Life Ins., etc., Co., 3 N. Y. 354.

Refraining from action. The term is used in this sense in general jurisprudence, in contradistinction to "act."

Within usury law, term signifies contractual obligation of lender or creditor to refrain, during given period of time, from requiring borrower or debtor to repay loan or debt then due and payable. Hafer v. Spaeth, 22 Wash.2d 378, 156 P.2d 408, 411.

FORCE. Power dynamically considered, that is, in motion or in action; constraining power, compulsion; strength directed to an end. Usually the word occurs in such connections as to show that unlawful or wrongful action is meant. Watson v. Railway Co., 7 Misc.Rep. 562, 28 N.Y.S. 84; Plank Road Co. v. Robbins, 22 Barb., N.Y., 667; Temple Lumber Co. v. Living, Tex.Civ.App., 289 S.W. 746, 749; Hafner Mfg. Co. v. City of St. Louis, 262 Mo. 621, 172 S.W. 28, 34.

Unlawful violence. It is either simple, as entering upon another's possession, without doing any other unlawful act; compound, when some other violence is committed, which of itself alone is criminal; or implied, as in every trespass, rescous, or disseisin. Lambert v. Helena Adjustment Co., 69 Mont. 510, 222 P. 1057, 1058.

It may mean either exact pressure times exact area to which the pressure is applied, or it may mean simply an operative physical power without taking account of the exact quantity applied. Hydraulic Press Corporation v. Coe, 77 U.S.App.D.C. 251, 134 F.2d 49, 56.

Such display of physical power as is reasonably calculated to inspire fear of physical harm to those opposing possession of premises by trespasser. Smith .v. Sinclair Refining Co., Tex.Civ.App., 77 S.W.2d 894, 895.

Terms "violence" and "force" are synonymous when used in relation to assault. People v. James, 9 Cal.App.2d 162, 48 P.2d 1011, 1012.

Power statically considered; that is at rest, or latent, but capable of being called into activity upon occasion for its exercise. Efficacy; legal validity. This is the meaning when we say that a statute or a contract is "in force."

As used in divorce statute, "force" or "coercion" are synonymous. Santer v. Santer, 115 Pa. Super. 1, 174 A. 651, 652.

In old English law, a technical term applied to a species of accessary before the fact.

In Scotch law, coercion; duress. Bell.

—Of force. See that title.

FORCE AND ARMS. A phrase used in declarations of trespass and in indictments, but now unnecessary in declarations, to denote that the act complained of was done with violence. 2 Chit.P1. 846, 850.

FORCE AND FEAR, called also "vi metuque," means that any contract or act extorted under the pressure of force (vis) or under the influence of fear (metus) is voidable on that ground, provided, of course, that the force or the fear was such as influenced the party. Brown.

FORCE MAJESTURE. Includes lightnings, earthquakes, storms, flood, sunstrokes, freezing, etc., wherein latter two can be considered hazards in contemplation of employer within Compensation Act. Fogg v. Van Saun Coal Co., N.J.Dept. Labor, 12 N.J.Misc. 680, 174 A. 419, 420.

FORCE MAJEURE. Fr. In the law of insurance, superior or irresistible force. Emerig. Tr. des Ass. c. 19

FORCED HEIRS. Those persons whom the testator or donor cannot deprive of the portion of his estate reserved for them by law, except in cases where he has a just cause to disinherit them. Civil Code La. art. 1495. And see Crain v. Crain, 17 Tex. 90; Hagerty v. Hagerty, 12 Tex. 456; Miller v. Miller, 105 La. 257, 29 So. 802.

FORCED SALE. In practice, a sale made at the time and in the manner prescribed by law, in virtue of execution issued on a judgment already rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction; a sale made under the process of the court, and in the mode prescribed by law. Sampson v. Williamson, 6 Tex. 110, 55 Am.Dec. 762.

A sale against the consent of the owner. The term should not be deemed to embrace a sale under a power in a mortgage. Patterson v. Taylor, 15 Fla. 336.

FORCES. The military and naval power of the country.

FORCHEAPUM. Pre-emption; forestalling the market. Jacob.

FORCIBLE DETAINER. Exists where one originally in rightful possession of realty refuses to surrender it at termination of his possessory right. Sayers & Muir Service Station v. Indian Refining Co., 266 Ky. 779, 100 S.W.2d 687, 689.

The offense of violently keeping possession of lands and tenements, with menaces, force, and arms, and without the authority of law. 4 Bl.Comm. 148; 4 Steph.Comm. 280.

Forcible detainer may ensue upon a peaceable entry, as well as upon a forcible entry; but it is most commonly spoken of in the phrase "forcible entry and detainer."

FORCIBLE ENTRY. Violently taking possession of lands and tenements with menaces, force, and arms, against the will of those entitled to the possession, and without the authority of law. 4 31. Comm. 148; 4 Steph. Comm. 280; Code Ga. 1882, § 4524 (Pen. Code, 1910, § 344). Accompanied with circumstances tending to excite terror in the occupant, and to prevent him from maintaining his rights. Barbee v. Winnsboro Granite Corporation, 190 S.C. 245, 2 S:E.2d 737, 739. Angry words and threats of force may be sufficient. Calidino Hotel Co. of San Bernardino v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Savings Ass'n, 31 Cal.App. 2d 295, 87 P.2d 923, 931.

Every person is guilty of forcible entry who either (1) by breaking open doors, windows, or other parts of a house, or by any kind of violence or circumstance of terror, enters upon or into any real property; or (2) who, after entering peaceably upon real property, turns out by force, threats, or menacing conduct the party in possession. Code Civil Proc.Cal. § 1159.

In many states, an entry effected without consent of rightful owner, or against his remonstrance, or under circumstances which amount to no more than a mere trespass, is now technically considered "forcible," while a detainer of the property consisting merely in the refusal to surrender possession after a lawful demand, is treated as a "forcible" detainer, the "force" required at common law being now supplied by a mere fiction. See Vernon's Tex. Ann.Civ.St. art. 3975; Goldsberry v. Bishop, 2 Duv., Ky., 144; Wells v. Darby, 13 Mont. 504, 34 P. 1092; Willard v. Warren, 17 Wend., N.Y. 261; California Products v. Mitchell, 52 Cal.App. 312, 198 P. 646.

FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER. A summary proceeding for restoring to possession of land one who is wrongfully kept out or has been wrongfully deprived of the possession. Wein v. Albany Park Motor Sales Co., 312 Ill.App. 357, 38 N.E.2d 556, 559.

The title cannot be inquired into for any purpose. Davis v. Robinson, 374 Ill. 553, 30 N.E.2d 52, 54. The inquiry is confined to the actual and peaceable possession of the plaintiff and the unlawful or forcible ouster or detention by defendant; the object of the law being to prevent the disturbance of the public peace by the forcible assertion of a private right. Gore v. Altice, 33 Wash. 335, 74 P. 556; Eveleth v. Gill, 97 Me. 315, 54 A. 757; Harris v. Harris, 190 Ala. 619, 67 So. 465, 466; Long v. Bagwell, 38 Okl. 312, 133 P. 50, 51.

FORCIBLE TRESPASS. In North Carolina, this is an invasion of the rights of another with respect to his personal property, of the same character, or under the same circumstances, which would constitute a "forcible entry and detainer" of real property at common law. It consists in taking or seizing the personal property of another by force, violence, or intimidation or in forcibly injuring it. State v. Lawson, 123 N.C. 740, 31 S.E. 667, 68 Am.St.Rep. 844; State v. Holder, 188 N.C. 561, 125 S.E. 113, 114.

There must be actual violence used, or such demonstration of force as is calculated to intimidate or tend to a breach of the peace. It is not necessary that the person be actually put in fear. State v. Stinnett, 167 S.E. 63, 64, 203 N.C. 829.

FORDA. In old records, a ford or shallow, made by damming or penning up the water. Cowell.

FORDAL. A butt or headland, jutting out upon other land. Cowell.

FORDANNO. In old European law, he who first assaulted another. Spelman.

FORDIKA. In old records, grass or herbage growing on the edge or bank of dykes or ditches. Cowell.

FORE—OATH. Before the Norman Conquest, an oath required of the complainant in the first instance (in the absence of manifest facts) as a security against frivolous suits. Pollock, 1 Sel. Essays Anglo-Amer. Leg. Hist. 93.

FOREBALK. See Headland.

FORECLOSE. To shut out; to bar; to terminate. State v. Darling, 39 S.D. 558, 165 N.W. 536, 537.

Method of terminating mortgagor's right of redemption. Hibernia Savings & Loan Soc. v. Lauffer, 41 Cal.App.2d 725, 107 P.2d 494, 497.

FORECLOSURE. To shut out, to bar, to destroy an equity of redemption. Anderson v. Barr, 178 Okl. 508, 62 P.2d 1242, 1246. A termination of all rights of the mortgagor or his grantee in the property covered by the mortgage. Levin v. Century Indemnity Co., 279 Mass. 256, 181 N.E. 223, 225.

A process in chancery by which all further right existing in a mortgagor to redeem the estate is defeated and lost to him, and the estate becomes the absolute property of the mortgagee; being applicable when the mortgagor has forfeited his estate by non-payment of the money due on the mortgage at the time appointed, but still retains the equity of redemption. 2 Washb. Real Prop. 237. Goodman v. White, 26 Conn. 322; Trustees of Schools v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 296 Ill. 99, 129 N.E. 567, 568.

The term is also loosely applied to any of the various methods, statutory or otherwise, known in different jurisdictions, of enforcing payment of the debt secured by a mortgage, by taking and selling the mortgaged estate. Dikeman v. Jewel Gold Mining Co., C.C.A.Alaska, 13 F.2d 118; Realty Mortgage Co. v. Moore, 80 Fla. 2, 85 So. 155, 156.

Foreclosure is also applied to proceedings founded upon some other liens; thus there are proceedings to foreclose a mechanic's lien. Insurance Co. of North America v. Cheathem, 221 Ky. 668, 299 S. W. 545, 547. It is a proceeding in court or out of court, when provided for by a valid contract, to subject property or part thereof covered by a lien to payment of debt secured by the lien, and it has effect of extinguishing all right, title, or interest, if any, of defendants in the property. Southwestern Peanut Growers Ass'n v. Womack, Tex.Civ.App., 179 S.W.2d 371, 373.

Statutory foreclosure. The term is sometimes applied to foreclosure by execution of a power of sale contained in the mortgage, without recourse to the courts, as it must conform to the provisions of the statute regulating such sales. See Mowry v. Sanborn, 11 Hun, N.Y., 548.

Strict foreclosure. A decree of strict foreclosure of a mortgage finds the amount due under the mortgage, orders its payment within a certain limited time, and provides that, in default of such payment, the debtor's right and equity of redemption shall be forever barred and foreclosed its effect is to vest the title of the property absolutely in the mortgagee, on default in payment, without any sale of the property. Champion v. Hinkle, 45 N.J.Eq. 162, 16 A. 701; Lightcap v. Bradley, 186 Ill. 510, 58 N.E. 221; Warner Bros. Co. v. Freud, 138 Cal. 651, 72 P. 345.

FORECLOSURE DECREE. Properly speaking, a decree ordering the strict foreclosure of a mortgage; but the term is also loosely and conventionally applied to a decree ordering the sale of the mortgaged premises and the satisfaction of the mortgage out of the proceeds. Hanover F. Ins. Co. v. Brown, 77 Md. 64, 25 A. 989, 39 Am.St. Rep. 386.

FORECLOSURE SALE. A sale of mortgaged property to obtain satisfaction of the mortgage out of the proceeds, whether authorized by a decree of the court or by a power of sale contained in the mortgage. Johnson v. Cook, 96 Mo.App. 442, 70 S.W. 526.

FORECLOSURE SUIT. A proceeding for legal determination of existence of lien, ascertainment of its extent, and subjection to sale of estate pledged for its satisfaction, and to settle conflicting claims by selling equity of redemption. Reichert v. McCool, 92 Ind.App. 406, 169 N.E. 86, 88.

FOREFAULT. In Scotch law, to forfeit; to lose.

FOREGIFT. A premium for a lease.

FOREGOERS. Royal purveyors. 26 Edw. III. c. 5.

FOREHAND RENT. In English law, rent payable in advance; or, more properly, a species of premium or bonus paid by the tenant on the making of the lease, and particularly on the renewal of leases by ecclesiastical corporations.

FOREIGN. Belonging to another nation or coun7 try; belonging or attached to another jurisdiction; made, done, or rendered in another state or jurisdiction; subject to another jurisdiction; operating or solvable in another territory; extrinsic; outside; extraordinary. Nonresident.

Blanchette v. New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., 90 N.H. 207, 6 A.2d 161, 162.

FOREIGN APPOSER. An officer in the exchequer who examines the sheriff's estreats, comparing them with the records, and apposeth (interrogates) the sheriff what he says to each particular sum therein. 4 Inst. 107; Blount; Cowell.

FOREIGN BOUGHT AND SOLD. A custom in London which, being found prejudicial to sellers of cattle in Smithfield, was abolished. Wharton.

FOREIGN COINS. Coins issued as money under the authority of a foreign government. As to their valuation in the United States, see 46 Stat. 739, 31 U.S.C.A. § 372.

FOREIGN COURTS. The courts of a foreign state or nation. In the United States, this term is frequently applied to the courts of one of the states when their judgments or records are introduced in the courts of another.

FOREIGN DOMINION. In English law this means a country which at one time formed part of the dominions of a foreign state or potentate, but which by conquest or cession has become a part of the dominions of the British crown. 5 Best & S. 290.

FOREIGN ENLISTMENT ACT. The statute 59 Geo. III. c. 69, prohibiting the enlistment, as a soldier or sailor, in any foreign service. 4 Steph. Comm. 226. A later and more stringent act is that of 33 & 34 Vict. c. 90.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE. Drafts drawn on a foreign state or country.

FOREIGN—GOING SHIP. By the English merchant shipping act, 1854, (17 & 18 Vict. c. 104,) § 2, any ship employed in trading, going between some place or places in the United Kingdom and some place or places situate beyond the following limits, that is to say: The coasts of the United Kingdom, the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Sark, Alderney, and Man, and the continent of Europe, between the river Elbe and Brest, inclusive. Home-trade ship includes every ship employed in trading and going between places within the last-mentioned limits.

FOREIGN JUDGMENT. See Judgment.

FOREIGN JURISDICTION. Any jurisdiction foreign to that of the forum. Also the exercise by a state or nation of jurisdiction beyond its own territory, the right being acquired by treaty or otherwise.

FOREIGN LAWS. The laws of a foreign country, or of a sister state. People v. Martin, 38 Misc. Rep. 67, 76 N.Y.S. 953; Bank of Chillicothe v. Dodge, 8 Barb., N.Y., 233. Foreign laws are often the suggesting occasions of changes in, or additions to, our own laws, and in that respect are called "jus receptum." Brown.

FOREIGN MATTER. In old practice, matter triable or done in another county. Cowell.

FOREIGN OFFICE. The department of state through which the English sovereign communicates with foreign powers. A secretary of state is at its head. Till the middle of the last century, the functions of a secretary of state as to foreign and home questions were not disunited.

FOREIGN SERVICE, in feudal law, was that whereby a mesne lord held of another, without the compass of his own fee, or that which the tenant performed either to his own lord or to the lord paramount out of the fee. (Kitch. 299.) Foreign service seems also to be used for knight's service, or escuage uncertain. (Perk. 650.) Jacob.

FOREIGN TRADE. Commercial interchange of commodities from different countries; export and import trade. Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey v. United States, 29 Cust. & Pat.App. 82, 120 F.2d 340, 342.

FOREIGN WILL. Will of person not domiciled within state at time of death. De Tray v. Hardgrove, Tex.Com.App., 52 S.W.2d 239, 240. •

FOREIGNER. In old English law, this term, when used with reference to a particular city, designated any person who was not an inhabitant of that city. According to later usage, it denotes a person who is not a citizen or subject of the state or country of which mention is made, or any one owing allegience to a foreign state or sovereign.

For the distinctions, in Spanish law, between "domiciliated" and "transient" foreigners, see Yates v. lams, 10 Tex. 168.

FOREIN. An old form of foreign (q. v.). Blount.

FOREJUDGE. In old English law and practice, to expel from court for some offense or misconduct. When an officer or attorney of a court was expelled for any offense, or for not appearing to an action by bill filed against him, he was said to be forejudged the court. Cowell.

To deprive or put out of a thing by the judgment of a court. To condemn to lose a thing.

To expel or banish.

FOREJUDGER. In English practice, a judgment by which a man is deprived or put out of a thing; a judgment of expulsion or banishment.

FORESTAGE. A duty or tribute payable to the king's foresters. Cowell.

FORESTAGIUM. A duty or tribute payable to the king's foresters. Cowell.

FORESTALL. To intercept or obstruct a passenger on the king's highway. Cowell. To beset the way of a tenant so as to prevent his coming on the premises. 3 Bl. Comm. 170. To intercept a deer on his way to the forest before he can regain it. Cowell.

FORESTALLER. In old English law, obstruction; hindrance; the offense of stopping the highway; the hindering a tenant from coming to his land; intercepting a deer before it can regain the forest. Also one who forestalls; one who commits the offense of forestalling. 3 Bl. Comm. 170; Cowell.

FORESTALLING. Obstructing the highway. Intercepting a person on the highway.

FORESTALLING THE MARKET. Securing control of commodities on way to market. Raney v. Montgomery County Com'rs, 170 Md. 183, 183 A. 548, 551.

The act of the buying or contracting for any merchandise or provision on its way to the market, with the intention of selling it again at a higher price; or the dissuading persons from bringing their goods or provisions there; or persuading them to enhance the price when there. 4 Bl. Comm. 158. Barton v. Morris, 10 Phila., Pa., 361. This was formerly an indictable offense in England, but is now abolished by St. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 24. 4 Steph.Comm. 291, note.

FORESTARIUS.

In English law, a forester. An officer who takes care of the woods and forests. De forestario apponendo, a writ which lay to appoint a forester to prevent further commission of waste when a tenant in dower had committed waste. Bract. 316; Du Cange.

In Scotch law, a forester or keeper of woods, to whom, by reason of his office, pertains the bark and the hewn branches. And, when he rides through the forest, he may take a tree as high as his own head. Skene de Verb. Sign.

FORESTER. A sworn officer of the forest, appointed by the king's letters patent to walk the forest, watching both the vert and the venison, attaching and presenting all trespassers against them within their own bailiwick or walk. These letters patent were generally granted during good behavior; but sometimes they held the office in fee. Blount.

FORETHOUGHT FELONY. In Scotch law, murder committed in consequence of a previous design. Ersk. Inst. 4, 4, 50; Bell.

FORFANG. In old English law, the taking of provisions from any person In fairs or markets before the royal purveyors were served with necessaries for the sovereign. Cowell. Also the seizing and rescuing of stolen or strayed cattle from the hands of a thief, or of those having illegal possession of them; also the reward fixed for such rescue.

FORFEIT. To lose, or lose the right to, by some error, fault, offense, or crime, or to subject, as property, to forfeiture or confiscation. State v. Cowen, 231 Iowa 1117, 3 N.W.2d 176, 180. To lose, in consequence of breach of contract, neglect of duty, or offense, some right, privilege, or property to another or to the State. United States v. Chavez, C.C.A.N.M., 87 F.2d 16, 19.

To incur a penalty; to become liable to the payment of a sum of money, as the consequence of a certain act. Sands v. Holbert, 93 W.Va. 574, 117 S.E. 896, 899; Ford v. Ellison, 287 Mo. 683, 230 S.W. 637, 640.

To lose an estate, a franchise, or other property belonging to one, by the act of the law, and as a consequence of some misfeasance, negligence, or omission. Cassell v. Crothers, 193 Pa. 359, 44 A. 446; State v. De Gress, 72 Tex. 242, 11 S.W. 1029; State v. Baltimore & 0. R. Co., 12 Gill & J., Md., 432, 38 Am.Dec. 319. The further ideas connoted by this term are that it is a deprivation, (that is, against the will of the losing party,) and that the property is either transferred to another or resumed by the original grantor.

FORFEITABLE. Liable to be forfeited; subject to forfeiture for non-user, neglect, crime, etc.

FORFEITURE. Something to which the right is lost by the commission of a crime or fault or the losing of something by way of penalty. Ridgeway v. City of Akron, Ohio App., 42 N.E.2d 724, 726. 1. A punishment annexed by law to some illegal act or negligence in the owner of land, tenements, or hereditaments whereby he loses all interest therein. Hammond v. Johnson, 94 Utah 20, 66 P.2d 894, 900. And which go to the party injured as a recompense for the wrong which he alone, or the public together with himself, hath sustained. 2 Bl.Comm. 267. Wiseman v. McNulty, 25 Cal. 237; Stephenson v. Calliham, Tex.Civ.App., 289 S.W. 158, 159; Fratt v. Daniels-Jones Co., 47 Mont. 487, 133 P. 700, 701.

2. The loss of land by a tenant to his lord, as the consequence of some breach of fidelity. 1 Steph.Cornm. 166.

3. The loss of lands and goods to the state, as the consequence of crime. 4 Bl.Comm. 381, 387; 4 Steph.Comm. 447, 452; 2 Kent, Comm. 385; 4 Kent, Comm. 426; Avery v. Everett, 110 N.Y. 317, 18 N.E. 148, 1 L.R.A. 264, 6 Am. St.Rep. 368.

4. The loss of goods or chattels, as a punishment for some crime or misdemeanor in the party forfeiting, and as a compensation for the offense and injury committed against him to whom they are forfeited. 2 Bl.Comm. 420.

5. The loss of office by abuser, non-user, or refusal to exercise it. City of Williamsburg v. Weesner, 164 Ky. 769, 176 S.W. 224, 225.

6. The loss of a corporate franchise or charter in consequence of some illegal act, or of malfeasance or nonfeasance. Murphy v. Missouri & Kansas Land & Loan Co., 28 N.D. 519, 149 N.W. 957, 959; Village of Fredonia v. Fredonia Natural Gas Light Co., 87 Misc. 592, 149 N.Y.S. 964, 965.

7. The loss of the right to life, as the consequence of the commission of some crime to which the law has affixed a capital penalty. In re New Jersey Court of Pardons, 97 N.J.Eq. 555, 129 A. 624, 630.

8. The incurring a liability to pay a definite sum of money as the consequence of violating the provisions of some statute, or refusal to comply with some requirement of law. State v. Marion County Com'rs, 85 Ind. 493.

9. A thing or sum of money forfeited. Something imposed as a punishment for an offense or delinquency. The word in this sense is frequently associated with the word "penalty." Van Buren v. Digges, 11 How. 477, 13 L.Ed. 771; Bryant v. Rich's Grill, 216 Mass. 344, 103 N.E. 925, 927, Ann.Cas.1915B, 869; Miller v. Bopp, 136 La. 788, 67 So. 831; Missouri, K & T. Ry. Co. v. Dewey Portland Cement Co., 113 Okl. 142, 242 P. 257, 259.

10. In mining law, the loss of a mining claim held by location on the public domain (unpatented) in consequence of the failure of the holder to make the required annual expenditure upon it within the time allowed. McKay v. McDougall, 25 Mont. 258, 64 P. 669, 87 Am.St.Rep. 395; St. John v. Kidd, 26 Cal. 271.

FORFEITURE OF BOND. A failure to perform the condition upon which obligor was to be excused from the penalty in the bond. Hall v. Browning, 71 Ga.App. 835, 32 S.E.2d 424, 427.

FORFEITURE OF MARRIAGE. A penalty incurred by a ward in chivalry who married without the consent or against the will of the guardian. See Duplex Valor Maritagii.

FORFEITURES ABOLITION ACT. Another name for the felony act of 1870, abolishing forfeitures for felony in England.

FORGABULUM, or FORGAVEL. A quit-rent; a small reserved rent in money. Jacob.

FORGE. To fabricate by false imitation. Carter v. State, 135 Tex.Cr.R. 457, 116 S.W.2d 371, 377. To fabricate, construct, or prepare one thing in imitation of another thing, with the intention of substituting the false for the genuine, or otherwise deceiving and defrauding by the use of the spurious article. To counterfeit or make falsely. Especially, to make a spurious written instrument with the intention of fraudulently substituting it for another, or of passing it off as genuine; or to fraudulently alter a genuine instrument to another's prejudice; or to sign another person's name to a document, with a deceitful and fraudulent intent. In re Cross, D.C.N.C., 43 F. 520; U. S. v. Watkins, 28 Fed.Cas. 445; Johnson v. State, 9 Tex.App. 251; Longwell v. Day, 1 Mich. N.P. 290.

To forge (a metaphorical expression, borrowed from the occupation of the smith) means, properly speaking, no more than to make or form, but in our law it is always taken in an evil sense. 2 East, P. C. p. 852, c. 19, § 1.

To forge is to make in the likeness of something else; to counterfeit is to make in imitation of something else, with a view to defraud by passing the false copy for genuine or original. Both words, "forged" and "counterfeited," convey the idea of similitude. State v. McKenzie, 42 Me. 392.

In common usage, however, forgery is almost always predicated of some private instrument or writing, as a deed, note, will, or a signature; and counterfeiting denotes the fraudulent imitation of coined or paper money or some substitute therefor.

FORGERY.

Criminal Law

The false making or material altering, with intent to defraud, of any writing which, if genuine, might apparently be of legal efficacy or the foundation of a legal liability. People v. Routson, 354 Ill. 573, 188 N.E. 883, 885; 2 Bish. Crim. Law, § 523; McCornack v. Central State Bank, 203 Iowa 833, 211 N.W. 542, 545, 52 A.L.R. 1297. A fraudulent making and alteration of writing to prejudice of another man's right, or a false making, a making malo animo of any instrument, for the purpose of fraud or deceit. Iberville Trust & Saving Bank v. City Café, La.App., 143 So. 73. See Forge.

The thing itself, so falsely made, imitated or forged; especially a forged writing. A forged signature is frequently said to be "a forgery."

Evidence

The fabrication or counterfeiting of evidence. The artful and fraudulent manipulation of physical objects, or the deceitful arrangement of genuine facts or things, in such a manner as to create an erroneous impression or a false inference in the minds of those who may observe them. See Burrill, Circ. Ev. 131, 420.

FORGERY ACT, 1870. The statute 33 & 34 Vict. c. 58, was passed for the punishment of forgers of stock certificates, and for extending to Scotland certain provisions of the forgery act of 1861. Mozley & Whitley.

FORISFACTUS. A criminal. One who has forfeited his life by commission of a capital offense. Spelman.

FORISFACTUS SERVUS. A slave who has been a free man, but has forfeited his freedom by crime. Du Cange.

FORISFAMILIARE. In old English and Scotch law, literally, to put out of a family (fortis familiam ponere). To portion off a son, so that he could have no further claim upon his father. Glanv. lib. 7, c. 3.

To emancipate, or free from paternal authority.

FORISFAMILIATED. In old English law, portioned off.

A son was said to be forisfamiliated (forisfamiliari) if his father assigned him part of his land, and gave him seisin thereof, and did this at the request or with the free consent of the son himself, who expressed himself satisfied with such portion. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 42, 110.

FORISFAMILIATUS. In old English law, put out of a family; portioned off; emancipated; forisfamiliated. Bract. fol. 64.

FORISJUDICATUS. Forejudged; sent from court; banished. Deprived of a thing by judgment of court. Bract. fol. 250b; Co. Litt. 100b; Du Cange.

FORISJURARE. To forswear; to abjure; to abandon.

Provinciam forisjurare. To forswear the country. Spelman.

FORISJURARE PARENTILAM. To remove oneself from parental authority. The person who did this lost his rights as heir. Du Cange.

FORJUDGE. See Forejudge.

FORJURER. L. Fr. In old English law, to forswear; to abjure.

FORJURER ROYALME. To abjure the realm. Britt. cc. 1, 16.

FORLER-LAND. Land in the diocese of Hereford, which had a peculiar custom attached to it, but which has been long since disused, although the name is retained. But. Surv. 56.

FORM. A model or skeleton of an instrument to be used in a judicial proceeding, containing the principal necessary matters, the proper technical terms or phrases, and whatever else is necessary to make it formally correct, arranged in proper and methodical order, and capable of being adapted to the circumstances of the specific case.

In contradistinction to "substance," "form" means the legal or technical manner or order to be observed in legal instruments or juridical proceedings, or in the construction of legal documents or processes.

Antithesis of "substance." Phoenix Building & Homestead Ass'n v. Meraux, 189 La. 819, 180 So. 648, 649.

Common Form, Solemn Form. See Probate.

Forms of Action. This term is the general designation of the various species or kinds of personal actions known to the common law, such as trover, trespass, debt, assumpsit, etc. These differ in their pleadings and evidence, as well as in the circumstances to which they are respectively applicable. Truax v. Parvis, 7 Houst. (Del.) 330, 32 A. 227.

Matter of Form. In pleadings, in indictments, in affidavits, conveyances, etc., matter of form (as distinguished from matter of substance) is all that relates to the mode, form, or style of expressing the facts involved, the choice or arrangement of words, and other such particulars, without affecting the substantial validity or sufficiency of the instrument, or without going to the merits. Railway Co. v. Kurtz, 10 Ind.App. 60, 37 N.E. 303; Meath v. Mississippi Levee Com'rs, 109 U.S. 268, 3 S.Ct. 284, 27 L.Ed. 930; State v. Amidon, 58 Vt. 524, 2 A. 154.

Form of the Statute. This expression means the words, language, or frame of a statute, and hence the inhibition or command which it may contain; used in the phrase (in criminal pleading) "against the form of the statute in that case made and provided."

FORMA. Lat. Form; the prescribed form of judicial proceedings.

FORMA DAT ESSE. Form gives being. Called "the old physical maxim." Lord Henley, Ch., 2 Eden, 99.

FORMA ET FIGURA JUDICH. The form and shape of judgment or judicial action. 3 Bl. Comm. 271.

FORMA LEGALIS FORMA ESSENTIALIS. Legal form is essential form. 10 Coke, 100.

FORMA NON OBSERVATA, INFERTUR AD-. NULLATIO ACTUS. Where form is not observed, a nullity of the act is inferred. 12 Coke, 7. Where the law prescribes a form, the non-observance of it is fatal to the proceeding, and the whole becomes a nullity. Best, Ev. Introd. § 59.

FORMA PAUPERIS. See In Forma Pauperis.

FORMAL. Relating to matters of form; as, "formal defects"; inserted, added, or joined pro forma. See Parties.

FORMALITY. The conditions, in regard to method, order, arrangement, use of technical expressions, performance of specific acts, etc., which are required by the law in the making of contracts or conveyances, or in the taking of legal proceedings, to insure their validity and regularity. Succession of Seymour, 48 La.Ann. 993, 20 So. 217.

FORMATA. In canon law, canonical letters. Spelman.

FORMATA BREVIA. Formed writs; writs of form. See Brevia Formata.

FORMED ACTION. An action for which a set form of words is prescribed, which must be strictly adhered to. 10 Mod. 140, 141.

FORMED DESIGN. In criminal law, and particularly with reference to homicide, this term means a deliberate and fixed intention to kill, whether directed against a particular person or not. Mitchell v. State, 60 Ala. 33; Wilson v. State, 128 Ala. 17, 29 So. 569; Ake v. State, 30 Tex. 473.

FORMEDON. An ancient writ in English law which was available for one who had a right to lands or tenements by virtue of a gift in tail.

It was in the nature of a writ of right, and was the highest action that a tenant in tail could have; for he could not have an absolute writ of right, that being confined to such as claimed in fee-simple, and for that reason this writ of formedon was granted to him by the statute de donis, (Westm. 2, 13 Edw. I. c. 1,) and was emphatically called "his" writ of right. The writ was distinguished into three species, viz. : Formedon in the descender, in the remainder, and in the reverter. It was abolished in England by St. 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 27. See 3 B1.Comm. 191; Co. Litt. 316; Fitzh.Nat.Brev. 255.

FORMEDON IN THE DESCENDER. A writ of formedon which lay where a gift was made in tail, and the tenant in tail aliened the lands or was disseised of them and died, for the heir in tail to recover them, against the actual tenant of the freehold. 3 Bl. Comm. 192.

FORMEDON IN THE REMAINDER. A writ of formedon which lay where a man gave lands to another for life or in tail, with remainder to a third person in tail or in fee, and he who had the particular estate died without issue inheritable, and a stranger intruded upon him in remainder, and kept him out of possession. In this case he in remainder, or his heir, was entitled to this writ. 3 Bl. Comm. 192.

FORMEDON IN THE REVERTER. A writ of formedon which lay where there was a gift in tail, and afterwards, by the death of the donee or his heirs without issue of his body, the reversion fell in upon the donor, his heirs or assigns. In such case, the reversioner had this writ to recover the lands. 3 Bl. Comm. 192.

FORMELLA. A certain weight of above 70 lbs., mentioned in 51 Hen. III. Cowell.

FORMER ACQUITTAL. See Autrefois.

FORMER ADJUDICATION. An adjudication in a former action. See Res Judicata.

Either a final determination of the rights of the parties or an adjudication of certain questions of fact. Johnson v. Fontana County Fire Protection Dist., 101 P.2d 1092, 1097, 15 Cal.2d 380; Johnson v. Fontana County Fire Protection Dist., Cal.App., 87 P.2d 426, 430.

FORMER JEOPARDY. Plea of "former jeopardy," that a man cannot be brought into danger of his life or limb for the same offense more than once, is fundamental common law and constitutional right of defendant, affording protection against his being again tried for the same offense, and not against the peril of second punishment. State v. Fredlund, 200 Minn. 44, 273 N.W. 353, 355, 113 A.L.R. 215.

FORMER RECOVERY. Recovery in a former action. See Res Judicata.

FORMIDO PERICULI, Lat. Fear of danger. 1 Kent, Comm. 23.

FORMS OF ACTION. This term comprehends the various classes of personal action at common law, viz.: trespass, case, trover, detinue, replevin, covenant, debt, assumpsit, scire facias, and revivor, as well as the nearly obsolete actions of account and annuity, and the modern action of mandamus.

They are now abolished in England by the Judicature Acts of 1873 and 1875, and in many of the states of the United States, where a uniform course of proceeding under codes of procedure has taken their place. But the principles regulating the distinctions between the common-law actions are still found applicable even where the technical forms are abolished.

FORMULA. In common-law practice, a set form of words used in judicial proceedings.

In the civil law, an action. Calvin.

FORMULA DEAL. An agreement between motion picture distributors and independent or affiliated circuits to exhibit a feature in all theatres at specified percentage of national gross receipts realized from such feature by all theatres in the United States. U. S. v. Paramount Pictures, D.C. N.Y., 66 F.Supp. 323, 333, 347.

FORMULA INSTRUCTION. An instruction intended to be complete statement of law upon which jury may base verdict. Harvey v. Aceves, 115 Cal.App. 333, 1 P.2d 1043, 1045.

FORMULIE. In Roman law, when the legis actiones were proved to be inconvenient, a mode of procedure called "per formulas," (i. e., by means of formulce,) was gradually introduced, and eventually the legis actiones were abolished by the Lex .Xbutia, B. C. 164, excepting in a very few exceptional matters.

The formulce were four in number, namely : (1) The Demonstratio, wherein the plaintiff stated, i. e., showed, the facts out of which his claim arose; (2) the Intentio, where he made his claim against the defendant; (3) the Adjudicatio, wherein the judex was directed to assign or adjudicate the property or any portion or portions thereof according to the rights of the parties; and (4) the Condemnatio, in which the judex was authorized and directed to condemn or to acquit according as the facts were or were not proved. These formulae were obtained from the magistrate, (in jure,) and were thereafter proceeded with before the judex, (in judicio). Brown. See Mackeld.Rom. Law, § 204.

FORMULARIES. Collections of formulce, ,Jr forms of forensic proceedings and instruments used among the Franks, and other early continental nations of Europe. Among these the formulary of Marculphus may be mentioned as of considerable interest. Butl. Co. Litt. note .77, lib. 3.

FORNAGIUM. The fee taken by a lord of his tenant, who was bound to bake in the lord's common oven (in furno domini), or for a commission to use his own.

FORNICATION. Unlawful sexual intercourse between two unmarried persons. Further, if one of the persons be married and the other not, it is fornication on the part of the latter, though adultery for the former. In some jurisdictions, however, by statute, it is adultery on the part of both persons if the woman is married, whether the man is married or not. Banks v. State, 96 Ala. 78, 11 So. 404; Hood v. State, 56 Ind. 263, 26 Am, Rep. 21; State v. Phillips, 26 N.D. 206, 144 N.W. 94, 95, 49 L.R.A.,N.S., 470, Ann.Cas.1916A, 320; State v. Ling, 91 Kan. 647, 138 P. 582, Ann.Cas. 1915D, 374.

FORNIX, Lat. A brothel; fornication.

FORNO. In Spanish law, an oven. Las Partidas, pt. 3, tit. 32, l. 18.

FORO. In Spanish law, the place where tribunals hear and determine causes,—exercendarum litium locus.

FOROS. In Spanish law, emphyteutic rents. Schm. Civil Law, 309.

FORPRISE. An exception; reservation; excepted; reserved. Anciently, a term of frequent use in leases and conveyances. Cowell; Blount.

In another sense, the word is taken for any exaction.

FORSCHEL. A strip of land lying next to the highway.

FORSES. Waterfalls. Camden, Brit.

FORSPEAKER. An attorney or advocate in a cause. Blount; Whishaw.

FORSPECA. In old English law, prolocutor; paranymphus.

FORSTAL. See Forestall.

FORSTELLARIUS EST PAUPERUM DEPRESSOR ET TOTIUS COMMUNITATIS ET PATRLE PUBLICUS INIMICUS. 3 Inst. 196. A forestaller is an oppressor of the poor, and a public enemy of the whole community and country.

FORSWEAR. In criminal law, to make oath to that which the deponent knows to be untrue.

This term is wider in its scope than "perjury," for the latter, as a technical term, includes the idea of the oath being taken before a competent court or officer, and relating to a material issue, which is not implied by the word "forswear." Fowle v. Robbins, 12 Mass. 501; Tomlinson v. Brittlebank, 4 Barn. & A. 632; Railway Co. v. McCurdy, 114 Pa. 554, 8 A. 230, 60 Am.Rep. 363.

FORT. This term means "something more than a mere military camp, post, or station. The term implies a fortification, or a place protected from attack by some such means as a moat, wall, or parapet." U. S. v. Tichenor, C.C.Or., 12 F. 424.

FORTALICE, or FORTELACE. A fortress or place of strength, which anciently did not pass without a special grant. 11 Hen. VII. c. 18.

FORTALITIUM. In old Scotch law, a fortalice; a castle. Properly a house or tower which has a battlement or a ditch or moat about it.

FORTAXED. Wrongly or extortionately taxed.

FORTHCOMING. In Scotch law, the action by which an arrestment (garnishment) is made effectual. It is a decree or process by which the creditor is given the right to demand that the sum arrested be applied for payment of his claim. 2 Kames, Eq. 288, 289; Bell.

FORTHCOMING BOND. A bond conditioned on the forthcoming of property to answer such judgment as may be entered. If the property be forthcoming, no liability ensues. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Sabath, 286 Ill.App. 320, 3 N.E.2d 330, 335.

A bond given to a sheriff who has levied on property, conditioned that the property shall be forthcoming, i. e., produced, when required. On the giving of such bond, the goods are allowed to remain in the possession of the debtor. Hill v. Manser, 11 Grat., Va., 522 ; Nichols v. Chittenden, 14 Colo.App. 49, 59 P. 954; Burnham-Munger-Root Dry Goods Co. v. Strahl, 102 Neb. 142, 166 N.W. 266.

FORTHWITH. Immediately; without delay, directly, hence within a reasonable time under the circumstances of the case; promptly and with reasonable dispatch. State ex rel. Board of Education of City of Tulsa v. Morley, 168 Okl. 259, 34 P.2d 258, 261; 1 Chit. Archb. Pr. (12th Ed.) 164. Within such time as to permit that which is to be done, to be done lawfully and according to the practical and ordinary course of things to be performed or accomplished. Harris v. Stewart, 187 Miss. 489, 193 So. 339, 342. The first opportunity offered. Abbott v. State, 117 Neb. 350, 220 N.W. 578, 579.

FORTIA. Force. In old English law. Force used by an accessory, to enable the principal to commit a crime, as by binding or holding a person while another killed him, or by aiding or counseling in any way, or commanding the act to be done. Bract. fols. 138, 138b.

According to Lord Coke, fortia was a word of art, and properly signified the furnishing of a weapon of force to do the fact, and by force whereof the fact was committed, and he that furnished it was not present when the fact was done. 2 Inst. 182.

FORTILITY. In old English law, a fortified place; a castle; a bulwark. Cowell; 11 Hen. VII. c. 18.

FORTIOR. Lat. Stronger. A term applied, in the law of evidence, to that species of presumption, arising from facts shown in evidence, which is strong enough to shift the burden of proof to the opposite party. Burrill, Circ.Ev. 64, 66.

FORTIOR EST CUSTODIA LEGIS QUAM HOMINIS. 2 Rolle, 325. The custody of the law is stronger than that of man.

FORTIOR ET POTENTIOR EST DISPOSITIO LEGIS QUAM HOMINIS. The disposition of the law is of greater force and effect than that of man. Co.Litt. 234a; Shep.Touch. 302; 15 East, 178. The law in some cases overrides the will of the individual, and renders ineffective or futile his expressed intention or contract. Broom, Max. 697.

FORTIORI. See A Fortiori.

FORTIS. Lat. Strong. Fortis et sana, strong and sound; staunch and strong; as a vessel. Townsh.Pl. 227.

FORTLETT. A place or port of some strength; a little fort. Old Nat. Brev. 45.

FORTUIT. In French law, accidental; fortuitous. Cas fortuit, a fortuitous event. Fortuitement, accidentally; by chance; casually.

FORTUITOUS. Happening by chance or accident. Kermani v. Insurance Co. of North America, 142 Misc. 542, 255 N.Y.S. 687, 689. Occurring unexpectedly, or without known cause. Stanton v. Minneapolis St. Ry. Co., 195 Minn. 457, 263 N.W. 433, 434. Accidental; undesigned; adventitious. Resulting from unavoidable physical causes. Zappala v. Industrial Ins. Commission, 82 Wash. 314, 144 P. 54, L.R.A.1916A, 295.

FORTUITOUS COLLISION. In maritime law, the accidental running foul of vessels. Peters v. Warren Ins. Co., 14 Pet. 112, 10 L.Ed. 371.

FORTUITOUS EVENT. In the civil law, that which happens by a cause which cannot be resisted. An unforeseen occurrence, not caused by either of the parties, nor such as they could prevent.

In French it is called "cads fortuit." Civ. Code La. art. 3556, no. 15.

There is a difference between a fortuitous event, or inevitable accident, and irresistible force. By the former, commonly called the "act of God," is meant any accident produced by physical causes which are irresistible; such as a loss by lightning or storms, by the perils of the seas, by inundations and earthquakes, or by sudden death or illness. By the latter is meant such an interposition of human agency as is, from its nature and power, absolutely uncontrollable. Of this nature are losses occasioned by the inroads of a hostile army, or by public enemies. Story, Baffin. § 25. In Workmen's Compensation Acts fortuitous event is accidental happening, or accident that takes place without design or expectation, or thing that happens from irresistible cause. The term is expressly defined in several acts. Stolp v. Department of Labor and Industries, 138 Wash. 685, 245 P. 20, 21; Stertz v. Industrial Insurance Commission of Washington, 91 Wash. 588, 158 P. 256, 259, Ann.Cas.1918B, 354; Zappala v. Industrial Ins. Commission, 82 Wash. 314, 144 P. 54, L.R.A.1916A, 295.

FORTUNA. Lat. Fortune; also treasure-trove. Jacob.

FORTUNAM FACIUNT JUDICEM. They make fortune the judge. Co. Litt. 167. Spoken of the process of making partition among coparceners by drawing lots for the several purparts.

FORTUNE TELLER. One who professes to tell future events in the life of another. People v. Plaskett, 171 Misc. 563, 13 N.Y.S.2d 682, 684.

In English law, persons pretending or professing to tell fortunes, and punishable as rogues and vagabonds or disorderly persons. 4 Bl.Comm. 62.

FORTUNIUM. In old English law, a tournament or fighting with spears, and an appeal to fortune therein.

FORTY. In land laws and conveyancing, in those regions where grants, transfers, and deeds are made with reference to the subdivisions of the government survey, this term means forty acres of land in the form of a square, being the tract obtained by quartering a section of land (640 acres) and again quartering one of the quarters. Lente v. Clarke, 22 Fla. 515, 1 So. 149.

FORTY–DAYS COURT. In old English forest law, the court of attachment in forests, or woodmote court.

FORUM. Lat. A court of justice, or judicial tribunal; a place of jurisdiction; a place of litigation. 3 Story, 347. Place where remedy is pursued. Rubin v. Gallagher, 294 Mich. 124, 292 N.W. 584, 586.

In Roman law, the market place, or public paved court, in the city of Rome, where such public business was transacted as the assemblies of the people and the judicial trial of causes, and where also elections, markets, and the public exchange were held.

FORUM ACTUS. The forum of the act. The forum of the place where the act was done which is now called in question.

FORUM BOVARIUM. See Bovarius.

FORUM CONSCIENTIZE. The forum or tribunal of conscience.

FORUM CONTENTIOSUM. A contentious forum or court; a place of litigation; the ordinary court of justice, as distinguished from the tribunal of conscience. 3 Bl.Comm. 211.

FORUM CONTRACTUS. The forum of the contract; the court of the place where a contract is made; the place where a contract is made, considered as a place of jurisdiction. 2 Kent, Comm. 463.

FORUM CONVENIENS. Place where testamentary trustee may be reached by process. In re Knox' Estate, 52 Ca1.App.2d 338, 126 P.2d 108, 113.

FORUM DOMESTICUM. A domestic forum or tribunal. The visitatorial power is called a "forum domesticum," calculated to determine, sine strepitu, all disputes that arise within themselves. 1 W.B1. 82.

FORUM DOMICILII. The forum or court of the domicile; the domicile of a defendant, considered as a place of jurisdiction. 2 Kent, Comm. 463.

FORUM ECCLESIASTICUM. An ecclesiastical court. The spiritual jurisdiction, as distinguished from the secular.

FORUM LIGEANTIZE REI. The forum of defendant's allegiance. The court or jurisdiction of the country to which he owes allegiance.

FORUM NON CONVENIENS. The doctrine is patterned upon the right of the court in the exercise of its equitable powers to refuse the imposition upon its jurisdiction of the trial of cases even though the venue is properly laid if it appears that for the convenience of litigants and witnesses and in the interest of justice the action should be instituted in another forum where the action might have been brought. Hayes v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., D.C.Minn., 79 F.Supp. 821, 824. The doctrine presupposes at least two forums in which the defendant is amenable to process and furnishes criteria for choice between such forums. Wilson v. Seas Shipping Co., D.C.Pa., 78 F.Supp. 464, 465; Neal v. Pennsylvania R. Co., D.C.N.Y., 77 F.Supp. 423, 424. The application of the doctrine rests in the sound discretion of the court and the factors to be considered in the doctrine are the private interests of the litigant and the interest of the public. Cullinan v. New York Cent. R. Co., D. C.N.Y., 83 F.Supp. 870, 871. And a court, either state or federal, will generally decline to interfere with or control by injunction or otherwise the management of internal affairs of a corporation organized under the laws of another state, leaving controversies as to such matters to courts of state of domicile. Garrett v. Phillips Petroleum Co., Tex.Civ.App., 218 S.W.2d 238, 240; Murray v. Union Pac. R. Co., D.C.Ill., 77 F.Supp. 219; Kelley v. American Sugar Refining Co., C.C.A.Mass., 139 F. 2d 76; Tiuoli Realty v. Interstate Circuit, C.C.A. Tex., 167 F.2d 155; Rogers v. Guaranty Trust Co., 288 U.S. 123, 53 S.Ct. 295, 77 L.Ed. 652, 89 A.L.R. 720.

The rule is an equitable one embracing the discretionary power of a court to decline to exercise jurisdiction which it has over a transitory cause of action when it believes that the action may be more appropriately and justly tried elsewhere. Leet v. Union Pac. R. Co., 155 P.2d 42, 44, 25 Ca1.2d 605.

In determining whether doctrine should be applied, court should consider relative ease of access to sources of proof, availability of compulsory process for attendance of unwilling witnesses, cost of obtaining attendance of willing wig nesses, possibility of view of premises, and all other practical problems that make trial easy, expeditious and inexpensive. Di Lella v. Lehigh Val. R. Co., D.C.N.Y., 7 F.R. D. 192, 193.

FORUM ORIGINIS. The court of one's nativity. The place of a person's birth, considered as a place of jurisdiction.

FORUM REGIUM. The king's court. St. Westm. 2, c. 43.

FORUM REI. This term may mean either (1) the forum of the defendant, that is, of his residence or domicile; or (2) the forum of the res or thing in controversy, that is, of the place where the property is situated. The ambiguity springs from the fact that rei may be the genitive of either reus or res.

FORUM REI GESTAZE. The forum or court of a res fiesta (thing done;) the place where an act is done, considered as a place of jurisdiction and remedy. 2 Kent, Comm. 463.

FORUM REI SIT2E. The court where the thing in controversy is situated. The place where the subject-matter in controversy is situated, considered as a place of jurisdiction. 2 Kent, Comm. 463.

FORUM SECULARE. A secular, as distinguished from an ecclesiastical or spiritual, court.

FORURTH. In old records, a long slip of ground. Cowell.

FORWARD. To send forward; to send toward the place of destination; to transmit. Nicoletti v. Bank of Los Banos, 190 Cal. 637, 214 P. 51, 52, 27 A.L.R. 1479; Katcher v. American Express Co.,. 94 N.J.L. 165, 109 A. 741, 742.

FORWARDING MERCHANT, or FORWARDER. One who receives and forwards goods, taking upon himself the expenses of transportation, for which he receives a compensation from the owners, having no concern in the vessels or wagons by which they are transported, and no interest in, the freight, and not being deemed a common carrier, but a mere warehouseman and agent. Story, Bailm. §§ 502, 509. Schloss v. Wood, 11 Colo. 287,. 17 P. 910; Bush v. Miller, 13 Barb. N.Y. 488.

FOSSA. In the Civil law, a ditch; a receptacle of water, made by hand. Dig. 43, 14, 1, 5.

In Old English law, a ditch. A pit full of water, in which women committing felony were drowned. A grave or sepulcher. Spelman.

FOSSAGIUM. In old English law, the duty levied on the inhabitants for repairing the moat or ditch round a fortified town.

FOSSATORUM OPERATIO. In old English law, fosse-work; or the service of laboring, done by inhabitants and adjoining tenants, for the repair and maintenance of the ditches round a city or town, for which some paid a contribution, called "fossagium." Cowell.

FOSSATUM. A dyke, ditch, or trench; a place inclosed by a ditch; a moat; a canal.

FOSSE-WAY, or FOSSE. One of the four ancient Roman ways through England. Spelman.

FOSSELLUM. A small ditch. Cowell.

FOSTER PARENT. One who has performed the duties of a parent to the child of another by rearing the child as his own child; "foster child." In re Norman's Estate, 209 Minn. 19, 295 N.W. 63, 66.

FOSTERAGE. Care of a foster child, brother, sister, parent, etc.—one considered as holding the relationship indicated in consequence of nursing and rearing, though not related by blood. In re Norman's Estate, 295 N.W. 63, 66, 209 Minn. 19.

FOSTERING. A ancient custom in Ireland, in which persons put away their children to fosterers. Fostering was held to be a stronger alliance than blood, and the foster children participated in the fortunes of their foster fathers. Mozley & Whit. ley.

FOSTERLAND. Land given, assigned, or allotted to the finding of food or victuals for any person or persons; as in monasteries for the monks, etc, Cowell; Blount.

FOSTERLEAN. The remuneration fixed for the rearing of a foster child; also the jointure of a wife. Jacob.

FOUJDAR. In Hindu law, under the Mogul gov. ernment a magistrate of the police over a large district, who took cognizance of all criminal matters within his jurisdiction, and sometimes was employed as receiver general of the revenues. Wharton.

FOUJDARRY COURT. In Hindu law, a tribunal for administering criminal law.

FOUND. A person is said to be found within a state when actually present therein. Patient removed to a sanitarium in county was "found" in county. In re Cash, 383 Ill. 409, 50 N.E.2d 487, 490. But only if a person is in a place voluntarily and not by reason of plaintiff's fraud, artifice, or trick for purpose of obtaining service. Shields v. Shields, 115 Mont. 140, 139 P.2d 528, 530, 531. It does not necessarily mean physical presence: defendant who, after removal of action for breach of contract to federal court, entered general appearance, defended on the merits, and filed counterclaim, was "found" in the district. Freeman v. Bee Mach. Co., Mass., 319 U.S. 448, 63 S.Ct. 1146, 1149, 87 L.Ed. 1509.

As applied to a corporation it is necessary that it be doing business in such state through an officer or agent or by statutory authority in such manner as to render it liable then to suit and to constructive or substituted service of process. Romaine v. Ins. Co., C.C.Tenn., 55 F. 751; Venner v. Pennsylvania Steel Co. of New Jersey, D.C.N.J., 250 F. 292, 295; Haskell v. Aluminum Co. of America, D.C.Mass., 14 F.2d 864, 867. And to such an extent that actual presence is established. Westor Theatres v. Warner Bros. Pictures, D.C.N.J., 41 F.Supp. 757, 760.

FOUNDATION. The founding or building of a college or hospital. The incorporation or endowment of a college or hospital is the foundation; and he who endows it with land or other property is the founder. Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 667, 4 L.Ed. 629; Seagrave's Appeal, 125 Pa. 362, 17 A. 412; Union Baptist Ass'n v. Hunn, 7 Tex.Civ.App. 249, 26 S.W. 755.

FOUNDED. Based upon; arising from, growing out of, or resting upon; as in the expressions "founded in fraud," "founded on a consideration," "founded on contract," and the like. In re Grant Shoe Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 130 F. 881, 66 C.C.A. 78; Palmer v. Preston, 45 Vt. 158, 12 Am.Rep. 191; Steele v. Hoe, 14 Adol. & El. 431; In re Morales, D.C.Fla., 105 F. 761.

FOUNDED ON. To serve as a base or basis for. Keen v. Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp., D.C.Iowa, 58 F.Supp. 915, 922.

FOUNDER. The person who endows an eleemosynary corporation or institution, or supplies the funds for its establishment. See Foundation.

FOUNDERS' SHARES. In English Company Law, shares issued to the founders of (or vendors to) a public company as a part of the consideration for the business, or concession, etc., taken over, and not forming a part of, the ordinary capital. As a rule, such shares only participate in profits after the payment of a fixed minimum dividend on paid-up capital. Encyc. Dict.

FOUNDEROSA. Founderous; out of repair, as a road. Cro. Car. 366.

FOUNDLING. A deserted or exposed infant; a child found without a parent or guardian, its relatives being unknown. It has a settlement in the district where found. State ex rel. Wilson v. Pierre, 155 La. 510, 99 So. 421.

FOUNDLING HOSPITALS. Charitable institutions which exist in most countries for taking care of infants forsaken by their parents, such being generally the offspring of illegal connections. The foundling hospital act in England is the 13 Geo. II. c. 29.

FOUR. Fr. In old French law, an oven or bakehouse. Four banal, an oven, owned by the seignior of the estate, to which the tenants were obliged to bring their bread for baking. Also the proprietary right to maintain such an oven.

FOUR CORNERS. The face of a written instrument.

That which is contained on the face of a deed (without any aid from the knowledge of the circumstances under which it is made) is said to be within its four corners, because every deed is still supposed to be written on one entire skin, and so to have but four corners.

To look at the four corners of an instrument is to examine the whole of it, so as to construe it as a whole, without reference to any one part more than another. 2 Smith, Lead.Cas. 295.

FOUR SEAS. The seas surrounding England. These were divided into the Western, including the Scotch and Irish; the Northern, or North sea; the Eastern, being the German ocean; the Southern, being the British channel.

FOURCHER. Fr. To fork. This was a method of delaying an action anciently resorted to by defendants when two of them were joined in the suit. Instead of appearing together, each would appear in turn and cast an essoin for the other, thus postponing the trial.

FOURIERISM. A form of socialism. See 1 Mill, Pol. Ec. 260.

FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT. The Fourteenth Amendment of the constitution of the United States.

It became a part of the organic law July 28, 1868, and its importance entitles it to special mention. It creates or at least recognizes for the first time a citizenship of the United States, as distinct from that of the states; forbids the making or enforcement by any state of any law abridging the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States; and secures all "persons" against any state action which is either deprivation of life, liberty, or property without due process of law or denial of the equal protection of the laws.

FOWLS OF WARREN. Such fowls as are preserved under the game laws in warrens. According to Manwood, these are partridges and pheasants. According to Coke, they are partridges, rails, quails, woodcocks, pheasants, mallards, and herons. Co. Litt. 233.

FOX'S LIBEL ACT. In English law, this was the statute 52 Geo. III. c. 60, which secured to juries, upon the trial of indictments for libel, the right of pronouncing a general verdict of guilty or not guilty upon the whole matter in issue, and no longer bound them to find a verdict of guilty on proof of the piblication of the paper charged to be a libel, and of the sense ascribed to it in the: indictment. Wharton.

FOY. L. Fr. Faith; allegiance; fidelity.

FR. A Latin abbreviation for "fragmentum," a fragment, used in citations to the Digest or Pandects in the Corpus Juris Civilis of Justinian, the several extracts from juristic writings of which It is composed being so called.

FRACTIO. Lat. A breaking; division; fraction; a portion of a thing less than the whole.

FRACTION. A breaking, or breaking up; a fragment or broken part; a portion of a thing, less than the whole. Jory v. Palace Dry Goods Co., 30 Or. 196, 46 P. 786.

FRACTION OF A DAY. A portion of a day. The dividing a day. Generally, the law does not allow the fraction of a day. 2 Bl.Comm. 141.

FRACTIONAL. As applied to tracts of land, particularly townships, sections, quarter sections, and other divisions according to the government survey, and also mining claims, this term means that the exterior boundary lines are laid down to include the whole of such a division or such a claim, but that the tract in question does not measure up to the full extent or include the whole acreage, because a portion of it is cut off by an overlapping survey, a river or lake, or some other external interference. Tolleston Club v. State, 38 N.E. 214, 141 Ind. 197; Parke v. Meyer, 28 Ark. 287; Goitermann v. Schiermeyer, 111 Mo. 404, 19 S.W. 487. Any irregular division whether containing more or less than conventional amount of acreage. Graysonia-Nashville Lumber Co. v. Wright, 117 Ark. 151, 175 S.W. 405; South Florida Farms Co. v. Goodno, 84 Fla. 532, 94 So. 672, 675.

FRACTIONEM DIEI NON RECIPIT LEX. Lofft, 572. The law does not take notice of a portion of a day.

FRACTITIUM. Arable land. Mon. Angl.

FRACTURA NAVIUM. Lat. The breaking or wreck of ships; the same as naufragium, (q. v.)

FRAGMENTA. Lat. Fragments. A name sometimes applied (especially in citations) to the Digest or Pandects in the Corpus Juris Civilis of Justinian, as being made up of numerous extracts or "fragments" from the writings of various jurists. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 74.

FRAIS. Fr. Expense; charges; costs. Frais d'un procês, costs of a suit.

FRAIS DE JUSTICE. In French and Canadian law, costs incurred incidentally to the action.

FRAIS JUSQU'A BORD. Fr. In French commercial law, expenses to the board; expenses incurred on a shipment of goods, in packing, cartage, commissions, etc., up to the point where they are actually put on board the vessel. Bartels v. Redfield, C.C.N.Y., 16 F. 336.

FRAME-UP. Conspiracy or plot, especially for evil purpose, as to incriminate person on false evidence. State v. Bissell, 106 Vt. 80, 170 A. 102, 108.

FRAMED. When used to describe evidence, word is generally accepted as implying that willful perjurers, suborned by and conspiring with parties in interest to litigation, are swearing or have sworn to matters without any basis ih fact. Tri-State Transit Co. of Louisiana v. Westbrook, 207 Ark. 270, 180 S.W.2d 121. 125.

FRANC. A French coin of the value of a little over eighteen cents. Levy v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 210 App.Div. 422, 206 N.Y.S. 261, 262.

FRANC ALEU. In French feudal law, an allod; a free inheritance; or an estate held free of any services except such as were due to the sovereign.

FRANC TENANCIER. In French law, a freeholder.

FRANCHILANUS. A freeman. Chart. Hen. IV. A free tenant. Spelman.

FRANCHISE. A special privilege conferred by government on individual or corporation, and which does not belong to citizens of country generally of common right. Elliott v. City of Eugene, 135 Or. 108, 294 P. 358, 360. In England it is defined to be a royal privilege in the hands of a subject.

A "franchise," as used by Blackstone in defining quo warranto, (3 Corn. 262 [4th Am. Ed.] 322), had reference to a royal privilege or branch of the king's prerogative subsisting in the hands of the subject, and must arise from the king's grant, or be held by prescription, but today we understand a franchise to be some special privilege conferred by government on an individual, natural or artificial, which is not enjoyed by its citizens in general. State v. Fernandez, 106 Fla. 779, 143 So. 638, 639, 86 A.L.R. 240.

In this country a franchise is a privilege or immunity of a public nature, which cannot be legally exercised without legislative grant. To be a corporation is a franchise. The various powers conferred on corporations are franchises. The execution of a policy of insurance by an insurance company, and the issuing a bank-note by an incorporated bank, are franchises. People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns., N.Y., 387, 8 Am.Dec. 243. But it does not embrace the property acquired by the exercise of the franchise. Bridgeport v. New York & N. H. R. Co., 36 Conn. 255, 4 Am. Rep. 63. Nor involve interest in land acquired by grantee. Whitbeck v. Funk, 140 Or. 70, 12 P.2d 1019, 1020. In a popular sense, the political rights of subjects and citizens are franchises, such as the right of suffrage, etc. Pierce v. Emery, 32 N.H. 484; State v. Black Diamond Co., 97 Ohio St. 24, 119 N.E. 195, 199, L.R.A.1918E, 352.

Elective Franchise. The right of suffrage; the right or privilege of voting in public elections.

Exclusive Franchise. See Exclusive Privilege or Franchise.

General and Special. The charter of a corporation is its "general" franchise, while a "special" franchise consists in any rights granted by the public to use property for a public use but with private profit. Lord v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc., 194 N.Y. 212, 87 N.E. 443, 22 L.R.A.,N.S., 420.

Personal Franchise. A franchise of corporate existence, or one which authorizes the formation and existence of a corporation, is sometimes called a "personal" franchise, as distinguished from a "property" franchise, which authorizes a corporation so formed to apply its property to some particular enterprise or exercise some special privilege in its employment, as, for example, to construct and operate a railroad. See Sandham v. Nye, 9 Misc.Rep. 541, 30 N.Y.S. 552.

Secondary Franchises. The franchise of corporate existence being sometimes called the "primary" franchise of a corporation, its "secondary" franchises are the special and peculiar rights, privileges, or grants which it may receive under its charter or from a municipal corporation, such as the right to use the public streets, exact tolls, collect fares, etc. State v. Topeka Water Co., 61 Kan. 547, 60 P. 337; Virginia Canon Toll Road Co. v. People, 22 Colo. 429, 45 P. 398, 37 L.R.A. 711. The franchises of a corporation are divisible into (1) corporate or general franchises; and (2) "special or secondary franchises." The former is the franchise to exist as a corporation, while the latter are certain rights and privileges conferred upon existing corporations. Gulf Refining Co. v. Cleveland Trust Co., 166 Miss. 759, 108 So. 158, 160.

Special Franchises. See Secondary Franchises, supra.

FRANCHISE TAX. A tax on the franchise of a corporation, that is, on the right and privilege of carrying on business in the character of a corporation, for the purposes for which it was created, and in the conditions which surround it. In re Commercial Safe Deposit Co. of Buffalo, 148 Misc. 527, 266 N.Y.S. 626.

Though the value of the franchise, for purposes of taxation, may be measured by the amount of business done, or the amount of earnings or dividends, or by the total value of the capital or stock of the corporation in excess of its tangible assets, a franchise tax is not a tax on either property, capital, stock, earnings, or dividends. Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U.S. 594, 10 S.Ct. 593, 33 L.Ed. 1025; Worth v. Petersburg R. Co., 89 N.C. 305; People v. Knight, 174 N.Y. 475, 67 N.E. 65, 63 L.R.A. 87; Greene v. Louisville & I. R. Co., 244 U.S. 499, 37 S.Ct. 673, 678, 61 L.Ed. 1280, Ann.Cas.1917E, 88; American Refining Co. v. Staples, Tex.Com.App., 269 S.W. 420, 421. Nor a tax on franchise in technical sense, but on all intangible property of such a corporation, not otherwise taxed, used in state as component part of corporation's entire system. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Weaver, D.C.Neb., 5 F.Supp. 493, 497.

It is tax on intangible values inhering to business and added value given to tangible property, being "ad valorem" as distinguished from "excise" or "privilege" tax. State Tax Commission v. Petroleum Exploration, 253 Ky. 119, 68 S.W.2d 777.

FRANCIA. France. Bract. fol. 427b.

FRANCIGENA. A man born in France. A designation formerly given to aliens in England.

See Frenchman.

FRANCUS. L. Lat. Free; a freeman; a Frank. Spelman.

FRANCUS BANCUS. Free bench (q. v.).

FRANCVS HOMO. In old European law. A free man. Domesday.

FRANCUS PLEGIUS. In old English law, a frank pledge, or free pledge. See Frank-Pledge.

FRANCUS TENENS. A freeholder. See Frank-Tenement.

FRANK, v. To send matter through the public mails free of postage, by a personal or official privilege.

FRANK, adj. In old English law, free. Occurring in several compounds.

FRANK-ALMOIGNE. In English law, free alms. A spiritual tenure whereby religious corporations, aggregate or sole, held lands of the donor to them and their successors forever.

They were discharged of all other except religious services, and the trinoda necessitas. It differs from tenure by divine service, in that the latter required the performance of certain divine services, whereas the former, as its name imports, is free. This tenure is expressly excepted in the 12 Car. II. c. 24, § 7, and therefore still subsists in some few instances. 2 Broom & H. Comm. 203.

FRANK BANK. In old English law, free bench. Litt. § 166; Co. Litt. 110b. See Free-Bench.

FRANK-CHASE. A liberty of free chase enjoyed by any one, whereby all other persons having ground within that compass are forbidden to cut down wood, etc., even in their own demesnes, to the prejudice of the owner of the liberty. Cowell. See Chase.

FRANK-FEE. Freehold lands exempted from all services, but not from homage; lands held otherwise than in ancient demesne. That which a man holds to himself and his heirs, and not by such service as is required in ancient demesne, according to the custom of the manor. Cowell.

FRANK FERM. In English law, a species of estate held in socage, said by Britton to be "lands and tenements whereof the nature of the fee is changed by feoffment out of chivalry for certain yearly services, and in respect whereof neither homage, ward, marriage, nor relief can be demanded." Britt. c. 66; 2 Bl.Comm. 80.

FRANK-FOLD. In old English law, free-fold; a privilege for the lord to have all the sheep of his tenants and the inhabitants within his seigniory, in his fold, in his demesnes, to manure his land. Keilw. 198.

FRANK-LAW. An obsolete expression signifying the rights and privileges of a citizen, or the liberties and civic rights of a freeman.

FRANK-MARRIAGE. A species of entailed estates, in English law, now grown out of use, but still capable of subsisting.

When tenements are given by one to another, together with a wife, who is a daughter or cousin of the donor, to hold in frank-marriage, the donees shall have the tenements to them and the heirs of their two bodies begotten, i. e., in special tail. For the word "frank-marriage," ex vi termini, both creates and limits an inheritance, not only supplying words of descent, but also terms of procreation. The donees are liable to no service except fealty, and a reserved rent would be void, until the fourth degree of consanguinity be passed between the issues of the donor and donee, when they were capable by the law of the church of intermarrying. Litt. § 19; 2 Bl.Comm. 115.

FRANK-PLEDGE. In old English law, a pledge or surety for freemen; that is, the pledge, or corporate responsibility, of all the inhabitants of a tithing for the general good behavior of each free-born citizen above the age of fourteen, and for his being forthcoming to answer any infraction of the law. Termes de la Ley; Cowell.

FRANK-TENANT. A freeholder. Litt. § 91.

FRANK-TENEMENT. In English law, a free tenement, freeholding, or freehold. 2 Bl.Comm. 61, 62, 104; 1 Steph.Comm. 217; Bract. fol. 207. Used to denote both the tenure and the estate.

FRANKING PRIVILEGE. The privilege of sending certain matter through the public mails without payment of postage, in pursuance of a personal or official privilege.

FRANKLEYN (spelled, also, "Francling" and "Franklin"). A freeman; a freeholder; a gentleman. Blount; Cowell.

FRASSETUM. In old English law, a wood or wood-ground where ash-trees grow. Co. Litt. 4b.

FRATER. In the civil law, a brother. Frater consanguineus, a brother having the same father, but born of a different mother. Frater uterinus, a brother born of the same mother, but by a different father. Frater nutricius, a bastard brother.

FRATER FRATRI UTERINO NON SUCCEDET IN HiƎREDITATE PATERNA. A brother shall not succeed a uterine brother in the paternal inheritance. 2 Bl.Comm. 223; Fortes. de Laud. c. 5. A maxim of the common law of England, now superseded by the statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 106, 9. See Broom, Max. 530.

FRATERIA. In old records, a fraternity, brotherhood, or society of religious persons, who were mutually bound to pray for the good health and life, etc., of their living brethren, and the souls of those that were dead. Cowell.

FRATERNAL. Brotherly; relating or belonging to a fraternity or an association of persons formed for mutual aid and benefit, but not for profit. In re Mason Tire & Rubber Co., 56 App.D.C. 170, 11 F. 2d 556, 557.

FRATERNAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION. One whose members have adopted the same, or a very similar, calling, avocation, or profession, or who are working in unison to accomplish some worthy object, and who for that reason have banded themselves together as an association or society to aid and assist one another, and to promote the common cause. Alpha Rho Alumni Ass'n v. City of New Brunswick, 126 N.J.L. 233, 18 A.2d 68, 70. An association having a representative form of government and a lodge system with a ritualistic form of work for the meeting of its chapters, or other subordinate bodies. Fain v. Feldman, 191 Ga. 519, 13 S.E.2d 179, 181. A society or voluntary association organized and carried on for the mutual aid and benefit of its members, not for profit; which ordinarily has a lodge system, a ritualistic form of work, and a representative government, makes provision for the payment of death benefits, and (sometimes) for benefits in case of accident, sickness, or old age, the funds therefor being derived from dues paid or assessments levied on the members. National Union v. Marlow, Mo., 74 F. 778, 21 C.C.A. 89; Walker v. Giddings, 103 Mich. 344, 61 N.W. 512.

FRATERNAL INSURANCE. The form of life (or accident) insurance furnished by a fraternal beneficial association, consisting in the payment to a member, or his heirs in case of death, of a stipulated sum of money, out of funds raised for that purpose by the payment of dues or assessments by all the members of the association.

FRATERNIA. A fraternity or brotherhood.

FRATERNITY. A body of men associated for their common interest, business or pleasure. Woman's Club of Little Falls v. Township of Little Falls, 20 N.J.Misc. 278, 26 A.2d 739, 741; Alpha Rho Alumni Ass'n v. City of New Brunswick, 126 N.J.L. 233, 18 A.2d 68, 71. Organizations composed of either or both sexes. State v. Allen, 189 Ind. 369, 127 N.E. 145, 146. Brotherly regard and sympathy for others. Donnelly v. Sovereign Camp W. 0. W., 111 Neb. 499, 197 N.W. 125, 127.

In American colleges, a student organization, either a nationally chartered society comprising many affiliated chapters or a single chapter in one institution formed chiefly to promote friendship and welfare among the members, and usually having secret rites and a name consisting of Greek letters. Woman's Club of Little Falls v. Township of Little Falls, 20 N.J.Misc. 278, 26 A.2d 739, 741; Alpha Rho Alumni Ass'n v. City of New Brunswick, 126 N.J.L. 233, 18 A.2d 68, 71.

In old English law, "some people of a place united together in respect to a mystery or business into a company, and their laws and ordinances cannot bind strangers." Cuddon v. Eastwick, 1 Salk. 192.

FRATRES CONJURATI. Sworn brothers or companions for the defense of their sovereign, or for other purposes. Hoved. 445.

FRATRES PYES. In old English law, certain friars who wore white and black garments. Walsingham, 124.

FRATRIAGE. A younger brother's inheritance.

FRATRICIDE. One who has killed a brother or sister; also the killing of a brother or sister.

FRAUD. An intentional perversion of truth for the purpose of inducing another in reliance upon it to part with some valuable thing belonging to him or to surrender a legal right; a false representation of a matter of fact, whether by words or by conduct, by false or misleading allegations, or by concealment of that which should have been disclosed, which deceives and is intended to deceive another so that he shall act upon it to his legal injury. Brainerd Dispatch Newspaper Co. v. Crow Wing County, 196 Minn. 194, 264 N.W. 779, 780. Any kind of artifice employed by one person to deceive another. Goldstein v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S., 160 Misc. 364, 289 N.Y.S. 1064, 1067. A generic term, embracing all multifarious means which human ingenuity can devise, and which are resorted to by one individual to get advantage over another by false suggestions or by suppression of truth, and includes all surprise, trick, cunning, dissembling, and any unfair way by which another is cheated. Johnson v. McDonald, 170 Okl. 117, 39 P.2d 150. "Bad faith" and "fraud" are synonymous, and also synonyms of dishonesty, infidelity, faithlessness, perfidy, unfairness, etc. Joiner v. Joiner, Tex.Civ.App., 87 S.W. 2d 903, 914, 915.

It consists of some deceitful practice or willful device, resorted to with intent to deprive another of his right, or some manner to do him an injury. As distinguished from negligence, it is always positive, intentional. Maher v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 67 N.Y. 292; Alexander v. Church, 53 Conn. 561, 4 A. 103; Studer v. Bleistein, 115 N.Y. 316, 22 N.E. 243, 7 L.R.A. 702; McNair v. Southern States Finance Co., 191 N.C. 710, 133 S.E. 85, 88. It comprises all acts, omissions, and concealments involving a breach of a legal or equitable duty and resulting in damage to another. Coppo v. Coppo, 163 Misc. 249, 297 N.Y.S. 744, 750. And includes anything calculated to deceive, whether it be a single act or combination of circumstances, whether the suppression of truth or the suggestion of what is false, whether it be by direct falsehood or by innuendo, by speech or by silence, by word of mouth, or by look or gesture. People v. Gilmore, 345 Ill. 28, 177 N.E. 710, 717. Fraud, as applied to contracts, is the cause of an error bearing on a material part of the contract, created or continued by artifice, with design to obtain some unjust advantage to the one party, or to cause an inconvenience or loss to the other. Civil Code La. art. 1847. Strauss v. Insurance Co. of North America, 157 La. 661, 102 So. 861, 865; Jesse French Piano & Organ Co. v. Gibbon, Tex.Civ.App., 180 S. W. 1185, 1187.

Fraud, in the sense of a court of equity, properly includes all acts, omissions, and concealments which involve a breach of legal or equitable duty, trust, or confidence justly reposed, and are injurious to another, or by which an undue and unconscientious advantage is taken of another. 1 Story, Eq.Jur. § 187; Howard v. West Jersey & S. S. R. Co., 102 N.J.Eq. 517, 141 A. 755, 757.

Fraud is either actual or constructive. Actual fraud consists in deceit, artifice, trick, design, some direct and active operation of the mind ; it includes cases of the intentional and successful employment of any cunning, deception, or artifice used to circumvent or cheat another; it is something said, done, or omitted by a person with the design of perpetrating what he knows to be a cheat or deception. Constructive fraud consists in any act of commission or omission contrary to legal or equitable duty, trust, or confidence justly reposed, which is contrary to good conscience and operates to the injury of another. Or, as otherwise defined, it is an act, statement or omission which operates as a virtual fraud on an individual, or which, if generally permitted, would be prejudicial to the public welfare, and yet may have been unconnected with any selfish or evil design. Or, according to Story, constructive frauds are such acts or contracts as, though not originating in any actual evil design or contrivance to perpetrate a positive fraud or injury upon other persons, are yet, by their tendency to deceive or mislead other persons, or to violate private or public confidence, or to impair or injure the public interests, deemed equally reprehensible with actual fraud. 1 Story, Eq.Jur. § 258. Code Ga.1882, § 3173 (Civ.Code 1910, § 4622) ; People v. Kelly, 35 Barb., N.Y., 457; Jackson v. Jackson, 47 Ga. 99; Massachusetts Ben. L. Ass'n v. Robinson, 104 Ga. 256, 30 S.E. 918, 42 L.R. A. 261; Allen v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 269 Ill. 234, 109 N.E. 1035, 1038.

Fraud is also classified as fraud in fact and fraud in law. The former is actual, positive, intentional fraud. Fraud disclosed by matters of fact, as distinguished from constructive fraud or fraud in law. McKibbin v. Martin, 64 Pa. 356, 3 Am.Rep. 588; Cook v. Burnham, 3 Kan.App. 27, 44 P. 447. Fraud in law is fraud in contemplation of law; fraud implied or inferred by law; fraud made out by construction of law, as distinguished from fraud found by a jury from matter of fact; constructive fraud (q. v.). See 2 Kent, Comm. 512-532; Delaney v. Valentine, 154 N.Y. 692, 49 N.E. 65; Lovato v. Catron, 20 N.M. 168, 148 P. 490, 492, L.R.A.1915E, 451; Furst & Thomas v. Merritt, 190 N.C. 397, 130 S.E. 40, 43.

Fraud is also said to be legal or positive. The former is fraud made out by legal construction or inference, or the same thing as constructive fraud. Newell v. Wagness, 1 N. D. 62, 44 N.W. 1014. Positive fraud is the same thing as actual fraud. Douthitt v. Applegate, 33 Kan. 395, 6 P. 575, 52 Am.Rep. 533; Nocatee Fruit Co. v. Fosgate, C.C.A. Fla., 12 F.2d 250, 252.

Actionable fraud. See Actionable.

Extrinsic or collateral fraud justifying equitable relief against a judgment or decree means some intentional act or conduct by which the prevailing party has prevented the unsuccessful party from having a fair submission of the controversy. Farley v. Davis, 10 Wash.2d 62, 116 P.2d 263, 268.

Pious fraud is a subterfuge or evasion considered morally justifiable on account of the ends sought to be promoted; particularly applied to an evasion or disregard of the laws in the interests of religion or religious institutions, such as circumventing the statutes of mortmain.

Statute of Frauds. This is the common designation of a very celebrated English statute, (29 Car. II. c. 3,) passed in 1677, and which has been adopted, in a more or less modified form, in nearly all of the United States. Its chief characteristic is the provision that no suit or action shall be maintained on certain classes of contracts or engagements unless there shall be a note or memorandum thereof in writing signed by the party to be charged or by his authorized agent. Its object was to close the door to the numerous frauds and perjuries. It is more fully named as the "statute of frauds and perjuries." Smith v. Morton, 70 Okl. 157, 173 P. 520, 521; Housley v. Strawn Merchandise Co., Tex.Com.App., 291 S.W. 864, 867; Norman v. Bullock County Bank, 187 Ala. 33, 65 So. 371, 372; Garber v. Goldstein, 92 Conn. 226, 102 A. 605, 606.

FRAUD IN TREATY. Arises where a person is induced by some fraudulent representation or pretense to execute the very instrument intended to be executed but under a misrepresentation as to the contents thereof. Meyers v. Murphy, 181 Md. 98, 28 A.2d 861, 862.

FRAUD ORDER. A name given to orders issued by the postmaster general, under Rev.St. §§ 3929, 4041, 39 U.S.C.A. §§ 259, 732, for preventing the use of the mails as an agency for conducting schemes for obtaining money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretences, etc.

They are not restricted to schemes which lack all the elements of legitimate business, but the statute applies "when a business, even if otherwise legitimate, is systematically and designedly conducted upon the plan of inducing its patrons by means of false representations to part with their money in the belief that they are purchasing something different from, superior to, and worth more than, what is actually sold;" Harris v. Rosenberger, Mo., 145 F. 449, 16 C.C.A. 225, 13 L.R.A.,N.S., 762.

The fraud order is issued to the postmaster of the office through which the person affected by it receives his mail. It forbids the post-master to pay any postal money order to the specified person, and instructs the postmaster to return all letters to the senders if practicable, or if not, to the dead letter office, stamped in either case with the word "fraudulent." The method of testing the validity of the fraud order is to apply to the federal court for an injunction to restrain the postmaster from executing it. The decision of the postmaster-general is not the exercise of a judicial function; if he exceeds his jurisdiction, the party injured may have relief in equity; Degge v. Hitchcock, 229 U.S. 162, 33 S.Ct. 639, 57 L. Ed. 1135.

FRAUDARE. Lat. In the civil law, to deceive, cheat, or impose upon; to defraud.

FRAUDULENT. Based on fraud; proceeding from or characterized by fraud; tainted by fraud; done, made, or effected with a purpose or design to carry out a fraud. For "False and Fraudulent" and "False or Fraudulent Claim," see those titles.

FRAUDULENT ALIENATION. In a general sense, the transfer of property with an intent to defraud creditors, lienors, or others. In a particular sense, the act of an administrator who wastes the assets of the estate by giving them away or selling at a gross undervalue. Rhame v. Lewis, 13 Rich.Eq., S.C., 269.

FRAUDULENT ALIENEE. One who knowingly receives from an administrator assets of the estate under circumstances which make it a fraudulent alienation on the part of the administrator. Rhame v. Lewis, 13 Rich.Eq., S.C., 269.

FRAUDULENT CONCEALMENT. The hiding or suppression of a material fact or circumstance which the party is legally or morally bound to disclose. Magee v. Insurance Co., 92 U.S. 93, 23 L.Ed. 699; Small v. Graves, 7 Barb., N.Y., 578.

The test of whether failure to disclose material facts constitutes fraud is the existence of a duty, legal or equitable, arising from the relation of the parties ; failure to disclose a material fact with intent to mislead or defraud under such circumstances being equivalent to an actual "fraudulent concealment." Newell Bros. v. Hanson, 97 Vt. 297, 123 A. 208, 210.

Fraudulent concealment justifying a rescission of a contract is the intentional concealment of some fact known to the party charged, which is material for the party injured to know to prevent being defrauded; the concealment of a fact which one is bound to disclose being the equivalent of an indirect representation that such fact does not exist. Long v. Martin, Tex.Civ.App., 234 S.W. 91, 94.

To suspend running of limitations, it means employment of artifice, planned to prevent inquiry or escape investigation and mislead or hinder acquirement of information disclosing a right of action, and acts relied on must be of an affirmative character and fraudulent. McNaughton v. Rockford State Bank, 261 Mich. 265, 246 N.W. 84, 86.

FRAUDULENT CONVERSION. Receiving into possession money or property of another and fraudulently withholding, converting, or applying the same to or for one's own use and benefit, or to use and benefit of any person other than the one to whom the money or property belongs. Commonwealth v. Mitchneck, 130 Pa.Super. 433, 198 A. 463, 464.

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE. A conveyance or transfer of property, the object of which is to defraud a creditor, or hinder or delay him, or to put such property beyond his reach. Seymour v. Wilson, 14 N.Y. 569; Lockyer v. De Hart, 6 N.J.L. 458; Surratt v. Eskridge, 131 Va. 325, 108 S.E. 677, 679; Dean v. Davis, 242 U.S. 438, 37 S.Ct. 130, 61 L.Ed. 419. Conveyance made with intent to avoid some duty or debt due by or incumbent on person making transfer. Farmers Elevator Co. v. Peck, 134 Neb. 305, 278 N.W. 499, 501.

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES, STATUTES OF, OR AGAINST. The name given to two celebrated English statutes,—the statute 13 Eliz. c. 5, made perpetual by 29 Eliz. c. 5; and the statute 27 Eliz. c. 4, made perpetual by 29 Eliz. c. 18.

FRAUDULENT OR DISHONEST ACT. One which involves bad faith, a breach of honesty, a want of integrity, or moral turpitude. Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. v. Singer, 185 Va. 620, 39 S.E. 2d 505, 507, 508.

FRAUDULENT PREFERENCES. In English law, every conveyance or transfer of property or charge thereon made, every judgment made, every obligation incurred, and every judicial proceeding taken or suffered by any _person unable to pay his debts as they become due from his own moneys, in favor of any creditor, with a view of giving such creditor a preference over other creditors, shall be deemed fraudulent and void if the debtor become bankrupt within three months. 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, § 92.

FRAUDULENT REPRESENTATION. A false statement as to material fact, made with intent that another rely thereon, which is believed by other party and on which he relies and by which he is induced to act and does act to his injury, and statement is fraudulent if speaker knows statement to be false or if it is made with utter disregard of its truth or falsity. Osborne v. Simmons, Mo.App., 23 S.W.2d 1102, 1104.

As basis for law action, establishment of representation, falsity, scienter, deception, and injury, is required. Gray v. Shell Petroleum Corporation, 212 Iowa, 825, 237 N.W. 460, 463.

But a promise made without intent to perform constitutes "fraudulent representation," which generally affords ground for rescission. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 206 N.C. 546, 174 S.E. 447, 448.

FRAUNC, FRAUNCHE, FRAUNKE. See Frank.

FRAUNCHISE. L. Fr. A franchise.

FRAUS. Lat. Fraud. More commonly called, in the civil law, "dolus," and "dolus malus" (q. v.). A distinction, however, was sometimes made between "fraus" and "dolus;" the former being held to be of the most extensive import. Calvin.

FRAUS DANS LOCUM CONTRACTUI. A misrepresentation or concealment of some fact that is material to the contract, and had the truth regarding which been known the contract would not have been made as made, is called a "fraud dans locum contractui;" e., a fraud occasioning the contract, or giving place or occasion for the contract.

FRAUS EST CELARE FRAUDEM. It is a fraud to conceal a fraud. 1 Vern. 240; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 389, 390.

FRAUS EST ODIOSA ET NON PRIESUMENDA. Fraud is odious, and not to be presumed. Cro. Car. 550.

FRAUS ET DOLUS NEMINI PATROCINARI DEBENT. Fraud and deceit should defend or excuse no man. 3 Coke, 78; Fleta, lib. 1, c. 13, § 15; Id. lib. 6, c. 6, § 5.

FRAUS ET JUS NUNQUAM COHABITANT. Wing. 680. Fraud and justice never dwell together.

FRAUS LATET IN GENERALIBUS. Fraud lies hid in general expressions.

FRAUS LEGIS. Lat. In the civil law, fraud of law; fraud upon law. See In Fraudem Legis.

FRAUS MERETUR FRAUDEM. Plowd. 100. Fraud merits fraud.

FRAXINETUM. In old English law, a wood of ashes; a place where ashes grow. Co. Litt. 4b; Shep. Touch. 95.

FRAY. See Affray.

FRECTUM. In old English law, freight. Quoad frectum navium suarum, as to the freight of his vessels. Blount.

FREDNITE. In old English law, a liberty to hold courts and take up the fines for beating and wounding. To be free from fines. Cowell.

FREDSTOLE. Sanctuaries; seats of peace.

FREDUM. A fine paid for obtaining pardon when the peace had been broken. Spelman; Blount. A sum paid the magistrate for protection against the right of revenge.

FREDWIT, or FREDWITE. k liberty to hold courts and take up the fines for beating and wounding. Jacob, Law Dict.

FREE. Not subject to legal constraint of another.

Unconstrained; having power to follow the dictates of his own will. Not subject to the dominion of another. Not compelled to involuntary servitude. Used in this sense as opposed to "slave."

Not bound to service for a fixed term of years; in distinction to being bound as an apprentice.

Enjoying full civic rights.

Available to all citizens alike without charge; .as a free school.

FREE ALMS. The name of a species of tenure. See Frank-almoigne.

FREE AND CLEAR (and like phrases). The title to property is said to be "free and clear" when it is not incumbered by any liens; but it is said that an agreement to convey land "free and clear" is satisfied by a conveyance passing a good title. Meyer v. Madreperla, 68 N.J.L. 258, 53 A. 477, 96 Am.St.Rep. 536; Smith v. Toth, 61 Ind.App. 42, 111 N.E. 442, 444; Grisso v. MiLsey, 104 Okl. 173, 230 P. 883, 889.

FREE AND EQUAL. As used in a constitutional provision that election shall be free and equal, the word "free" means that every one entitled to vote should have a reasonable opportunity to do so,. a reasonable manner of doing so, etc., and the word "equal" means that every vote cast should have its decisive effect in the selection or choice to be made at the election. McKinney v. Barker, 180 Ky. 526, 203 S.W. 303, 304, L.R.A.1918E, 581. The term means that the voter shall not be physically restrained in the exercise of his right of franchise, by either civil or military authority, and that every voter shall have the same right as every other voter. Asher v. Arnett, 280 Ky. 347, 132 S.W.2d 772, 775.

A "free and equal" election is one at which every person entitled to vote may do so if he desires, although it can hardly be said that, if only a few are prevented from voting, the election is not free and equal In the constitutional sense. Wallbrecht v. Ingram, 164 Ky. 463, 175 S.W. 1022, 1026.

It is the essence of free elections that the right of suffrage be untrammeled and unfettered, and that the ballot represent and express the electors' own intelligent judgment and conscience, and there can be no "free election" unless there is freedom of opinion. An election to be free must be without coercion of any description or any deterrent from the elector's exercise of his free will by means of any intimidation or influence whatever, although there is no violence or physical coercion. Neelley v. Farr, 61 Colo. 485, 158 P. 458, 467, Ann.Cas.1918A, 23.

FREE SERVICES. In feudal and old English law, such feudal services as were not unbecoming the character of a soldier or a freeman to perform; as to serve under his lord in the wars, to pay a sum of money, and the like. 2 Bl.Comm. 60, 61.

FREE SHAREHOLDERS. The free shareholders of a building and loan association are subscribers to its capital stock who are not borrowers from the association. Steinberger v. Independent B. & S. Ass'n, 84 Md. 625, 36 A. 439.

FREE SHIPS. In international law, ships of a neutral nation. The phrase "free ships shall make free goods" is often inserted in treaties, meaning that goods, even though belonging to an enemy, shall not be seized or confiscated, if found in neutral ships. Wheat. Int. Law, 507, et seq.

FREE SOCAGE. See Socage.

FREE TENURE. Tenure by free services; freehold tenure.

FREE TIME. Period that railroad car may remain unloaded before demurrage charges begin to accrue. Lehigh Valley ᑎ. Co. v. Maas & Waldstein Co., 102 N.J.L. 332, 131 A. 884; Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Leverette, 34 Ga.App. 304, 129 S.E. 292, 293.

FREE WARREN. See Warren.

FREE WHITE PERSONS. "Free white persons" referred to in Naturalization Act, as amended by Act July 14, 1870, has meaning naturally given t& it when first used in 1 Stat. 103, c. 3, meaning all persons belonging to the European races then commonly counted as white, and their descendants, including such descendants in other countries to which they have emigrated.

It includes all European Jews, more or less intermixed with peoples of Celtic, Scandinavian, Teutonic, Iberian, Latin, Greek, and Slavic descent. It includes Magyars, Lapps, and Finns, and the Basques and Albanians. It includes the mixed Latin, Celtic-Iberian, and Moorish inhabitants of Spain and Portugal, the mixed Greek, Latin, Phoenician, and North African inhabitants of Sicily, and the mixed Slav and Tarter inhabitants of South Russia. It does not mean Caucasian race, Aryan race, or Indo-European races, nor the mixed Indo-European, Dravidian, Semitic and Mongolian peoples who inhabit Persia. A Syrian of Asiatic birth and descent will not be entitled to become a naturalized citizen of the United States as being a free white person. Ex parte Shahid, D.C.S.C., 205 F. 812, 813; United States v. Cartozian, D.C.Or., 6 F.2d 919, 921; Ex parte Dow, D.C.S.C., 211 F. 486, 487; In re En Sk Song, D.C.Cal., 271 F. 23. Nor a native-born Filipino. U. S. v. Javier, 22 F.2d 879, 880, 57 App.D.C. 303. Nor a native of India who belonged to Hindu race. Kharaitf Ram Samras v. United States, C.C.A.Cal., 125 F.2d 879, 881.

FREE WOMAN OF COLOR. Term, up to the' time of the Civil War, applied to all persons not of the white race, including Indians. Sunseri v. Cassagne, 191 La. 209, 185 So. 1, 4.

FREEDMAN. In Roman law, one who was set free from a state of bondage; an emancipated slave. The word is used in the same sense in the. United States, respecting negroes who were formerly slaves. Fairfield v. Lawson, 50 Conn. 513, 47 Am.Rep. 669; Davenport v. Caldwell, 10 S.C. 333.

FREEDOM. The state of being free; liberty; self-determination; absence of restraint; the opposite of slavery.

The power of acting, in the character of a moral personality, according to the dictates of the will, without other check, hindrance, or prohibition than such as may be imposed by just and necessary laws and the duties of social life.

The prevalence, in the government and constitution of a country, of such a system of laws and institutions as secure civil liberty to the individual citizen.

FREEDOM OF RELIGION. Embraces the concept of freedom to believe and freedom to act, the first of which is absolute, but the second of which remains subject to regulation for protection of society. Oney v. Oklahoma City, C.C.A.Okl., 120 F. 2d 861, 865.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND OF THE PRESS. See Liberty.

FREEDOM OF THE CITY, In English law, this phrase signifies immunity from county jurisdiction, and the privilege of corporate taxation and self-government held under a charter from the crown. This freedom is enjoyed of right, subject to the provision of the charter, and is often conferred as an honor on princes and other distinguished individuals. The freedom of a city carries the parliamentary franchise. Encyc. Dict. The rights and privileges possessed by the burgesses or freemen of a municipal corporation under the old English law; now of little importance, and conferred chiefly as a mark of honor. See 11 Chic. L. J. 357.

The phrase has no place in American law, and as frequently used in addresses of welcome made to organizations visiting an American city, particularly by mayors, has no meaning whatever except as an expression of good will.

The form of the grant made by the city of New York to Andrew Hamilton of Philadelphia as quoted at large in 13 Law Notes 150.

FREEHOLD. An estate for life or in fee. Intermountain Realty Co. v. Allen, 60 Idaho 228, 90 P. 2d 704, 706, 122 A.L.R. 647.

A "freehold estate" is a right of title to land Cohn v. Litwin, 311 Ill.App. 55, 35 N.E.2d 410, 413.

An estate in land or other real property, of uncertain duration; that is, either of inheritance or which may possibly last for the life of the tenant at the least, (as distinguished from a leasehold;) and held by a free tenure, (as distinguished from copyhold or villeinage.) Nevitt v. Woodburn, 175 Ill. 376, 51 N.E. 593; Railroad Co. v. Hemphill, 35 Miss. 22; Ralston Steel Car Co. v. Ralston, 112 Ohio St. 306, 147 N.E. 513, 516, 39 A.L.R. 334; Lakeside Irr. Co. v. Markham Irr. Co., 116 Tex. 65, 285 S.W. 593, 596.

An oil and gas lease. Cravens v. Hubble, 375 Ill. 51, 30 N.E.2d 622, 623.

A 99-year lease renewable forever is a "freehold estate". Baltimore & 0. R. Co. v. Carman, 71 Ohio App. 508, 50 N.E.2d 358, 359.

Such an interest in lands of frank-tenement as may endure not only during the owner's life, but which is cast after his death upon the persons who successively represent him, according to certain rules elsewhere explained. Such persons are called "heirs," and he whom they thus represent, the "ancestor." When the interest extends beyond the ancestor's life, it Is called a "freehold of inheritance," and, when it only endures for the ancestor's life, it is a freehold not of inheritance.

An estate to be a freehold must possess these two qualities ; (1) Immobility, that is, the property must be either land or some interest issuing out of or annexed to land; and (2) indeterminate duration, for, if the utmost period of time to which an estate can endure be fixed and determined, it cannot be a freehold. Wharton.

Freehold in deed is the real possession of land or tenements in fee, fee-tail, or for life. Freehold in law is the right to such tenements before entry. The term has also been applied to those offices which a man holds in fee or for life. Mozl. & W. Diet. ; 1 Washb. R. P. 71, 637. See Gage v. Scales, 100 Ill. 221; State v. Ragland, 75 N.C. 12, L.R. 11 Eq. 454; Liberum Tenementum.

Determinable freeholds are estates for life, which may determine upon future contingencies before the life for which they are created expires, as if an estate be granted to a woman during her widowhood, or to a man until he be promoted to a benefice. In these and similar cases, whenever the contingency happens,—when the widow marries, or when, the grantee obtains the benefice,—the respective estates are absolutely determined and gone. Yet, while they subsist, they are reckoned estates for life; because they may by possibility last for life, if the contingencies upon which they are to determine do not sooner happen. 2 Bl. Comm. 121.

Freehold in law is a freehold which has descended to a man, upon which he may enter at pleasure, but which he has not entered on. Termes de la Ley.

FREEHOLD LAND SOCIETIES. Societies in England designed for the purpose of enabling mechanics, artisans, and other workingmen to purchase at the least possible price a piece of freehold land of a sufficient yearly value to entitle the owner to the elective franchise for the county in which the land is situated. Wharton.

FREEHOLDER. One having title to realty. State ex rel. Peterson v. City of Fraser, 191 Minn. 427, 254 N.W. 776. Either of inheritance or for life. Warren v. Chouteau County, 82 Mont. 115, 265 P. 676, 680. Either legal or equitable title. Daniels v. Fossas, 152 Wash. 516, 278 P. 412, 413.

A person who possesses a freehold estate. Shively v. Lankford, 174 Mo. 535, 74 S.W. 835. Statutory meaning not Infrequently differs from common law meaning of the term. Payne v. Fiscal Court of Carlisle County, 200 Ky. 41, 252 S.W. 127, 129; In re Consolidation of School Dists. in Blue Earth County, 140 Minn. 475, 168 N.W. 552; Gordon v. White, 33 S.D. 234, 145 N.W. 439.

FREEMAN. A person in the possession and enjoyment of all the civil and political rights accorded to the people under a free government.

In the Roman law, it denoted one who was either born free or emancipated, and was the opposite of "slave." In feudal law, it designated an allodial proprietor, as distinguished from a vassal or feudal tenant. (And so in Pennsylvania colonial law. Fry's Election Case, 71 Pa. 308, 10 Am.Rep. 698.) In old English law, the word described a freeholder or tenant by free services; one who was not a villein. In modern legal phraseology, it is the appellation of a member of a city or borough having the right of suffrage, or a member of any municipal corporation invested with full civic rights.

FREEMAN'S ROLL. A list of persons admitted as burgesses or freemen for the purposes of the rights reserved by the municipal corporation act, (5 & 6 Wm. IV. c. 76.) Distinguished from the Burgess Roll. 3 Steph.Comm. 197. The term was used, in early colonial history, in some of the American colonies.

FREIGHT. Freight is properly the price or compensation paid for the transportation of goods by a carrier, at sea, from port to port. The Bill, D. C.Md., 55 F.Supp. 780, 783. But the term is also used to denote the hire paid for the carriage of goods on land from place to place, (usually by a railroad company, not an express company,) or on inland streams or lakes. The name is also applied to the goods or merchandise transported by any of the above means. Brittan v. Barnaby, 21 How. 533, 16 L.Ed. 177; Christie v. Davis Coal Co., D.C.N.Y., 95 F. 837, 838; Paradise v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 6- La.Ann. 596.

The sum agreed on for the hire of a ship, entirely or in part, for the carriage of goods from one port to another. 13 East, 300. All rewards or compensation paid for the use of ships. Giles v. Cynthia, 1 Pet.Adm. 206, Fed.Cas.No. 5,424.

The reward, if any, to be paid for its carriage is called "freightage ;" the person who delivers the freight to the carrier is called the "consignor ;" and the person to whom it is to be delivered is called the "consignee." Civil Code Cal. § 2110; Comp.Laws N.D.1913, § 6197; Comp.Laws S.D. 1929, § 1119.

Property carried is called "freight." Lyman-Richey Sand & Gravel Co. v. State, 123 Neb. 674, 243 N.W. 891, 893, 83 A.L.R. 1301.

"Dead freight" is money payable by a person who has chartered a ship and only partly loaded her, in respect of the loss of freight caused to the ship-owner by the deficiency of cargo. L.R. 2 H.L. Sc. 128; The Rosemary, C. C.A.Miss., 277 F. 674, 678.

FREIGHT BOOKING. The making of specific arrangements for the transportation of goods by particular vessel in advance of its sailing day. Iwai & Co., Limited, v. Hercules Powder Co., 162 Ga. 795, 134 S.E. 763, 765.

FRIVOLOUS. An answer is "frivolous" where it appears from bare inspection to be lacking in legal sufficiency, and, where in any view of the facts pleaded, it does not present a defense. Neefus v. Neefus, 209 Minn. 495, 296 N.W. 579, 581. Any pleading is called "frivolous" when it is clearly insufficient on its face, and does not controvert the material points of the opposite pleading, and is presumably interposed for mere purposes of delay or to embarrass the opponent. Erwin v. Lowery, 64 N.C. 321; Strong v. Sproul, 53 N.Y. 499; Gray v. Gidiere, 4 Strob., S.C., 442; In re Beam, 93 N.J.Eq. 593, 117 A. 613, 614; Milberg v. Keuthe, 98 N.J.L. 779, 121 A. 713, 714.

"Frivolous pleas" are those which are so clear. ly and palpably bad as to require no argument to convince the court thereof, and which would be pronounced by the court indicative of bad faith in the pleader on a mere inspection. U. S. V. Delaney, D.C.N.J., 8 F.Supp. 224, 227.

A frivolous demurrer has been defined to be one which is so clearly untenable, or its insufficiency so manifest upon a bare inspection of the pleadings, that its character may be determined without argument or research. Cottrill v. Cramer, 40 Wis. 558.

A "frivolous appeal" is one presenting no justiciable question and so readily recognizable as devoid of merit on face of record that there is little prospect that it can ever succeed. Treat v. State ex rel. Mitton, 121 Fla, 509, 163 So. 883.

A sham plea is good on its face, but false in fact; it may, to all appearances, constitute a perfect defense, but is a pretense because false and because not pleaded in good. faith. A frivolous plea may be perfectly true in its allegations, but yet is liable to be stricken out because totally insufficient in substance. Andrew v. Bandler, Sup., 56 N.Y. S. 614; Brown v. Jenison, 1 Code R.N.S., N.Y., 157; Sheets v. Ramer, 125 Minn. 98, 145 N.W. 787. See, further, Answer.

FRODMORTEL, or FREOMORTEL. An immunity for committing manslaughter. Mon. Angl. t. 1, p. 173.

FROM. Implies a starting point, whether it be of time, place, or condition; and meaning: Having a starting point of motion; noting the point of departure, origin, withdrawal, etc.; out of, starting at, as, he traveled "from" New York to Chicago. Silva v. MacAuley, 135 Cal.App. 249, 26 P.2d 887. Word "from" or "after" an event or day does not have an absolute and invariable meaning, but each should receive an inclusion or exclusion construction according to intention with which such word is used. Acme Life Ins. Co. v. White, Tex.Civ.App., 99 S.W.2d 1059, 1060. Words "from" and "to," used in contract, may be given meaning to which reason and sense entitles them, under circumstances of case. Woodruff v. Adams, 134 Cal.App. 490, 25 P.2d 529.

As to whether the word was to be treated as inclusive or exclusive of a terminus a quo, whether of time or place, a critical writer formulated a rule that when referring to a certain point as a terminus a quo, though in vulgar acceptation it were capable of being taken indifferently, either inclusively or exclusively, yet in law it has obtained a certain fixed import and is always taken as exclusive of the terminus a quo. Powell, Powers 449. It generally excludes the day to which it relates, but the general rule will yield to the intent of parties; Kendall v. Kingsley, 120 Mass. 94. The views of Lord Mansfield, in Cowp. 714 (overruling his own decision of three years before, id. 189), was that it is either exclusive or inclusive according to context and subject-matter, and the court will construe it to effectuate the intent of parties and not to destroy it. Lowman v. Shotkoski, 106 Neb. 540, 184 N.W. 107, 108; Allen v. Effler, 144 Tenn. 685, 235 S.W. 67, 68; Martin v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 310 Mo. 411, 276 S.W. 380, 382, 41 A.L. R. 1372; Piatt v. Flaherty, 96 Kan. 42, 149 P. 734.

As to time, after an examination of authorities, Washington, J., laid down what he considered the settled principles to be deduced from them : (1) When time is computed from an act done, the day of its performance is included; (2) when the words are from the date, if a present interest is to commence, the day is included, if it is a terminus from which to impute time the day is excluded; Pearpoint v. Graham, 4 Wash.C.C. 240, Fed.Cas.No.10,877; where the latter principle was applied to a lease, as it was 90 in Lord Raym. 84; and to a bond; Lysle v. Williams, 15 S. & R., Pa., 135; and the first proposition has been laid down with reference to the words "from and after the passage of this act;" Arnold v. U. S., 9 Cra., U.S., 104, 3 L.Ed. 671; U. S. v. Williams, 1 Paine 261, Fed.Cas.No. 16,723; contra, Lorent v. Ins. Co., 1 Nott. & McC., S.C., 505. See U. S. v. Heth, 3 Cra., U. S., 399, 2 L. Ed. 479. From is generally held a word of exclusion ; Wilcox v. Wood, 9 Wend., N.Y., 346; Ordway v. Remington, 12 R.I. 319, 34 Am.Rep. 646. But a promise made November 1st, 1811, and sued November 1st, 1817, was held barred by statute of limitation; Presbrey v. Williams, 15 Mass. 193. Where an act was to be done in a given number of days from the time of the contract, the day on which the contract was made was included; Brown v. Buzan, 24 Ind. 194; but if the contract merely says in so may days it means so many days from the day of date, and that is excluded ; Blake v. Crowninshield, 9 N.H. 304. A fire policy from one given date to another includes the last day; whether the first is included was not decided; L.R. 5 Exch. 296. In most cases when something is required to be done in a given time from the day on which an event has happened, that day is excluded, as in case of proving claims against the estate of a decedent or insolvent; Weeks v. Hull, 19 Conn. 376, 50 Am.Dec. 249; enrolling deeds, after execution; Seawell v. Williams, 5 Hayw., Tenn., 283; appeal from arbitrators, afterward; Browne v. Browne, 3 S. & R., Pa., 496; issuing a scire facias to revive a judgment, after entry; Appeal of Green, 6 W. & S., Pa., 327; the time an execution runs, after its date; Homan v. Liswell, 6 Cow., N.Y., 659; redemption from execution sale; id. 518; allowing appeal from a justice; Ex parte Dean, 2 Cow., N.Y., 605, 14 Am.Dec. 521. The principle is thus well expressed. When time is to be computed from a particular day or a particular event, as when an act is to be performed within a specified period from or after a day named, that day is excluded and the last day included; Sheets v. Selden, 2 Wall., U.S., 177, 17 L.Ed. 822. But it was held that in considering the question of barring a writ of error, the day of the decree is included; Chiles v. Smith's Heirs, 13 B.Monr., Ky., 460. Six months from testator's death allowed a legatee to give security not to marry, are exclusive of that day; 15 Ves. 248.

Whenever they are used with respect to places it is said that "from," "to," and "at" are taken inclusively according to the subject-matter; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Hall, 91 U.S. 343, 23 L.Ed. 428 (fixing the terminus of a railroad under an act of congress). From an object to an object in a deed excludes the terminus referred to; Bonney v. Morrill, 52 Me. 252; State v. Bushey, 84 Me. 459, 24 A. 940. From place to place means from one place in a town to another in the same town; Com. v. Inhabitants of Cambridge, 7 Mass. 158; Com. v. Waters, 11 Gray, Mass., 81. From a street means from any part of it according to circumstances; City of Pittsburg v. Cluley, 74 Pa. 259. From a town is not always and indeed is seldom exclusive of the place named; it generally means from some indefinite place within the town; Chesapeake & 0. Canal Co. v. Key, 3 Cra.C.C. 599, 606, Fed.Cas.No.2,649. Authority in a railroad charter to construct a railroad from a city to another point gives power to construct the road from any point within the city; Hazlehurst v. Freeman, 52 Ga. 244; contra North-Eastern R. Co. v. Payne, 8 Rich.L., S.C., 177. But from a town to another in an indictment for transportation of liquor does not charge it as done within the town ; State v. Bushey, 84 Me. 459, 24 A. 940. To construe reasonably the expression a road from a village to a creek within the same village, in a statute, requires that it be taken inclusively; Smith v. Helmer, 7 Barb., N.Y., 416. Sailing from a port means out of it; U. S. v. La Coste, 2 Mass. 129, Fed.Cas.No.15,548.

Descent from a parent cannot be construed to mean through a parent, it must be immediate, from tithe person designated; Gardner v. Collins, 2 Pet., U.S., 58, 86, 7 L.Ed. 347; but the words from the part of the father include a descent, either immediately from the father or from any person in the line of the father; Shippen v. Izard, 1 S. & R., Pa., 222.

From the loading in a marine policy ordinarily means that the risk is covered after the goods are on board, but this meaning may be qualified by any words in the policy indicating a different intention, 16 East 240; L.R. 7 Q.B. 580, 702.

From day to day, In reference to adjournments, usually means to the next day but, under a statute authorizing the adjournment of a sale from day to day, a sale is good if made by adjournment to a day, certain, which did not immediately succeed the first, Burns v. Lyon, 4 Watts, Pa., 36.3. From henceforth in a lease means from the delivery; 5 Co. 1; so also does one from March 25th last past (the execution being March 25th) ; 4 B. & C. 272; or one from an impossible date (as February 30th), or no date, but if it has a sensible date, the word date in other parts of it means date, not delivery; 4 B. & C. 908.

FROM ONE PLACE TO ANOTHER. From premises owned by one person to premises owned by another person in some legal subdivision or from one legal subdivision to another. Liquor Transportation Cases, 140 Tenn. 582, 205 S.W. 423, 426; Ready v. State, 155 Tenn. 15, 290 S.W. 28, 29; State v. White, 111 Kan. 196, 206 P. 903, 904.

FROM PERSON. Includes taking from presence of person assaulted as well as taking of property in actual contact with person of one robbed. People v. Kubish, 357 Ill. 531, 192 N.E. 543, 545.

FROM, THROUGH, OR UNDER. The term refers to origin or devolution of property, and unless some title to or interest therein has been derived by assignment or otherwise from party adverse to decedent's estate, statute barring testimony is inapplicable. In re Iwers' Estate, 225 Iowa 389, 280 N.W. 579, 582.

FROM TIME TO TIME. Occasionally, at intervals, now and then. Spade v. Hawkins, 60 Ind. App. 388, 110 N.E. 1010, 1012. See From.

FRONT. Forepart, as opposed to the back or rear. State v. Read, 162 Iowa, 572; 144 N.W. 310, 311; Howland v. Andrus, 81 N.J.Eq. 175, 86 A. 391, 393.

Any side or face of a building Is a front, although the word is more commonly used to denote the entrance side. In re McInerney, 47 Wyo. 258, 34 P.2d 35, 43. As applied to a bare lot, it Is that side of lot towards which, in ordinary circumstances, house, when built, will most likely face, and very general usage of building houses with their main entrance toward shorter street line results in common understanding that this is side intended when front of lot is referred to. Rhinehart v. Leitch, 107 Conn. 400, 140 A. 763.

FRONT FOOT. As respects assessment, synonymous with "abutting foot." Moberly v. Hogan, 131 Mo. 19, 32 S.W. 1014.

The rate of assessment is obtained by having the total cost of the work divided by the total number of square feet of paving done under the contract; and the quotient multiplied by one-half of the number of linear feet in the width of the pavement opposite the property lines. City of Crowley v. Police Jury of Acadia Parish, 138 La. 488, 70 So. 487, 488.

FRONT-FOOT RULE. One by which cost of improvement is to be apportioned among several properties in proportion to their frontage on improvement and without regard to benefits conferred. Davy v. McNeill, 31 N.M. 7, 240 P. 482, 488.

FRONTAGE, FRONTAGER. Frontage denotes line of property on street. Smidt v. McKee, 262 N.Y. 373, 186 N.E. 869, 870. Extent of front along road or street. Tzeses v. Barbahenn, 125 N.J.L. 643, 17 A.2d 539, 540. Space available for erection of buildings, and does not include cross streets or space occupied by sidewalk or any ornamental spaces in plat between sidewalks and curb. Wallace v. Kramer, 296 Mich. 680, 296 N.W. 838, 842.

In English law a frontager is a person owning or occupying land which abuts on a highway, river, seashore, or the like. The term is ge rally used with reference to the liability of frontagers o streets to contribute towards the expense of paving, drat ing, or other works on the highway carried out by a local authority, in proportion to the frontage of their respective tenements. Sweet.

The term is also in a similar sense in American law, the expense of local improvements made by municipal corporations (such as paving, curbing, and sewering) being generally assessed on abutting property owners in proportion to the "frontage" of their lots on the street or highway, and an assessment so levied being called a "frontage assessment." Neenan v. Smith, 50 Mo. 531; Lyon v. Tonawanda, C.C.N.Y., 98 F. 366; City of Youngstown v. Fishel, 89 Ohio St. 247, 104 N.E. 141, 143, 50 L.R.A.,N.S., 921, Ann.Cas. 1915D, 1073; Standard Oil Co. of Indiana v. Kamradt, 319 Ill. 51, 149 N.E. 538, 539.

FRONTING AND ABUTTING. Very often, "fronting" signifies abutting, adjoining, or bordering on, depending largely on the context. Rombauer v. Compton Heights Christian Church, 328 Mo. 1, 40 S.W.2d 545, 551. As used in statutes relating to assessment for improvements, property between which and the improvement there is no intervening land. Oklahoma Ry. Co. v. Severns Paving Co., 67 Okl. 206, 170 P. 216-218, 10 A.L.R. 157; Flynn v. Chiappari, 191 Cal. 139, 215 P. 682, 686.

FRONTIER. In international law, that portion of the territory of any country which lies close along the border line of another country, and so "fronts" or faces it. The term means something more than the boundary line itself, and includes a tract or strip of country, of indefinite extent, contiguous to the line. Stoughton v. Mott, 15 Vt. 169.

FROZEN SNAKE. A term used to impute ingratitude and held libelous, the court taking judicial notice of its meaning without an innuendo. 12 Ad. & El. 624.

FRUCTUARIUS. Lat. In the civil law, one who had the usufruct of a thing; i. e., the use of the fruits, profits, or increase, as of land or animals. Inst. 2, 1, 36, 38. Bracton applies it to a lessee, fermor, or farmer of land, or one who held lands ad firmam, for a farm or term. Bract. fol. 261.

FRUCTUS. Lat. In the civil law, fruit, fruits; produce; profit or increase; the organic productions of a thing.

The right to the fruits of a thing belonging to another.

The compensation which a man receives from another for the use or enjoyment of a thing, such as interest or rent. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 167; Inst. 2, 1, 35, 37; Dig. 7, 1, 33; Id. 5, 3, 29; Id. 22, 1, 34.

FRUCTUS AUGENT HAEREDITATEM. The yearly increase goes to enhance the inheritance. Dig. 5, 3, 20, 3.

FRUCTUS CIVILES. All revenues and recompenses which, though not fruits, properly speaking, are recognized as such by the law. The term includes such things as the rents and income of real property, interest on money loaned, and annuities. Civ.Code La. 1900, art. 545.

FRUCTUS FUNDI. The fruits (produce or yield) of land.

FRUCTUS INDUSTRIALES. Industrial fruits, or fruits of industry. Those fruits of a thing, as of land, which are produced by the labor and industry of the occupant, as crops of grain; as distinguished from such as are produced solely by the powers of nature. Emblements are so called in the common law. 2 Steph. Comm. 258; 1 Chit. Gen. Pr. 92. Sparrow v. Pond, 49 Minn. 412, 52 N.W. 36, 16 L.R.A. 103, 32 Am.St.Rep. 571; Twin Falls Bank & Trust Co. v. Weinberg, 44 Idaho 332, 257 P. 31, 33, 54 A.L.R. 1527. Annual crops obtained by yearly labor and cultivation. Koerner v. Wilson, 85 Colo. 140, 274 P. 737, 738, 63 A.L.R. 227.

FRUCTUS LEGIS. The fruit of the law, i. e. execution.

FRUCTUS NATURALES. Those products which are produced by the powers of nature alone; as wool, metals, milk, the young of animals. Sparrow v. Pond, 49 Minn. 412, 52 N.W. 36, 16 L.R.A. 103, 32 Am.St.Rep. 571; Clark v. Strohbeen, 190 Iowa 989, 181 N.W. 430, 433, 13 A.L.R. 1419.

FRUCTUS PECUDUM. The produce or increase of flocks or herds.

FRUCTUS PENDENTES. Hanging fruits; those not severed. The fruits united with the thing which produces them. These form a part of the principal thing.

FRUCTUS PENDENTES PARS FUNDI VIDENTUR. Hanging fruits make part of the land. Dig. 6, 1, 44; 2 Bouv. Inst. no. 1578.

FRUCTUS PERCEPTOS VILLAE NON ESSE CONSTAT. Gathered fruits do not make a part of the farm. Dig. 19, 1, 17, 1; 2 Bouv. Inst. no. 1578.

FRUCTUS REI ALIENIE. The fruits of another's property; fruits taken from another's estate.

FRUCTUS SEPARATI. Separate fruits; the fruits of a thing when they are separated from it. Dig. 7, 4, 13.

FRUCTUS STANTES. Standing fruits; those not yet severed from the stalk or stem.

FRUGES. In the civil law, anything produced from vines, underwood, chalk-pits, stone-quarries. Dig. 50, 16, 77.

Grains and leguminous vegetables. In a more restricted sense, any esculent growing in pods. Vicat, Voc. Jur.; Calvin.

FRUIT. The produce of a tree or plant which contains the seed or is used for food. Klas v. Kuehl, 159 Wis. 561, 150 N.W. 973, 975.

This term, in legal acceptation, is not confined to the produce of those trees which in popular language are called "fruit trees," but applies also to the produce of oak, elm, and walnut trees. Bullen v. Denning, 5 Barn. & C. 847.

Fruit fallen. The produce of any possession detached therefrom, and capable of being enjoyed by itself. Thus, a next presentation, when a vacancy has occurred, is a fruit fallen from the advowson. Wharton.

FRUITS, FRUITS OF THE LAND. In replevy bond, "fruits" includes natural accession to livestock. Southern Surety Co. v. Adams, Tex.Civ. App., 278 S.W. 943, 946. Includes the increase and the clip of replevied goats and sheep; "offspring" and "that which is produced." Southern Surety Co. v. Adams, 119 Tex. 489, 34 S.W.2d 789, 798. The right of a possessor to "fruits of the land" does not permit possessor to extract mineral oil and gas from land. Elder v. Ellerbe, 135 La. 990, 66 So. 337.

Civil fruits, in the civil law, (fructus civiles) are such things as the rents and income of real property, the interest on money loaned, and annuities. Civ.Code La. art. 545. Rents and revenues of an immovable. Posey v. Fargo. 187 La. 122, 174 So. 175, 179.

Natural fruits. The produce of the soil, or of fruit-trees, bushes, vines, etc., which are edible or otherwise useful or serve for the reproduction of their species. The term is used in contradistinction to "artificial fruits," i. e., such as by metaphor or analogy are likened to the fruits of the earth. Of the latter, interest on money is an example. See Civ.Code La. art. 545.

FRUITS OF CRIME. In the law of evidence. material objects acquired by means and in consequence of the commission of crime, and sometimes constituting the subject-matter of the crime. Burrill, Circ. Ev. 445; 3 Benth. Jud. Ev. 31.

FRUMENTA QUIE SATA SUNT SOLO CEDERE INTELLIGUNTUR. Grain which is sown is understood to form a part of the soil. Inst. 2, 1, 32.

FRUMENTUM. In the civil law, grain. That which grows in an ear. Dig. 50, 16, 77.

FRUMGYLD. Sax. The first payment made to the kindred of a slain person in recompense for his murder. Blount.

FRUMSTOLL. Sax. In Saxon law, a chief seat, or mansion house. Cowell.

FRUSCA TERRA. In old records, uncultivated and desert ground. 2 Mon. Angl. 327; Cowell.

FRUSSURA. A breaking; plowing. Cowell.

FRUSTRA. Lat. Without effect, in vain, to no purpose, uselessly; without reason or cause, groundlessly; in error. Harpers' Lat. Dict.

FRUSTRA AGIT QUI JUDICIUM PROSEQUI NEQUIT CUM EFFECTU. He sues to no purpose who cannot prosecute his judgment with effect, [who cannot have the fruits of his judgment.] Fleta, lib. 6, c. 37, § 9.

FRUSTRA [VANA] EST POTENTIA QUIE NUNQUAM VENIT IN ACTUM. That power is to no purpose which never comes into act, or which is never exercised. 2 Coke, 51.

FRUSTRA EXPECTATUR EVENTUS CUJUS EFFECTUS NULLUS SEQUITUR. An event is vainly expected from which no effect follows.

FRUSTRA FERUNTUR LEGES NISI SUBDITIS ET OBEDIENTIBUS. Laws are made to no purpose, except for those that are subject and obedient. Branch, Princ.

FRUSTRA FIT PER PLURA, QUOD FIERI P0TEST PER PAUCIORA. That is done to no purpose by many things which can be done by fewer. Jenk.Cent. p. 68, case 28. The employment of more means or instruments for effecting a thing than are necessary is to no purpose.

FRUSTRA LEGIS AUXILIUM INVOCAT [QUJERIT] QUI IN LEGEM COMMITTIT. He vainly invokes the aid of the law who transgresses the law. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 2, § 3; 2 Hale, P.C. 386; Broom, Max. 279, 297.

FRUSTRA PETIS QUOD MOX ES RESTITURUS. In vain you ask that which you will have immediately to restore. 2 Kames, Eq. 104; 5 Man. & G. 757.

FRUSTRA PETIS QUOD STATIM ALTERI REDDERE COGERIS. Jenk.Cent. 256. You ask in vain that which you might immediately be compelled to restore to another.

FRUSTRA PROBATUR QUOD PROBATUM NON RELEVAT. That is proved to no purpose which, when proved, does not help. Halk.Lat.Max. 50.

FRUSTRATION. Where, from nature of contract and surrounding circumstances, parties from beginning must have known it could not be fulfilled unless, when time thereof arrived, some particular condition continued to exist, under doctrine of "frustration", in absence of warranty that such condition of things shall exist, contract is to be construed as subject to implied condition that parties shall be excused in case, before breach, performance becomes impossible or purpose frustrated from such condition ceasing to exist without default of either. Johnson v. Atkins, 53 Cal. App.2d 430, 127 P.2d 1027, 1028, 1029, 1030.

FRUSTRUM TERIVE. A piece or parcel of land lying by itself. Co.Litt. 5b.

FUGITIVE. One who flees; always used in law with the implication of a flight, evasion, or escape from some duty or penalty or from the consequences of a misdeed.

FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE. A person who, having committed a crime, flees from jurisdiction of court where crime was committed or departs from his usual place of abode and conceals himself within the district. United States ex rel. Demarois v. Farrell, C.C.A.Minn., 87 F.2d 957, 960. State v. Clough, 71 N.H. 594, 53 A. 1086, 67 L.R.A. 946; People v. Hyatt, 172 N.Y. 176, 64 N.E. 825, 60 L.R. A. 774, 92 Am.St.Rep. 706.

To be regarded as a "fugitive from justice," it is not necessary that one shall have left the state for the very purpose of avoiding prosecution; it being sufficient that, having committed there an act constituting a crime, he afterwards has departed from its jurisdiction, and when sought to be prosecuted is found in another state. Hogan v. O'Neill, 255 U.S. 52, 41 S.Ct. 222, 65 L.Ed. 497; People ex rel. Gottschalk v. Brown, 237 N.Y. 483, 143 N.E. 653, 654, 32 A.L.R. 1164; State v. Hayes, 162 La. 917, 111 So. 327, 329 (one who did not flee).

No matter for what purpose or with what motive or under what belief he leaves state, and even though at time of leaving he had no belief he had violated criminal laws and did not contemplate fleeing from justice to avoid prosecution for crime with which he is charged. Ex parte Morris, 131 Tex.Cr.R. 596, 101 S.W.2d 259.

FUGITIVE OFFENDERS. In English law, where a person accused of any offense punishable by imprisonment, with hard labor for twelve months or more, has left that part of his majesty's dominions where the offense is alleged to have been committed, he is liable, if found in any other part of his majesty's dominions, to be apprehended and returned in manner provided by the fugitive offenders' act, 1881, to the part from which he is a fugitive. Wharton.

FUGITIVE OIL. Oil escaping from well which was out of control and flowing down creek to point 10 or 12 miles below the well where it was picked up was "fugitive" or "waste oil" and belonged to the first taker who might reduce it to his possession. Linkenhoger v. Brown, Tex.Civ. App., 128 S.W.2d 163, 164.

FUGITIVE SLAVE. One who, held in bondage, flees from his master's power.

FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW. An act of congress passed in 1793 (and also one enacted in 1850) providing for the surrender and deportation of slaves who escaped from their masters and fled into the territory of another state, generally a "free" state.

FUGITIVE'S GOODS. Under the old English Law, where a man fled for felony, and escaped, his own goods were not forfeited as bona fugitivorum until it was found by proceedings of record (e. g. before the coroner in the case of death) that he fled for the felony. Foxley's Case, 5 Co. 109 a.

FUGITIVUS. In the civil law, a fugitive; a runaway slave. Dig. 11, 4; Cod. 6, 1. See the various definitions of this word in Dig. 21, 1, 17.

FUGUES. Fr. In medical jurisprudence. Ambulatory automatism. See Automatism.

FULL DEFENSE. In pleading, the formula of defense in a plea, stated at length and without abbreviation, thus: "And the said C. D., by E. F., his attorney, comes and defends the force (or wrong) and injury when and where it shall behoove him, and the damages, and whatsoever else he ought to defend, and says," etc. Steph. Pl. p. 481.

FULL FAITH AND CREDIT. "Full faith and credit" clause of Const. U. S. art. 4, § 1, requires that foreign judgment be given such faith and credit as it had by law or usage of state of its origin. First Nat. Bank v. Terry, 103 Cal.App. 501, 285 P. 336, 337. That foreign statutes are to have force and effect to which they are entitled in home state. Flahive v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co., 131 Misc. 586, 227 N.Y.S. 587, 588. And that a judgment or record shall have the same faith, credit, conclusive effect, and obligatory force in other states as it has by law or usage in the state from whence taken. Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. 302, 18 L.Ed. 475; McElmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. 326, 10 L.Ed. 177; Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co. of Philadephia v. Gold Issue Min. & Mill. Co., 243 U.S. 93, 37 S.Ct. 344, 61 L.Ed. 610.

FULL HEARING. Embraces not only the right to present evidence, but also a reasonable opportunity to know the claims of the opposing party, and to meet them. Morgan v. U. S., 304 U.S. 1, 58 S.Ct. 773, 776, 777, 82 L.Ed. 1129.

One in which ample opportunity is afforded to all parties to make, by evidence and argument, a showing fairly adequate to establish the propriety or impropriety from the standpoint of justice and law of the step asked to be taken. Akron, C. & Y. Ry. Co. v. U. S., 261 U.S. 184, 43 S.Ct. 270, 67 L.Ed. 605; State v. Hunt, 137 Tenn. 243, 192 S.W. 931, 932.

FULL INDORSEMENT. See Indorsement.

FULL JURISDICTION. Complete jurisdiction over a given subject-matter or class of actions (as, in equity) without any exceptions or reservations. Bank of Mississippi v. Duncan, 52 Miss. 740.

FULL LIFE. Life in fact and in law. See In Full Life.

FUNCTIONAL DISEASE. In medical jurisprudence, one which prevents, obstructs, or interferes with the due performance of its special functions by any organ of the body, without anatomical defect or abnormality in the organ itself. See Higbee v. Guardian Mut. L. Ins. Co., 66 Barb., N.Y. 472. Distinguished from "organic" disease, which is due to some injury to, or lesion or malformation in, the organ in question.

FUNCTIONARY. A public officer or employee. An officer of a private corporation is also sometimes so called.

Functus officio. Lat. A task performed. Board of School Trustees of Washington City Administrative Unit v. Benner, 222 N.C. 566, 24 S.E.2d 259, 263.

Having fulfilled the function, discharged the office, or accomplished the purpose, and therefore of no further force or authority. Applied to an officer whose term has expired, and who has consequently no further official authority; and also to an instrument, power, agency, etc., which has fulfilled the purpose of its creation, and is therefore of no further virtue or effect. Blanton Banking Co. v. Taliaferro, Tex.Civ.App., 262 S.W. 196.

FUND, v. To capitalize with a view to the production of interest. Stephen v. Milnor, 24 N.J. Eq. 376. Also, to put into the form of bonds, stocks, or other securities, bearing regular interest, and to provide or appropriate a fund or permanent revenue for the payment thereof. Merrill v. Monticello, C.C.Ind., 22 F. 596. City of Long Beach v. Lisenby, 180 Cal. 52, 179 P. 198, 201.

To fund a debt is to pledge a specific fund to keep down the interest and reduce the principal.

Funded debt. As applied to states or municipal corporations, a funded debt is one for the payment of which (interest and principal) some fund is appropriated, either specifically, or by provision made for future taxation and the quasi pledging in advance of the public revenue. Ketchum v. Buffalo, 14 N.Y. 356; People v. Carpenter, 52 N.Y.S. 781, 31 App.Div. 603. As applied to the financial management of corporations (and sometimes of estates in course of administration or properties under receivership) funding means the borrowing of a sufficient sum of money to discharge a variety of floating or unsecured debts, or debts evidenced by notes or secured by bonds but maturing within a short time, and creating a new debt in lieu thereof, secured by a general mortgage, a series of bonds, or an issue of stock, generally maturing at a more remote period, and often at a lower rate of interest. The new debt thus substituted for the pre-existing debts is called the "funded debt." Ketchum v. Buffalo, 14 N.Y. 356; Lawrey v. Sterling, 41 Or. 518, 69 P. 460. This term is very seldom applied to the debts of a private individual; but when so used it must be understood as referring to a debt embodied in securities of a permanent character and to the payment of which certain property has been applied or pledged. Wells v. Wells, Super.N.Y., 24 N.Y.S. 874.

Funding system. The practice of borrowing money to defray the expenses of government, and creating a "sinking fund," designed to keep down interest, and to effect the gradual reduction of the principal debt. Merrill v. Monticello, C.C.Ind., 22 F. 596.

FUND, A generic term and all-embracing as compared with term "money," etc., which is specific. Bivins V. State, 47 Ga.App. 391, 170 S.E. 513, 516.

A sum of money set apart for a specific purpose, or available for the payment of debts or claims. State v. Finney, 141 Kan. 12, 40 P.2d 411, 421.

In its narrower and more usual sense, "fund" signifies "capital," as opposed to "interest" or "income;" as where we speak of a corporation funding the arrears of interest due on its bonds, or the like, meaning that the interest is capitalized and made to bear interest in its turn until it is repaid. Sweet.

In the plural, this word has a variety of slightly different meanings, as follows:

Moneys and much more, such as notes, bills, checks, drafts, stocks and bonds, and in broader meaning may include property of every kind. State v. Finney, 141 Kan. 12, 40 P.2d 411, 421.

Money in hand; assets; cash; money available for the payment of a debt, legacy, etc. Galena Ins. Co. v. Kupfer, 28 Ill. 335, 81 Am.Dec. 284; U. S. v. Jenks, D.C.Pa., 264 F. 697, 698; Johnson v. State, 37 Ga.App. 129, 139 S.E. 118, 119.

The proceeds of sales of real and personal estate, or the proceeds of any other assets converted into money. Doane v. Insurance Co., 43 N.J. Eq. 533, 11 A. 739; Illinois Christian Missionary Soc. v. American Christian Missionary Soc., 277 Ill. 193, 115 N.E. 118, 120.

Corporate stocks or government securities; in this sense usually spoken of as the "funds."

Assets, securities, bonds, or revenue of a state or government appropriated for the discharge of its debts. State v. Hudson, 93 W.Va. 435, 117 S.E. 122, 126; Broadway Bank of St. Louis, Mo., v. McGee Creek Levee & Drainage Dist., 292 Ill. 560, 127 N.E. 165, 166; State v. Board of Education of Sharples Village School Dist., 114 Ohio St. 602, 151 N.E. 669, 670.

Current funds. Current money, whatever is receivable and current by law as money. Henderson v. Farmers' Say. Bank of Harper, 199 Iowa 496, 202 N.W. 259, 261; Feder v. Elliott, 198 Iowa 447, 199 N.W. 288, 289, 36 A.L.R. 1353.

General fund. This phrase, in New York, is a collective designation of all the assets of the state which furnish the means for the support of government and for defraying the discretionary appropriations of the legislature. People v. Orange County Sup'rs, 27 Barb., N.Y., 575, 588. It has also been used in Delaware in the messages of the governor and other state papers to distinguish such funds as. are available in the hands of the state treasurer for general purposes from assets of a special character, such as the school fund.

General revenue fund. As used in connection with municipal finances, the usual, ordinary, running, and incidental expenses of a municipality. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. City of Topeka, 95 Kan. 747, 149 P. 697.

No funds. This term denotes a lack of assets or money for a specific use. It is the return made by a bank to a check drawn upon it by a person who has no deposit to his credit there; also by an executor, trustee, etc., who has no assets for the specific purpose.

Public funds. An untechnical name for (1) the revenue or money of a government, state, or municipal corporation; (2) the bonds, stocks, or other securities of a national or state government. Money, warrants, or bonds, or other paper having a money value, and belonging to the state, or to any county, city, incorporated town or school district. Crawford & Moses' Dig. (Ark.) § 2835; Bank of Blytheville v. State, 148 Ark. 504, 230 S.W. 550, 553. The term applies to funds of every political subdivision of state wherein taxes are levied for public purposes. JEtna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Bramwell, D.C.Or., 12 F.2d 307, 309.

Revolving fund. Usually, a renewable credit over a defined period. In simple parlance it relates usually to a situation where a banker or merchant extends credit for a certain amount which can be paid off from time to time and then credit is again given not to exceed the same amount. It may also mean a fund, which, when reduced, is replenished by new funds from specified sources. U. S. v. Butterworth-Judson Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 297 F. 971, 979.

Sinking fund. The aggregate of sums of money (as those arising from particular taxes or sources of revenue) set apart and invested, usually at fixed intervals, for the extinguishment of the debt of ,a government or corporation, by the accumulation of interest. Elser v. Ft. Worth, Tex.Civ. App., 27 S.W. 740; Brooke v. Philadelphia, 162 Pa. 123, 29 A. 387, 24 L.R.A. 781. A fund arising from particular taxes, imposts, or duties, which is appropriated towards the payment of the interest due on a public loan and for the gradual payment of the principal. Union Pac. R. Co. v. Buffalo Co., 9 Neb. 453, 4 N.W. 53; Sidney Spitzer & Co. v. Commissioners of Franklin County, 188 N.C. 30, 123 S.E. 636, 639. A fund created for extinguishing or paying a funded debt. Ketchum v. Buffalo, 14 N.Y. 379, cited in Chicago & I. R. Co. v. Pyne, C.C.N.Y., 30 F. 89.

Sinking fund tax. A tax raised to be applied to the payment of interest on, and principal of public loan. Sidney Spitzer & Co. v. Commissioners of Franklin County, 188 N.C. 30, 123 S.E. 636, 639; Union Pac. R. Co. v. York County, 10 Neb. 612, 7 N.W. 270.

Craig, 211 N.Y. 456, 105 N.E. 798, 800, Ann.Cas.1915B, 937.

FURTHER ADVANCE. A second or subsequent loan of money to a mortgagor by a mortgagee, either upon the same security as the original loan was advanced upon, or an additional security. Equity considers the arrears of interest on a mortgage security converted into principal, by agreement between the parties, as a further advance. Wharton.

FURTHER ASSURANCE, COVENANT FOR. See Covenant.

FURTHER CONSIDERATION. In English practice, upon a motion for judgment or application for a new trial, the court may, if it shall be of opinion that it has not sufficient materials before it to enable it to give judgment, direct the motion to stand over for further consideration, and direct such issues or questions to be tried or determined, and such accounts and inquiries to be taken and made, as it may think fit. Rules Sup. Ct. xl, 10.

FURTHER DIRECTIONS. Where a master made a separate report, or one not in pursuance of a decree or decretal order, a petition for consequential directions had to be presented, since the cause could not be set down for further directions under such circumstances. See 2 Daniell, Ch.Pr. (5th Ed.) 1233, note.

FURTHER HEARING, or FURTHER PROCEEDINGS. In practice, hearing at another time; new trial; or other proceedings directed by appellate court. C. W. Hunt Co. v. Boston Elevated Ry. Co., 217 Mass. 319, 104 N.E. 728, 729; Morgan Esgineering Co. v. Cache River Drainage Dist., 122 Ark. 491, 184 S.W. 57, 59. Not a new proceeding but rather a continuation of an existing proceeding. In re Mills' Estate, 171 Misc. 42, 11 N.Y.S.2d 929, 932.

FURTHER INSTRUCTIONS. Additional instructions given to jury after they have once been instructed and have retired. White v. Sharpe, 219 Mass. 393, 107 N.E. 56.

FURTHER MAINTENANCE OF ACTION, PLEA TO. A plea grounded upon some fact or facts which have arisen since the commencement of the suit, and which the defendant puts forward for the purpose of showing that the plaintiff should not further maintain his action. Brown.

FURTHERANCE. Act of furthering, helping forward, promotion, advancement, or progress. Maryland Casualty Co. v. Smith, Tex.Civ.App., 40 S.W.2d 913, 914.

FURTHERANCE OF BUSINESS OF EMPLOYER. Discharge of duties of employment, as respects employer's liability for employees' torts. West v. F. W. Woolworth Co., 215 N.C. 211, 1 S.E. 2d 546, 548.

Isett, 15 Iowa 284; the proceeds to be received from the sale of surplus lands; L.R. 2 Ch. 201; a ditch or flume in process of construction, which was held to cover all improvements and fixtures thereafter to be put on the line thereof; De Arguello v. Greer, 26 Cal. 620; rolling stock etc.; Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Woelpper, 64 Pa. 366, 3 Am.Rep. 596; Benjamin v. R. Co., 49 Barb., N.Y., 441. Future calls of assessments on stock cannot be mortgaged; L.R. 10 Eq. 681; but calls already made can be; id.

A will speaks as of the death of the testator and ordinarily passes property acquired after its date.

FUTURE DEBT. In Scotch law, a debt which is created, but which will not become due till a future day. 1 Bell, Comm. 315.

FUTURE EARNINGS. A convenient way of designating earnings which, if it had not been for injury, could have been made in future, but which were lost as result of injury. Nowlin v. Kansas City Public Service Co., Mo.App., 58 S.W.2d 324.

FUTURE ESTATE. See Estate.

FUTURE INTERESTS. Interests In land or other things in which the privilege of possession or of enjoyment is future and not present. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Wells, C.C.A.6, 132 F.2d 405, 407.

FUTURES. This term has grown out of those purely speculative transactions, in which there is a nominal contract of sale for future delivery, but where in fact none is ever intended or executed. The nominal seller does not have or expect to have the stock or merchandise he purports to sell, nor does the nominal buyer expect to receive it or to pay the price. Instead of that, a percentage or margin is paid, which is increased or diminished as the market rates go up or down, and accounted for to the buyer. King v. Quidnick Co., 14 R.I. 138; Lemonius v. Mayer, 71 Miss. 514, 14 So. 33; Plank v. Jackson, 128 Ind. 424, 26 N.E. 568; S. M. Weld & Co. v. Austin, 107 Miss. 279, 65 So. 247, 248.

FUTURI. Lat. Those who are to be. Part of the commencement of old deeds. "Sciant prcesentes et futuri, quod ego talis, dedi et concessi," etc., (Let all men now living and to come know that I, A. B., have, etc.) Bract. fol. 34b.

GAFFOLDGILD. The payment of custom or tribute. Scott.

GAFFOLDLAND. Property subject to the gaffoldgild, or liable to be taxed. Scott.

GAFOL. The same word as "gabel" or "gavel." Rent; tax; interest of money.

GAGE, v. In old English law, to pawn or pledge; to give as security for a payment or performance; to wage or wager.

GAGE, n.

In old English law, a pawn or pledge; something deposited as security for the performance of some act or the payment of money, and to be forfeited on failure or non-performance. Glanv. lib. 10, c. 6; Britt. c. 27.

A mortgage is a dead-gage or pledge; for, whatsoever profit it yields, it redeems not itself, unless the whole amount secured is paid at the appointed time. Cowell.

In French law, the contract of pledge or pawn; also the article pawned.

Gage, estates in. Those held in vadio, or pledge. They are of two kinds: (1) Vivum vadium, or living pledge, or vifgage; (2) mortuum vadium, or dead pledge, better known as "mortgage."

GAGER DE DELIVERANCE. In old English law, when he who has distrained, being sued, has not delivered the cattle distrained, then he shall not only avow the distress, but gager deliverance, i. e., put in surety or pledge that he will deliver them. Fitzh.Nat.Brev.

GAGER DEL LEY. Wager of law (q. v.).

GAMACTA. In old European law, a stroke or blow. Spelman.

GAMALIS. A child born in lawful wedlock; also one born to betrothed but unmarried parents. Spelman.

GAMBLE. To play, or game, for money or other stake; hence to stake money or other thing of value on an uncertain event. It involves, not only chance, but a hope of gaining something beyond the amount played. State v. Mint Vending Machine No. 195084, 85 N.H. 22, 154 A. 224, 226.

The word "gamble" is perhaps the most apt and substantial to convey the idea of unlawful play that our language affords. It is inclusive of hazarding and betting as well as playing. Bennett v. State, 2 Yerg., Tenn., 474. Allen v. Commonwealth, 178 Ky. 250, 198 S.W. 896, 897.

It is not necessary that the player shall hazard what he plays, but it is equally "gambling" if he may win by chance more than the value expended by him. Nelson v. State, 37 Okl.Cr. 90, 256 P. 939, 940; City of Moberly v. Deskin, 169 Mo.App. 672, 155 S.W. 842, 843.

To constitute "gambling," winner must either pay consideration for his chance to win, or without paying anything in advance stand chance to lose or win. R. J. Williams Furniture Co. v. McComb Chamber of Commerce, 147 Miss. 649, 112 So. 579, 580, 57 A.L.R. 421; Almy Mfg. Co. v. City of Chicago, 202 Ill.App. 240.

Commercialized gambling is such gambling as is a source of sure and steady profit. State v. Gardner, 151 La. 874, 92 So. 368, 371.

A common gambler is one who furnishes facilities for gambling, or keeps or exhibits a gambling table, establishment, device, or apparatus. People v. Sponsler, 1 Dak. 291, 46 N.W. 459, citing cases.

GAMBLER. One who follows or practices games of chance or skill, with the expectation and purpose of thereby winning money or other property. Buckley v. O'Niel, 113 Mass. 193, 18 Am.Rep. 466; Brannon v. State, 16 Ala.App. 259, 76 So. 991, 993.

GAMBLING DEVICE. Such device, apparatus, and the like, as is used and employed for gambling, in the sense that in using it, money or the like is staked, wagered, won, or lost as a direct result of its employment or operation. Commonwealth v. Mihalow, 142 Pa.Super. 433, 16 A.2d 656, 659. A machine, implement, or contrivance of any kind for the playing of an unlawful game of chance or hazard. In re Lee Tong, D.C.Or., 18 F. 257; State v, McTeer, 129 Tenn. 535, 167 S.W. 121, 122.

GAMBLING POLICY. In life insurance, one issued to a person, as beneficiary, who has no pecuniary interest in the life insured. Otherwise called a "wager policy." Gambs v. Covenant Mut. L. Ins. Co., 50 Mo. 47.

GAME. Wild birds and beasts. The word includes all game birds, game fowl, and game animals. State ex rel. Sofeico v. Heffernan, 41 N.M. 219, 67 P.2d 240, 246.

Birds and beasts of a wild nature, obtained by fowling and hunting. Bacon, Abr. Coolidge v. Choate, 11 Metc., Mass., 79. The term is said to include (in England) hares, pheasants, partridges, grouse, heath, or moor game, black game, and bustards. Brown. 1 & 2 Wm. IV. c. 32. Graves v. Dunlap, 87 Wash. 648, 152 P. 532, 533, L.R.A.1916C, 338, Ann.Cas.1917B, 944.

A sport, pastime or contest. Lasseter v. O'Neill, 162 Ga. 826, 135 S.E. 78, 80, 49 A.L.R. 1076; Everhart v. People, 54 Colo. 272, 130 P. 1076, 1077. A contrivance which has for its object to furnish sport, recreation, or amusement. Ex parte Williams, 127 Cal.App. 424, 16 P.2d 172, 173. See Gaming.

GAME-KEEPER. One who has the care of keeping and preserving the game on an estate, being appointed thereto by a lord of a manor.

GAME LAWS. Laws passed for the preservation of game, usually forbidding the killing of specified game during certain seasons, Poulos v. State, 49 Ga.App. 20, 174 S.E. 253, or by certain described means. As to English game-laws, see 2 Steph. Comm. 82; 1 & 2 Wm. IV. c. 32.

GAME OF CHANCE. One in which result as to success or failure depends less on skill and experience of player than on purely fortuitous or accidental circumstances incidental to game or manner of playing it or device or apparatus with which it is played, but not under control of player. People v. Cohen, 160 Misc. 10, 289 N.Y.S. 397, 400.

GAMING. An agreement between two or more persons to play together at a game of chance for a stake or wager which is to become the property of the winner, and to which all contribute. In re Stewart, D.C.N.J., 21 F. 398; People v. Todd, 51 Hun, 446, 4 N.Y.S. 25; Carpenter v. Beal-McDonnell & Co., D.C.Ark., 222 F. 453, 460.

"Gaming" and "gambling," in statutes, are similar in meaning, and either one comprehends the idea that, by a bet, by chance, by some exercise of skill, or by the trail, spiring of some event unknown until it occurs, something of value is, as the conclusion of premises agreed, to be transferred from a loser to a winner. Bish.St.Crimes, § 858. Town of Eros v. Powell, 137 La. 342, 68 So. 632, 634; Reinmiller v. State, 93 Fla. 462, 111 So. 633, 635.

"Gaming" is properly the act or engagement of the players. If by-standers or other third persons put up a stake or wager among themselves, to go to one or the other according to the result of the game, this is more correctly termed "betting."

GAMING CONTRACTS. See Wager.

GAMING HOUSE. A building, place, or room kept for use as a place to gamble, or to keep or exhibit for the purpose of gaming, any bank, table, alley, machine, wheel, or device, Davis v. See notes to 43 U.S.C.A. § 1.

GENERAL LAW. A law that affects the community at large. A general law as contradistinguished from one that is special or local, is a law that embraces a class of subjects or places, and does not omit any subject or place naturally belonging to such class. Van Riper v. Parsons, 40 N.J.Law, 1; Mathis v. Jones, 84 Ga. 804, 11 S.E. 1018; Brooks v. Hyde, 37 Cal. 376; Arms v. Ayer, 192 Ill. 601, 61 N.E. 851, 58 L.R.A. 277, 85 Am.St. Rep. 357.

A law, framed in general terms, restricted to no locality, and operating equally upon all of a group of objects, which, having regard to the purposes of the legislation, are distinguished by characteristics sufficiently marked and important to make them a class by themselves, is not a special or local law, but a general law. Jones v. Power County, 27 Idaho, 656, 150 P. 35, 37; Scarbrough v. Wooten, 23 N.M. 616, 170 P. 743; Toombs v. Sharkey, 140 Miss. 676, 106 So. 273, 275; Van Riper v. Parsons, 40 N.J.L. 123, 29 Am. Rep. 210.

GENERAL LIEN. A general lien is a right to detain a chattel, etc., until payment be made, not only of any debt due in respect of the particular chattel, but of any balance that may be due on general account in the same line of business. A general lien, being against the ordinary rule of law, depends entirely upon contract, express or implied, from the special usage of dealing between the parties. Wharton. Crommelin v. Railroad Co., 10 Bosw., N.Y., 80; McKenzie v. Nevius, 22 Me. 150, 38 Am.Dec. 291; Brooks v. Bryce, 21 Wend., N.Y., 16; 3 B. & P. 494.

GENERAL MANAGER. One having general direction and control of corporation's affairs, and who may do everything which corporation could do in transaction of its business. Continental Supply Co. v. Forrest E. Gilmore Co. of Texas, Tex. Civ.App., 55 S.W.2d 622. A manager for all general purposes of the corporation. Phcenix Finance Corporation v. Iowa-Wisconsin Bridge Co., 2 Terry 130, 16 A.2d 789, 793.

GENERAL POWER OF APPOINTMENT. One exercisable in favor of any person the donee may select. Johnstone v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.9, 76 F.2d 55, 57.

GENERAL TAXES. Those imposed by and paid to state as a state which return taxpayer no special benefit other than the protection afforded him and his property by government, and promotion of schemes which have for their benefit the welfare of all. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Sacramento Municipal Utility Dist., D.C.Cal., 17 F.Supp. 685, 686. A tax, imposed solely or primarily for purpose of raising revenue and merely granting person taxed right to conduct business or profession. American Can Co. v. City of Tampa, 152 Fla. 798, 14 So.2d 203, 210.

GENERAL WORDS. Such words of a descriptive character as are used in conveyances in order to convey, not only the specific property described, but also all kinds of easements, privileges, and appurtenances which may possibly belong to the property conveyed.

Such words are in general unnecessary; but are properly used when there are any easements or privileges reputed to belong to the property not legally appurtenant to it.

Such words are rendered unnecessary by the English conveyancing act of 1881, under which they are presumed to be included.

See, as to the effect of such words in deeds, 4 M. & S. 423; in a will; 1 P.Wms. 302; in a lease; 2 Moo. 592; in a release; 3 Mod. 277; in a covenant; 3 Moo. 703; in a statute; 1 Bla.Com. 88; 2 Co. 46.

GENERALE. The usual commons in a religious house, distinguished from pietantice, which on extraordinary occasions were allowed beyond the commons. Cowell.

GENERALE DICTUM GENERALITER EST INTERPRETANDUM. A general expression is to be interpreted generally. 8 Coke, 116a.

GENERALE NIHIL CERTUM IMPLICAT. A general expression implies nothing certain. 2 Coke, 34b. A general recital in a deed has not the effect of an estoppel. Best, Ev. p. 408, § 370.

GENERALE TA NTUM VALET IN GENERALIBUS, QUANTUM SINGULARE IN SINGULIS. What is general is of as much force among general things as what is particular is among things particular. 11 Coke, 59b.

GENERALIA PRIECEDUNT, SPECIALIA SEQUUNTUR. Things general precede, things special follow. Reg.Brev.; Branch, Princ.

GENERALIA SPECIALIBUS NON DEROGANT. Jenk.Cent. 120, cited L.R. 4 Exch. 226. General words do not derogate from special.

GENERALIA SUNT PRZEPONENDA SINGULARIBUS. Branch, Princ. General things are to precede particular things.

GENERALIA VERBA SUNT GENERALITER INTELLIGENDA. General words are to be understood generally, or in a general sense. 3 Inst. 76; Broom, Max. 647.

GENERALIBUS SPECIALIA DEROGANT. Special things take from generals. Halk.Lat.Max. 51.

GENERALIS CLAUSULA NON PORRIGITUR AD EA QUJEANTEA SPECIALITER SUNT COMPREHENSA. A general clause does not extend to those things which are previously provided for specially. 8 Coke, 154b. Therefore, where a deed at the first contains special words, and afterwards concludes in general words, both words, as well general as special, shall stand.

GENERALIS REGULA GENERALITER EST INTELLIGENDA. A general rule is to be understood generally. 6 Coke, 65.

GENERALS OF ORDERS. Chiefs of the several orders of monks, friars, and other religious societies.

GENERATIO. The issue or offspring of a mother-monastery. Cowell.

GENERATION. May mean either a degree of removal in computing descents, or a single succession of living beings in natural descent. McMillan v. School Committee, 107 N.C. 609, 12 S.E. 330, 10 L.R.A. 823.

GENEROSA. Gentlewoman. Cowell; 2 Inst. 668.

GENEROSI FILIUS. The son of a gentleman. Generally abbreviated "gen. fil."

GENEROSUS. Lat. Gentleman; a gentleman. Spelman.

GENICULUM. A degree of consanguinity. Spelman.

GENOESE LOTTERY. Also known as the "numerical" lottery. As distinguished from the "class" lottery (see the title Dutch Lottery), it is a scheme by which, out of 90 consecutive numbers, five are to be selected or drawn by lot. The players have fixed on certain numbers, wagering that one, two, or more of them will be drawn among the five, or that they will appear in a certain order. Fleming v. Bills, 3 Or. 286.

GENS. Lat. In Roman law, a tribe or clan; a group of families, connected by common descent and bearing the same name, being all free-born and of free ancestors, and in possession of full civic rights.

GENS DE JUSTICE. In French law, officers of a court.

GENTES. Lat. People. Contra omnes gentes, against all people. Bract. fol. 37b. Words used in the clause of warranty in old deed.

GENTILES. In Roman law, the members of a gens or common tribe.

GENTLEMAN. Refers to a man of birth, but not noble; a man raised above the vulgar by his character or past. Bramblett v. Trust Co. of Georgia, 182 Ga. 87, 185 S.E. 72, 76. In English law. A person of superior birth.

Under the denomination of "gentlemen" are comprised all above yeoman; whereby noblemen are truly called "gentlemen." Smith de Rep. Ang. lib. 1, cc. 20, 21.

A "gentleman" is defined to be one who, without any title, bears a coat of arms, or whose ancestors have been freemen; and, by the coat that a gentleman giveth, he is known to be, or not to be, descended from those of his name that lived many hundred years since. Jacob. See Cresson v. Cresson, 6 Fed.Cas. 809.

GENTLEMAN USHER. One who holds a post at court to usher others to the presence, etc.

GENTLEWOMAN. The word is a relative one without any legal significance. It refers to a woman of the same rank or status as that of a "gentleman." Bramblett v. Trust Co. of Georgia, 182 Ga. 87, 185 S.E. 72, 76. A woman of birth above the common, or equal to that of a gentleman; an addition of a woman's state or degree.

GENTOO LAW. See Hindu Law.

GENUINE. As applied to notes, bonds, and other written instruments, this term means that they are truly what they purport to be, and that they are not false, forged, fictitious, simulated, spurious, or counterfeit. Baldwin v. Van Deusen, 37 N.Y. 492; Smeltzer v. White, 92 U.S. 392, 23 L.Ed. 508; Krug v. Sinclaire, 57 Cal.App. 563, 207 P. 696, 697. A will that has been revoked by later instrument and not revived by republication is not "genuine," within Surrogate's Court Act, § 144. In re Kiltz's Will, 125 Misc. 475, 211 N.Y.S. 450, 461.

GENUS. In the civil law, a general class or division, comprising several species. In toto jure generi per speciem derogatur, et illud potissimum habetur quod ad speciem directum est, throughout the law, the species takes from the genus, and that is most particularly regarded which refers to the species. Dig. 50, 17, 80.

A man's lineage, or direct descendants.

In logic, it is the first of the universal ideas, and is when the idea is so common that it extends to other ideas which are also universal; e. g., incorporeal hereditament is genus with respect to a rent, which is species. Woolley, Introd. Log. 45; 1 Mill, Log. 133.

GEORGE-NOBLE. An English gold coin, value 6s. 8d.

GERECHTSBODE. In old New York law, a court messenger or constable. O'Callaghan, New Neth. 322.

GEREFA. In Saxon law, greve, reve, or reeve; a ministerial officer of high antiquity in England; answering to the grave or graf (grafio) of the early continental nations. The term was applied to various grades of officers, from the scyre-gerefa, shire-grefe, or shire-reve, who had charge of the county, (and, whose title and office have been perpetuated in the modern "sheriff,") down to the tungerefa, or town-reeve, and lower. Burrill.

GERENS. Bearing. Gerens datum, bearing date. 1 Ld. Raym. 336; Hob. 19.

GERMAN. Whole, full, or own, in respect to relationship or descent. Brothers-german, as opposed to half-brothers, are those who have both the same father and mother. Cousins-german are "first" cousins; that is, children of brothers or sisters.

GERMANE. In close relationship, appropriate, relative, pertinent. State ex rel. Riley v. District Court of Second Judicial Dist. in and for Silver Bow County, 103 Mont. 576, 64 P.2d 115, 119.

GERMANUS. Lat. Descended of the same stock, or from the same couple of ancestors; of the whole or full blood. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 145.

GERMEN TERR1E. Lat. A sprout of the earth. A young tree, so called.

GERONTOCOMI. In the civil law, officers appointed to manage hospitals for the aged poor.

GERONTOCOMIUM. In the civil law, an institution or hospital for taking care of the old. Cod. 1, 3, 46, 1; Calvin.

GERRYMANDER. A name given to the process of dividing a state or other territory into the authorized civil or political divisions, but with such a geographical arrangement as to accomplish a sinister or unlawful purpose, as, for instance, to secure a majority for a given political party in districts where the result would be otherwise if they were divided according to obvious natural lines, or to arrange school districts so that children of certain religions or nationalities shall be brought within the district and those of a different religion or nationality in another district. State v. Whitford, 54 Wis. 150, 11 N.W. 424.

GERSUMARIUS. In old English law, finable; liable to be amerced at the discretion of the lord of a manor. Cowell.

GERSUME. In old English law, expense; reward; compensation; wealth. It is also used for a fine or compensation for an offense. 2 Mon.Angl. 973.

GEST. In Saxon law, a guest. A name given to a stranger on the second night of his entertainment in another's house. Twanight gest.

GESTATION. The time during which a woman carries a fetus in her womb, from conception to birth. But, as used in all medical authorities, this phrase does not mean the actual number of days from conception to birth. Dazey v. Dazey, 50 Cal. App.2d 15, 122 P.2d 308, 309.

GESTIO. In the civil law, behavior or conduct.

Management or transaction. Negotiorum gestio, the doing of another's business; an interference in the affairs of another in his absence, from benevolence or friendship, and without authority. Dig. 3, 5, 45; Id. 46, 3, 12, 4; 2 Kent, Comm. 616, note.

GESTIO PRO 111EREDE. Behavior as heir.

This expression was used in the Roman law, and adopted in the civil law and Scotch law, to denote conduct on the part of a person appointed heir to a deceased person, or otherwise entitled to succeed as heir, which indicates an intention to enter upon the inheritance, and to hold himself out as heir to creditors of the deceased ; as by receiving the rents due to the deceased, or by taking possession of his title-deeds, etc. Such acts will render the heir liable to the debts of his ancestor. Mozley & Whitley.

GESTOR. In the civil law, one who acts for another, or transacts another's business. Calvin.

GESTU ET FAMA. An ancient and obsolete writ resorted to when a person's good behavior was impeached. Lamb.Eir. 1. 4, c. 14.

GESTUM. Lat. In Roman law, a deed or act; a thing done. Some writers affected to make a distinction between "gestum" and "factum." But the best authorities pronounced this subtile and indefensible. Dig. 50, 16, 58.

GET, n. Under Hebraic law, evidence of the granting of a divorce. Kopit v. Zilberszmidt, Sup., 35 N.Y.S.2d 558, 560. A bill of divorce among the Jews which is drawn in the Aramaic language, uniformly worded and carefully written by a proper scribe, and after proper ceremonies and questionings by the rabbi, especially as to whether both parties agree to the divorce, the husband hands to the wife in the presence of ten witnesses. Shilman v. Shilman, 105 Misc. 461, 174 N.Y.S. 385, 386.

GEWITNESSA. In Saxon and old English law, the giving of evidence.

GEWRITE. In Saxon law, deeds or charters; writings. 1 Reeve, Eng.Law 10.

GIBBET. A gallows; the post on which malefactors are hanged, or on which their bodies are exposed. It differs from a common gallows, in that it consists of one perpendicular post, from the top of which proceeds one arm, except it be a double gibbet, which is formed in the shape of the Roman capital T. Enc.Lond.

GIBBET LAW. Lynch law; in particular a custom anciently prevailing in the parish of Halifax, England, by which the free burghers held a summary trial of any one accused of petit larceny, and, if they found him guilty, ordered him to be decapitated.

GIFT. A voluntary transfer of personal property without consideration. Gordon v. Barr, Cal.App., 82 P.2d 955, 956, 957. A parting by owner with property without pecuniary consideration. Hays' Adm'rs v. Patrick, 266 Ky. 713, 99 S.W.2d 805, 809. A voluntary conveyance of land, or transfer of goods, from one person to another, made gratuitously, and not upon any consideration of blood or money. 2 Bl.Comm. 440; 2 Steph.Comm. 102; 2 Kent, Comm. 437. Ingram v. Colgan, 106 Cal. 113, 38 P. 315, 28 L.R.A. 187, 46 Am.St.Rep. 221; Gray v. Barton, 55 N.Y. 72, 14 Am.Rep. 181; Hynes v. White, 47 Cal.App. 549, 190 P. 836, 838; In re Van Alstyne, 207 N.Y. 298, 100 N.E. 802, 804.

Essential requisites of "gift" are capacity of donor, intention of donor to make gift, completed delivery to or for donee, and acceptance of gift by donee. In re Greenberg's Will, 286 N.Y.S. 56, 58, 158 Misc. 446.

In popular language, a voluntary conveyance or assignment is called a "deed of gift"

An "advancement" is a gift made with the intention that it shall be charged to the donee in the distribution of the donor's estate, while a "gift" is made without any purpose that it shall be thereafter accounted for. Hon v. Connelly, 253 Ky. 181, 69 S.W.2d 23.

An absolute gift, or gift inter vivos, as distinguished from a testamentary gift, or one made in contemplation of death, is one by which the donee becomes in the lifetime of the donor the absolute owner of the thing given, whereas a donatio mortis causa leaves the whole title in the donor, unless the event occurs (the death of the donor) which is to divest him. Buecker v. Carr, 60 N.J.Eq. 300, 47 A. 34; Goodan v. Goodan, 184 Ky. 79, 211 S.W. 423, 424; Baker v. Baker, 123 Md. 32, 90 A. 776, 779; McCoy v. Shawnee Building & Loan Ass'n, 122 Kan. 38, 251 P. 194, 195, 49 A.L.R. 1441; First Nat. Bank v. Liberty Trust Co., 151 Md. 241, 134 A. 210, 213, 47 A.L.R. 730; Starks v. Lincoln, 316 Mo. 483, 291 S. W. 132, 134.

As distinguished from a gift In trust, it is one where not only the legal title but the beneficial ownership as well is vested in the donee. Watkins v. Bigelow, 93 Minn. 210, 100 N.W. 1104; Allen v. Hendrick, 104 Or. 202, 206 P. 733, 740.

The only important difference between a "gift" and a "voluntary trust" is that in the case of a gift the thing itself passes to the donee, while in the case of a trust the actual, beneficial, or equitable title passes to the cestui que trust, while the legal title is transferred to a third person, or retained by the person creating it. In re Alberts' Estate, 38 Cal.App.2d 42, 100 P.2d 538, 540.

In English law, a conveyance of lands in tail; a conveyance of an estate tail in which the operative words are "I give," or "I have given." 2 Bl.Comm. 316; 1 Steph.Comm. 473.

-Gift in Default of Appointment. One implied on failure of donee to exercise a power of appointment where it was his duty to do so or where donor expresses an intention to make a legal gift to members of class in default of appointment. Restatement, Real Property, vol. 3, Topic 9, § 367.

GIFT CAUSA MORTIS. A gift of personalty made in expectation of death, then imminent, on an essential condition that property shall belong fully to donee in case donor dies as anticipated, leaving donee surviving him, and gift is not in meantime revoked. Flint v. Varney, 220 Iowa 1241, 264 N.W. 277, 278, 279.

GIFT DEED. A deed for a nominal sum. Bertelsen v. Bertelson, 49 Cal.App.2d 479, 122 P.2d 130, 133.

GIFT ENTERPRISE. A scheme for the division or distribution of articles to be determined by chance amongst those who have taken shares in the scheme. City of Oxford v. Ritz Theatre, Miss., 180 So. 88, 89; State v. Shugart, 138 Ala. 86, 35 So. 28, 100 Am.St.Rep. 17; Winston v. Beeson, 135 N.C. 271, 47 S.E. 457, 65 L.R.A. 167.

A sporting artifice by which, for example, a merchant or tradesman sells his wares for their market value, but, by way of inducement, gives to such purchaser a ticket which entitles him to a chance to win certain prizes to be determined after the manner of a lottery. Code 1933, § 26-6501. Barker v. State, 56 Ga.App. 705, 193 S.E. 605, 607, 609.

GIFTS INTER VIVOS. Gifts between the living, which are perfected and become absolute during lifetime of donor and donee. Neal v. Neal, 194 Ark. 226, 106 S.W.2d 595, 600.

GIFT OVER. A gift to one for life, and from and after his deceased to another, created a "gift over." In re Feeney's Estate, 293 Pa. 273, 142 A. 284, 289.

GIFT TO A CLASS. A gift of aggregate sum to body of persons uncertain in number at time of gift, to be ascertained at future time, who are all to take in equal shares, or some other definite proportion; share of each being dependent for its amount upon ultimate number taking. In re Murphy's Estate, 99 Mont. 114, 43 P.2d 233, 236; Wessborg v. Merrill, 195 Mich. 556, 162 N.W. 102, 106, L.R.A.1918E, 1074; Blackstone v. Althouse, 278 Ill. 481, 116 N.E. 154, 157, L.R.A.1918B, 230.

GIFTA AQUAE. The stream of water to a mill. Mon.Angl. tom. 3.

GIFTOMAN. In Swedish law, the right to dispose of a woman in marriage, or the person possessing such right,—her father, if living, or, if he be dead, the mother.

GILD. In Saxon law, a tax or tribute. Spelman.

A fine, mulct, or amerciament ; a satisfaction or compensation for an injury.

A fraternity, society, or company of persons combined together, under certain regulations, and with the king's license, and so called because its expenses were defrayed by the contributions (geld, gild) of its members. Spelman. In other words, a corporation; called, in Latin, "societal," "collegium," "f ratria," "f raternitas," "sodalitium," "adunatio;" and, in foreign law, "gildonia." Spelman. There were various kinds of these gilds, as merchant or commercial gilds, religious gilds, and others. 3 Turn.Anglo Sax. 98; 3 Steph.Comm. 173, note u. See Gilda Mercatoria.

A friborg, or decennary; called, by the Saxons, "gyldscipes," and' its members, "gildones" and "congildones." Spelman.

GIVE BAIL. To furnish or put in bail or security for one's appearance.

GIVE COLOR. To admit an apparent or colorable right in the opposite party.

Under the ancient system a plea of confession and avoidance must give color to the affirmative averments of the complaint, or it would be fatally defective. The "giving color" was simply the absence of any denials, and the express or silent admission that the declaration, as far as it went, told the truth. Smith v. Marley, 39 Idaho, 779, 230 P. 769, 770. See Color.

GIVE JUDGMENT. To render, pronounce, or declare the judgment of the court in an action at law; not spoken of a judgment obtained by confession. Schuster v. Rader, 13 Colo. 329, 22 P. 505.

GIVE NOTICE. To communicate to another, in any proper or permissible legal manner, Information or warning of an existing fact or state of facts or (more usually) of some intended future action. GLOSSA. Lat. A gloss, explanation, or interpretation.

The glossce of the Roman law are brief illustrative comments or annotations on the text of Justinian's collections, made by the professors who taught or lectured on them about the twelfth century, (especially at the law school of Bologna,) and were hence called "glossators." These glosses were at first inserted in the text with the words to which they referred, and were called "glossce interline- ares;" but afterwards they were placed in the margin, partly at the side, and partly under the text, and called "glossce marginales." A selection of them was made by Accursius, between A. D. 1220 and 1260, under the title of "glossa Ordinaria," which is of the greatest authority. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 90.

GLOSSA VIPERINA EST QUIE CORRODIT VISCERA TEXTUS. 11 Coke, 34. It is a poisonous gloss which corrupts the essence of the text.

GLOSSATOR. In the civil law, a commentator or annotator. A term applied to the professors and teachers of the Roman law in the twelfth century, at the head of whom was Irnerius. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 90.

GLOUCESTER, STATUTE OF. The statute is the 6 Edw. I, c. 1, A.D. 1278. It takes its name from the place of its enactment, and was the first statute giving costs in actions.

GLOVE SILVER. Extraordinary rewards formerly given to officers of courts, etc.; money formerly given by the sheriff of a county in which no offenders are left for execution to the clerk of assize and judges' officers. Jacob.

GLOVES. It was an ancient custom on a maiden assize, when there was no offender to be tried, for the sheriff to present the judge with a pair of white gloves. It is an immemorial custom to remove the glove from the right hand on taking oath. Wharton.

GLYN. A hollow between two mountains; a valley or glen. Co.Litt. 5b.

White Castle System of Eating Houses Corporation, C.C.A.Mich., 90 F.2d 67, 69. Something in business which gives reasonable expectancy of preference in race of competition. In re Witkind's Estate, 167 Misc. 885, 4 N.Y.S.2d 933, 947. The custom or patronage of any established trade or business; the benefit or advantage of having established a business and secured its patronage by the public. The advantage or benefit which is acquired by an establishment, beyond the mere value of the capital, stocks, funds, or property employed therein, in consequence of the general public patronage and encouragement which it receives from constant or habitual customers, on account of its local position, or common celebrity, or reputation for skill or affluence or punctuality, or from other accidental circumstances or necessities, or even from ancient partialities or prejudices. Story, Partn. § 99; Haverly v. Elliott, 39 Neb. 201, 57 N.W. 1010. And as property incident to business sold, favor vendor has won from public, and probability that all customers will continue their patronage. Nye Odorless Incinerator Corporation v. Felton, 5 W.W.Harr. 236, 162 A. 504, 511. It means every advantage, every positive advantage, that has been acquired by a proprietor in carrying on his business, whether connected with the premises in which the business is conducted, or with the name under which it is managed, or with any other matter carrying with it the benefit of the business. Glen & Hall Mfg. Co. v. Hall, 61 N.Y. 226, 19 Am.Rep. 278; In re Ball's Estate, 161 App.Div. 79, 146 N.Y.S. 499, 501; Whittle v. Davie, 116 Va. 575, 82 S.E. 724. 726; Acme, Palmers & De Mooy Foundry Co. v. Weiss, D.C.Ohio, 21 F.2d 492, 493.

GOODRIGHT, GOODTITLE. The fictitious plaintiff in the old action of ejectment, most frequently called "John Doe," was sometimes called "Goodright" or "Goodtitle."

GOODS. A term of variable content. It may include every species of personal property or it may be given a very restricted meaning. Cate v. Merrill, 116 Me. 235, 102 A. 235, 236, 237; Canales v. Earl, Mun.Ct.N.Y., 168 N.Y.S. 726, 727.

In contracts, the term "goods" is not so wide as "chattels," for it applies to inanimate objects, and does not include animals or chattels real, as a lease for years of house or land, which "chattels" does include. Co. Litt. 118; St. Joseph Hydraulic Co. v. Wilson, 133 Ind. 465, 33 N.E. 113; Putnam v. Westcott, 19 Johns, N.Y., 76.

In wills, "goods" is nomen generalissimum, and, if there is nothing to limit it, will comprehend all the personal estate of the testator, as stocks, bonds, notes, money, plate, furniture, etc. Kendall v. Kendall, 4 Russ. 370; Chamberlain v. Western Transp. Co., 44 N.Y. 310, 4 Am.Rep. 681; Keyser v. School Dist., 35 N.H. 483.

GOODS AND CHATTELS. This phrase is a general denomination of personal property, as distinguished from real property; the term "chattels" having the effect of extending its scope to any objects of that nature which would not properly be included by the term "goods" alone, e. g., living animals, emblements, and fruits, and terms under leases for years. Larson v. Judd, 200 Ill. App. 420. The general phrase also embraces choses in action, as well as personalty in possession. In wills. The term "goods and chattels" will, unless restrained by the context, pass all the personal estate, including leases for years, cattle, corn, debts, and the like. Ward, Leg. 208, 211.

GOODS SOLD AND DELIVERED. A phrase frequently used in the action of assumpsit, when the sale and delivery of goods furnish the cause.

GOODS, WARES, AND MERCHANDISE. A general and comprehensive designation of such chattels as are ordinarily the subject of traffic and sale. The phrase is used in the statute of frauds, and is frequently found in pleadings and other instruments. As to its scope, see State v. Brooks, 4 Conn. 449; French v. Schoonmaker, 69 N.J.L. 6, 54 A. 225; Sewall v. Allen, 6 Wend., N.Y., 355; Smith v. Wilcox, 24 N.Y. 358, 82 Am.Dec. 302; Banta v. Chicago, 172 Ill. 204, 50 N.E. 233, 40 L. R.A. 611; Basset v. City of Boston, 226 Mass. 64, 114 N.E. 1035; Culp v. Holbrook, 76 Ind.App. 272, 129 N.E. 278, 280.

GOOLE. In old English law, a breach in a bank or sea wall, or a passage worn by the flux and reflux of the sea. St. 16 & 17 Car. II. c. 11.

GOPHER HOLING. The " 'gopher hole' method of blasting" consists in boring holes, horizontally into the bank of earth and inserting therein charges of powder, the explosion of which dislodges the bank. Bartnes v. Pittsburg Iron Ore Co., 123 Minn. 131, 143 N.W. 117.

GORCE, or GOES. A wear, pool, or pit of water. Termes de la Ley.

GORE. In old English law, a small, narrow slip of ground. Cowell. In modern land law, a small triangular piece of land, such as may be left between surveys which do not close. In some of the New England states (as Maine and Vermont) the term is applied to a subdivision of a county, having a scanty population and for that reason not organized as a town.

GORGE. A defile between hills or mountains, that is a narrow throat or outlet from a region of country. Gibbs v. Williams, 25 Kan. 214, 37 Am.Rep. 241.

GOSSIPRED. In canon law, compaternity; spiritual affinity.

GOUT. In medical jurisprudence, an inflammation of the fibrous and ligamentous parts of the joints, characterized or caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood; usually, but not invariably, occurring in the joints of the feet, and then specifically called "podagra."

GOVERN. To direct and control the actions or conduct of, either by established laws or by arbitrary will; to direct and control, rule, or regulate, by authority. Tucker v. State, 218 Ind. 614, 35 N.E.2d 270, 291. To be a rule, precedent, law or deciding principle for. Asnon v. Foley, 105 Cal.App. 624, 288 P. 792, 795.

GOVERNMENT. From the Latin gubernaculum. Signifies the instrument, the helm, whereby the ship to which the state was compared, was guided on its course by the "gubernator" or helmsman, and in that view, the government is but an agency of the state, distinguished as it must be in accurate thought from its scheme and machinery of government. State v. Chase, 175 Minn. 259, 220 N.W. 951, 953.

The system of polity in a state; that form of fundamental rules and principles by which a nation or state is governed, or by which individual members of a body politic are to regulate their social actions; a constitution, either written or unwritten, by which the rights and duties of citizens and public officers are prescribed and defined, as a monarchical government, a republican government, etc. Webster.

An empire, kingdom, state or independent political community; as in the phrase, "Compacts between independent governments."

The sovereign or supreme power in a state or nation.

The machinery by which the sovereign power in a state expresses its will and exercises its functions; or the framework of political institutions, departments, and offices, by means of which the executive, judicial, legislative, and administrative business of the state is carried on.

The whole class or body of office-holders or functionaries considered in the aggregate, upon whom devolves the executive, judicial, legislative, and administrative business of the state. Stokes v. United States, C.C.A.Mo., 264 F. 18, 22.

In a colloquial sense, the United States or its representatives, considered as the prosecutor in a criminal action; as in the phrase, "the government objects to the witness."

The regulation, restraint, supervision, or control which is exercised upon the individual members of an organized jural society by those invested with authority; or the act of exercising supreme political power or control. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. School Dist. No. 1 in Yuma County, 63 Colo. 159, 165 P. 260, 263.

Federal government. The government of the United States of America, as distinguished from the governments of the several states.

Local government. The government or administration of a particular locality; especially, the governmental authority of a municipal corporation, as a city or county, over its local and individual affairs, exercised in virtue of power delegated to it for that purpose by the general government of the state or nation.

Mixed government. A form of government combining some of the features of two or all of the three primary forms, viz., monarchy, aristocracy, and democracy.

Republican government. One in which the powers of sovereignty are vested in the people and are exercised by the people, either directly, or through representatives chosen by the people, to whom those powers are specially delegated. Black, Const. Law (3d Ed.) 309; In re Duncan, 139 U.S. 449, 11 S.Ct. 573, 35 L.Ed. 219; Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 175, 22 L.Ed. 627.

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES SOCIETIES. Societies formed in England under 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 14, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 83, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 45, and 27 & 28 Vict. c. 43, to enable the industrious classes to make provisions for themselves by purchasing, on advantageous terms, a government annuity for life or term of years. Wharton.

GOVERNMENT DE FACTO. A government of fact. A government actually exercising power and control in the state, as opposed to the true and lawful government; a government not established according to the constitution of the state, or not lawfully entitled to recognition or supremacy, but which has nevertheless supplanted or displaced the government de jure. A government deemed unlawful, or deemed wrongful or unjust, which, nevertheless, receives presently habitual obedience from the bulk of the community. Aust. Jur. 324.

There are several degrees of what is called "de facto government." Such a government, in its highest degree, assumes a character very closely resembling that of a lawful government. This is when the usurping government expels the regular authorities from their customary seats and functions, and establishes itself in their place, and so becomes the actual government of a country. The distinguishing characteristic of such a government is that adherents to it in war against the government de jure do not incur the penalties of treason; and, under certain limitations, obligations assumed by it in behalf of the country or otherwise will, in general, be respected by the government de jure when restored.

Such a government might be more aptly denominated a "government of paramount force," being maintained by active military power against the rightful authority of an established and lawful government; and obeyed in civil matters by private citizens. They are usually administered directly by military authority, but they may be administered, also, by civil authority, supported more or less by military force. Thorington v. Smith, 8 Wall. 8, 9, 19 L.Ed. 361.

GOVERNMENT DE JURE. A government of right; the true and lawful government; a government established according to the constitution of the state, and lawfully entitled to recognition and supremacy and the administration of the state, but which is actually cut off from power or control. A government deemed lawful, or deemed rightful or just, which, nevertheless, has been supplanted or displaced; that is to say, which receives not presently (although it received formerly) habitual obedience from the bulk of the community. Aust. Jur. 324.

GOVERNMENT INSTRUMENTALITY DOCTRINE. The doctrine that government instrumentalities are tax exempt.

The dominion exercised over the estate of deceased full-blood restricted Creek Indian, would not vest in the government a control sufficient to exempt the estate from estate taxes under the "government instrumentality doctrine". Landman v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.10, 123 F.2d 787, 789.

One owning and operating trucks under contract with federal government for transportation of mail held not entitled to have trucks exempted from state motor vehicle registration tax, on ground that trucks were immune from state taxation as agencies and instrumentalities of United States government. Moody v. Louwein, Tex.Civ.App., 300 S. W. 957, 958.

GOVERNMENTAL. Of, pertaining to, or proceeding from government.

Generally, what are purely governmental duties of a city can be settled only by the particular facts. City of Waco v. Thompson, Tex.Civ.App., 127 S.W.2d 223, 225.

GOVERNMENTAL ACT. An act in exercise of police power or in exercise of legislative, discretionary, or judicial powers conferred on municipality for benefit of public. Broome v. City of Charlotte, 208 N.C. 729, 182 S.E. 325. Any act a state may lawfully perform or authorize and, as applied to the federal government, it is its every action within its constitutional power. Orme v. Atlas Gas & Oil Co., 217 Minn. 27, 13 N.W.2d 757, 762. A step physically taken by persons capable of exercising the sovereign authority of the foreign nation. Banco de Espana v. Federal Reserve Bank of New York, C.C.A.N.Y., 114 F.2d 438, 444.

GOVERNMENTAL ACTION. Any action of the federal government within its constitutional power. Graves v. People of State of New York ex rel. O'Keefe, N.Y., 306 U.S. 466, 59 S.Ct. 595, 596, 83 L.Ed. 927, 120 A.L.R. 1466; Chapman v. State, 179 Miss. 507, 176 So. 391, 392.

GOVERNMENTAL ACTIVITY. A function of government in providing for its own support or in providing services to the public. For example taxation and the collection of taxes, Goble v. Zolot, 144 Neb. 70, 12 N.W.2d 311, 312; maintenance of firehouse property, Haynes v. City of New York, 259 App.Div. 837, 19 N.Y.S.2d 164, 165.

Generally when a municipality's activity is for advantage of state as a whole, or is in performance of a duty imposed by sovereign power, activity is "public" and "governmental." Department of Treasury v. City of Evansville, Ind., 223 Ind. 435, 60 N.E.2d 952, 955.

GOVERNMENTAL AGENCY. A subordinate creature of the sovereign created to carry out a governmental function. Frequently, a political subdivision or corporation. Hence a charitable hospital which cared for free patients, sent to it by city, Jewish Hospital of Brooklyn v. Doe, 252 App.Div. 581, 300 N.Y.S. 1111, 1117; city fire department, Ring v. Minneapolis St. Ry. Co., 173 Minn. 265, 217 N.W. 130, 131; county, Jefferson County ex rel. Grauman v. Jefferson County Fiscal Court, 274 Ky. 91, 118 S.W.2d 181, 184; county water district, Laguna Beach County Water Dist. v. Orange County, 30 Cal.App.2d 740, 87 P.2d 46, 48; irrigation district, Outlook Irr. Dist. v. Fels, 176 Wash. 211, 28 P.2d 996, 998; municipal corporation, Town of Falls Church v. Arlington County Board, 166 Va. 192, 184 S.E. 459, 463; Millar v. Town of Wilson, 222 N.C. 340, 23 S.E.2d 42, 44; National Guard, Lind v. Nebraska National Guard, 144 Neb. 122, 12 N.W.2d 652, 656, 150 A.L.R. 1449; poor district, Managers for Relief and Employment of Poor of Germantown Tp. v. Witkin, 329 Pa. 410, 196 A. 837, 840; school district, State ex rel. Klimek v. School Dist. No. 70, Otter Tail County, 204 Minn. 279, 283 N.W. 397, 399; Tennessee Valley Authority, Posey v. Tennessee Valley Authority, C.C.A.Ala., 93 F.2d 726, 727; and every agency which Congress can constitutionally create. Graves v. People of State of New York ex rel. O'Keefe, N.Y., 306 U.S. 466, 59 S.Ct. 595, 597, 83 L.Ed. 927, 120 A.L.R. 1466.

GOVERNMENTAL AGENTS. Those performing duties of a public character for benefit of all citizens of community. The term includes firemen and policemen. Miller v. City of Albany, 158 Misc. 720, 287 N.Y.S. 889, 891.

GOVERNMENTAL BODY. See Governmental Agency.

GOVERNMENTAL CAPACITY. In its "governmental capacity," a municipality acts mainly as an arm of the state for convenient administration of government in incorporated territory, for public good on behalf of the state rather than for itself. Public Service Co. of Oklahoma v. City of Tulsa, 174 Okl. 58, 50 P.2d 166, 168; Oklahoma Natural Gas Corporation v. City of Enid, 179 Okl. 283, 65 P.2d 440, 442.

GOVERNMENTAL CHARACTER. See Governmental Capacity.

GOVERNMENTAL DUTIES. Those duties of a municipality have reference to some part or ele-rnent of the state's sovereignty granted it to be exercised for the benefit of the public, and all other duties are "proprietary". City of Miami v. Oates, 152 Fla. 21, 10 So.2d 721, 723.

Those duties that the framers of the Constitution intended each member of the union of states would assume in order adequately to function under the form of government guaranteed by the Constitution. First State Bank of Gainesville v. Thomas, D.C.Tex., 38 F.Supp. 849, 851.

GOVERNMENTAL ENTERPRISE. A project or undertaking by the government of a more or less permanent nature, such as a drainage district. Rorick v. United States Sugar Corporation, C.C.A. Fla., 120 F.2d 418, 421.

GOVERNMENTAL EXPENDITURE OR EXPENSE. One made in preserving health, good order, and peace of community (Const. art. 8, § 10). Town of Amherst v. Erie County, 236 App. Div. 58, 258 N.Y.S. 76, 81; keeping and dieting of prisone-s and taking care of jail, Breathitt County v. Cockrell, 250 Ky. 743, 63 S.W.2d 920, 92 A.L.R. 626.

GOVERNMENTAL FACILITY. A building or institution provided by the government to care for a specified need, such as a court house or county jail. Haney v. Town of Rainelle, 125 W.Va. 397, 25 S.E.2d 207, 211.

GOVERNMENTAL FUNCTION. Duties imposed by state on municipal corporation, which latter must perform at peril. Seafeldt v. Port of Astoria, 141 Or. 418, 16 P.2d 943, 945. Where duty involves general public benefit not in nature of corporate or business undertaking for corporate benefit and interest of municipality, function is "governmental," whether duty be directly imposed or voluntarily assumed. Gebhardt v. Village of La Grange Park, 354 Ill. 234, 188 N.E. 372, 374. Those conferred upon municipality as local agency of prescribed and limited jurisdiction to be employed in administering the affairs of the state and promoting the public welfare generally. State ex rel. Gebhardt v. City Council of Helena, 102 Mont. 27, 55 P.2d 671, 673, 675.

GOVERNMENTAL IMMUNITY. A doctrine of implied limitation of the power of the federal government to tax a state or any of its instrumentalities, and of power of state to tax federal government or any of its instrumentalities, and is applicable only to taxing relations of federal and state governments, and does not apply to state and municipalities therein. Marson v. City of Philadelphia, 342 Pa. 369, 21 A.2d 228, 229, 230. See, also, Sovereign Immunity of State from Liability.

GOVERNMENTAL INSTRUMENTALITY. Any agency constitutionally created by Congress. Unemployment Compensation Commission of North Carolina v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 215 N.C. 491, 2 S.E.2d 592, 595, 596; Home Owners' Loan Corporation v. Hardie & Caudle, 171 Tenn. 43, 100 S.W.2d 238, 239, 108 A.L.R. 702; Indian oil lease, Barnsdall Refineries v. Oklahoma Tax Commission, 171 Okl. 140, 41 P.2d 918; liquor control commission, Pacific Fruit & Produce Co. v. Oregon Liquor Control Commission, D.C.Or., 41 F.Supp. 175, 179.

GOVERNMENTAL POWERS. Those pertaining to making and enforcing by a city of police regulations to prevent crime, preserve public health, prevent fires, care for the poor, and educate the young. Huffman v. City of Columbus, Ohio App., 51 N.E.2d 410, 412.

Powers exercised by city as agency of state. State ex rel. Gebhardt v. City Council of Helena, 102 Mont. 27, 55 P.2d 671, 673.

GOVERNMENTAL PURPOSE. One which has for its objective the promotion of the public health, safety, morals, general welfare, security, prosperity and contentment of the inhabitants of a given political division. Green v. Frazier, 44 N.D. 395, 176 N.W. 11, 17.

It has been held that, if an electric plant is used by a city for furnishing light and power for its own use and the use of its inhabitants, it is a "governmental purpose". Chadwick v. City of Crawfordsville, 216 Ind. 399, 24 N.E.2d 937, 941, 129 A.L.R. 469; State v. Lincoln County Power Dist. No. 1, 60 Nev. 401, 111 P.2d 528, 531.

A lot purchased for jail but actually used to store cordwood used in county buildings and to store county road machinery, was prima facie used for "governmental purposes". Security State Bank v. Dent County, 345 Mo. 1050, 137 S.W.2d 960, 964.

Some courts distinguish between public purpose and governmental purpose. Spalding v. United States, D.C.Cal., 17 F.Supp. 957, 961.

GOVERNMENTAL SUBDIVISION. An agency created to carry out a governmental purpose or function. It has been held to include a public corporation authorized to use waters of natural stream for irrigation and for development of electric power, Platte Valley Public Power and Irrigation Dist. v. Lincoln County, 144 Neb. 584, 14 N.W.2d 202, 206, 155 A.L.R. 412; and a housing authority, Lennox v. Housing Authority of City of Omaha, 137 Neb. 582, 290 N.W. 451, 459; but not to include the Mortgage Commission Service Corporation, In re Batter, 257 App.Div. 546, 14 N.Y.S. 2d 42, 44; or a receiver operating for the account of the United States. The Southern Cross, C.C.A. N.Y., 120 F.2d 466, 468.

The enforcement of these acts was resisted and their constitutionality questioned. The supreme court affirmed the common-law doctrine that private property appropriated by the owner to a public use is thereby subjected to public regulation. They also held that the right of regulation was not restrained by the prohibition of the fourteenth amendment of the federal constitution against the taking by the states of private property without due process of law. A text writer, who was at that time a member of the court, says of these cases: "But these decisions left undecided the question how far this legislative power of regulation belonged to the States, and how far it was in the congress of the United States"; Miller, Const.U.S. 397.

GUARANTOR. He who makes a guaranty. In re Ford, D.C.Wash., 14 F.2d 848, 849.

GUARANTY, v. To undertake collaterally to answer for the payment of another's debt or the performance of another's duty, liability, or obligation; to assume the responsibility of a guarantor; to warrant. See Guaranty, n.

GUARANTY, n. A collateral agreement for performance of another's undertaking. Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. v. Hamilton, 230 Mo.App. 430, 91 S.W.2d 193. A promise to answer for payment of debt or performance of obligation if person liable in first instance fails to make payment or perform obligation. McGee v. F. W. Poe Mfg. Co., 176 S.C. 288, 180 S.E. 48, 51, 99 A.L.R. 1468. An undertaking by one person to be answerable for the payment of some debt, or the due performance of some contract or duty, by another person, who himself remains liable to pay or perform the same. Story, Prom. Notes, § 457. A promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another person. Civil Code Cal. § 2787.

A guaranty is a contract that some particular thing shall be done exactly as it is agreed to be done, whether it is to be done by one person or another, and whether there be a prior or principal contractor or not. Redfield v. Haight, 27 Conn. 31.

The definition of a "guaranty," by text-writers, is an undertaking by one person that another shall perform his contract or fulfill his obligation, or that, if he does not, the guarantor will do it for him. A guarantor of a bill or note is said to be one who engages that ,the note shall be paid, but is not an indorser or surety. Gridley v. Capen, 72 Ill. 13.

Synonyms

The terms guaranty and suretyship are sometimes used interchangeably; but they should not be confounded. The contract of a guarantor is his own separate contract. It is in the nature of a warranty by him that the thing guarantied to be done by the principal shall be done, not merely an engagement jointly with the principal to do the thing. The original contract of the principal is not his contract, and he is not bound to take notice of its non-performance. Durham v. Manrow, 2 N.Y. 548; Nading v. McGregor, 121 Ind. 465, 23 N.E. 283, 6 L.R.A. 686; Hoosier Brick Co. v. Floyd County Bank, 64 Ind.App. 445, 116 N.E. 87, 90; W. T. Rawleigh Co. v. Salter, 31 Ga.App. 329, 120 S.E. 679, 681.

Guaranty and warranty are derived from the same root, and are in fact etymologically the same word, the "g" of the Norman French being interchangeable with the English "w." They are often used colloquially and in commercial transactions as having the same signification, as where a piece of machinery or the produce of an estate is "guarantied" for a term of years, "warranted" being the more appropriate term in such a case. Accumulator Co. v. Dubuque St. R. Co., Iowa, 64 P. 70, 12 C.C.A. 37; Martinez v. Earnshaw, 36 Wkly.Notes Cas., Pa., 502. A distinction is also sometimes made in commercial usage, by which the term "guaranty" is understood as a collateral warranty (often a conditional one) against some default or event in the future, while the term "warranty" is taken as meaning an absolute undertaking in prcesenti, against the defect, or for the quantity or quality contemplated by the parties in the subject-matter of the contract. Sturges v. Bank of Circleville, 11 Ohio St. 169, 78 Am.Dec. 296. But in strict legal usage the two terms are widely distinguished in this, that a warranty is an absolute undertaking or liability on the part of the warrantor, and the contract is void unless it is strictly and literally performed, while a guaranty is a promise, entirely collateral to the original contract, and not imposing any primary liability on the guarantor, but binding him to be answerable for the failure or default of another. Masons' Union L. Ins. Ass'n v. Brockman, 20 Ind. App. 206, 50 N.E. 493.

Absolute guaranty. An unconditional undertaking by a guarantor that debtor will pay debt or perform the obligation. An unconditional promise of payment or performance of principal contract on default of principal debtor or obligor. Robey v. Walton Lumber Co., 17 Wash.2d 242, 135 P.2d 95, 102, 145 A.L.R. 924.

Collateral guaranty. A contract by which the guarantor undertakes, in case the principal fails to do what he has promised or undertaken to do, to pay damages for such failure; distinguished from an engagement of suretyship in this respect, that a surety undertakes to do the very thing which the principal has promised to do, in case the latter defaults. Woody v. Haworth, 24 Ind.App. 634, 57 N.E. 272; Nading v. McGregor, 121 Ind. 470, 23 N.E. 283, 6 L.R.A. 686.

Conditional guaranty. One which depends upon some extraneous event, beyond the mere default of the principal, and generally upon notice of the guaranty, notice of the principal's default, and reasonable diligence in exhausting proper remedies against the principal. Yager v. Title Co., 112 Ky. 932, 66 S. W. 1027; Tobacco Co. v. Heid, D.C. Alaska, 62 F. 962; Wall v. Eccles, 61 Utah, 247, 211 P. 702, 703.

Continuing guaranty. One relating to a future liability of the principal, under successive transactions, which either continue his liability or from time to time renew it after it has been satisfied. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Courtney, 141 Cal. 6'74, 75 P. 296; Buck v. Burk, 18 N.Y. 340; German Sa^{y}. Bank v. Drake, Iowa, 79 N.W. 121; Glaser, Kohn & Co. v. U. S., C.C.A./11., 224 F. 84, 86; Hirning v. Jacobsen, 51 S.D. 270, 213 N.W. 505, 507.

Special guaranty. A guaranty which is available only to the particular person to whom it is offered or addressed; as distinguished from a general guaranty, which will operate in favor of any person who may accept it. Everson v. Gere, 40 Hun, N.Y., 250; Tidioute Sa^{y}. Bank v. Libbey, 101 Wis. 193, 77 N.W. 182, 70 Am.St.Rep. 907; Jobes v. Miller, 201 Mo.App. 45, 209 S.W. 549, 550.

Guaranty. company. A corporation authorized to transact the business of entering into contracts of guaranty and suretyship; as, one which, for fixed premiums, becomes surety on judicial bonds, fidelity bonds, and the like. See 'Etna L. Ins. Co. v. Coulter, 25 Ky.L.Rep. 193, 74 S.W. 1050.

GUARANTY FUND. Statutes have made provision for depositors' guaranty funds to be raised, in whole or in part, by assessments on banks and to be used to pay the depositors of an insolvent bank. Noble State Bank v. Haskell, 219 U.S. 104, 31 S.Ct. 186, 55 L.Ed. 112, 32 L.R.A.,N.S., 1062, Ann. Cas.1912A, 487; Shallenberger v. Bank, 219 U.S. 114, 31 S.Ct. 189, 55 L.Ed. 117; Assaria State Bank v. Dolley, 219 U.S. 121, 31 S.Ct. 189, 55 L.Ed. 123; Abilene Nat. Bank v. Dolley, 228 U.S. 1, 33 S.Ct. 409, 57 L.Ed. 707.

GUARANTY INSURANCE. See Insurance.

GUARDAGE. A state of wardship.

GUARDIAN. A guardian is a person lawfully invested with the power, and charged with the duty, of taking care of the person and managing the property and rights of another person, who, for some peculiarity of status, or defect of age, understanding, or self-control, is considered incapable of administering his own affairs. Bass v. Cook, 4 Port., Ala., 392; Sparhawk v. Allen, 21 N.H. 27; Burger v. Frakes, 67 Iowa, 460, 23 N.W. 746; Fleming v. Leibe, 95 N.J.Eq. 129, 122 A. 616.

One who legally has the care and management of the person, or the estate, or both, of a child during its minority. Reeve, Dom. Rel. 311.

This term might be appropriately used to designate the person charged with the care and control of idiots, lunatics, habitual drunkards, spendthrifts, and the like; but such person is, under many of the statutory systems authorizing the appointment, styled "committee," and in common usage the name "guardian" is applied only to one having the care and management of a minor.

Classification

A testamentary guardian is one appointed by the deed or last will of the child's father; while a guardian by election is one chosen by the infant himself in a case where he would otherwise be without one.

A general guardian is one who has the general care and control of the person and estate of his ward; while a special guardian is one who has specie] or limited powers and duties with respect to his ward, e. g., a guardian who has the custody of the estate but not of the person, or vice versa, or a guardian ad litem.

A domestic guardian is one appointed at the place where the ward is legally domiciled; while a foreign guardian derives his authority from appointment by the courts of another state, and generally has charge only of such property as may be located within the jurisdiction of the power appointing him.

A guardian ad litem is a guardian appointed by a court of justice to prosecute or defend for an infant in any suit to which he may be a party, 2 Steph.Comm. 342; Crawford v. Amusement Syndicate Co., Mo., 37 S.W.2d 581, 584. Most commonly appointed for infant defendants, infant plaintiffs generally suing by next friend. This kind of guardian has no right to interfere with the infant's person or property. 2 Steph.Comm. 343; Richter v. Leiby, 107 Wis. 404, 83 N.W. 694; Morris v. Standard Oil Co., 192 Cal. 343, 219 P. 998, 1000, 30 A.L.R. 1103.

A guardian by appointment of court has custody of the infant until the attainment of full age. 2 Steph.Comm. 341; 2 Kent, Comm. 226.

A guardian by nature is the father, and,,,on nis death, the mother, of a child. 1 Bl.Comm. 461; 2 Kent, Comm. 219; Daniels v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 135 Pa.Super. 450, 5 A.2d 608, 611. This guardianship extends only to the custody of the person of the child to the age of twenty-one years. Sometimes called "natural guardian," but this is rather a popular than a technical mode of expression. 2 Steph.Comm. 337; Kline v. Beebe, 6 Conn. 500; Mauro v. Ritchie, 16 Fed.Cas. 1171.

A guardian by statute is a guardian appointed for a child by the deed or last will of the father, and who has the custody both of his person and estate until the attainment of full age. This kind of guardianship is founded on the statute of 12 Car. II. c. 24, and ,has been pretty extensively adopted in this country. 1 Bl.Comm. 462; 2 Steph. Comm. 339, 340; 2 Kent, Comm. 224-226; Huson v. Green, 88 Ga. 722, 16 S.E. 255.

A guardian for nurture is the father, or, at his decease, the mother, of a child. This kind of guardianship extends only to the person, and determines when the infant arrives at the age of fourteen. 2 Kent, Comm. 221; 1 Bl.Comm. 461; 2 Steph.Comm. 338; Mauro v. Ritchie, 16 Fed.Cas. 1171; Arthurs' Appeal, 1 Grant Cas., Pa., 56.

Guardian in chivalry. In the tenure by knight's service, in the feudal law, if the heir of the feud was under the age of twenty-one, being a male, or fourteen, being a female, the lord was entitled to the wardship (and marriage) of the heir, and was called the "guardian in chivalry." This wardship consisted in having the custody of the body and lands of such heir, without any account of the profits. 2 Bl.Comm. 67.

Guardian in socage. At the common law, this was a species of guardian who had the custody of lands coming to the infant by descent, as also of the infant's person, until the latter reached the age of fourteen. Such guardian was always "the next of kin to whom the inheritance cannot possibly descend." 1 Bl.Comm. 461; 2 Steph.Comm. 338; Byrne v. Van Hoesen, 5 Johns., N.Y., 67; Combs v. Jackson, 2 Wend., N.Y., 157, 19 Am.Dec. 568.

Natural guardian. The father of a child, or the mother if the father be dead.

GUIDON DE LA MER. The name of a treatise on maritime law, by an unknown author, supposed to have been written about 1671 at Rouen, and considered, in continental Europe, as a work of high authority.

GUILD. A voluntary association of persons pursuing the same trade, art, profession, or business, such as printers, goldsmiths, wool merchants, etc.. united under a distinct organization of their own, analogous to that of a corporation, regulating the affairs of their trade or business by their own laws and rules, and aiming, by co-operation and organization, to protect and promote the interests of their common vocation.

In medieval history these fraternities or guilds played an important part in the government of some states; as at Florence, in the thirteenth and following centuries, where they chose the council of government of the city. The word is said to be derived from the Anglo-Saxon "gild" or "geld," a tax or tribute, because each member of the society was required to pay a tax towards its support.

GUILD RENTS. Rents payable to the crown by any guild, or such as formerly belonged to religious guilds, and came to the crown at the general dissolution of the monasteries. Tomlins.

GUILDHALL. The hall or place of meeting of a guild, or gild.

The place of meeting of a municipal corporation. 3 Steph. Comm. 173, note. The mercantile or commercial gilds of the Saxons are supposed to have given rise to the present municipal corporations of England, whose place of meeting is still called the "Guildhall."

GUILDHALL SITTINGS. The sittings held in the Guildhall of the city of London for city of London causes.

GUILLOTINE. An instrument for decapitation, used in France for the infliction of the death penalty on convicted criminals, consisting, essentially, of a heavy and weighted knife-blade moving perpendicularly between grooved posts, which is made to fall from a considerable height upon the neck of the sufferer, immovably fixed in position to receive the impact.

GUILT. In criminal law, that quality which imparts criminality to a motive or act, and renders the person amenable to punishment by the law.

That disposition to violate the law which has manifested itself by some act already done. The opposite of innocence. See Ruth. Inst. b. 1, c. 18, § 10.

GUILTY. Having committed a crime or tort; the word used by a prisoner in pleading to an indictment when he confesses the crime of which he is charged, and by the jury in convicting. Corn. v. Walter, 83 Pa. 108, 24 Am.Rep. 154; Jessie v. State, 28 Miss. 103; State v. White, 25 Wis. 359. Responsible for a delinquency, crime, or sin, and the connotation of such word is "evil", "wrong. doing", or "culpability". Hilkert v. Canning, 58 Ariz. 290, 119 P.2d 233, 236.

GUINEA. A coin formerly issued by the English mint, but all these coins were called in the time of Wm. IV. The word now means only the sum of £1 18., in which denomination the fees of counsel are always given.

GULA-THING. A collection of Scandinavian customs in force in the southern part of Norway. The Frosta-thing was in force in the more northerly division of Dronheim. They are said to help to an understanding of the law prevailing in the northern part of England, where the Danish influence was strongest. 2 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 23.

GULE OF AUGUST. The first of August, being the day of St. Peter ad Vincula.

GULES. The heraldic name of the color usually called "red." The word is derived from the Arabic word "gule," a rose, and was probably introduced by the Crusaders. Gules is denoted in engravings by numerous perpendicular lines. Heralds who blazoned by planets and jewels called it "Mars," and "ruby." Wharton.

HABE, or HAVE. Lat. A form of the salutatory expression "Ave" (hail) in the titles of the constitutions of the Theodosian and Justinian Codes. Calvin; Spelman.

HABEAS CORPORA JURATORUM. A writ commanding the sheriff to bring up the persons of jurors, and, if need were, to distrain them of their lands and goods, in order to insure or compel their attendance in court on the day of trial of a cause. It issued from the Common Pleas, and served the same purpose as a distringas juratores in the King's Bench. It was abolished by the C. L. P. Act, 1852, § 104. Brown.

HABEAS CORPUS. Lat. (You have the body.) The name given to a variety of writs, (of which these were anciently the emphatic words,) having for their object to bring a party before a court or judge. In common usage, and whenever these words are used alone, they are understood to mean the habeas corpus ad sub jiciendum, (see infra.) Dancy v. Owens, 126 Okl. 37, 258 P. 879, 884; In re McDevitt, 101 Misc. 588, 168 N.Y.S. 433; U. S. v. Tod, 263 U.S. 149, 44 S.Ct. 54, 57, 68 L.Ed. 221; Payne v. Graham, 20 Ala.App. 439, 102 So. 729, 731.

The sole function of the writ is to release from unlawful imprisonment. People ex rel. Luciano v. Murphy, 160 Misc. 573, 290 N.Y.S. 1011. The office of the writ is not to determine prisoner's guilt or innocence, and only issue which it presents is whether prisoner is restrained of his liberty by due process. Ex parte Presnell, 58 Okl.Cr. 50, 49 P.2d 232.

HABEAS CORPUS ACT. The English statute of 31 Car. II. c. 2, is the original and prominent habeas corpus act. It was amended and supplemented by St. 56 Geo. III. c. 100. And similar statutes have been enacted in all the United States. This act is justly regarded as the great constitutional guaranty of personal liberty.

HABEAS CORPUS AD DELIBERANDUM ET RECIPIENDUM. A writ which is issued to remove, for trial, a person confined in one county to the county or place where the offense of which he is accused was committed. Bac. Abr. "Habeas Corpus," A; 1 Chit. Crim. Law, 132. Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch, 97, 2 L.Ed. 554. Thus, it has been granted to remove a person in custody for contempt to take his trial for perjury in another county. 1 Tyrw. 185.

HABEAS CORPUS AD FACIENDUM ET RECIPIENDUM. A writ issuing in civil cases to remove the cause, as also the body of the defendant, from an inferior court to a superior court having jurisdiction, there to be disposed of. It is also called "habeas corpus cum causa." Ex parte Bollman, 4 Cranch, 97, 2 L.Ed. 554.

HABEAS CORPUS AD PROSEQUENDUM. A writ which issues when it is necessary to remove a prisoner in order to prosecute in the proper jurisdiction wherein the fact was committed. 3 Bl. Comm. 130; State ex rel. Deeb v. Fabisinski, 111 Fla. 454, 152 So. 207, 210.

HABEAS CORPUS AD RESPONDENDUM. A writ which is usually employed in civil cases to remove a person out of the custody of one court into that of another, in order that he may be sued and answer the action in the latter. 2 Sell. Pr. 259; 2 Mod. 198; 3 Bl. Comm. 129; 1 Tidd, Pr. 300.

HABEAS CORPUS AD SATISFACIENDUM. In English practice. A writ which issues when a prisoner has had judgment against him in an action, and the plaintiff is desirous to bring him up to some superior court, to charge him with process of execution. 3 Bl. Comm. 129, 130; 3 Steph. Comm. 693; 1 Tidd, Pr. 350.

HABEAS CORPUS AD SUBJICIENDUM. A writ directed to the person detaining another, and commanding him to produce the body of the prisoner, (or person detained,) with the day and cause of his caption and detention, ad faciendum, sub jiciendum et recipiendum, to do, submit to, and receive whatsoever the judge or court awarding the writ shall consider in that behalf. 3 Bl. Comm. 131; 3 Steph. Comm. 695.

This is the well-known remedy for deliverance from illegal confinement, called by Sir William Blackstone the most celebrated writ in the English law, and the great and efficacious writ in all manner of illegal confinement. 3 Bl. Comm. 129. The "great writ of liberty," issuing at common law out of courts of Chancery, King's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer. Ex parte Kelly, 123 N.J.Eq. 489, 198 A. 203, 207.

HABEAS CORPUS AD TESTIFICANDUM. At common law, the writ, meaning "you have the body to testify", used to bring up a prisoner detained in a jail or prison to give evidence before the court. Hottle v. District Court in and for Clinton County, 233 Iowa 904, 11 N.W.2d 30, 34; 3 Bl. Comm. 130; 2 Tidd, Pr. 809. Ex parte Marmaduke, 91 Mo. 250, 4 S.W. 91, 60 Am.Rep. 250.

HABEAS CORPUS CUM CAUSA. (You have the body, with the cause.) Another name for the writ of habeas corpus ad faciendum et recipiendum, (q. V.) 1 Tidd, Pr. 348, 349.

HABEMUS OPTIMUM TESTEM, CONFITENTEM REUM. 1 Phil. Ev. 397. We have the best witness,—a confessing defendant. "What is taken pro confess° is taken as indubitable truth. The plea of guilty by the party accused shuts out all further inquiry. Habemus con fitentem reum is demonstration, unless indirect motives can be assigned to it?' 2 Hagg. Eccl. 315.

HABENDUM. Lat. Portion of deed beginning with the words "To have and to hold". Bannin v. Peck, 266 App.Div. 209, 41 N.Y.S.2d 668, 670. The clause usually following the granting part of the premises of a deed, which defines the extent of the ownership in the thing granted to be held and enjoyed by the grantee. 3 Washb. Real Prop. 437; New York Indians v. U. S., 170 U.S. 1, 18 S.Ct. 531, 42 L.Ed. 927; Freudenberger Oil Co. v. Simmons, 75 W.Va. 337, 83 S.E. 995, 997, Ann.Cas.1918A, 873; In re Tamargo, 220 N.Y. 225, 115 N.E. 462, 464.

The office of the "habendum" is properly to determine what estate or interest is granted by the deed, though office may be performed by the premises, in which case the habendum may lessen, enlarge, explain, or qualify, but not totally contradict or be repugnant to, estate granted in the premises. Claridge v. Phelps, Ind.App., 105 Ind. App. 344, 11 N.E.2d 503, 504.

HABENDUM ET TENENDUM. In old conveyancing, to have and to hold. Formal words in deeds of land from a very early period. Bract. fol. 17b.

HABENTES HOMINES. In old English law, rich men; literally, having men. The same with fcesting-men, (q. v.) Cowell.

HABENTIA. Riches. Mon. Angl. t. 1, 100.

HABERE. Lat. In the civil law, to have. Sometimes distinguished from tenere, (to hold,) and possidere, (to possess;) habere referring to the right, tenere to the fact, and possidere to both. Calvin.

HABERE FACIAS POSSESSIONEM. Lat. That you cause to have possession. The name of the process commonly resorted to by the successful party in an action of ejectment, for the purpose of being placed by the sheriff in the actual possession of the land recovered. It is commonly termed simply "habere facias," or "hab. fa."

HABERE FACIAS SEISINAM. L. Lat. That you cause to have seisin. The writ of execution in real actions, directing the sheriff to cause the demandant to have seisin of the lands recovered. It was the proper process for giving seisin of a freehold, as distinguished from a chattel interest in lands.

HABERE FACIAS VISUM. Lat. That you cause to have a view. A writ to cause the sheriff to take a view of lands or tenements.

HABERE LICERE. Lat. In Roman law, to allow [one] to have [possession.] This phrase denoted the duty of the seller of property to allow the purchaser to have the possession and enjoyment. For a breach of this duty, an actio ex empto might be maintained.

HABERGEON. A diminutive of hauberk (q. v.), denoting a short coat of mail without sleeves. Blount.

HABERJECTS. A cloth of a mixed color. Magna Charta, c. 26.

HABETO TIBI RES TUAS. Lat. Have or take your effects to yourself. One of the old Roman forms of divorcing a wife. Calvin.

HABILIS. Lat. Fit; suitable; active; useful, (of a servant.) Proved; authentic, (of Book of Saints.) Fixed; stable, (of authority of the king.) Du Cange.

HABIT. A disposition or condition of the body or mind acquired by custom or a usual repetition of the same act or function. Conner v. Citizens' St. R. Co., 146 Ind. 430, 45 N.E. 662; State v. Skillicorn, 104 Iowa, 97, 73 N.W. 503; Corn. v. Whitney, 5 Gray, Mass., 85. The customary conduct, to pursue which one has acquired a tendency, from frequent repetition of the same acts. Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Foley, -105 U.S. 350, 26 L.Ed. 1055; National Council of Knights and Ladies of Security v. Fowler, 66 Okl. 294, 168 P. 914, 915, 6 A.L.R. 591; Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Soc. v. Reese, 206 Ark. 530, 176 S.W.2d 708, 714.

HABIT AND REPUTE. Applied in Scotch law to a general understanding and belief of something's having happened: thus, by the law of Scotland, marriage may be established by "habit and repute" where the parties cohabit and are at the same time held and reputed as man and wife. See Bell. The same rule obtains in some of the United States.

HABITABLE REPAIR. A covenant by a lessee to "put the premises into habitable repair" binds him to put them into such a state that they may be occupied, not only with safety, but with reasonable comfort, for the purposes for which they are taken. Miller v. McCardell, 19 R.I. 304, 33 A. 445, 30 L.R.A. 682; 2 Mood. & R. 186.

HABITANCY. That fixed place of abode to which a person intends to return habitually when absent.

Owens v. Huntling, C.C.A.Or., 115 F.2d 160, 162. Settled dwelling in a given place; fixed and 'permanent residence there.

This term is more comprehensive than "domicile," for one may be domiciled in a given place though he does not spend the greater portion of his time there, or though he may be absent for long periods. It is also more comprehensive than "residence," for one may reside in a given place only temporarily or for short periods on the occasion of repeated visits. But in neither case could he properly be called an "inhabitant" of that place or be said to have his "habitancy" there. Atkinson v. Washington & Jefferson College, 54 W.Va. 32, 46 S.E. 253; Hairston v. Hairston, 27 Miss. 711, 61 Am.Dec. 530; Abington v. North Bridgewater, 23 Pick., Mass., 170. And see Domicile; Residence.

It is difficult to give an exact definition of "habitancy." In general terms, one may be designated as an "inhabitant" of that place which constitutes the principal seat of his residence, of his business, pursuits, connections, attachments, and of his political and municipal relations. The term, therefore, embraces the fact of residence at a place, together with the intent to regard it and make it a home. The act and intent must concur. Lyman v. Fiske, 17 Pick., Mass., 231, 28 Am.Dec. 293.

HABITANT. Fr. In French and Canadian law, a resident tenant; a settler; a tenant who kept hearth and home on the seigniory. A native of Canada of French descent, particularly of the peasant or farming class.

HABITATIO. Lat. In the civil law, the right of dwelling; the right of free residence in another's house. Inst. 2, 5; Dig. 7, 8.

HABITATION.

In the civil law. The right of a person to live in the house of another without prejudice to the property. It differed from a usufruct, in this: that the usufructuary might apply the house to any purpose, as of a store or manufactory; whereas the party having the right of habitation could only use it for the residence of himself and family. 1 Browne, Civil Law, 184.

In Estates. A dwelling-house; a homestall. 2 Bl.Comm. 4; 4 Bl.Comm. 220; Holmes v. Oregon & C. R. Co., D.C.Or., 5 F. 527; Nowlin v. Scott, 10 Grat., Va., 65; Harvard College v. Gore, 5 Pick., Mass., 372.

In its generic sense, the term denotes a place of abode, but as used in a restrictive building covenant it may be synonymous simply with "dwelling." Goodhue v. Fennell, 164 App.Div. 821, 150 N.Y.S. 435, 436.

HABITUAL. Customary, usual, of the nature of a habit; its synonyms are customary, common, regular; while its antonyms are unusual, unwonted, extraordinary, rare. Illinois Bankers Life Ass'n v. Theodore, 47 Ariz. 314, 55 P.2d 806, 811. Formed or acquired by or resulting from habit; frequent use or custom. Moore v. State, 111 Tex.Cr.R. 461, 14 S.W.2d 1041. The "habitual" indulgence in violent and ungovernable temper as a ground for divorce is not synonymous with "frequent." Kellogg v. Kellogg, 93 Fla. 261, 111 So. 637, 638.

HABITUAL CRIMINAL. By statute in several states, one who is convicted of a felony, having been previously convicted of any crime (or twice so convicted), or who is convicted of a misdemeanor and has previously (in New York) been five times convicted of a misdemeanor. Crim.Code N.Y. § 510; Rev.St.Utah, 1898, § 4067 (Comp.Laws 1917, § 7907). In a more general sense, one made subject to police surveillance and arrest on suspicion, on account of his previous criminal record and absence of honest employment.

HABITUAL CRIMINALS ACT. The statute 32 & 33 Vict. c. 99. By this act power was given to apprehend on suspicion convicted persons holding license under the penal servitude acts, 1853, 1857, and 1864. The act was repealed and replaced by the prevention of crimes act, 1871, (34 & 35 Vict. c. 112.)

HABITUAL DRUNKARD. One who has a fixed habit of frequently getting drunk, though not oftener drunk than sober, and though sober for weeks at a time. Patton v. Commonwealth, 273 Ky. 307, 116 S.W.2d 652, 653.

One who frequently and repeatedly becomes intoxicated by excessive indulgence in intoxicating liquor so as to acquire a fixed habit and an involuntary tendency to become intoxicated as often as the temptation is presented, even though he remains sober for days or even weeks at a time. Leonard v. Leonard, 221 Iowa 722, 266 N.W. 537, 538.

A person given to inebriety or the excessive use of intoxicating drink, who has lost the power or the will, by frequent indulgence, to control his appetite for it. Ludwick v. Com., 18 Pa. 174; Gourlay v. Gourlay, 16 R.I. 705, 19 A. 142; McBee v. McBee, 22 Or. 329, 29 P. 887, 29 Am.St. Rep. 613.

It is not necessary that the person shall have lost his will power so that he cannot resist stimulants, Lester v. Sampson, Mo.App., 180 S.W. 419, 421; or that he be intoxicated so often as to incapacitate him from attending to his business for a considerable portion of time. Runkle v. Southern Pac. Milling Co., 184 Cal. 714, 195 P. 398, 400, 16 A.L.R. 275.

In England, defined by the habitual drunkards act, 1879, (42 & 43 Vict. c. 19,) which authorizes confinement in a retreat, upon the party's own application, as "a person who, not being amenable to any jurisdiction in lunacy, is, notwithstanding, by reason of habitual intemperate drinking of intoxicating liquor, at times dangerous to himself, or herself, or others, or incapable of managing himself or herself, or his or her affairs."

HABITUAL DRUNKENNESS, INTOXICATION, or INTEMPERANCE. The custom or habit of getting drunk; the constant indulgence in stimulants, whereby intoxication is produced; not the ordinary use, but the habitual use of them; the habit should be actual and confirmed, but need not be continuous, or even of daily occurrence. Williams v. Goss, 43 La.Ann. 868, 9 So. 750; Short v. Morrison, 159 La. 193, 105 So. 286, 288. As a cause for divorce, the fixed habit of frequently getting drunk; it does not necessarily imply continual drunkenness. Moor v. Moor, 211 Ala. 56, 99 So. 316, 318; Holm v. Holm, 44 Utah, 242, 139 P. 937, 938. That degree of intemperance from the use of intoxicating drinks which disqualifies the person a great portion of the time from properly attending to business, or which would reasonably inflict a course of great mental anguish upon the innocent party. Rev.Codes Idaho, § 2652 (Code 1932, § 31-608). It has no reference to the excessive or habitual use of drugs. Hayes v. Hayes, 86 Fla. 350, 98 So. 66, 67; Smith v. Smith, 7 Boyce, Del., 283, 105 A. 833.

HABITUALLY. Customarily; by frequent practice or use. It does not mean entirely or exclusively. Stanton v. French, 91 Cal. 274, 27 P. 657, 25 Am.St.Rep. 174.

HABITUM ET TONSURAM CLERICALEM. Clerical attire and tonsure. 4 Bl.Comm. 367.

HABLE, L. Fr. In old English law, a port or harbor; a station for ships. St. 27 Hen. VI. c. 3.

HACIENDA. In Spanish law, the public domain; the royal estate; the aggregate wealth of the state. The science of administering the national wealth; public economy.

Also an estate or farm belonging to a private person.

A royal estate. Newman & B. Dict.

HACK STAND. A private hack stand is a station where taxicabs or other vehicles are kept standing to solicit trade from the public indiscriminately at all hours. Borland v. Curto, 121 Misc. 336, 201 N.Y.S. 236, 237.

HACKNEY. Let out for hire, or devoted to common use; as, "hackney coaches," "hackney carriages." State v. Jarvis, 89 Vt. 239, 95 A. 541, 543.

HACKNEY CARRIAGES. Carriages plying for hire in the street. 2 C. 13, 877; Masterson v. Short, 33 How.Pr., N.Y., 481; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 86; Corn. v. Matthews, 122 Mass. 60.

HAD. As used in a statute providing that no suit, action or proceeding to foreclose a mortgage or trust deed shall be had or maintained, "had" means commenced or begun. Friel v. Alewel, 318 Mo. 1, 298 S.W. 762, 764.

HADBOTE. In Saxon law, a recompense or satisfaction for the violation of holy orders, or violence offered to persons in holy orders. Cowell; Blount.

HADD. In Hindu law, a boundary or limit. A statutory punishment defined by law, and not arbitrary. Mozley & Whitley.

HADERUNGA. In old English law, hatred; ill will; prejudice, or partiality. Spelman; Cowell.

Respect or distinction of persons, Jacob.

HADGONEL. In old English law, a tax or mulct. Jacob.

HIEC EST CONVENTIO. Lat. This is an agreement. Words with which agreements anciently commenced. Yearb. H. 6 Edw. II. 191.

HIEC EST FINALIS CONCORDIA. L. Lat. This is the final agreement. The words with which the foot of a fine commenced. 2 Bl.Comm. 351.

HJEREDA. In Gothic law, a tribunal answering to the English court-leet or hundred court.

HIEREDE ABDUCTO. An ancient writ that lay for the lord, who, having by right the wardship of his tenant under age, could not obtain his person, the same being carried away by another person. Old Nat. Brev. 93.

HIEREDE DELIBERANDO ALTERI QUI HABET CUSTODIUM TERRIE. An ancient writ, directed to the sheriff, to require one that had the body of an heir, being in ward, to deliver him to the person whose ward he was by reason of his land. Reg. Orig. 161.

HIEREDE RAPTO. An ancient writ that lay for the ravishment of the lord's ward. Reg. Orig. 163.

HLEREDEM DEUS FACIT, NON HOMO. God makes the heir, not man. Co. Litt. 7b; Bract. 62b.

HIEREDES. Lat. In the civil law, heirs. The plural of hceres (q. v.).

H1EREDES PROXIMI. Nearest or next heirs. The children or descendants of the deceased.

HIEREDES REMOTIORES. More remote heirs. The kinsmen other than children or descendants.

HiEREDES SUI ET NECESSARII. In Roman law, own and necessary heirs; e., the lineal descendants of the estate-leaver. They were called "necessary" heirs, because it was the law that made them heirs, and not the choice of either the decedent or themselves. But since this was also true of slaves (when named "heirs" in the will) the former class were designated "sui et necessarii," by way of distinction, the word "sui" denoting that the necessity arose from their relationship to the decedent. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 733.

HLEREDIPETA. Lat. In old English law, a seeker of an inheritance; hence, the next heir to lands. Du Cange.

H1EREDIPETZE SUO PROPINQUO VEL EXTRANEO PERICULOSO SANE CUSTODI NULLUS COMMITTATUR. To the next heir, whether a relation or a stranger certainly a dangerous guardian, let no one be committed. Co. Litt. 88b.

HZEREDITAS.

In Roman law. The hcereditas was a universal succession by law to any deceased person, whether such person had died testate or intestate, and whether in trust (ex fideicommisso) for another or not. The like succession according to torian law was bonorum possessio.

The hcereditas was called "jacens," until the hceres took it up, i. e., made his aditio hcereditatis; and such hceres, if a suus hceres, had the right to abstain, (potestas abstinendi,) and, if an extraneus hceres, had the right to consider whether he would accept or decline, (potestas deliberandi,) the reason for this precaution being that (prior to Justinian's enactment to the contrary) a hceres after his aditio was liable to the full extent of the debts of the deceased person, and could have no relief therefrom, except in the case of a damnum emergens or damnosa hcereditas, i. e., an hcereditus which disclosed (after the aditio) some enormous unsuspected liability. Brown. The theory was that, though the physical person of the deceased had perished, his legal personality survived and descended unimpaired on his heirs in whom his legal identity was continued.

In Old English Law. An estate transmissible by descent; an inheritance. Co. Litt. 9.

HIEREDITAS, ALIA CORPORALIS, ALIA INCORPORALIS; CORPORALIS EST, QU1E TANGI POTEST ET VIDERI; INCORPORALIS QUZE TANGI NON POTEST NEC VIDERI. Co. Litt. 9. An inheritance is either corporeal or incorporeal. Corporeal is that which can be touched and seen; incorporeal, that which can neither be touched nor seen.

HIEREDITAS DAMNOSA. A burdensome inheritance; one which would be a burden instead of a benefit, that is, the debts to be paid by the heir would exceed the assets.

HIEREDITAS EST SUCCESSIO IN UNIVERSUM JUS QUOD DEFUNCTUS HABUERIT. Co. Litt. 237. Inheritance is the succession to every right which the deceased had.

HIEREDITAS JACENS. In civil law, a prostrate or vacant inheritance. The inheritance left to a voluntary heir was so called so long as he had not manifested, either expressly or by silence, his acceptance or refusal of the inheritance. So long as no one had acquired the inheritance, it was termed "hcereditas jacens;" and this, by a legal fiction, represented the person of the decedent. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 737. The estate of a person deceased, where the owner left no heirs or legatee to take it, called also "caduca;" an escheated estate. Cod. 10, 10, 1; 4 Kent, Comm. 425. The term has also been used in English law to signify an estate in abeyance; that is, after the ancestor's death, and before assumption of heir. Co. Litt. 342b. An inheritance without legal owner, and therefore open to the first occupant. 2 Bl.Comm. 259.

HIEREDITAS LEGITIMA. A succession or inheritance devolving by operation of law (intestate succession) rather than by the will of the decedent. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 654.

HIEREDITAS LUCTUOSA. A sad or mournful inheritance or succession; as that of a parent to the estate of a child, which was regarded as disturbing the natural order of mortality (turbato ordine mortalitatis.) Cod. 6, 25, 9; 4 Kent, Comm. 397. It was sometimes termed tristis successio.

HIEREDITAS NIHIL ALIUD EST, QUAM SUCCESSIO IN UNIVERSUM JUS, QUOD DEFUNCTUS HABUERIT. The right of inheritance is nothing else than the faculty of succeeding to all the rights of the deceased. Dig. 50, 17, 62.

HIEREDITAS NUNQUAM ASCENDIT. An inheritance never ascends. Glanv. lib. 7, c. 1; 2 Bl. Comm. 211. A maxim of feudal origin, and which invariably prevailed in the law of England down to the passage of the statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 106, § 6, by which it was abrogated. 1 Steph.Comm. 378. See Broom, Max. 527, 528.

HIEREDITAS TESTAMENTARIA. Testamentary inheritance, that is, succession to an estate under and according to the last will and testament of the decedent. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 654.

HIEREDUM APPELLATIONE VENIUNT WEREDES HAEREDUM IN INFINITUM. By the title of heirs, come the heirs of heirs to infinity. Co. Litt. 9.

ILERES.

In Roman Law. The heir, or universal successor in the event of death. The heir is he who actively or passively succeeds to the entire property of the estate-leaver. He is not only the successor to the rights and claims, but also to the estate-leaver's debts, and in relation to his estate is to be regarded as the identical person of the estate-leaver, inasmuch as he represents him in all his active and passive relations to his estate. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 651.

The institution of the hceres was the essential characteristic of a testament: if this was not done, the instrument was called a codicillus. Mack.C.L. §§ 632, 650.

It should be remarked that the office, powers, and duties of the hceres, in Roman law, were much more closely assimilated to those of a modern executor than to those of an heir at law. Hence "heir" is not at all an accurate translation of "hceres," unless it be understood in a special, technical sense.

In Common Law. An heir; he to whom lands, tenements, or hereditaments by the act of God and right of blood to descend, of some estate of inheritance. Co. Litt. 7b.

HIERES ASTRARIUS. In old English law, an heir in actual possession of the house of his ancestor. Bract. 85, 267b.

HIERES DE FACTO. In old English law, heir from fact; that is, from the disseisin or other act of his ancestor, without or against right. An heir in fact, as distinguished from an heir de jure, or by law.

HIERES EST ALTER IPSE, ET FILIUS EST PARS PATRIS. An heir is another self, and a son is part of the father. 3 Coke, 12b.

HIERES EST AUT JURE PROPRIETATIS AUT JURE REPRESENTATIONIS. An heir is either by right of property, or right of representation. 3 Coke, 40b.

HIERES EST EADEM PERSONA CUM ANTECESSORE. An heir is the same person with his ancestor. Co. Litt. 22; Branch, Princ. See Nov. 48, c. 1, § 1.

HIERES EST NOMEN COLLECTWUM. "Heir" is a collective name or noun. 1 Vent. 215.

HIERES EST NOMEN JURIS; FILIUS EST NOMEN NATURIE. "Heir" is a name or term of law; "son" is a name of nature. Bac. Max. 52, in reg. 11.

HIERES EST PARS ANTECESSORIS. An heir is a part of the ancestor. So said because the ancestor, during his life, bears in his body (in judgment of law) all his heirs. Co. Litt. 22b; Schoonmaker v. Sheely, 3 Hill, N.Y., 165, 167.

HIERES EX ASSE. In the civil law, an heir to the whole estate; a sole heir. Inst. 2, 23, 9.

HARES EXTRANEUS. In the civil law, a strange or foreign heir; one who was not subject to the power of the testator, or person who made him heir. Qui testatoris juri subjecti non sunt, extranei hceredes appellantur. Inst. 2, 19, 3.

HARES FACTUS. In the civil law, an heir made by will; a testamentary heir; the person created universal successor by will. Story, Confl. Laws, § 507; 3 Bl.Comm. 224. Otherwise called "hceres ex testamento," and "hceres institutus." Inst. 2, 9, 7; Id. 2, 14.

HARES FIDEICOMMISSARIUS. In the civil law, the person for whose benefit an estate was given to another (termed "hceres fiduciarius," q. v.) by will. Inst. 2, 23, 6, 7, 9. Answering nearly to the cestui que trust of the English law.

HARES FIDUCIARIUS. A fiduciary heir, or heir in trust; a person constituted heir by will, in trust for the benefit of another, called the "fideicommissarius."

HARES H1EREDIS NEI EST MEUS HARES. The heir of my heir is my heir. Wharton, Law Dict.

HARES INSTITUTUS. A testamentary heir; one appointed by the will of the decedent.

HARES LEGITIMUS. A lawful heir; one pointed out as such by the marriage of his parents.

HARES LEGITIMUS EST QUEM NUPTI1E REMONSTRANT. He is a lawful heir whom marriage points out as such; who is born in wedlock. Co. Litt. 7b; Bract. fol. 88; Fleta, lib. 6, c. 1; Broom, Max. 515; Mirror of Just. 70; Dig. 2, 4, 5. (As to the application of the principle when the marriage is subsequent to the birth of the child, see 2 Cl. & F. 571; 6 Bingh. N. C. 385; 5 Wheat. 226, 262, n., 5 L.Ed. 70.)

HARES MINOR UNO ET VIGINTI ANNIS NON RESPONDEBIT, NISI IN CASU DOTIS. Moore, 348. An heir under twenty-one years of age is not answerable, except in the matter of dower.

HARES NATUS. In the civil law, an heir born; one born heir, as distinguished from one made heir, (hceres factus, q. v.;) an heir at law, or by intestacy, (ab intestato;) the next of kin by blood, in cases of intestacy. Story, Confi. Laws, § 507; 3 Bl.Comm. 224. This is the only form of heirship recognized in the English law. Wms. R. P., 6th Am. ed. 96.

HARES NECESSARIUS. In the civil law, a necessary or compulsory heir. This name was given to the heir when, being a slave, he was named "heir" in the testament, because on the death of the testator, whether he would or not, he at once became free, and was compelled to assume the heirship. Inst. 2, 19, 1.

HARES NON TENETUR IN ANGLIA AD DEBITA ANTECESSORIS REDDENDA, NISI PER ANTECESSOREM AD HOC FUERIT OBLIGATUS, PR1ETERQUAM DEBITA REGIS TANTUM. Co. Litt 386. In England, the heir is not bound to pay his ancestor's debts, unless he be bound to it by the ancestor, except debts due to the king. But now, by 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 104, he is liable.

HARES RECTUS. In old English law, a right heir. Fleta, lib. 6, c. 1, § 11.

HARES SUUS. In the civil law, a man's own heir; a decedent's proper or natural heir. This name was given to the lineal descendants of the deceased. Persons who were in the power of the testator but became sui juris at his death. Inst. 2, 13; 3, 1, 4, 5. Those descendants who were under the power of the deceased at the time of his death, and who are most nearly related to him. Calvin.

HIERETARE. In old English law, to give a right of inheritance, or make the donation hereditary to the grantee and his heirs. Cowell.

H1ERETICO COMBURENDO. The statute 2 Hen. IV. c. 15, de hceretico comburendo, was the first penal law enacted against heresy, and imposed the penalty of death by burning against all heretics who relapsed or who refused to abjure their opinions. It was repealed by the statute 29 Car. II. c. 9. Brown. This was also the name of a writ for the purpose indicated. See, also, De HEeretico Comburendo.

HAFNE. A haven or port. Cowell.

HAGUE TRIBUNAL. The Court of Arbitration established by the Hague Peace Conference of 1899.

The object of the establishment was to facilitate the immediate recourse to arbitration for the settlement of international differences by providing a permanent court, "accessible at all times, and acting, in default of agreement to the contrary between the parties, in accordance with the rules of procedure inserted in the present convention." The court is given jurisdiction over all arbitration cases, provided the parties do not agree to institute a special tribunal. An international Bureau was likewise established to serve as a registry for the court and to be the channel of communications relative to the meetings of the court. The court, although called "permanent," is really so only in the fact that there is a permanent list of members from among whom the arbitrators in a given case are selected. At the Second Hague Conference of 1907, apart from minor changes made in the court, it was provided that, of the two arbitrators appointed by each of the parties, only one should be a national of the appointing state. 1 Scott, 274-318, 423-464.

HALT. A man employed in ploughing. Wilson, Gloss. Ind.; Moz. & W.

HALIFAX LAW. A synonym for lynch law, or the summary (and unauthorized) trial of a person accused of crime and the infliction of death upon him; from the name of the parish of Halifax, in England, where anciently this form of private justice was practised by the free burghers in the case of persons accused of stealing; also called "gibbet law."

HALIGEMOT, or HALIMOTE. In Saxon law, the meeting of a hall, (conventus aulce,) that is, a lord's court; a court of a manor, or court-baron. Spelman. So called from the hall, where the tenants or freemen met, and justice was administered. Crabb, Eng. Law, 26.

It was sometimes used to designate a convention of citizens in their public hall and was also called folkmote and halimote. The word halimote rather signifies the lord's court or a court baron held in a manor in which the differences between the tenants were determined. Cunn. L.Dict.; Cowell.

"Furthermore, it seems to have been a common practice for a wealthy abbey to keep a court, known as a halimote, on each of its manors, while in addition to these manorial courts it kept a central court, a libera curia for all its greater freehold tenants. And we may now and again meet with courts which are distinctly called courts of honors. The rule then was not merely this, that the lord of a manor may hold a court for the manor; but rather this, that a lord may hold a court for his tenants." 1 Poll. & Mai tl. 573.

HALIMAS. In English law, the feast of All Saints, on the 1st of November; one of the cross-quarters of the year, was computed from Halimas to Candlemas. Wharton.

HALIWORKFOLK. See Halywercfolk.

HALL. A building or room of considerable size, used as a place for the meeting of public assemblies, conventions, courts, etc.; as, the city hall, the town hall.

In English law, a name given to many manor-houses because the magistrate's court was held in the hall of his mansion; a chief mansion-house. Cowell.

Hence, hall day, a court day.

HALL-MARK. An official stamp affixed by the goldsmiths upon articles made of gold or silver as an evidence of genuineness, and hence used to signify any mark of genuineness. "The power of free alienation is the 'hall-mark' of a fee-simple absolute." Rand. Em. Dom. § 206.

HALLAGE. In old English law, a fee or toll due for goods or merchandise vended in a hall. Jacob; 6 Co. 62.

A toll due to the lord of a fair or market, for such commodities as were vended in the common hall of the place. Cowell; Blount.

HALLAZCO. In Spanish law, the finding and taking possession of something which previously had no owner, and which thus becomes the property of the first occupant. Las Partidas, 3, 5, 28; 5, 48, 49; 5, 20, 50.

HALLE-GEMOTE. In Saxon law, haligemot (q. V.).

HALLMOOT. See Haligemot.

HALLUCINATION. In medical jurisprudence, a trick or deceit of the senses; a morbid error either of the sense of sight or that of hearing, or possibly of the other senses; a psychological state, such as would be produced naturally by an act of sense-perception, attributed confidently, but mistakenly, to something which has no objective existence; as, when the patient imagines that he sees an object when there is none, or hears a voice or other sound when nothing strikes his ear. See Staples v. Wellington, 58 Me. 459; McNett v. Cooper, C.C.Mich., 13 F. 590; People v. Krist, 168 N.Y. 19, 60 N.E. 1057.

An error, a blunder, a mistake, a fallacy; and when used in describing the condition of a person, does not necessarily carry an imputation of insanity. Foster's Ex'rs v. Dickerson, 64 Vt. 233, 24 A. 253.

The perception by any of the senses of an object which has no existence. The conscious recognition of a sensation of sight, hearing, feeling, taste, or smell which is not due to any impulse received by the perceptive apparatus from without, but arises within the perceptive apparatus itself. A false perception in contradistinction to a delusion or false belief. Wood, Am. Text-Book of Med.

Hallucinations are tricks of the senses, differing from delusions in that hallucinations pass away while delusions remain. Bensberg v. Washington University, 251 Mo. 641, 158 S.W. 330, 333.

HALMOTE. See Haligemot.

HALYMOTE. A holy or ecclesiastical court.

A court held in London before the lord mayor and sheriffs, for regulating the bakers.

It was anciently held on Sunday next before St. Thomas' day, and therefore called the "holymote," or holy court. Cowell.

HALYWERCFOLK. Sax. In old English law, tenants who held land by the service of repairing or defending a church or monument, whereby they were exempted from feudal and military services. Especially in the county of Durham, those who held by service of defending the corpse of St. Cuthbert. Jacob, Law Dict.

HAM. A place of dwelling; a homeclose; a little narrow meadow. Blount. A house or little village. Cowell.

HAMA. In old English law, a hook; an engine with which a house on fire is pulled down. Yel. 60.

A piece of land.

HAMBLING, or HAMELING. In forest law, the hoxing or hock-sinewing of dogs; an old mode of laming or disabling dogs. Termes de la Ley. Expeditation (q. v.).

HAMESECKEN. In Scotch law, the violent entering into a man's house without license or against the peace, and the seeking and assaulting him there. Skene de Verb. Sign.; 2 Forb. Inst. 139.

The crime of housebreaking or burglary. 4 Bl. Comm. 223. Spelled, also, "hamesucken."

The common genus of offences that comes under the name of hamesucken is that which is usually called housebreaking; which sometimes comes under the common appellation of burglary, whether committed in the day or night to the intent to commit felony; so that house-breaking of this kind is of two natures. 1 Hale, P1.Cr. 547; Com. v. Hope, 22 Pick., Mass., 4.

See also, Hamsocne.

HAMFARE. (Sax. From ham, a house.) In Saxon law, an assault made in a house; a breach of the peace in a private house. Cowell. This word by some is said to signify the freedom of a man's house. Holthouse. See, also, Hamsocne.

HAMLET. A small village; a part or member of a vill. It is the diminutive of "ham," a village. Cowell. See Rex v. Morris, 4 Term, 552.

A "village" or "hamlet" in a rural community may be no more than a store, a school, a church, and two or three residences. Rantoul Rural High School Dist. No. 2, Franklin County, v. Davis, 99 Kan. 185, 160 P. 1008, 1009.

HAMMA. A close joining to a house; a croft; a little meadow. Cowell.

HAMMER. Metaphorically, a forced sale or sale at public auction. "To bring to the hammer," to put up for sale at auction. "Sold under the hammer," sold by an officer of the law or by an auctioneer.

HAMSOCNE. In Saxon law, the word is variously spelled hamsoca, hamsocna, haimsuken, hamesaken, hamsocn. The right of security and privacy in a man's house. Du Cange. The breach of this privilege by a forcible entry of a house is breach of the peace. Anc. Laws & Inst. of Eng. Gloss.; Du Cange; Bracton, lib. 3, tr. 2, c. 2, § 3. The right to entertain jurisdiction of the offence. Spelman; Du Cange. Immunity from punishment for such offence. Du Cange; Fleta, lib. 1, c. 47, § 18. An insult offered in one's own house (insultus factus in domo). Brompton, p. 957; Du Cange.

Among the Anglo-Saxons it was breaking into a house; perhaps the time of the day was not an element. See 3 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 293; 2 Poll. & Maitl. 492. See, also, Hamesecken.

HANAPER. A hamper or basket in which were kept the writs of the court of chancery relating to the business of a subject, and their returns; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 113; 10 Ric. II. c. 1; 3 Bl.Comm. 49; equivalent to the Roman fiscus. According to others, the fees accruing on writs, etc., were there kept. Spelman; Du Cange.

HANAPER-OFFICE. An office belonging to the common-law jurisdiction of the court of chancery, so called because all writs relating to the business of a subject, and their returns, were formerly kept in a hamper, in hanaperio. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 103. See Yates v. People, 6 Johns., N.Y., 363.

HAND. A measure of length equal to four inches, used in measuring the height of horses.

A person's signature. Salazar v. Taylor, 18 Colo. 538, 33 P. 369; 10 Mod. 103.

In anatomical usage the hand, or manus, includes the phalanges, or fingers and thumb; the metacarpus, or hand proper; and the carpus, or wrist; but in popular usage the wrist is often excluded. Champlin Refining Co. v. State Industrial Commission, 153 Okl. 45, 4 P.2d 751, 752. The arm up to but not including the elbow. Gondak v. Wilson Gas Coal Co., 148 Pa.Super. 566, 25 A.2d 854, 855.

In the plural, the term may be synonymous with "possession"; as, the "hands" of an executor, garnishee, etc. Brownwood Gas Co. v. Belser, Tex. Civ.App., 257 S.W. 605, 607.

In old English law, an oath. For the meaning of the terms "strong hand" and "clean hands," see those titles.

HAND DOWN. To announce or file an opinion in a cause. Used originally and properly of the opinions of appellate courts transmitted to the court below; but in later usage the term is employed more generally with reference to any decision by a court upon a case or point reserved for consideration.

HAND-FASTING. In old English law, betrothment.

HAND-GRITH. Peace or protection given by the king with his own hand; used in the laws of Henry I. Tomlin; Cowell; Moz. & W.; Stat, Hen. I. c. 13.

HANDBOROW. In Saxon law, a hand pledge; a name given to the nine pledges in a decennary or friborg; the tenth or chief, being called "headborow," (q. v.). So called as being an inferior pledge to the chief. Spelman.

HANDCUFFS. See Fetters,

HANDLE. To control, direct, to deal with, to act upon, to perform some function with regard to or to have passed through one's hands, to buy and sell, or to deal or trade in. State ex rel. Bell v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 349 Mo. 360, 160 S.W.2d 764, 769. To manage or •operate. The term includes the act of placing a truck on a depot platform for the purpose of loading. Wells Fargo & Co. v. Lowery, Tex.Civ.App., 197 S.W. 605, 608.

HANDHABEND, or HAND-HABENDE. In Saxon law, one having a thing in his hand; that is, a thief found having the stolen goods in his possession. Jurisdiction to try such thief. See Laws of Hen. I. c. 59; Laws of Athelstane § 6;' Fleta, lib. 1, c. 38, § 1; Britton p. 72; Du Cange, Handhabenda. See, also, Backberend.

HANDSALE. Anciently, among all the northern nations, shaking of hands was held necessary to bind a bargain,—a custom still retained in verbal contracts. A sale thus made was called "handsale," (venditio per mutuam manum complexionem.) In process of time the same word was used to signify the price or earnest which was given immediately after the shaking of hands, or instead thereof. 2 Bl.Comm. 448.

HANDSEL. Handsale, or earnest money.

HANDWRITING. The chirography of a person; the cast or form of writing peculiar to a person, including the size, shape, and style of letters, tricks of penmanship, and whatever gives individuality to his writing, distinguishing it from that of other persons. In re Hyland's Will, 1 Gib. 41, 58 St.R. 798, 27 N.Y.S. 961, 963.

Anything written by hand; an instrument written by the hand of a person, or a specimen of his writing.

Handwriting, considered under the law of evidence, includes not only the ordinary writing of one able to write, but also writing done in a disguised hand, or in cipher, and a mark made by one able or unable to write. 9 Amer. & Eng.Enc.Law, 264. See Com. v. Webster, 5 Cush., Mass., 301, 52 Am. Dec. 711.

Typewriting is not "handwriting" within a statute allowing experts' opinions as to who executed a writing. Wolf v. Gall, 176 Cal. 787, 169 P. 1017, 1019.

HANDY MAN. A man of all work. Sovereign Camp, W. 0. W., v. Craft, 208 Ala. 467, 94 So. 831, 834.

HANG. In old practice, to remain undetermined. "It has hung long enough; it is time it were made an end of." Holt, C. J., 1 Show. 77.

Thus, the present participle means pending; during the pendency. "If the tenant alien, hanging the prcecipe." Co.Litt. 266a. Remaining undetermined. 1 Show. 77.

HANGED, DRAWN AND QUARTERED. A method of executing traitors in England, said to have been introduced in 1241. The traitor was carried on a sled, or hurdle to the gallows (formerly dragged there tied to the tail of a horse) ; hanged till half dead and then cut down; his entrails cut out and burnt; his head cut off and his body to be divided into quarters, which, with his head, were hung in some public place. In practice the executioner usually cut out the heart and held it up to view. See Andrews, Old Time Punishments; 1 Eng.Rep. 87.

HANGING. In criminal law, suspension by the neck; the mode of capital punishment used in England from time. immemorial, and generally adopted in the United States. 4 Bl.Comm. 403.

HANGING IN CHAINS. In atrocious cases it was at one time usual, in England, for the court to direct a murderer, after execution, to be hanged upon a gibbet in chains near the place where the murder was committed, a practice quite contrary to the Mosaic law. (Deut. xxi. 23.) Its legality was declared by acts in 1751 and 1828. Abolished by 4 & 5 Wm. IV, c. 26. Wharton.

HANGING PAPER. Ordinarily, paper for hanging or hangings, or paper which hangs. Within the meaning of the Tariff Act (19 U.S.C.A. § 121), paper used for covering walls, ceiling, etc., whether such paper is tinted or decorative or not ,—a. more inclusive term than "paper hangings," meaning tinted or decorative paper used for the purpose mentioned. Downing & Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct. Cust.App. 451, 454.

Merchandise known as grass cloth, made by pasting a fabric of weed bark sewed with cotton thread on a paper backing and dyeing the surface, imported to be used as wall hangings, is dutiable as dyed hanging paper. Downing & Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct.Cust.App. 451.

HANIG. Some customary labor to be performed. Holthouse.

HANSE. An alliance or confederation among merchants or cities, for the good ordering and protection of the commerce of its members. An imposition upon merchandise. Du Cange.

HANSE TOWNS. The collective name of certain German cities, including Lubeck, Hamburg, and Bremen, which formed an alliance for the mutual protection and furtherance of their commercial interests, in the twelfth century. The powerful confederacy thus formed was called the "Hanseatic League." The league framed and promulgated a code of maritime law, which was known as the "Laws of the Hanse Towns," or Jus Hanseaticum Maritimum.

The years 1356 to 1377 marked the zenith of the league's power. The league gradually declined till, in 1669, the last general assembly was held and Lubeck, Hamburg and Bremen were left alone to preserve the name and small inheritance of the "Hansa."

HANSE TOWNS, LAWS OF THE. The maritime ordinances of the Hanseatic towns, first published in German at Lubeck, in 1597, and in May, 1614, revised and enlarged.

HANSEATIC. Pertaining to a hance or commercial alliance; but, generally, the union of the Hanse towns is the one referred to, as in the expression the "Hanseatic League."

HANSGRAVE. The chief of a company; the head man of a corporation.

HAOLE. White foreign. Refers to rank rather than to race. International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union v. Ackerman, D.C.Hawaii, 82 F.Supp. 65, 76.

HANTELOD, or HANTELODE. In old European law, an arrest, or attachment. Spelman; Du Cange; Toml.; Holthouse.

HAP. To catch. Thus, "hap the rent," "hap the deed-poll," were formerly used.

HAPPINESS. Comfort, consolation, contentment, ease, enjoyment, pleasure, satisfaction. National Surety Co. v. Jarrett, 121 S.E. 291, 295, 95 W.Va, 420.

The constitutional right of men to pursue their "happiness" means the right to pursue any lawful business or vocation, in any manner not inconsistent with the equal rights of others, which may increase their prosperity, ordevelop their faculties, so as to give to them their highest enjoyment.. Butchers' Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 757, 4 S.Ct. 652, 28 L.Ed. 585; 1 Bl.Comm. 41. English v. English, 32 N.J.Eq. 750.

HARACIUM. In old English law, a race of horses and mares kept for breed; a stud. Spelman.

HARBINGER. In England, an officer of the royal household.

HARBOR, n. A haven, or a space of deep water so sheltered by the adjacent land as to afford a safe anchorage for ships. Rowe v. Smith, 51 Conn. 271, 50 Am.Rep. 16; The Aurania, D.C.N.Y., 29 F. 103; People v. Kirsch, 67 Mich. 539, 35 N.W. 157; The Cuzco, D.C.Wash., 225 F. 169, 176. A port or haven for ships; a sheltered place, natural or artificial, on the coast of a sea, lake, or other body of water. State v. Savidge, 95 Wash. 240, 163 P. 738, 740.

"Port" is a word of larger import than "harbor," since it implies the presence of wharves, or at any rate the means and opportunity of receiving and discharging cargo. See 7 M. & G. 870; Martin v. Hilton, 9 Metc., Mass., 371; 2 B. & Ald. 460. Thus, we have the "said harbor, basin, and docks of the port of Hull." 2 B. & Ald. 60. But they are generally used as synonymous. Webster, Diet.

HARBOR, v. To afford lodging to, to shelter, or to give a refuge to. Hancock v. Finch, 126 Conn. 121, 9 A.2d 811. To clandestinely shelter, succor, and protect improperly admitted aliens. Susnjar v. U. S., C.C.A.Ohio, 27 F.2d 223, 224. To receive clandestinely and without lawful authority a person for the purpose of so concealing him that another having a right to the lawful custody of such person shall be deprived of the same. Jones v. Van Zandt, 5 How. 215, 227, 12 L.Ed. 122. Or, in a less technical sense, it is the reception of persons improperly. Poll.Torts 275; Wood v. Gale, 10 N.H. 247, 34 Am.Dec. 150; Eells v. People, 4 Scam., Ill., 498. It may be aptly used to describe the furnishing of shelter, lodging, or food clandestinely or with concealment, and under certain circumstances, may be equally applicable to those acts divested of any accompanying secrecy. U. S. v. Grant, C.C.Or., 55 F. 415.

As used in U. S. Criminal Code, § 42, 18 U.S.C.A. § 1381, the word "harbor" means to lodge, to care for, after secreting the deserter. Firpo v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 261 F. 850, 853.

To "harbor" a dog involves the idea of protection, and of treating it as living at one's house, and undertaking to control its actions. Hagenau v. Millard, 182 Wis. 544, 195 N.W. 718, 719. See, also, Markwood v. McBroom, 110 Wash. 208, 188 P. 521, 522.

HARBOR AUTHORITY. In England a harbor authority is a body of persons, corporate or unincorporate, being proprietors of, or intrusted with the duty of constructing, improving, managing, or lighting, any harbor. St. 24 & 25 Viet. c. 47.

HARBOR LINE. A line marking the boundary of a certain part of a public water which is reserved for a harbor. Engs v. Peckham, 11 R.I. 224. The line beyond which wharves and other structures cannot be extended. Garrison v. Greenleaf Johnson Lumber Co., C.C.A.Va., 215 F. 576, 579.

HARD. As applied to liquors, rough; acid; sour. In re Stiller, 161 N.Y.S. 594, 597, 175 App.Div. 211.

HARD CASES. A , phrase used to indicate decisions which, to meet a case of hardship to a party, are not entirely consonant with the true principle of the law. It is said of such: Hard cases make bad law. Hard cases must not make bad equity any more than bad law; Moore v. Pierson, 6 Iowa 279, 71 Am.Dec. 409. Hard cases are the quicksands of the law. Metropolitan Nat. Bank of Kansas City, Mo. v. Campbell Commission Co., C.C.Mo., 77 F. 705.

HARD CIDER. Cider which has lost its sweetness from fermentation—fermented cider possessing a stimulating and intoxicating effect, due to its acquisition of a substantial and potent alcoholic content, through fermentation. People v. Emmons, 178 Mich. 126, 144 N.W. 479, 481, Ann.Cas. 1915D, 425.

HARD LABOR. A punishment,. additional to mere imprisonment, sometimes imposed upon convicts sentenced to a penitentiary. But the labor is not, as a rule, any harder than ordinary mechanical labor. Hoover, 70 Ind.App. 343, 115 N.E. 588, 593. To possess corporally. Walker v. Trollinger, 192 N.C. 744, 135 S.E. 871, 873.

"No one, at common law, was said to have or to be in possession of land, unless it were conveyed to him by the livery of seisin, which gave him the corporal investiture and bodily occupation thereof." Bl.Law Tracts, 113.

HAVE AND HOLD. A common phrase in conveyancing, derived from the habendum et tenendum of the old common law. See Habendum et Tenendum.

HAVEN. A place of a large receipt and safe riding of ships, so situate and secured by the land circumjacent that the vessels thereby ride and anchor safely, and are protected by the adjacent land from dangerous or violent winds; as Milford Haven, Plymouth Haven, and the like. Hale de Jure Mar. par. 2, c. 2; The Cuzco, D.C.Wash., 225 F. 169, 176; 15 East 304, 305. Lowndes v. Board of Trustees, 14 S.Ct. 758, 153 U.S. 1, 38 L.Ed. 615; De Lovio v. Boit, 7 Fed.Cas. 429.

HAW. A small parcel of land so called in Kent; houses. Co.Litt. 5; Cowell.

HAWBERK, or HAWBERT. A coat or shirt of mail; hence, derivatively (in feudal law) one who held a fief on the duty or service of providing himself with such armor and standing ready, thus equipped, for military service when called on. Wharton. See Fief d'Haubert.

HAWGH, HOWGH. In old English law, a valley. Co.Litt. 5b. See Haugh.

HAWKER. An itinerant or traveling trader, who carries goods about, in order to sell them, and who actually sells them to purchasers, in contradistinction to a trader who has goods for sale and sells them in a fixed place of business. Commonwealth v. Bergeron, 296 Mass. 60, 5 N.E.2d 31, 32. A peddler who uses beast of burden to carry wares and who cries out merits of wares in street. City of Washington v. Reed, 229 Mo.App. 1195, 70 S.W. 2d 121, 122. See Hawking.

It is perhaps not essential to the idea, but is generally understood from the word, that a hawker is to be one who not only carries goods for sale, but seeks for purchasers, either by outcry, which some lexicographers conceive as intimated by the derivation of the word, or by attracting notice and attention to them, as goods for sale, by an actual exhibition or exposure of them, by placards or labels, or by a conventional signal, like the sound of a horn for the sale of fish. Graffty v. Rushville, 107 Ind. 502, 8 N.E. 609, 57 Am. Rep. 128.

One who goes about a village carrying samples and taking orders for a non-resident firm is not a hawker or peddler. Village of Cerro Gordo v. Rawlings, 135 Ill. 36, 25 N.E. 1006.

HAWKING. The act of offering goods for sale on the streets by outcry or by attracting the attention of persons by exposing goods in a public place, or by placards, labels, or signals. Pastorino v. City of Detroit, 182 Mich. 5, 148 N.W. 231, 235, Ann. Cas.1916D, 768.

The business of peddling is distinct from that of a manufacturer selling his own products, and those who raise or produce what they sell, such as farmers and butchers, are not peddlers. Ex parte Hogg, 70 Tex.Cr.R. 161, 156 S.W. 931, 932. The occupation of a dairyman, going about delivering the milk from his farm to his regular customers according to their previous orders, is not, within the ordinary meaning of the term, peddling or hawking. State ex rel. Brittain v. Hayes, 143 La. 39, 78 So. 143, 144.

HAY. Commonly means grasses or seeds which have been harvested. Sandall v. Hoskins, 104 Utah 50, 137 P.2d 819, 823. In statute, term does not apply to the stalks, stems, and other residue, left after bean plants have been threshed and the bean kernel or seeds -removed. State v. Choate, 41 Idaho 251, 238 P. 538, 540.

HAY IN STACK. A stack of hay, grain, straw, or the like is a large quantity thereof collected and usually built up in layers in conical, oblong, or rectangular form to a point or ridge at the top so that it will be preserved against the inclemencies of the weather. A policy covering "hay in stack" does not cover hay in the mow of a barn. Murphy v. Continental Ins. Co., 178 Iowa 375, 157 N.W. 855, 856, L.R.A.1917B, 934.

HAY-BOTE. Another name for "hedge-bote," being one of the estovers allowed to a tenant for life or years, namely, material for repairing the necessary hedges or fences of his grounds, or for making necessary farming utensils. 2 Bl.Comm. 35; 1 Washb.Real Prop. 129.

HAYWARD. In old English law, an officer appointed in the lord's court to keep a common herd of cattle of a town; so called because he was to see that they did not break or injure the hedges of inclosed grounds. His duty was also to impound trespassing cattle, and to guard against poundbredches. Kitch. 46; Cowell. Adams v. Nichols, 1 Aikens (Vt.) 319.

HAZAR-ZAMIN. A bail or surety for the personal attendance of another. Moz. & W.

HAZARD. In old English law, an unlawful game at dice, those who play at it being called "hazardors." Jacob.

In modern law, any game of chance or wagering. Cheek v. Corn., 100 Ky. 1, 37 S.W. 152; Somers v. State, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 438.

A risk or peril, assumed or involved, whether in connection with contract relation, personal relation, or golf or gambling. State v. Hagan, 44 N.D. 306, 175 N.W. 372, 377. A danger or risk lurking in a situation which by change or fortuity develops into an active agency of harm. Hough v. Contributory Retirement Appeal Board, 309 Mass. 534, 36 N.E.2d 415, 417, 418. Exposure to the chance of loss or injury. Caminetti v. Guaranty Union Life Ins. Co., 52 Cal.App.2d 330, 126 P.2d 159, 163.

A stationary unlighted freight train upon a railroad crossing at night. Plante v. Canadian Nat. Rys., 138 Me. 215, 23 A.2d 814, 817. An accident incidental to or result of an act done while in the course of one's employment. Tipple v. High Street Hotel Co., 70 Ohio App. 397, 41 N.E.2d 879, 885.

In insurance law, the risk, danger, or probability that the event insured against may happen, varying with the circumstances of the particular case. See State Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 14 Colo. 499, 24 P. 333, 20 Am.St.Rep. 281.

Moral hazard. In fire insurance, the risk or danger of the destruction of the insured property by fire, as measured by the character and interest of the insured owner, his habits as a prudent and careful man or the reverse, his known integrity or his bad reputation, and the amount of loss he would suffer by the destruction of the property or the gain he would make by suffering it to burn, and collecting the insurance. Davenport v. Firemen's Ins. Co. of Newark, N. J., 47 S.D. 426, 199 N.W. 203, 205.

HAZARDOR. In old English law, one who played at a hazard, i. e., an unlawful game of dice. Jacob.

HAZARDOUS. Exposed to or involving danger; perilous; risky.

Involving risk of loss. Caminetti v. Guaranty Union Life Ins. Co., 52 Cal.App.2d 330, 126 P.2d 159, 162, 163.

The terms "hazardous," "extra-hazardous," "specially hazardous," and "not hazardous" are well-understood technical terms in the business of insurance, having distinct and separate meanings. Although what goods are included in each designation may not be so known as to dispense with actual proof, the terms themselves are distinct and known to be- so. Russell v. Insurance Co., 50 Minn. 409, 52 N.W. 906.

HAZARDOUS CONTRACT. See Contract.

HAZARDOUS INSURANCE. Insurance effected on property which is in unusual or peculiar danger of destruction by fire, or on the life of a man whose occupation exposes him to special or unusual perils.

HAZARDOUS NEGLIGENCE. See Negligence.

HE. Properly a pronoun of the masculine gender, but commonly construed in statutes to include both sexes as well as corporations. Dickson v. Strickland, 114 Tex. 176, 265 &W. 1012, 1021; City of Janesville v. Tweedell, 217 Wis. 395, 258 N.W. 437. May be read "they". Buono v. Yankee Maid Dress Corporation, C.C.A.N.Y., 77 F.2d 274, 278.

HE WHO COMES INTO A COURT OF EQUITY MUST COME WITH CLEAN HANDS.

HE WHO HAS COMMITTED INIQUITY SHALL NOT HAVE EQUITY. Francis, Max.

HE WHO IS SILENT WHEN CONSCIENCE REQUIRES HIM TO SPEAK SHALL BE DEBARRED FROM SPEAKING WHEN CONSCIENCE REQUIRES HIM TO BE SILENT.

HE WHO SEEKS EQUITY MUST DO EQUITY. This expression means that the party asking the aid of an equity court must stand in a conscientious relation toward his adversary and the transaction from which his claim arises must be fair and just and the relief must not be harsh and oppressive upon defendant. Jacklich v. Baer, 57 Cal. App.2d 684, 135 P.2d 179, 184. And that court will not confer equitable relief on party seeking its aid, unless he has acknowledged and conceded or will admit and provide for all equitable rights, claims, and demands justly belonging to adverse party and growing out of or necessarily involved in subject matter of controversy. Bates v. Dana, 345 Mo. 311, 133 S.W.2d 326, 329. It is in pursuance of this maxim that equity enforces the right of the wife's equity to a settlement. Snell, Eq. (5th Ed.) 374. Drake v. Sherman, 67 Ill.App. 440.

HE WHO WILL HAVE EQUITY DONE TO HIM MUST DO EQUITY TO THE SAME PERSON. 4 Bouv.Inst. 3723.

HEAD. Chief; leading; principal; the upper part or principal source of a stream.

The principal person or chief of any organization, corporation, or firm.

HEAD MONEY. A sum of money reckoned at a fixed amount for each head (person) in a designated class.

Particularly (1) a capitation or poll tax. (2) A bounty offered by the laws of the United States for each person on board an enemy's ship or vessel, at the commencement of a naval engagement, which shall be sunk or destroyed by a ship or vessel of the United States of equal or inferior force, the same to be divided among the officers and crew in the same manner as prize money. In re Farragut, 7 D.C. 97. A similar reward is offered by the British statutes. (3) The tax or duty imposed by act of congress of Aug. 3, 1882, on owners of steamships and sailing vessels for every immigrant brought into the United States. Head Money Cases, 112 U.S. 580, 5 Sup.Ct. 247, 28 L.Ed. 798. (4) A bounty or reward paid to one who pursues and kills a bandit or outlaw and produces his head as evidence; the offer of such a reward being popularly called "putting a price on his head."

HEAD OF A FAMILY. An individual who actually supports and maintains in one household one or more individuals who are closely connected with him by blood relationship, relationship by marriage, or by adoption, and whose right to exercise family control and provide for the dependent individuals is based upon some moral or legal obligation. Miller v. Glenn, D.C.Ky., 47 F.Supp. 794, 796, 797.

A term used in homestead and exemption laws to designate a person who maintains a family; a householder. Not necessarily a husband or father, but any person who has charge of, supervises, and manages the affairs of the household or the collective body of persons residing together and constituting the family. Armstrong-McClenahan Co. v. Rhoads, 180 Iowa, 710, 163 N.W. 356, 357; The term may thus include an abandoned wife maintaining minor children, Mennell v. Wells, 51 Mont. 141, 149 P. 954, 955; and also a widow, Wilkey v. Wilkey, 130 Tenn. 430, 171 S.W. 78; Burrell Tp. v. Pittsburg Guardians of Poor, 62 Pa. 475, 1 Am. Rep. 441.

There must be at least two persons who live together in relation of one family. Whidden v. Abbott, 124 Fla. 293, 168 So. 253, 254.

To be the head of a family, one must either have a responsibility (i. e., at least a natural or moral obligation) to support, or have parental authority over, another member of the family. Whyte v. Grant, 142 La. 822, 77 So-. 643. "Head of family," within exemption laws, must be under some obligation to support other members, and the other members must be dependent on the head. Lena v. Clinkenbeard, 172 Okl. 6, 44 P.2d 2, 4, (but see In re Taylor, D.C., 282 F. 315, 316).

HEAD OF CREEK. This term means the source of the longest branch, unless general reputation has given the appellation to another. Davis v. Bryant, 2 Bibb. (Ky.) 110.

HEAD OF DEPARTMENT. One of the members of the president's cabinet, and not a mere bureau head. Brooks v. United States, D.C.N.Y., 33 F. Supp. 68, 69.

The expression "head of any department of the state government" is one of varied and therefore of equivocal meaning. construed in one statute as having been employed in a narrow, restricted sense, and in another to have been used in its general popular sense, depending on effectuation of the legislative objective as the controlling element. Rainey v. Malone, Tex.Civ.App., 141 S.W.2d 713, 715.

HEAD OF STREAM. The highest point on the stream which furnishes a continuous stream of water, not necessarily the longest fork or prong. Uhl v. Reynolds, 64 S.W. 498, 23 Ky.Law Rep. 759; State v. Coleman, 13 N.J.Law, 104.

HEAD OF WATER. In hydraulic engineering, mining, etc., the effective force of a body or volume of water, expressed in terms of the vertical distance from the level of the water in the pond, reservoir, dam, or other source of supply, to the point where it is to be mechanically applied, or expressed in terms of the pressure of the water per square inch at the latter point. Shearer v. Middleton, 88 Mich. 621, 50 N.W. 737.

HEADBOROUGH. In Saxon law, the head or chief officer of a borough; chief of the frankpledge tithing or decennary. This office was afterwards, when the petty constableship was created, united with that office.

Proceeding of relative formality, generally public, with definite issues of fact or of law to be tried, in which parties proceeded against have right to be heard, and is much the same as a trial and may terminate in final order. In re Securities and Exchange Commission, D.C.N.Y., 14 F.Supp. 417, 419. Synonymous with trial, and in-,cludes reception of evidence and arguments thereon. Grant v. Michaels, 94 Mont. 452, 23 P.2d 266. It is frequently used in a broader and more popular significance to describe whatever takes place before magistrates clothed with judicial functions and sitting without jury at any stage of the pror .ceedings subsequent to its inception, and may include proceedings before an auditor. Menard v. Bowman Dairy Co., 296 Ill.App. 323, 15 N.E.2d 1014, 1015.

In equity practice. The trial of the case, in--eluding introduction of evidence, argument of counsel, and decree of court. Wolfe v. Wolfe, 144 Neb. 55, 12 N.W.2d 368, 369.

The words "final hearing" have long been used to designate the trial of an equity case upon the merits, as distinguished from the hearing of any preliminary questions arising in the cause, which are termed "interlocutory." Akerly v. Vilas, 24 Wis. 171, 1 Am.Rep. 166.

The term is broad enough to include judicial examination of issue between the parties whether of law or of fact. Keown v. Keown, 231 Mass. 404, 121 N.E. 153, 154.

In criminal law. The examination of a prisoner charged with a crime or misdemeanor, and of the witnesses for the accused.

Fair hearing. See Fair Hearing.

Final hearing. See Final.

Preliminary examination. The examination of a person charged with crime, before a magistrate. Van Buren v. State, 65 Neb. 223, 91 N.W. 201.

Preliminary hearing. In criminal law. Synonymous with "preliminary examination." State v. Rogers, 31 N.M. 485, 247 P. 828, 833.

The hearing given to a person accused of crime, by a magistrate or judge, exercising the functions of a committing magistrate, to ascertain whether there is evidence to warrant and require the commitment and holding to bail of the person accused. See Bish. New Cr.L. §§ 32, 225.

It is in no sense a trial for the determination of accused's guilt or innocence, but simply a course of procedure whereby a possible abuse of power may be prevented, and accused discharged or held to answer, as the facts warrant. State v. Langford, 293 Mo. 436, 240 S.W. 167, 168.

Unfair hearing. See that title.

HEARING DE NOVO. Generally, a new hearing or a hearing for the second time, contemplating an entire trial in same manner in which matter was originally heard and a review of previous hearing. On hearing "de novo" court hears matter as court of original and not appellate jurisdiction. Collier & Wallis v. Astor, 9 Ca1.2d 202, 70 P.2d 171, 173.

HEARSAY. Evidence not proceeding from the personal knowledge of the witness, but from the mere repetition of what he has heard others say. That which does not derive its value solely from the credit of the witness, but rests mainly on the veracity and competency of other persons. The very nature of the evidence shows its weakness, and it is admitted only in specified cases from necessity. State v. Ah Lee, 18 Or. 540, 23 P. 424, 425. Young v. Stewart, 191 N.C. 297, 131 S.E. 735, 737.

It is second-hand evidence, as distinguished from original evidence; it is the repetition at second-hand of what would be original evidence if given by the person who originally made the statement. Literally, it is what the witness says he heard another person say. Stockton v. Williams, 1 Doug., Mich., 546, 570 (citing 1 Starkie, Ev. 229). Evidence, oral or written, is hearsay when its probative force depends in whole or in part on the competency and credibility of a person other than the witness. State v. Kluttz, 206 N.C. 726, 804, 175 S.E. 81. Hearsay is a statement made by a person not called as a witness, received in evidence on the trial. People v. Kraft, 36 N.Y.S. 1034, 1035, 91 Hun, 474. The term is sometimes used synonymously with "report", State v. Vettere, 76 Mont 574, 248 P. 179, 183; and with "rumor".

HEARTH MONEY. A tax levied in England by St. 14 Car. II. c. 10, consisting of two shillings on every hearth or stove in the kingdom. It was extremely unpopular, and was abolished by 1 W. &

M. St. 1, c. 10. This tax was otherwise called "chimney money."

HEARTH SILVER. In English law, a species of modus or composition for tithes; Anstr. 323, 326; viz.: a prescription for cutting down and using for fuel the tithe of wood. 2 Burn, Eccl.Law 304.

HEAT OF PASSION. In criminal law, a state of violent and uncontrollable rage engendered by a blow or certain other provocation given, which will reduce a homicide from the grade of murder to that of manslaughter. Disney v. State, 72 Fla. 492, 73 So. 598, 601.

Passion or anger suddenly aroused at the time by some immediate and reasonable provocation, by words or acts of one at the time. State v. Seaton, 106 Mo. 198, 17 S.W. 169.

HEAT PROSTRATION. Sunstroke. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Hoflinger, Ark., 45 S.W.2d 866, 867.

HEAT STROKE. Sunstroke. A sudden prostration resulting from exposure to excessive heat regardless of the source from which the heat emanates. Herbert v. State, 124 Neb. 312, 246 N.W. 454. A depression of the vital powers; due to exposure to excessive heat, and manifesting itself as prostration with syncope, etc. (heat exhaustion), as prostration with insensibility, fever, etc. (true sunstroke), or rarely as acute meningitis; sunstroke or insolation (in the wider sense). Smith v. Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co., 211 Ky. 454, 277 S. W. 806, 807.

HEAVE TO. In maritime parlance and admiralty law, to stop a sailing vessel's headway by bringing her head "into the wind," that is, in the direction from which the wind blows. A steamer is said to be "hove to" when held in such a position that she takes the heaviest seas upon her quarter. The Hugo, D.C.N.Y., 57 Fed. 411.

HEBBERMAN. An unlawful fisher in the Thames below London bridge; so called because they generally fished at ebbing tide or water. 4 Hen. VII, c. 15; Jacob.

HEBBERTHEF. In Saxon law, the privilege of having the goods of a thief, and the trial of him, within a certain liberty. Cowell.

HEBBING-WEARS. A device for catching fish in ebbing water. St. 23 Hen. VIII, c. 5.

HEBDOMAD. A week; a space of seven days.

HEBDOMADIUS. A week's man; the canon or prebendary in a cathedral church, who had the peculiar care of the choir and the offices of it for his own week. Cowell.

HEBOTE. The king's edict commanding his subjects into the field.

HEBREW. Not the same as Yiddish. U. S. ex rel. Engel v. Tod, C.C.A.N.Y., 294 F. 820, 822. See Yiddish.

HECCAGIUM. In feudal law, rent paid to a lord of the fee for a liberty to use the engines called "becks."

HECK. An engine to take fish in the river Ouse. 23 Hen. VIII. c. 18.

HECK DAY. See Hoke Day.

HEDA. A small haven, wharf, or landing place.

HEDAGIUM. Toll or customary dues at the hithe or wharf, for landing goods, etc., from which exemption was granted by the crown to some particular persons and societies. Wharton; Cowell.

HEDGE. A purchase of grain to protect against loss due to fluctuations in price. Aberdeen Farmers' Equity Exchange v. Sand, 53 S.D. 574, 221 N. W. 597. See Hedging.

To safeguard one's self from loss on a bet or speculation by making compensatory arrangements on the other side. Whorley v. Patton-Kjose Co., 90 Mont. 461, 5 P.2d 210, 214.

HEDGE—BOTE. An allowance of wood for repairing hedges or fences, which a tenant or lessee has a right to take off the land let or demised to him. 2 Bl.Comm. 35; Livingston v. Ten Broeck, 16 Johns. (N.Y.) 15, 8 Am.Dec. 287.

HEDGE—PRIEST. A vagabond priest in olden time.

A hedge-parson; specifically, in Ireland, formerly, a priest who has been admitted to orders directly from a hedge-school, without preparation in theological studies at a regular college. Cent. Dict.

HEDGING. A means by which collectors and exporters of grain or other products, and manufacturers, who make contracts in advance for the sale of their goods, secure themselves against the fluctuations of the market by counter contracts for the purchase or sale of an equal quantity of the product or of the material of manufacture. Whorley v. Patton-Kjose Co., 90 Mont. 461, 5 P.2d 210, 214. The action of one who buys commodities in selling an equal amount of such commodities on exchange for the purpose of insurance against fluctuations in price. Fraser v. Farmers' Co-op. Co., 167 Minn. 369, 209 N.W. 33, 36.

The term "hedge," as used in the milling business, means when the miller enters into a contract for the delivery of flour at a future date, he buys wheat on the stock exchange for future delivery, and when he purchases wheat for actual delivery from the grain elevator to fulfill the contract which he had previously made to furnish flour, he sells the wheat which he has bought on the stock exchange. Bluefield Milling Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 104 W.Va. 150, 139 S.E. 638, 55 A.L.R. 636.

HEEDLESS. It is almost as strong as word "reckless" and includes the element of disregard of the rights of others. State v. Sullivan, 58 N.D. 732, 227 N.W. 230, 232. Careless. Bordonaro v. Senk, 109 Conn. 428, 147 A. 136, 137.

HEEL BLANK. Several heel lifts cemented to. gether, forming the height of the heel minus the rand and a bottom or finishing lift. Brockton Heel Co. v. International Shoe Co., D.C.N.H., 19 F.2d 145.

HEEL LOG. Succession of heel lifts coated with an adhesive, piled one upon the other, to which pressure has been applied, making a log of some indeterminate length. Brockton Heel Co. v. International Shoe Co., D.C.N.H., 19 F.2d 145.

HEEL LOG SECTION. A portion of a heel log of any convenient length. Brockton Heel Co. v. International Shoe Co., D.C.N.H., 19 F.2d 145.

HEELER. An opprobrious term, meaning in common acceptation a person who is the lackey or hangeron of another, and in a political sense an unscrupulous and disreputable person. Winnsboro Cotton Oil Co. v. Carson, Tex.Civ.App., 185 S.W. 1002, 1008.

HEGEMONY. The leadership of one among several independent confederate states.

HEGIRA. The epoch or account of time used by the Arabians and the Turks, who begin the Mohammedan era and computation from the day that Mohammed was compelled to escape from Mecca. to Medina which happened on the night of Thursday, July 15, A.D. 622, under the reign of the Emperor Heraclius. Townsend, Dict. Dates; Wilson, Gloss. The era begins July 16. The word is sometimes spelled hejira but the former is the ordinary usage. It is derived from hijrah, in one form or another, an oriental term denoting flight, departure.

The flight of Mohammed from Mecca. Webster, Dict.

HEGUMENOS. The leader of the monks in the Greek Church.

HEIFER. A young cow; a cow that has not had a calf. Fletcher v. State, 198 Ark. 376, 128 S.W. 2d 997, 999.

HEIR. At common law. The person appointed by law to succeed to the estate in case of intestacy. 2 Bla.Comm. 201; Dukes v. Faulk, 37 S.C. 255, 16 S.E. 122, 34 Am.St.Rep. 745.

One who inherits property, whether real or personal. Hartford-Connecticut Trust Co. v. Lawrence, 106 Conn. 178, 138 A. 159, 160.

A person who succeeds, by the rules of law, to an estate in lands, tenements, or hereditaments, upon the death of his ancestor, by descent and right of relationship. Hoover v. Smith, 96 Md. 393, 54 A. 102. Sewall v. Roberts, 115 Mass. 268. He who is born or begotten in lawful wedlock, and upon whom the law casts the inheritance immediately upon the death of his ancestor. Moffett v. Conley, 63 Okl. 3, 163 P. 118, 120.

One who would receive his estate under statute of descent and distribution. Faulkner's Guardian v. Faulkner, 237 Ky. 147, 35 S.W.2d 6, 7.

Moreover, the term is frequently used in a popular sense to designate a successor to property either bly will or by law. Wallace v. Privett, 198 Cal. 746, 247 P. 906, 907.

According to many authorities, heir may be nomen collectivum, as well in a deed as in a will, and operate in both in the same manner as the word heirs. 1 Rolle, Abr. 253; Ambl. 453; Cro. Eliz. 313; 1 Burr. 38. But see 2 Prest.Est. 9, 10.

The word must be construed according to testator's intention as gathered from whole will. Fadler v. Gabbert, 333 Mo. 851, 63 S.W.2d 121.

See, also, Heirs.

In the civil law. A universal successor in the event of death. He who actively or passively succeeds to the entire property or estate, rights and obligations, of a decedent, and occupies his place.

The term is indiscriminately applied to all persons who are called to the succession, whether by the act of the party or by operation of law. The person who is created universal successor by a will is called the "testamentary heir ;" and the next of kin by blood is, in cases of intestacy, called the "heir at law," or "heir by intestacy." The executor of the common law in many respects corresponds to the testamentary heir of the civil law. Again, the administrator in many respects corresponds with the heir by intestacy. By the common law, executors and administrators have no right except to the personal estate of the deceased ; whereas the heir by the civil law is authorized to administer both the personal and real estate. Story, Confl. Laws, §§ 57, 508; 1 Brown, Civ. Law, 344.

The term "heir" has several significations. Sometimes it refers to one who has formally accepted a succession and taken possession thereof ; sometimes to one who is called to succeed, but still retains the faculty of accepting or renouncing, and it is frequently used as applied to one who has formally renounced. Mumford v. Bowman, 26 La.Ann. 417.

In Scotch law. The person who succeeds to the heritage or heritable rights of one deceased. 1 Forb.Inst. pt. 3, p. 75. The word has a more extended signification than in English law, comprehending not only those who succeed to lands, but successors to personal property also. Wharton.

Right heir. This term was formerly used, in the case of estates tail, to distinguish the preferred heir, to whom the estate was limited, from the heirs in general, to whom, on the failure of the preferred heir and his line, the remainder over was usually finally limited. With the abolition of estates tail, the term has fallen into desuetude,. but when still used, in modern law, it has no other meaning than "heir at law." Brown v. Wadsworth, 168 N.Y. 225, 61 N.E. 250.

HEIR APPARENT. An heir whose right of inheritance is indefeasible, provided he outlive the ancestor; as in England the eldest son, or his issue, who must, by the course of the common law, be heir to the father whenever he happens to die._ 2 Bl.Comm. 208; 1 Steph.Comm. 358; Jones v. Fleming, 37 Hun. (N.Y.) 230. One who, before the death of the ancestor, is next in the line of succession, provided he be heir to the ancestor whenever he happens to die. Reese v. Stires, 87 N.J.Eq. 32, 103 A. 679. See, also, Apparent Heir.

HEIR AT LAW. He who, after his ancestor dies intestate, has a right to all lands, tenements, and hereditaments which belonged to him or of which he was seised. The same as "heir general." Forrest v. Porch, 100 Tenn. 391, 45 S.W. 676.

The heir at common law is that person who succeeds to the real estate in case of intestacy.. Walker v. Walker, 283 111. 11, 118 N.E. 1014, 1019. In its strict sense and technical import, the person or persons appointed by law to succeed to the estate in case of intestacy. Albright v. Albright, 116 Ohio St. 668, 157 N.E. 760, 762. In a comprehensive and popular sense, one who inherits either real or personal property: Gross v. Hartford-Connecticut Trust Co., 100 Conn. 332, 123 A. 907, 908. Next of kin, Meeker v. Forbes, 84 N.J.Eq. 271, 93 A. 887, 888.

In the term "heir at law," as used in will, suffix "at law" adds merely expectant feature of one's statutory position toward an ancestor or source of title who is considered as still living, whereas word "heir" alone denotes that ancestor has already died. In re Ward's Estate, 297 N.Y.S. 16, 19, 162 Misc. 855.

A deceased person's "heirs at law" are those who succeed to his estate of inheritance under statutes of descent and distribution, in absence of testamentary disposition, and not necessarily his_heirs at common law, who are persons .succeeding to deceased's realty in case of his intestacy. In re Towndrow's Will, 47 N.M. 173, 138 P.2d 1001, 1003.

HEIRS AT LAW SHALL NOT BE DISINHERITED BY CONJECTURE, BUT ONLY BY EXPRESS WORDS OR NECESSARY IMPLICATION. .Schoul. Wills § 479.

HEIR BENEFICIARY. In the civil law, one who has accepted the succession under the benefit of an inventory regularly made.

Heirs are divided into two classes, according to the manner in which they accept the successions left to them, to-wit, unconditional and beneficiary heirs. Unconditional heirs are those who inherit without any reservation, or without making an inventory, whether their acceptance be express or tacit. Beneficiary heirs are those who have accepted the succession under the benefit of an inventory regularly made. Civ.Code La. art. 883. If the heir apprehend that the succession will be burdened with debts beyond its value, he accepts with benefit of inventory, and in that case he is respopsible only for the value of the succession.

HEIR BY ADOPTION. An adopted child, "who is in a limited sense made an heir, not by the law, but by the contract evidenced by the deed of adoption." In re Sessions' Estate, 70 Mich.. 297, 38 N. W. 249, 14 Am.St.Rep. 500.

HEIR BY CUSTOM. In English law, one whose right of inheritance depends upon a particular and local custom, such as gavelkind, or borough English. Co.Litt. 140.

HEIR BY DEVISE. One to whom lands are devised by will; a devisee of lands. Answering to the hceres factus (q. v.) of the civil law.

HEIR COLLATERAL. One who is not lineally related to the decedent, but is of collateral kin; e. g., his uncle, cousin, brother, nephew.

HEIR CONVENTIONAL. In the civil law, one who takes a succession by virtue of a contract or settlement entitling him thereto.

HEIR EXPECTANT. One whose parents were living, as respects lots to which parents had title. Adams v. Adams, 348 Mo. 1041, 156 S.W.2d 610, 616.

HEIR, FORCED. One who cannot be disinherited. See Forced Heirs.

HEIR GENERAL. An heir at law. The ordinary heir by blood, succeeding to all the lands. Forrest v. Porch, 100 Tenn. 391, 45 S.W. 676.

HEIR INSTITUTE. In Scotch law, one to whom the right of succession is ascertained by disposition or express deed of the deceased. 1 Forb.Inst. pt. 3, p. 75.

HEIR, IRREGULAR. In Louisiana, irregular heirs are those who are neither testamentary nor legal, and who have been established by law to take the succession. See Civ.Code La. art. 878. When there are no direct or collateral relatives surviving the decedent, and the succession consequently devolves upon the surviving husband or wife, or illegitimate children, or the state, it is called an "irregular succession."

HEIR, LEGAL. In the civil law, a legal heir is one who takes the succession by relationship to the decedent and by force of law.

This is different from a testamentary or conventional heir, who takes the succession in virtue of the disposition of man. See Civ.Code La. arts. 877, 879. The term is also used in Anglo-American law in substantially the same sense, that is, the person to whom the law would give the decedent's property, real and personal, if he should die intestate. Waller v. Martin, 106 Tenn. 341, 61 S.W. 73, 82 Am.St.Rep. 882. In legal strictness, the term signifies one who would inherit real estate, but it is also used to indicate one who would take under the statute of distribution. Morse v. Ward, 92 Conn. 408, 103 A. 119, 120.

HEIR, MALE. In Scotch law, an heir institute, who, though not next in blood to the deceased, is his nearest male relation that can succeed to him. 1 Forb.Inst. pt. 3, p. 76. In English law, the nearest male blood-relation of the decedent, unless further limited by the words "of his body," which restrict the inheritance to sons, grandsons, and other male descendants in the right line. Jordan v. Adams, 6 C.B.,N.S., 764; Goodtitle v. Herring, 1 East, 275; Ewan v. Cox, 9 N.J.Law, 14.

HEIR OF CONQUEST. In Scotch law, one who succeeds to the deceased in conquest, i. e., lands or other heritable rights to which the deceased neither did nor could succeed as heir to his predecessor.

HEIR OF LINE. In Scotch law, one who succeeds lineally by right of blood; one who succeeds to the deceased in his heritage; e., lands and other heritable rights derived to him by succession as heir to his predecessor. 1 Forb.Inst. pt. 3, p. 77.

HEIR OF PROVISION. In Scotch law, one who succeeds as heir by virtue of a particular provision in a deed or instrument.

HEIR OF TAILZIE. In Scotch law, he on whom an estate is settled that would not have fallen to him by legal succession. 1 Forb.Inst. pt. 3, p. 75.

HEIR OF THE BLOOD. An inheritor who succeeds to the estate by virtue of consanguinity with the decedent, either in the ascending or descend.. ing line, including illegitimate children, but excluding husbands, wives, and adopted children. Hayden v. Barrett, 172 Mass. 472, 52 N.E. 530, 70 Am.St.Rep. 295.

HEIR OF THE BODY. An heir begotten or borne by the person referred to, or a child of such heir; any lineal descendant of the decedent, excluding a surviving husband or wife, adopted children, and collateral relations; bodily heir. Ratliffe v. Ratliffe, 182 Ky. 230, 206 S.W. 478, 479. Clarkson v. Hatton, 143 Mo. 47, 44 S.W. 761, 39 L.R.A. 748, 65 Am.St.Rep. 635.

May be used in either of two senses : In their unrestricted sense, as meaning the persons who from generation to generation become entitled by descent under the entail; and in the sense of heirs at law, or those persons who are descendants of him whom the statute of descent appoints to take intestate estate. Bunn v. Butler, 300 Ill. 269, 133 N.E. 246, 247. Unless the will discloses an intention to the contrary, the term "heirs of the body" is not synonymous with children. Clark v. Cammack, 216 Ala. 346, 113 So. 270, 271. And ordinarily, such words are words of limitation and not of purchase. Kirby v. Hulette, 174 Ky. 257, 192 S. W. 63, 65; contra: Owen v. Trail, 302 Mo. 292, 258 S. W. 699, 701. The words are sometimes deemed equivalent to "issue" or "descendants" ; Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. v. Bridgham, 42 R.I. 161, 106 A. 149, 152, 5 A.L.R. 185; and sometimes not; In re English's Estate, 270 Pa. 1, 112 A. 913, 914.

HEIR PRESUMPTIVE. The person who, if the ancestor should die immediately, would, in the present circumstances of things, be his heir, but whose right of inheritance may be defeated by the contingency of some nearer heir being born; as a brother or nephew, whose presumptive succession may be destroyed by the birth of 'a child. 2 Bl.Comm. 208; 1 Steph.Comm. 358; Jones v. Fleming, 37 Hun., N.Y., 230.

In Louisiana, the presumptive heir Is he who Is the nearest relation of the deceased capable of inheriting. This quality is given to him before the decease of the person from whom he is to inherit, as well as after the opening of the succession, until he has accepted or renounced it. La. Civ.Code, art. 880.

HEIR SPECIAL. In English law, the issue in tail, who claims per formam Boni; by the form of the gift.

HEIR SUBSTITUTE, IN A BOND. In Scotch law, he to whom a bond is payable expressly in case of the creditor's decease, or after his death. 1 Forb.Inst. pt. 3, p. 76.

HEIR TESTAMENTARY. In the civil law, one who is named and appointed heir in the testament of the decedent. This name distinguishes him from a legal heir, (one upon whom the law casts the succession,) and from a conventional heir, (one who takes it by virtue of a previous contract or settlement.)

HEIR UNCONDITIONAL. In the civil law and in Louisiana, one who inherits without any reservation, or without making an inventory, whether his acceptance be express or tacit. Distinguished from heir beneficiary. La.Civ.Code, art. 882.

HEIRDOM. Succession by inheritance.

HEIRESS. A female heir to a person having an estate of inheritance. When there are more than one, they are called "co-heiresses," or "co-heirs."

HEIRLOOMS. Such goods and chattels as, contrary to the nature of chattels, shall go by special custom to the heir along with the inheritance, and not to the executor. The termination "loom" (Sax.) signifies a limb or member; so that an heirloom is nothing else but a limb or member of the inheritance. They are generally such things as cannot be taken away without damaging or dismembering the freehold; such as deer in a park, doves in a cote, deeds and charters, etc. 2 Bl. Comm. 427.

This word seems to be compounded of heir, and loom, that is, a frame, viz, to weave in. Some derive the word loom from the Saxon Loma, or geloma, which signifies utensils or vessels generally. However, this may be, the word loom, by time, is drawn to a more general signification than it bore at the first, comprehending all implements of household, as tables, presses, cupboards, bedsteads, wainscots, and which, by the custom of some countries, having belonged to a house are never inventoried after the decease of the owner as chattels, but accrue to the heir with the house itself. Minshew; 2 Poll. & Maitl. 361.

HEIRS. Technically, those persons designated by law to succeed to the estate in case of intestacy. Potter v. Potter, 306 Ill. 37, 137 N.E. 425, 426. See, also, Heir.

A word used in deeds of conveyance, (either solely, or in connection with others,) where it is intended to pass a fee.

It is generally a word of limitation, and is not to be construed as a word of purchase unless there are other controlling words showing such intention by the person using it. McKnight v. Black, 240 Ky. 818, 43 S.W.2d 53, 54.

In the word is comprehended heirs of heirs in infinitum. Co. Litt. 7b, 9a; Larew v. Larew, 146 Va. 134, 135 S.E. 819, 820.

It may have different meanings, just as under the English law the singular form, "heir," might have different meanings, but, if there is no context, the word "heirs" must be held to indicate the indefinite succession by inheritance. .7Etna Life Ins. Co. v. Hoppin, C.C.A., 214 F. 928, 932. Under the terms of particular wills, however, or under statutes abolishing the rule in Shelley's Case, Menard v. Campbell, 180 Mich. 583, 147 N.W. 556, 558, Ann.Cas. 1916A, 802; it may be a word of purchase, and is frequently deemed synonymous with "children," Cultice v. Mills, 97 Ohio St. 112, 119 N.E. 200, 201; Williams v. J. C. Armiger & Bro., 129 Md. 222, 98 A. 542, 544.

A devise or bequest to "heirs" primarily means those who are heirs at the testator's death, and it is only when a contrary intention appears that this presumption fails. In re Bump's Will, 234 N.Y. 60, 136 N.E. 295, 296.

Bodily heirs. In a technical sense, the same as "heirs of the body." Hartman v. Flynn, 189 N.C. 452, 127 S.E. 517, 519.

Normally, words of limitation, not of purchase. Stamey v. McGinnis, 145 Ga. 226, 88 S.E. 935, 936. But they may be used synonymously with "children." Scott v. Scott, 172 Ky. 658, 190 S.W. 143.

Joint heirs. Co-heirs. The term is also applied to those who are or will be heirs to both of two designated persons at the death of the survivor of them, the word "joint" being here applied to the ancestors rather than the heirs. See Gardiner v. Fay, 182 Mass. 492, 65 N.E. 825.

Lawful heirs. The same as "heirs." In re Irish's Estate, 89 Vt. 56, 94 A. 173, 174, Ann.Cas. 1917C, 1154. In a general sense, those whom the law recognizes as the heirs of a decedent, but in a special and technical sense, lineal descendants only. Abbott v. Essex Co., 18 How. 215, 15 L.Ed. 352.

Legitimate heirs. Children born in lawful wedlock and their descendants, not including collateral heirs or issue in indefinite succession. Lytle v.

Beveridge, 58 N.Y. 605; Prindle v. Beveridge, 7 Lans., N.Y., 231. Sometimes synonymous with "lawful" heir. Corison v. Williams, 58 Cal.App. 282, 208 P. 331, 334.

Lineal heir. See Lineal Heir.

Living heirs. Technically words of description instead of purchase. Johnson v. Coler, 187 Iowa, 734, 174 N.W. 654, 655.

Under a will giving the testator's wife an estate for life, at her death all the property to be equally divided between "our living children or to their living heirs," the words "living heirs" should be given their technical meaning as Including all the legal heirs of the deceased children of testator that died after the death of testator. Potter v. Potter, 306 Ill. 37, 137 N.E. 425, 427.

Natural heirs. Heirs by consanguinity as distinguished from heirs by adoption, and also as distinguished from collateral heirs. Smith v. Pendell, 19 Conn. 112, 48 Am.Dec. 146; children; heirs of the body, Maynard v. Henderson, 117 Ark. 24, 173 S.W. 831, 832, Ann.Cas.1917A, 1157. Yarrington v. Freeman, 201 Ky. 135, 255 S.W. 1034, 1035.

HEIRS AND ASSIGNS. Ordinarily words of limitation and not of purchase. In re Knapp's Will, 6 N.Y.S.2d 100, 168 Misc. 487. At common law, the words were essential to conveyance granting title in fee simple, and though they are unnecessary for that or any purpose under statute when used in wills or deeds, words still have that meaning. In re Denari's Will, 300 N.Y.S. 1279, 165 Misc. 450.

HEIRSHIP. The quality or condition of being heir, or the relation between the heir and his ancestor. It is a legal right, regulated by law, to be enjoyed subject to the provisions of the statute. Winke v. Olson, 164 Wis. 427, 160 N.W. 164, 166.

HEIRSHIP MOVABLES. In Scotch law. The movables which go to the heir, and not to the executor, that the land may not go to the heir completely dismantled, such as the best of furniture, horses, cows, etc., but not fungibles. Erskine, Inst. 3. 8. 13-17.

HELD. In reference to the decision of a court, decided. See, also, Hold.

HELL. The name formerly given to a place under the exchequer chamber, where the king's debtors were confined. Rich.Dict.

HELM. Thatch or straw; a covering for the head in war; a coat of arms bearing a crest; the tiller or handle of the rudder of a ship.

HELOWE-WALL. The end-wall covering and defending the rest of the building. Paroch. Antiq. 573.

HELSING. A Saxon brass coin, of the value of a half-penny.

HE3IIPLEGIA. In medical jurisprudence. Unilateral paralysis; paralysis of one side of the body, commonly due to a lesion in the brain, but sometimes originating from the spinal cord, as in "Brown-Sequard's paralysis," unilateral paralysis with crossed ancesthesia. In the cerebral form, the hemiplegia is sometimes "alternate" or crossed, that is, occurring on the opposite side of the body from the initial lesion.

Paralysis of half of the body, as of both legs or of both arms, or an arm and leg. Gray v. United States, C.C.A. Ark., 109 F.2d 728. 729. If the disease comes on rapidly or suddenly, it is called "quick" hemiplegia; if slowly or gradually, "chronic." The former variety is more apt to affect the mental faculties than the latter; but, where hemiplegia is complete, the operations of the mind are generally much impaired. Baughman v. Baughman, 32 Kan. 538, 4 P. 1003.

HEMOLDBORH, or HELMELBORCH. A title to possession. The admission of this old Norse term into the laws of the Conqueror is difficult to be accounted for; it is not found in any Anglo-Saxon law extant. Wharton.

HENCEFORTH. A word of futurity, which, as employed in legal documents, statutes, and the like, always imports a continuity of action or condition from the present time forward, but excludes all the past. Thomson v. American Surety Co., 170 N.Y. 109, 62 N.E. 1073.

HENCHMAN. A page; an attendant; servant; a herald. See Barnes v. State, 88 Md. 347, 41 A. 781. A footman; one who holds himself at the bidding of another. It has come to mean here a political follower; used in a rather bad sense. Gates v. State, 140 Tex.Cr.R. 228, 143 S.W.2d 780, 783, 784.

HENEDPENNY. A customary payment of money instead of hens at Christmas; a composition for eggs. Cowell.

HENFARE. A fine for flight on account of murder. Domesday Book.

HENGHEN. In Saxon law. A prison, a goal, or house of correction.

HENGWYTE. Sax. In old English law. An acquittance from a fine for hanging a thief. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 47, § 17.

HENRICUS VETUS. Henry the Old, or Elder. King Henry L is so called in ancient English chronicles and charters, to distinguish him from the subsequent kings of that name. Spelman.

HEORDFAETE, or HUDEFIEST. In Saxon law. A master of a family, keeping house, distinguished from a lower class of freemen, viz., folgeras, (folgarii,) who had no habitations of their own, but were house-retainers of their lords.

HEORDPENNY. Peter-pence (q. v.).

HEORDWERCH. In Saxon law. The service of herdsmen, done at the will of their lord.

HEPBURN ACT. The name commonly given to an act of Congress, June 29, 1906, amending §§ 1, 6, 14, 15, 16 and 20 of the Interstate Commerce Act, Feb. 4, 1887. (49 U.S.C.A. §§ 1, 6, 11, 14, 15, 16, 18, 20).

HEPTARCHY. A government exercised by seven persons, or a nation divided into seven governments. In the year 5G0, seven different monarchies had been formed in England by the German tribes, namely, that of Kent by the Jutes; those of Sussex, Wessex, and Essex by the Saxons; and those of East Anglia, Bernicia, and Deira by the Angles. To these were added, about the year 586, an eighth, called the "Kingdom of Mercia," also founded by the Angles, and comprehending nearly the whole of the heart of the kingdom. These states formed what has been designated the "Anglo-Saxon Octarchy," or more commonly, though not so correctly, the "Anglo-Saxon Heptarchy," from the custom of speaking of Deira and Bernicia under the single appellation of the "Kingdom of Northumberland." Wharton.

HERALD. In ancient law, a herald was a diplomatic messenger who carried messages between kings or states, and especially proclamations of war, peace, or truce. In English law, a herald is an officer whose duty is to keep genealogical lists and tables, adjust armorial bearings, and regulate the ceremonies at royal coronations and funerals.

HERALDRY. The art, office, or science of heralds. Also an old and obsolete abuse of buying and selling precedence in the paper of causes for hearing.

HERALDS' COLLEGE. In England. An ancient royal corporation, first instituted by Richard III. in 1483. It comprises three kings of arms, six heralds, and four marshals or pursuivants of arms, together with the earl marshal and a secretary. The heralds' books, compiled when progresses were solemnly and regularly made into every part of the kingdom, to inquire into the state of families, and to register such marriages and descents as were verified to them upon oath, are allowed to be good evidence of pedigrees. The heralds' office is still allowed to make grants of arms and to permit change of names. 3 Starkie, Ev. 843; Wharton.

HERBAGE. In English law. An easement or liberty, which consists in the right to pasture cattle on another's ground.

Feed for cattle in fields and pastures. Bract. fol. 222; Co.Litt. 46; Steph.Touch. 97. A right to herbage does not include a right to cut grass, or dig potatoes, or pick apples. Simpson v. Coe, 4 N.H. 303.

HERBAGIUM ANTERIUS. The first crop of grass or hay, in opposition to aftermath or second cutting. Paroch.Antiq. 459.

HERBENGER, or HARBINGER. An officer in the royal house, who goes before and allots the noblemen and those of the household their lodgings; also an innkeeper.

HERBERGAGIUM. Lodgings to receive guests in the way of hospitality. Cowell.

HERBERGARE. To harbor; to entertain.

HERBERGATUS. Harbored or entertained in an inn. Cowell.

HERBERY, or HERBURY. An inn. Cowell.

HERCIA. A harrow. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 77.

HERCIARE. To harrow. 4 Inst. 270.

HERCIATURA. In old English law. Harrowing; work with a harrow. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 82, § 2.

HERCISCUNDA. In the civil law. To be divided. Familia herciscunda, an inheritance to be divided. Actio familice herciscundce, an action for dividing an inheritance. Erciscunda is more commonly used in the civil law. Dig. 10, 2; Inst. 3, 28, 4; Id. 4, 6, 20.

HERD, n. An indefinite number, more than a few, of cattle, sheep, horses, or other animals of the larger sorts, assembled and kept together as one drove and under one care and management. Boland v. Cecil, 65 Cal.App.2d Supp. 832, 150 P.2d 819, 822.

HERD, v. To tend, take care of, manage, and control a herd of cattle or other animals, implying something more than merely driving them from place to place. Phipps v. Grover, 9 Idaho 415, 75 P. 65.

HERDER. One who herds or has charge of a herd of cattle, in the senses above defined. Hooker v. McAllister, 12 Wash. 46, 40 P. 617.

HERDEWICH. A grange or place for cattle or husbandry. Mon.Angl. pt. 3.

HERDWERCH, HEORDWERCH. Herdsmen's work, or customary labor, done by shepherds and inferior tenants, at the will of the lord. Cowell.

HEREAFTER. A word of futurity, always used in statutes and legal documents as indicative of future time, excluding both the present and the past. Tremont & S. Mills v. Lowell, 165 Mass. 265, 42 N.E. 1134.

HEREDAD. In Spanish law. A piece of land under cultivation; a cultivated farm, real estate; an inheritance or heirship.

HEREDAD YACENTE. From Lat. "Hcereditas jacens," (q. v.) In Spanish law. An inheritance not yet entered upon or appropriated. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 19, c. 2, § 8.

HEREDERO. In Spanish law. Heir; he who, by legal or testamentary disposition, succeeds to the property of a deceased person. "Hceres censeatur cum defunct° una eademque persona." Las Partidas, 7, 9, 13. Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529, 2 P. 433.

HEREDITAGIUM. In Sicilian and Neapolitan law. That which is held by hereditary right; the same with hereditamentum (hereditament) in English law. Spelman.

HEREDITAMENTS. Things capable of being inherited, be it corporeal or incorporeal, real, personal, or mixed, and including not only lands and everything thereon, but also heirlooms, and certain furniture which, by custom, may descend to the heir together with the land. Co.Litt. 5b; 2 Bl. Comm. 17; Nellis v. Munson, 108 N.Y. 453, 15 N.E. 739. Sox v. Miracle, 35 N.D. 458, 160 N.W. 716, 719.

Things which may be directly inherited, as contrasted with things which go to the personal representative of a deceased. Denver Joint Stock Land Bank of Denver v. Dixon, 57 Wyo. 523, 122 P.2d 842, 846, 140 A.L.R. 1270.

At common law corporeal hereditaments were physical objects, comprehended under the term land, and were said to lie in livery, while incorporeal hereditaments existed only in contemplation of law, were said to lie in grant and were affiliated with chattel interests. National Supply Co. v. McLeod, 116 Kan. 477, 227 P. 350.

The term includes a few rights unconnected with land, but it is generally used as the widest expression for real property of all kinds, and is therefore employed in conveyances after the words "lands" and "tenements," to include everything of the nature of realty which they do not cover. Sweet.

Corporeal Hereditaments. Substantial permanent objects which may be inherited. The term "land" will include all such. 2 Bl.Comm. 17; Sox v. Miracle, 35 N.D. 458, 160 N.W. 716, 719.

Incorporeal Hereditaments. Anything, the subject of property, which is inheritable and not tangible or visible. 2 Woodd.Lect. 4.

A right issuing out of a thing corporate (whether real or personal) or concerning or annexed to or exercisable within the same. 2 Bl.Comm. a0; 1 Washb.Real Prop. 10. A right growing out of, or concerning, or annexed to, a corporeal thing, but not the substance of the thing itself. Huston v. Cox, 103 Kan. 73, 172 P. 992.

HEREDITARY. That which is the subject of inheritance.

HEREDITARY DISEASE. Physical ailment transmitted or transmissible from parent to child in consequence of the infection of the former or the presence of the disease in his system, and without exposure of the latter to any fresh source of infection or contagion. South Atlantic Life Ins. Co. v. Hurt's Adm'x, 115 Va. 398, 79 S.E. 401, 404.

HEREDITARY RIGHT TO THE CROWN. The crown of England, by the positive constitution of the kingdom, has ever been descendible, and so continues, in a course peculiar to itself, yet subject to limitation by parliament; but, notwithstanding soh limitation, the crown retains its descendible quality, and becomes hereditary in the prince to whom it is limited. 1 Bl.Comm. 191.

HEREDITARY SUCCESSION. Inheritance by law; title by descent; the title whereby a person, on the death of his ancestor, acquires his estate by right of representation as his heir at law. In re Yahola's Heirship, 142 Okl. 79, 285 P. 946.

HEREDITY. That biological law by which all liv ing beings tend to repeat themselves in their descendants. Prewitt v. State, 106 Miss. 82, 63 So. 330, 331, 6 A.L.R. 1476.

Its prime essentials are the right of common enjoyment on the one hand and the duty of public maintenance on the other. Hildebrand v. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co., 219 N.C. 402, 14 S.E.2d 252, 254, 255.

The generic name for all kinds of public ways, whether carriage-ways, bridle-ways, foot-ways, bridges, turnpike roads, railroads, canals, ferries or navigable rivers; 6 Mod. 255; Ang.Highw. c. 1; 3 Kent 432; City of St. Louis v. Bell Place Realty Co., 259 Mo. 126, 168 S.W. 721, 722. As to streets and alleys, Iowa Telephone Co. v. City of Keokuk, D.C., 226 F. 82, 87; Burns v. Kendall, 96 S.C. 385, 80 S.E. 621, 622. Every public thoroughfare. Oregon Short Line R. Co. v. Pfost, 53 Idaho 559, 27 P.2d 877. It refers to roadway or street which can be used for travel, as distinguished from way upon which road can be or is being constructed. Allen v. Jones, 47 S.D. 603, 201 N.W. 353.

There is a difference in the shade of meaning conveyed by two uses of the word. Sometimes it signifies right of free passage, in the abstract, not importing anything about the character or construction of the way. Thus, a river is called a "highway ;" and it has been not unusual for congress, in granting a privilege of building a bridge, to declare that it shall be a public highway. Again, it has reference to some system of law authorizing the taking a strip of land, and preparing and devoting it to the use of travelers. In this use it imports a roadway upon the soil, constructed under the authority of these laws. Abbott.

Commissioners of Highways. Public officers appointed in the several counties and municipalities, in many states, to take charge of the opening, altering, repair, and vacating of highways within their respective jurisdictions.

Common highway. A road to be used by the community at large for any purpose of transit or traffic. Ham. N. P. 239; Railway Co. v. State, 23 Fla. 546, 3 So. 158, 11 Am.St.Rep. 395.

Highway Acts, or Laws. The body or system of laws governing the laying out, repair, and use of highways.

Highway Crossing. A place where the track of a railroad crosses the line of a highway.

Highway-rate. In English law. A tax for the maintenance and repair of highways, chargeable upon the same property that is liable to the poor-rate.

Highway Robbery. See Robbery.

Highway Tax. A tax for and applicable to the making and repair of highways. Stone v. Bean, 15 Gray (Mass.) 44.

Public Highway. One under the control of and kept by the public, established by regular proceed. ings for the purpose, or generally used by the public for twenty years, or dedicated by the owner of the soil and accepted by the proper authorities and for the maintenance of which they are responsible. State v. Gross, 119 N.C. 868, 26 S.E. 91.

It includes roads, streets, alleys, lanes, courts, places, trails, and bridges, laid out or erected as such by the public, or, if laid out and erected by others, dedicated or abandoned to the public, or made such in actions for the partition of real property. Patterson v. Munyan, 93 Cal. 128, 29 P. 250.

It has been said that if the word "highway" is given its customary meaning, the phrase "public highway" is an example of tautology—the needless or useless repetition of the same idea, of which the law seems to furnish so many illustrations. See Galloway v. Wyatt Metal & Boiler Works, 181 So. 187, 189 La. 837; Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., § 3.

Royal Highways. There were four royal highways in Yorkshire, three by land and one by water, where the king claimed all forfeitures. Maitl. Domesd. Book and Beyond 87.

HIGHWAYMAN. A bandit; one who robs travelers upon the highway. Anderson v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., 77 Cal.App. 641, 247 P. 507, 510.

HIRE, v. To purchase the temporary use of a thing, or to stipulate for the labor or services of another. See Hiring.

For definitions of the various species of this class of contracts, under their Latin names, see Locatio and following titles.

To engage in service for a stipulated reward, as to hire a servant for a year, or laborers by the day or month; to engage a man to temporary service for wages. To "employ" is a word of more enlarged signification. A man hired to labor is employed, but a man may be employed in a work who is not hired. Ozark Minerals Co. v. Murphy, 384 Ill. 94, 51 N.E.2d 197, 201.

HIRE, n. Compensation for the use of a thing, or for labor or services. State v. Kenyon, Inc., Tex.Civ.App., 153 S.W.2d 195, 197.

HIREMAN. A subject. Du Cange.

HIRER. One who hires a thing, or the labor or services of another person. Turner v. Cross, 83 Tex. 218, 18 S.W. 578, 15 L.R.A. 262.

HIRING. A contract by which one person grants to another either the enjoyment of a thing or the use of the labor and industry, either of himself or his servant, during a certain time, for a stipulated compensation, or by which one contracts for the labor or services of another about a thing bailed to him for a specified purpose.

A contract by which one gives to another the temporary possession and use of property, other than money, for reward, and the latter agrees to return the same to the former at a future time.

Synonyms

"Hiring" and "borrowing" are both contracts by which a qualified property may be transferred to the hirer or borrower, and they differ only in this, that hiring is always for a price, stipend, or recompense, while borrowing 14 merely gratuitous. 2 Bl.Comm. 453; Neel v. State, 33 Tex. Cr.R. 408, 26 S.W. 726.

HIRING AT WILL. A general or indefinite hiring. Long v. Forbes, 58 Wyo. 533, 136 P.2d 242, 246.

HIRST, HURST. In old English laws A wood. Co.Litt. 4b.

HIS. This pronoun, generically used, may refer to a person of either sex. Danforth v. Emmons, 124 Me. 156, 126 A. 821, 823; Wilmette v. Brachle, 110 Ill.App. 356.

Its use in a written instrument, in referring to a person whose Christian name is designated therein by a mere initial, is not conclusive that the person referred to is a male; it may be shown by parol that the person intended is a female. Berniaud v. Beecher, 71 Cal. 38, 11 P. 802.

HIS EXCELLENCY. In English law. The title of a viceroy, governor general, ambassador, or commander in chief.

In American law. This title is given to the governor of Massachusetts by the constitution of that state; and it is commonly given, as a title of honor and courtesy, to the governors of the other states and to the president of the United States. It is also customarily used by foreign ministers in addressing the secretary of state in written communications.

HIS HONOR. A title given by the constitution of Massachusetts to the lieutenant governor of that commonwealth. Mass. Const. part 2, c. 2, § 2, art. 1. It is also customarily given to some inferior magistrates, as the mayor of a city.

HOMAGE. In feudal law. A service (or the ceremony of rendering it) which a tenant was bound to perform to his lord on receiving investiture of a fee, or succeeding to it as heir, in acknowledgment of the tenure. It is described by Littleton as the most honorable service of reverence that a free tenant might do to his lord. The ceremony was as follows: The tenant, being ungirt and with bare head, knelt before the lord, the latter sitting, and held his hands extended and joined between the hands of the lord, and said: "I become your man [home] from this day forward, of life and limb and earthly honor, and to you will be faithful and loyal, and bear you faith, for the tenements that I claim to hold of you, saving the faith that I owe unto our sovereign lord the king, so help me God." The tenant then received a kiss from the lord. Homage could be done only to the lord himself. Litt. § 85; Glanv. lib. 9, c. 1;[1] Bract. fols. 77b, 78-80; Wharton.

[1] "Homage" is to be distinguished from "fealty," another incident of feudalism, and which consisted in the solemn oath of fidelity made by the vassal to the lord, whereas homage was merely an acknowledgment of tenure. If the homage was intended to include fealty, it was called "liege homage ;" but otherwise it was called "simple homage." Brown.

HOMAGE ANCESTRAL. In feudal law. Homage was called by this name where a man and his ancestors had immemorially held of another and his ancestors by the service of homage, which bound the lord to warrant the title, and also to hold the tenant clear of all services to superior lords. If the tenant aliened in fee, his alienee was a tenant by homage, but not by homage ancestral. Litt. § 143; 2 Bl.Comm. 300.

HOMAGE JURY. A jury in a court-baron, consisting of tenants that do homage, who are to inquire and make presentments of the death of tenants, surrenders, admittances, and the like.

HOMAGIUM. L. Lat. Homage (q. v.).

HOMAGIUM LIGIUM. Liege homage; that kind of homage which was due to the sovereign alone as supreme lord, and which was done without any saving or exception of the rights of other lords. Spelman. So called from ligando, (binding,) because it could not be renounced like other kinds of homage.

HOMAGIUM, NON PER PROCURATORES NEC PER LITERAS FIERI POTUIT, SED IN . PROPRIA PERSONA TAM DOMINI QUAM TENENTIS CAPI DEBET ET FIERI. Co. Litt. 68. Homage cannot be done by proxy, nor by letters, but must be paid and received in the proper person, as well of the lord as the tenant.

HOMAGIUM PLANUM. In feudal law. Plain homage; a species of homage which bound him who did it to nothing more than fidelity, without any obligation either of military service or attendance in the courts of his superior. 1 Robertson's Car. V., Appendix, note 8.

HOMAGIUM REDDERE. To renounce homage. This was when a vassal made a solemn declaration of disowning and defying his lord; for which there was a set form and method prescribed by the feudal laws. Bract. 1. 2, c. 35, § 35.

HQMAGIUM SIMPLEX. In feudal law. Simple homage; that kind of homage which was merely an acknowledgment of tenure, with a saving of the rights of other lords. Harg. Co. Litt. note 18, lib. 2.

HOMBRE BUENO. In Spanish law. The judge of a district. Also an arbitrator chosen by the parties to a suit. Also a man in good standing; one who is competent to testify in a suit.

HOME. One's own dwelling place; the house in which one lives; especially the house in which one lives with his family; the habitual abode of one's family; a dwelling house. Mann v. Haines, 146 Kan. 988, 73 P.2d 1066, 1072. That place in which one in fact resides with the intention of residence, or in which he has so resided, and with regard to which he retains residence or to which he intends to return. Dicey, Confl. L. 81-; Langhammer v. Munter, 80 Md. 518, 31 A. 300, 27 L.R. A. 330.

Home is not synonymous with domicil, as used in international law, but has a more restricted meaning, Inhabitants of Jefferson v. Washington, 19 Me. 293.

Home includes place where one eats, bathes, reads, visits and rests, as well as sleeping place, Jakeway v. John V. Bauer Co., 218 N.Y.S. 193, 195, 218 App. Div. 302; and, as used in deed or will may include care or right of maintenance, Gwinn v. Hobbs, 83 Ind.App. 263, 141 N.E. 812, 818; In re Burr's Estate, 144 N.Y.S. 926, 927, 83 Misc. 240.

HOME BREW. An intoxicating home made beer. Jones v. State, 31 Ala.App. 378, 17 So.2d 545.

HOME OFFICE. The department of state through which the English sovereign administers most of the internal affairs of the kingdom, especially the police, and communicates with the judicial functionaries. As applied to a corporation, its principal office within the state or country where it was incorporated or formed.

HOME PORT. In maritime law, the home port of a vessel is either the port where she is registered or enrolled, or the port at or nearest to which her owner usually resides, or, if there be more than one owner, the port at or nearest to which the husband, or acting and managing owner resides. Corn. v. Ayer & Lord Tie Co., 77 S.W. 688, 25 Ky.Law Rep. 1068. But for some purposes any port where the owner happens at the time to be with his vessel is its home port. Lever Transp. Co. v. 011inger, 205 Ala. 22, 87 So. 597, 598.

HOME RULE. In constitutional and statutory law, local self-government, or the right thereof. Attorney General v. Lowrey, 131 Mich. 639, 92 N. W. 289. In British politics, a programme or plan (or a more or less definitely formulated demand) for the right of local self-government for Ireland under the lead of an Irish national parliament. Lemaire v. Crockett, 116 Me. 263, 101 A. 302, 303.

HOME, or HOMME. L. Fr. Man; a man.

HOME NE SERA PUNY PUR SUER DES BRIEFES EN COURT LE ROY, SOIT IL A DROIT OU A TORT. A man shall not be punished for suing out writs in the king's court, whether he be right or wrong. 2 Inst. 228.

HOMESTALL. A mansion-house. Dickinson v. Mayer, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 521.

HOMESTEAD. The home, the house and the adjoining land where the head of the family dwells; the home farm. The fixed residence of the head of a family, with the land and buildings surrounding the main house. Oliver v. Snowden, 18 Fla. 825, 43 Am.Rep. 338.

Technically, and under the modern homestead laws, an artificial estate in land, devised to protect the possession and enjoyment of the owner against the claims of his creditors, by withdrawing the property from execution and forced sale, so long as the land is occupied as a home. Buckingham v. Buckingham, 81 Mich. 89, 45 N.W. 504. For "Family," see that title.

Business Homestead. In Texas, a place or property (distinct from the home of a family) used and occupied by the head of a family as a place to exercise his calling or business, which is exempt by law. Spence v. State Nat. Bank of El Paso, Tex.Civ.App., 294 S.W. 618, 623. A curious misnomer, the word "homestead" in this phrase having lost entirely its original meaning, and being retained apparently only for the sake of its remote and derivative association with the idea of an exemption.

Homestead Corporations. Corporations organized for the purpose of acquiring lands in large tracts, paying off incumbrances thereon, improving and subdividing them into homestead lots or parcels, and distributing them among the shareholders, and for the accumulation of a fund for such purposes. Civ. Code Cal. § 557.

Homestead Entry. See Entry.

Homestead Exemption Laws. Laws passed in most of the states allowing a householder or head of a family to designate a house and land as his homestead, and exempting the same homestead from execution for his general debts.

Homestead Right. The personal right to the beneficial, peaceful and uninterrupted use of the home property free from claims of creditors. Hill v. Fir§t Nat. Bank, 79 Fla. 391, 84 So. 190, 192, 20 A.L.R. 270.

Probate Homestead. A homestead set apart by the court for the use of a surviving husband or wife and the minor children out of the common property, or out of the real estate belonging to the deceased. In re Noah's Estate, 73 Cal. 590, 15 P. 290, 2 Am.St.Rep. 834.

Rural Homestead. See Urban Homestead, infra.

Urban Homestead. The residence or dwelling place of a family in a city, claimed or set apart as a homestead, including the principal house and lot, and such lots as are used in connection therewith, contributing to its enjoyment, comfort, and convenience. Harris v. Matthews, 36 Tex. 424, 81 S.W. 1204. Nevertheless, property may be located within the corporate limits of a town or city, and still constitute a "rural homestead," or it may be without the corporate limits, and constitute an "urban homestead." Boerner v. Cicero Smith Lumber Co., Tex.Civ.App., 293 S.W. 632, 636.

HOMICIDAL. Pertaining to homicide; relating to homicide, impelling to homicide; as a homicidal mania. (See Insanity.)

HOMICIDE. The killing of any human creature. 4 Bl.Comm. 177. The killing of one human being by the act, procurement, or omission of another. Pen. Code N. Y. § 179. The act of a human being in taking away the life of another human being. Sanders v. State, 113 Ga. 267, 38 S.E. 84,2. Hogan v. State, 127 Tex.Cr.R. 182, 74 S.W.2d 988, 994.

Homicide is not necessarily a crime. It is a necessary ingredient of the crimes of murder and manslaughter, but there are other cases in which homicide may be committed without criminal intent and without criminal consequences, as, where it is done in the lawful execution of a judicial sentence, in self-defense, or as the only possible means of arresting an escaping felon. The term "homicide" is neutral; while it describes the act, it pronounces no judgment on its moral or legal quality. People v. Connors, 35 N.Y.S. 475, 13 Misc. 582.

Classification

Homicide is ordinarily classified as "justifiable," "excusable," and "felonious." For the definitions of these terms, and of some other compound terms, see infra.

Culpable homicide

Described as a crime varying from the very lowest culpability, up to the very verge of murder. Lord Moncrieff, Arkley, 72.

Excusable homicide

The killing of a human being, either by misadventure or in self-defense. U. S. v. King, C.C.N.Y., 34 F. 306. The name itself imports some fault, error, or omission, so trivial, however, that the law excuses it from guilt of felony, though in strictness it judges it deserving of some little degree of punishment. 4 Bl.Comm. 182. It is of two sorts, —either per infortunium, by misadventure, or se defendendo, upon a sudden affray. Homicide per infortunium is where a man, doing a lawful act, without any intention of hurt, unfortunately kills another; but, if death ensue from any unlawful act, the offense is manslaughter, and not misadventure. Homicide se defendendo is where a man kills another upon a sudden affray, merely in his own defense, or in defense of his wife, child, parent, or servant, and not from any vindictive feeling. 4 BI.Comm. 182.

Felonious homicide

The wrongful killing of a human being, of any age or either sex, without justification or excuse in law; of which offense there are two degrees, manslaughter and murder. 4 Bl.Comm. 190; 4 Steph.Comm. 111.

Homicide by misadventure

The accidental killing of another, where the slayer is doing a lawful act, unaccompanied by any criminally careless or reckless conduct. Commonwealth v. Flax, 331 Pa. 145, 200 A. 632, 637. The same as "homicide per infortunium." State v. Disalvo, Del., 2 W.W.Harr. 232, 121 A. 661, 663.

Homicide by necessity

A species of justifiable homicide, because it arises from some unavoidable necessity, without any will, intention, or desire, and without any inadvertence or negligence in the party killing, and therefore without any shadow of blame. As, for instance, by virtue of such an office as obliges one, in the execution of public justice, to put a malefactor to death who has forfeited his life to the laws of his country. But the law must require it, otherwise it is not justifiable. 4 Bl.Comm. 178.

Homicide per infortunium

Homicide by misfortune, or accidental homicide; as where a man doing a lawful act, without any intention of hurt, unfortunately kills another; a species of excusable homicide. 4 BI.Comm. 182; 4 Steph.Comm. 101.

Homicide se defendendo

Homicide in self-defense; the killing of a person in self-defense upon a sudden affray, where the slayer had no other possible (or, at least, probable) means of escaping from his assailant. 4 Bl.Comm. 183-186; 4 Steph.Comm. 103-105. A species of excusable homicide. Id.; 1 Russ. Crimes, 660.

Justifiable homicide

Such as is committed intentionally, but without any evil design, and under such circumstances of necessity or duty as render the act proper, and relieve the party from any shadow of blame; as where a sheriff lawfully executes a sentence of death upon a malefactor, or where the killing takes place in the endeavor to prevent the commission of felony which could not be otherwise avoided. Moran v. People, 163 Ill. 382, 45 N.E. 230. "Justifiable homicide" is the taking of a human life under circumstances of justification, as a matter of right, such as self-defense or other causes set out in the statute. Gaunce v. State, 22 Okl.Cr.

361, 211 P. 517, 518. "Justifiable homicide" is the killing of a human being by commandment of the law in execution of public justice; by permission of the law in advancement of public justice; in self-defense; or in defense of habitation, property or person, against one who manifestly intends or endeavors, by violence or surprise, to commit a felony on either. Paramore v. State, 161 Ga. 166, 129 S.E. 772, 778.

Negligent homicide

In Texas, the act of causing the death of another by negligence and carelessness in the performance of a lawful act. Anderson v. State, 27 Tex. App. 177, 11 S. W. 33, 3 L.R.A. 644, 11 Am.St.Rep. 189.

HOMICIDIUM, Lat. Homicide (q. v.).

HONOR, n. In English law, a seigniory of several manors held under one baron or lord paramount. Also those dignities or privileges, degrees of nobility, knighthood, and other titles, which flow from the crown as the fountain of honor. Wharton.

In American law. The customary title of courtesy given to judges of the higher courts, and occasionally to some other officers; as "his honor," "your honor."

Act of honor. When a bill has been protested, and a third person wishes to take it up, or accept it, for the "honor" (credit) of one or more of the parties, the notary draws up an instrument, evidencing the transaction, which is called by this name.

Honor courts. Tribunals held within honors or seigniories.

Office of honor. As used in constitutional and statutory provisions, this term denotes a public office of considerable dignity and importance, to which important public trusts or interests are confided, but which is not compensated by any salary or fees, being thus contrasted with an "office of profit." See Dickson v. People, 17 Ill. 193.

HONORABLE. A title of courtesy given in England to the younger children of earls, and the children of viscounts and barons; and, collectively, to the house of commons. In America, the word is used as a title of courtesy for various classes of officials, but without any clear lines of distinction.

HONORABLE DISCHARGE. A formal final judgment passed by the government upon the entire military record of a soldier, and an authoritative declaration by the government that he has left the service in a status of honor. Parker v. Anderson, 112-Vt. 371, 25 A.2d 41, 44, Zearing v. Johnson, 10 Cal.App.2d 654, 52 P.2d 1019, 1020.

A voluntary reward for that for which no remuneration could be collected by law. Cunningham v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A., 67 F.2d 205. A voluntary donation, in consideration of services which admit of no compensation in money ; in particular, to advocates at law, deemed to practice for honor or influence, and not for fees. McDonald v. Napier, 14 Ga. 89.

HONORARIUM JUS. Lat. In Roman law. The law of the praetors and the edicts of the cediles.

HONORARY. As applied to public offices and other positions of responsibility or trust, this term means either that the office or title is bestowed upon the incumbent as a mark of honor or compliment, without intending to charge him with the active discharge of the duties of the place, or else that he is to receive no salary or other compensation in money, the honor conferred by the incumbency of the office being his only reward. Haswell v. New York, 81 N.Y. 258. In other connections, it means attached to or growing out of some honor or dignity or honorable office, or else it imports an obligation or duty growing out of honor or trust only, as distinguished from legal accountability.

HONORARY CANONS. Those without emolument. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, § 23.

HONORARY FEUDS. Titles of nobility, descendible to the eldest son, in exclusion of all the rest. 2 BL Comm. 56.

HONORARY SERVICES. In feudal law. Special services to be rendered to the king in person, characteristic of the tenure by grand serjeanty; such as to carry his banner, his sword, or the like or to be his butler, champion, or other officer, at his coronation. Litt. § 153; 2 Bl. Comm. 73.

HONORARY TRUSTEES. Trustees to preserve contingent remainders, so called because they are bound, in honor only, to decide on the most proper and prudential course. Lewin, Trusts, 408.

HORN. In old Scotch practice. A kind of trumpet used in denouncing contumacious persons rebels and outlaws, which was done with three blasts of the horn by the king's sergeant. This was called "putting to the horn;" and the party so denounced was said to be "at the horn." Bell. See Horning.

HORN-BOOK. A primer; a book explaining the rudiments of any science or branch of knowledge. The phrase "horn-book law" is a colloquial designation of the rudiments or most familiar principles of law.

HORN TENURE. In old English law. Tenure by cornage; that is, by the service of winding a horn when the Scots or other enemies entered the land, in order to warn the king's subjects. This was a species of grand serjeanty. Litt. § 156; 2 Bl. Comm. 74.

HORN WITH HORN, or HORN UNDER HORN. The promiscuous feeding of bulls and cows or all horned beasts that are allowed to run together upon the same common. Spelman.

HORNER. A narcotic addict who inhales or snuffs heroin rather than one who takes it by injection. People v. Carner, 255 P.2d 835, 836, 117 C.A.2d 362.

HORNGELD. Sax. In old English law. A tax within a forest, paid for horned beasts. Cowell; Blount.

HORNING. In Scotch law. "Letters of horning" is the name given to a judicial process issuing on the decree of a court, by which the debtor is summoned to perform his obligation in terms of the decree, the consequence of his failure to do so being liability to arrest and imprisonment. It was anciently the custom to proclaim a debtor who had failed to obey such process a rebel or outlaw, which was done by three blasts of the horn by the king's sergeant in a public place. This was called "putting to the horn," whence the name.

HORNSWOGGLE. To triumph over; overcome; beat; bedevil. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Rochester, Tex.Civ.App., 281 S.W. 306, 314.

HORREUM. Lat. A place for keeping grain; a granary. A place for keeping fruits, wines, and goods generally; a store-house. Calvin.; Bract. fol. 48.

HORS. L. Fr. Out; out of; without.

HORS DE SON FEE. Out of his fee. In old pleading, this was the name of a plea in an action for rent or services, by which the defendant alleged that the land in question was out of the compass of the plaintiff's fee. Mather v. Wood, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. R. 4.

HORS PRIS. Except. Literally translated by the Scotch "out taken."

HORS WEALH. In old English law. The wealh, or Briton who had care of the king's horses.

HORS WEARD. In old English law. A service or corvëe, consisting in watching the horses of the lord. Anc. Inst. Eng.

HORSE. An animal of the genus equus and species caballus. In a narrow and strict sense, the term is applied only to the male, and only to males of four years old or thereabouts, younger horses being called "colts." But even in this sense the term includes both stallions and geldings. In a wider sense, and as generally used in statutes, the word is taken as nomen generalissimum, and includes not only horses strictly so called, but also colts, mares and fillies, and mules and asses. Pullen v. State, 11 Tex.App. 91; Ex parte Hancock, 61 Okl.Cr. 167, 66 P.2d 954, 955.

HORSE GUARDS. The directing power of the military forces of the kingdom of Great Britain. The commander in chief, or general commanding the forces, is at the head of this department. It is subordinate to the war office, but the relations between them are complicated. Wharton.

HORSE POWER. A unit of power capable of lifting 33,000 pounds a foot a minute. Foltz Grocery & Baking Co. v. Brown, 111 Ohio St. 646; 146 N.E. 97, 99.

A hostile character. "Hostility may attach only to the person." 1 Kent, Comm. 56.

HOSTLER. In Norman and old English law, this was the title of the officer in a monastery charged with the entertainment of guests. It was also applied (until about the time of Queen Elizabeth) to an innkeeper, and afterwards, when the keeping of horses at livery became a distinct occupation, to the keeper of a livery stable, and then (under the modern form "ostler") to the groom in charge of the stables of an inn. Cromwell v. Stephens, 2 Daly (N.Y.) 20.

In the language of railroading, an "ostler" or "hostler" at a roundhouse is one whose duty it is to receive locomotives as they come in from the road, care for them in the roundhouse, and have them cleaned and ready for departure when wanted. Louisville and N. R. Co. v. McCoy, 270 Ky. 603, 110 S.W.2d 433, 435.

HOTCHPOT. The blending and mixing property belonging to different persons, in order to divide it equally. 2 Bl, Comm. 190.

Anciently applied to the mixing and blending of lands given to one daughter in frank marriage, with those descending to her and her sisters in fee-simple, for the purpose of dividing the whole equally among them; without which the daughter who held in frank marriage could have no share in the lands in fee-simple. Litt. §§ 267, 268; Co. Litt. 177a; 2 Bl.Comm. 190.

Hotchpot, or the putting in hotchpot, is applied in modern law to the throwing the amount of an advancement made to a particular child, in real or personal estate, into the common stock, for the purpose of a more equal division, or of equalizing the shares of all the children. 2 Kent, Comm. 421, 422; In re Howlett's Estate, 275 Mich. 596, 267 N.W. 743, 744. This answers to or resembles the collatio bonorum, or collation of the civil law. Law v. Smith, 2 R.I. 249; In re Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 168 N.Y.S. 952, 959, 181 App. Div, 642.

HOTEL. An inn; a public house or tavern; a house which is held out to well-behaved members of the traveling public, who are willing to pay reasonable rates for accommodations, as a place where they will be received and entertained as guests for compensation, and will be furnished with food, drink, and lodging, and everything which they have occasion for while on their way. City of St. Louis v. Siegrist, 46 Mo. 593; People v. Gold, Sp.Sess., 6 N.Y.S.2d 264, 267. For "Family Hotel", see that title.

Synonyms

In law, there is no difference whatever between the terms "hotel," "inn," and "tavern," except that in some states a statutory definition has been given to the word "hotel," especially with reference to the grant of licenses to sell liquor, as, that it shall contain a certain number of separate rooms for the entertainment of guests, or the like. But none of the three terms mentioned will include a boarding house (because that is a place kept for the entertainment of permanent boarders, while a hotel or inn is for travelers and transient guests), nor a lodging house (because the keeper thereof does not furnish food for guests, which is one of the requisites of a hotel or inn), nor a restaurant or eating-house, which furnishes food only and not lodging. Martin v. State Ins. Co., 44 N.J.Law, 485, 43 Am.Rep. 397; Debenham v. Short, Tex.Civ.App., 199 S. W. 1147.

HOT-WATER ORDEAL. In old English law. This was a test, in cases of accusation, by hot water; the party accused and suspected being appointed by the judge to put his arms up to the elbows in seething hot water, which, after sundry prayers and invocations, he did, and was, by the effect which followed, judged guilty or innocent. Wharton.

HOUGH. A valley. Co. Litt. 5b. See Haugh.

HOUR. The twenty-fourth part of a natural day; sixty minutes of time.

Hour of cause. In Scotch practice. The hour when a court is met. 3 How. State Tr. 603.

Office hours. See Office.

HOUSE. A dwelling; a building designed for the habitation and residence of men. Satterthwait v. Gibbs, 288 Pa. 428, 135 A. 862, 863.

"House" means, presumptively, a dwelling house; a building divided into floors and apartments, with four walls, a roof, and doors and chimneys; but it does not necessarily mean precisely this. Surman v. Darley, 14 Mees. & W. 183. It may mean any sort of structure or part thereof, whether used for human habitation or not. Dennis v. State, 71 Tex.Cr.R. 162, 158 S.W. 1008; Walker v. Terrell, Tex.Civ.App., 189 S.W. 75, 78.

"House" is not synonymous with "dwelling house." While the former is used in a broader and more comprehensive sense than the latter, it has a narrower and more restricted meaning than the word "building." State v. Garlty, 46 N.H. 61.

A legislative assembly, or (where the bicameral system obtains) one of the two branches of the legislature; as the -house of lords," "house of representatives." Also a quorum of a legislative body. State of Ohio v. Cox, D.C. Ohio, 257 F. 334, 346.

The name "house" is also given to some collections of men other than legislative bodies, to some public institutions, and (colloquially) to mercantile firms or joint-stock companies.

Ancient House. One which has stood long enough to acquire an easement of support against the adjoining land or building. 3 Kent Comm. 437.

Bawdy House. A brothel; a house maintained for purposes of prostitution.

Beer House. See Beer.

Boarding House. See that title.

Duplex House. A double house. Kenwood Land Co. v. Hancock Inv. Co., 169 Mo.App. 715, 155 S.W. 861, 864.

Dwelling House. See that title.

House-bote. A species of estovers, belonging to a tenant for life or years, consisting in the right to take from the woods of the lessor or owner such timber as may be necessary for making repairs upon the house. Co.Litt. 41b.

House-burning. See Arson.

House-duty. A tax on inhabited houses imposed by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 36, in lieu of window-duty, which was abolished.

House of Commons. One of the constituent houses of the British parliament, composed of representatives of the counties, cities, and boroughs. The lower house, so called because the commons of the realm, that is, the knights, citizens, and burgesses returned to parliament, representing the whole body of the commons, sit there.

House of Correction. A reformatory. A place for the imprisonment of juvenile offenders, or those who have committed crimes of lesser magnitude. Ex parte Moon Fook, 72 Cal. 10, 12 P. 804.

House of Delegates. The official title of the lower branch of the legislative assembly of several of the American states, e. g., Maryland and Virginia.

House of Ill Fame. A bawdy house; a brothel; a dwelling allowed by its chief occupant to be used as a resort of persons desiring unlawful sexual intercourse. People v. Lee, 307 Mich. 743, 12 N.W.2d 418, 421.

The authorities are conflicting as to whether and in what circumstances a house used solely by one woman for illicit intercourse is a house of ill fame. Fisher v. City of Paragould, 127 Ark. 268, 192 S.W. 219, 220.

House of Keys. The name of the lower branch of the legislative assembly or parliament of the Isle of Man, consisting of twenty-four representatives chosen by popular election.

House of Lords. The upper chamber of the British parliament. It comprises the archbishops and bishops, (called "Lords Spiritual,") the English peers sitting by virtue of hereditary right, sixteen Scotch peers elected to represent the Scotch peerage under the act of union, and twenty-eight Irish peers elected under similar provisions. The house of lords, as a judicial body, has ultimate appellate jurisdiction, and may sit as a court for the trial of impeachments.

House of Refuge. A prison for juvenile delinquents. A house of correction or reformatory.

House of Representatives. The name of the body forming the more popular and numerous branch of the congress of the United States; also of the similar branch in many of the state legislatures.

House of Worship. A building or place set apart for and devoted to the holding of religious services or exercises or public worship; a church or chapel or place similarly used. Old South Soc. v. Boston, 127 Mass. 379.

Inner House, Outer House. See those titles.

Mansion House. See Mansion.

Public House. An inn or tavern; a house for the entertainment of the public, or for the entertainment of all who come lawfully and pay regularly. Whatley v. State, 68 So. 491, 492, 12 Ala.App. 201. A place of public resort, particularly for purposes of drinking or gaming. In a more general sense, any house made public by the occupation carried on in it and the implied invitation to the public to enter, such as inns, taverns, drinking saloons, gambling houses, and perhaps also shops and stores. Cole v. State, 28 Tex.App. 536, 13 S.W. 859, 19 Am.St.Rep. 856.

Tippling House. A place where intoxicating liquors are sold in drams or small quantities to be drunk on the premises, and where men resort for drinking purposes.

HOUSEAGE. A fee paid for housing goods by a carrier, or at a wharf, etc.

HOUSEBREAKING. In criminal law. Breaking and entering a dwelling-house with intent to commit any felony therein. If done by night, it comes under the definition of "burglary."

Under statute housebreaking may consist in "breaking out" of a house after access had been gained without breaking. Lawson v. Commonwealth, 160 Ky. 180, 169 S.W. 587, 588, L.R.A. 1915 D, 972.

HOUSEHOLD, adj. Belonging to the house and family; domestic. Webster.

HOUSEHOLD, n. A family living together. Schurler v. Industrial Commission, 86 Utah, 284, 43 P.2d 696, 699, 100 A.L.R. 1085. Those who dwell under the same roof and compose a family. Webster. A man's family living together constitutes his household, though he may have gone to another state.

For "Family," see that title.

Synonymous with "family," but broader, in that It includes servants or attendants; all who are under one domestic head. Engebretson v. Austvold, 199 Minn. 399, 271 N.W. 809, 810.

HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE. See Furniture.

HOUSEHOLD SERVANTS AND HOUSEHOLD EMPLOYEES. Those employed in the mansion house, and do not embrace those who work out of doors upon the home place, and not regularly employed to do work within the curtilage. Raines v. Osborne, 184 N.C. 599, 114 S.E. 849.

HOUSEHOLD STUFF. This phrase, in a will, includes everything which may be used for the convenience of the house, as tables, chairs, bedding, and the like. But apparel, books, weapons, tools for artificers, cattle, victuals, and choses in action will not pass by those words, unless the context of the will clearly show a contrary intention. 1 Rop. Leg. 206. See Appeal of Hoopes, 60 Pa. 227, 100 Am.Dec. 562.

HOUSEHOLDER. The occupier of a house. Brande. More correctly, one who keeps house with his family; the head or master of a family. Webster; 18 Johns. 302. Berghean v. Berghean, 113 Ind.App. 412, 48 N.E.2d 1001, 1003. One who has a household; the head of a household. Gomez v. State, 75 Tex.Cr.R. 239, 170 S.W. 711, 713.

HOUSEKEEPER. One who is in actual possession of and who occupies a house, as distinguished from a "boarder," "lodger," or "guest." See Bell v. Keach, 80 Ky. 45. Head of a family. January v. Marler, 274 Mo. 543, 203 S.W. 817.

HOUSE LAW. A peculiar type of regulatory code, now largely obsolete, promulgated by the head of a royal or noble family, or of a prominent private family, governing intra-family relationships and acts with respect to policies of marriage, disposition of property, inheritance and the like. Usually these codes had no legal authority but were enforced within the family by sufficient personal and economic sanctions.

HOVEL. A place used by husbandmen to set their plows, carts, and other farming utensils out of the rain and sun. A shed; a cottage; a mean house.

HOWE. In old English law. A hill. Co. Litt. 5b.

HOWGH. See Haugh.

HOY. A small coasting vessel, usually sloop-rigged, used in conveying passengers and goods from place to place, or as a tender to larger vessels in port. Webster.

HOYMAN. The master or captain of a hoy.

HUCKSTER. A petty dealer and retailer of small articles of provisions, particularly farm and garden produce; a hawker; peddler. Hughes v. City of Detroit, 217 Mich. 567, 187 N.W. 530, 531.

HUCUSQUE. In old pleading. Hitherto. 2 Mod. 24.

RUDE-GELD. In old English law. An acquittance for an assault upon a trespassing servant. Supposed to be a mistake or misprint in Fleta for "hinegeld." Fleta, lib. 1, c. 47, § 20. Also the price of one's skin, or the money paid by a servant to save himself from a whipping. Du Cange.

HUE AND CRY. In old English law. A loud outcry with which felons (such as robbers, burglars, and murderers) were anciently pursued, and which all who heard it were bound to take up, and join in the pursuit, until the malefactor was taken. Bract. fols. 115b, 124; 4 Bl. Comm. 293. A written proclamation issued on the escape of a felon from prison, requiring all officers and people to assist in retaking him. 3 How. State Tr. 386.

HUEBRAS. In Spanish law. A measure of land equal to as much as a yoke of oxen can plow in one day. 2 White, Recop. (38), 49; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 443, 9 L.Ed. 1137.

HUI. Under the law of Hawaii. An association of persons in the ownership of land, members of which ordinarily hold the property as tenants in common. De Fries v. Scott, C.C.A.Hawaii, 268 F. 952, 959.

HUIS. L. Fr. A door. "Al huis del esglise," at the door of the church. Bendloe, 133.

HUISSERIUM. A ship used to transport horses. Also termed "uffer."

HUISSIERS. In French law. Marshals; ushers; process-servers; sheriff's officers. Ministerial officers attached to the courts, to effect legal service of process required by law in actions, to issue executions, etc., and to maintain order during the sitting of the courts.

HULKA. In old records. A hulk or small vessel. Cowell.

HULKS. A place of punishment for convicts in England, abandoned with the reform in the punishment of convicts which began in England about 1840.

HULL. In a statute, 33 U.S.C.A. § 319, requiring ships of a certain size to carry lights, etc., it includes the forecastle deck. The Europe, 190 Fed. 475, 111 C.C.A. 307.

HULLUS. In old records. A hill. 2 Mon. Angl. 292; Cowell.

HUMAGIUM. A moist place. Mon. Angl.

HUMANITARIAN DOCTRINE. Another name for the doctrine of the last clear chance. See Last.

HUNDRED. Under the Saxon organization of England, each county or shire comprised an indefinite number of hundreds, each hundred containing ten tithings, or groups of ten families of freeholders or frankpledges. The hundred was governed by a high constable, and had its own court; but its most remarkable feature was the corporate responsibility of the whole for the crimes or defaults of the individual members. The introduction of this plan of organization into England is commonly ascribed to Alfred, but the idea, as well of the collective liability as of the division, was probably known to the ancient German peoples, as we find the same thing established in the Frankish kingdom under Clothaire, and in Denmark. See 1 Bl. Comm. 115; 4 Bl. Comm. 411.

HUNDRED COURT. In English law. A larger court-baron, being held for all the inhabitants of a particular hundred, instead of a manor. The free suitors are the judges, and the steward the registrar, as in the case of a court-baron. It is not a court of record, and resembles a court-baron in all respects except that in point of territory it is of greater jurisdiction. These courts have long since fallen into desuetude. 3 Bl. Comm. 34, 35; 3 Steph. Comm. 394, 395.

HUNDRED GEMOTE. Among the Saxons, a meeting or court of the freeholders of a hundred, which assembled, originally, twelve times a year, and possessed civil and criminal jurisdiction and ecclesiastical powers. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 7.

HUNDRED LAGH. The law of the hundred, or hundred court; liability to attend the hundred court. Spelman.

HUNDRED PENNY. In old English law. A tax collected from the hundred, by the sheriff or lord of the hundred.

HUNDRED ROLLS. Rolls embodying the result of investigations made by the commissioners in 1274 as to usurpations of the royal rights. 1 Holdsw. Hist. E. L. 48.

HUNDRED SECTA. The performance of suit and service at the hundred court.

HUNDRED SETENA. In Saxon law. The dwellers or inhabitants of a hundred. Cowell; Blount. Spelman suggests the reading of sceatena from Sax. "sceat," a tax.

HUNDRED—FECTA. The performance of suit and service at the hundred court. Wharton.

HUNDREDARIUS. In old English law. A hundredary or hundredor. A name given to the chief officer of a hundred, as well as to the freeholders who composed it. Spel. voc. "Hundredus."

HUNDREDARY. The chief or presiding officer of a hundred.

HUNDREDES EARLpOR, or HUNDREDES MAN. The presiding officer in the hundred court. Anc. Inst. Eng.

HUNDREDORS. In English law. The inhabitants or freeholders of a hundred, anciently the suitors or judges of the hundred court. Persons impaneled or fit to be impaneled upon juries, dwelling within the hundred where the cause of action arose. Cromp. Jur. 217. It was formerly necessary to have some of these upon every panel of jurors. 3 Bl. Comm. 359, 360; 4 Steph. Comm. 370. The term "hundredor" was also used to signify the officer who had the jurisdiction of a hundred, and held the hundred court, and sometimes the bailiff of a hundred. Termes de la Ley; Cow-?1.

HUNDREDWEIGHT. A denomination of weight containing, according to the English system, 112 pounds; but in this country, generally, it consists of 100 pounds avoirdupois.

HUNG JURY. A jury so irreconcilably divided in opinion that they cannot agree upon any verdict.

HUNGER. The desire to eat. Hunger is no excuse for larceny; 1 Hale, Pl. Cr. 54; 4 Bla. Comm. 31. As to death from hunger, see Death.

HUNTING. The act of pursuing and taking wild animals; the chase. Commonwealth v. Bailey, 97 S.E. 774, 124 Va. 800. Robinson v. State, 76 S.E. 1061, 11 Ga.App. 847.

HURDEREFERST. A domestic; one of a family.

HURDLE. In English criminal law. A kind of sledge, on which convicted felons were drawn to the place of execution. See Draw, v.

HURRICANE. A storm of great violence or intensity, of which the particular characteristic is the high velocity of the wind. There is naturally no exact measure to distinguish between an ordinary storm and a hurricane, but the wind should reach a velocity of at least 50 or 60 miles an hour to be called by the latter name, or, as expressed in some of the cases, it should be sufficient to "throw down buildings." A hurricane is properly a circular storm in the nature of a cyclone. Pelican Ins. Co. v. Troy Co-op. Ass'n, 13 S.W. 980, 77 Tex. 225; Queen Ins. Co. v. Hudnut Co., 8 Ind.App. 22, 35 N.E. 397; George A. Hoagland and Co. v. Insurance Co. of North America, 131 Neb. 105, 267 N.W. 239, 241.

HURST, HYRST, HERST, or HIRST. A wood or grove of trees. Co. Litt. 4b.

HURT. In such phrases as "to the hurt or annoyance of another," or "hurt, molested, or restrained in his person or estate," this word is not restricted to physical injuries, but includes also mental pain, as well as discomfort or annoyance. Thurston v. Whitney, 2 Cush., Mass., 110.

HURTARDUS, or HURTUS. A ram or wether.

HURTO. In Spanish law. Theft. White, New Recop. b. 2, tit. 20.

HUSBAND. A married man; one who has a lawful wife living. The correlative of "wife." People v. Snyder, 353 Ill. 184, 187 N.E. 158, 160, 88 A.L.R. 1012.

Etymologically, the word signified the "house bond;" the man who, according to Saxon ideas and institutions, held around him the family, for whom he was in law responsible.

HUSBAND AND WIFE. One of the great domestic relationships; being that of a man and woman lawfully joined in marriage, by which, at common law, the legal existence of a wife is incorporated with that of her husband.

• HUSBAND LAND. In old Scotch law. A quantity of land containing commonly six acres. Skene.

HUSBAND OF A SHIP. See, Ship's Husband.

HUSBANDMAN. A farmer; a cultivator or tiller of the ground. The word "farmer" is colloquially used as synonymous with "husbandman," but originally meant a tenant who cultivates leased ground.

HUSBANDRIA. In old English law. Husbandry. Dyer, (Fr. Ed.) 35b.

HUSBANDRY. Agriculture; cultivation of the soil for food; farming, in the sense of operating land to raise provisions. Simons v. Lovell, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 516; State ex rel. Boynton v. Wheat Farming Co., 137 Kan. 697, 22 P.2d 1093.

HUSBREC• In Saxon law. The crime of housebreaking or burglary. Crabb, Eng. Law, 59, 308.

HUSCARLE. In old English law. A house servant or domestic; a man of the household. Spelman. A king's vassal, thane, or baron; an earl's man or vassal. A term of frequent occurrence in Domesday Book.

HUSFASTNE. He who holds house and land. Bract. L 3, t. 2, c. 10.

HUSGABLUM. In old records. House rent; or a tax or tribute laid upon a house. Cowell; Blount.

HUSH-MONEY. A colloquial expression to designate a bribe to hinder information; pay to secure silence.

HUSTINGS. Council; court; tribunal. Apparently so called from being held within a building, at a time when other courts were held in the open air. It was a local court. The county court in the city of London bore this name. There were hustings at York, Winchester, Lincoln, and in other places similar to the London hustings. Also the raised place from which candidates for seats in parliament address the constituency, on the occasion of their nomination. Wharton.

In Virginia, some of the local courts are called "hustings," as in the city of Richmond. Smith v. Corn., 6 Grat. Va., 696. The municipal courts established (in Virginia) in any city of over, 5,000 inhabitants were at one time called hustings courts. Cent. Dict.

HUTESIUM ET CLAMOR. Hue and cry. See Hue and Cry.

HUTILAN. Taxes. Mon. Angl. 1. 586.

HWATA, HVVATUNG. In old English law. Augury; divination.

HYBERNAGIUM. In old English law. The season for sowing winter grain, between Michaelmas and Christmas. The land on which such grain was sown. The grain itself; winter grain or winter corn. Cowell.

HYBRID. A mongrel; an animal formed of the union of different species, or different genera; also (metaphorically) a human being born of the union of persons of different races.

HYD. In old English law. Hide; skin. A measure of land, containing according to some, a hundred acres, which quantity is also assigned to it in the Dialogus de Scaccario. It seems, however, that the hide varied in different parts of the kingdom.

HYDAGE. See Hidage.

HYDROMETER. An instrument for measuring the density of fluids. Being immersed in fluids, as in water, brine, beer, brandy, etc., it determines the proportion of their density, or their specific gravity, and thence their quality. See Rev. St. U. S. § 2918 (19 U.S.C.A. § 390).

HYDROSTATIC TEST. A method of determining whether or not a deceased infant was born alive, involving the removal of the lungs and the placing of them in a vessel of water; if the infant had breathed, the air in the lungs will cause them to float, though they may also float if decomposition has set in and gas has formed in the body. Morgan v. State, 256 S.W. 433, 148 Term. 417. Called, also, "docimasia pulmonum."

HYEMS, HIEMS. Lat. In the civil law. Winter. Dig. 43, 20, 4, 34. Written, in some of the old books, "uems." Fleta, lib. 2, c. 73, §§ 16, 18.

HYGIENE. A system of principles or rules designed for the promotion of health. Lunn v. City of Auburn, 110 Me. 241, 85 A. 893, 894.

HYPNOTIC OR SOMNIFACIENT DRUGS. Drugs that produce sleep. State v. Jordan, 171 So.2d 650, 653, 247 La. 367.

HYPNOTISM. A condition, artificially produced, in which the person hypnotized, apparently asleep, acts in obedience to will of operator. Louis v. State, 24 Ala.App. 120, 130 So. 904, 905.

HYPOBOLUM. In the civil law. The name of the bequest or legacy given by the husband to his wife, at his death, above her dowry.

HYPOCHONDRIA; HYPOMANIA. See Insanity.

HYPOSTASIS. In medical jurisprudence. (1) The morbid deposition of a sediment of any kind in the body. (2) A congestion or flushing of the blood vessels, as in varicose veins. Post-mortem hypostasis, a peculiar lividity of the cadaver.

HYPOTHEC. In Scotland, the term "hypothec" is used to signify the landlord's right which, independently of any stipulation, he has over the crop and stocking of his tenant. It gives a security to the landlord over the crop of each year for the rent of that year, and over the cattle and stocking on the farm for the current year's rent, which last continues for three months after the last conventional term for the payment of the rent. Bell.

HYPOTHECA. "Hypotheca" was a term of the Roman 'law, and denoted a pledge or mortgage. As distinguished from the term "pignus," in the same law, it denoted a mortgage, whether of lands or of goods, in which the subject in pledge remained in the possession of the mortgagor or debtor; whereas in the pignus the mortgagee or creditor was in the possession. Such an hypotheca might be either express or implied; express, where the parties upon the occasion of a loan entered into express agreement to that effect; or implied, as, e. g., in the case of the stock and utensils of a farmer, which were subject to the landlord's right as a creditor for rent; whence the Scotch law of hypothec.

The word has suggested the term "hypothecate," as used in the mercantile and maritime law of England. Thus, under the factor's act, goods are frequently said to be "hypothecated;" and a captain is said to have a right to hypothecate his vessel for necessary repairs. Brown. See Mackeld. Rom. Law, §§ 334-359.

HYPOTHECARIA ACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. An hypothecary action; an action for the enforcement of an hypotheca, or right of mortgage; or to obtain the surrender of the thing mortgaged. Inst. 4, 6, 7; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 356. Adopted in the Civil Code of Louisiana, under the name of "l'action hypothkarie," (translated, "action of mortgage.") Civ. Code La. arts. 1433-1443; Code Prac. La. art. 61.

HYPOTHECARII CREDITORES. Lat. In the civil law. Hypothecary creditors; those who loaned money on the security of an hypotheca, (q. v.) Calvin.

HYPOTHECARY ACTION. The name of an action allowed under the civil law for the enforcement of the claims of a creditor by the contract of hypotheca. Lovell v. Cragin, 136 U.S. 130, 10 Sup.Ct. 1024, 34 L.Ed. 372.

An hypothecary action is a real action, which the creditor brings against the property which has been hypothecated to him by his debtor, in order to have it seized and sold for the payment of his debt. Code Prac.La. art. 61. In the hypothecary action proper, there is no pursuit of the person; the thing mortgaged is the debtor, and the action is directed against it. In this sense, the action is real. Wisdom v. Parker, 31 La. Ann. 52.

HYPOTHECATE. To pledge a thing without delivering the possession of it to the pledgee. "The master, when abroad, and in the absence of the owner, may hypothecate the ship, freight, and cargo, to raise money requisite for the completion of the voyage." 3 Kent, Comm. 171. Ogden v. Lathrop, 31 N.Y.Super.Ct. 651.

HYPOTHECATION. The term borrowed from the civil law. In so far as it is naturalized in English and American law, it means a contract of mortgage or pledge in which the subject-matter is not delivered into the possession of the pledgee or pawnee; or, conversely, a conventional right existing in one person over specific property of another, which consists in the power to cause a sale of the same, though it be not in his possession, in order that a specific claim of the creditor may be satisfied out of the proceeds. Whitney v. Peay, 24 Ark. 27.

The term is frequently used in our textbooks and reports, particularly upon the law of bottomry and maritime liens; thus a vessel is said to be hypothecated for the demand of one who has advanced money for supplies.

In the common law, there are but few, if any, cases of hypothecation, in the strict sense of the civil law; that is, a pledge without possession by the pledgee. The nearest approaches, perhaps, are cases of bottomry bonds and claims of materialmen, and of seamen for wages; but these are liens and privileges, rather than hypothecations: Story, Bailm. § 288.

HYPOTHECATION BOND. A bond given in the contract of bottomry or respondentia.

HYPOTHEQUE. In French law. Hypothecation; a mortgage on real property; the right vested in a creditor by the assignment to him of real estate as security for the payment of his debt, whether or not it be accompanied by possession. See Civ. Code La. art. 3397.

It corresponds to the mortgage of real property in English law, and is a real charge, following the property into whosesoever hands it comes. It may be Wale, as in the case of the charge which the state has over the lands of its accountants, or which a married woman has over those of her husband; judicicare, when it is the result of a judgment of a court of justice; and conventionelle, when it is the result of an agreement of the parties. Brown.

HYPOTHESIS. A supposition, assumption, or theory; a theory set up by the prosecution, on a criminal trial, or by the defense, as an explanation of the facts in evidence, and a ground for inferring guilt or innocence, as the case may be, or as indicating a probable or possible motive for the crime.

HYPOTHETICAL QUESTION. A combination of assumed or proved facts and circumstances, stated in such form as to constitute a coherent and specific situation or state of facts, upon which the opinion of an expert is asked, by way of evidence on a trial. Howard v. People, 185 Ill. 552, 57 N.E. 441; State v. Smoak, 213 N.C. 79, 195 S.E. 72, 81.

It should be so framed as to recite all the facts in evidence which are relevant to the formation of an opinion and then, assuming the facts recited to be true, the witness should be asked whether he is able to form an opinion therefrom and if so to state his opinion. McMurrey v. State, 145 Tex.Cr.R. 439, 168 S.W.2d 858, 860.

HYPOTHETICAL YEARLY TENANCY. The basis, in England, of rating lands and hereditaments to the poor-rate, and to other rates and taxes that are expressed to be leviable or assessable in like manner as the poor-rate.

HYRNES. In old English law. A parish.

HYSTERIA. A paroxysmal disease or disorder of the nervous system, more common in females than males, not originating in any anatomical lesion, due to psychic rather than physical causes, and attended, in the acute or convulsive form, by extraordinary manifestations of secondary effects of extreme nervousness.

Hysteria is a state in which ideas control the body and produce morbid changes in its functions. Mcebius. A special psychic state, characterized by symptoms which can also be produced or reproduced by suggestion, and which can be treated by psychotherapy or persuasion, hysteric and hypnotic states being practically equivalent to each other. Babinski. A purely psychic or mental disorder due to hereditary predisposition. Charcot. A state resulting from a psychic lesion or nervous shock, leading to repression or aberration of the sexual instinct. Freud. Hysteria is much more common in women than in men, and was formerly thought to be due to some disorder of the uterus or sexual system; but it is now known that it may occur in men, in children, and in very aged persons of either sex.

In the convulsive form of hysteria, commonly called "hysterics" or "a fit of hysterics," there is nervestorm characterized by loss or abandonment of self-control in the expression of the emotions, particularly grief, by paroxysms of tears or laughter or both together, sensations of constriction as of a ball rising in the throat (globes hystericus), convulsive movements in the chest, pelvis, and abdomen, sometimes leading to a fall with apparent unconsciousness, followed by a relapse into semiunconsciousness or catalepsy. In the non-convulsive forms, all kinds of organic paralyses may be simulated, as well as muscular contractions and spasms, tremor, loss of sensation (anes*thesia)* or exaggerated sensation (hypercesthesia), disturbances of respiration, disordered appetite, accelerated pulse, hemorrhages in the skin (stigmata), pain, swelling, or even dislocation of the joints, and great amenability to suggestion.

HYSTERO–EPILEPSY. See Epilepsy.

HYSTEROPOTMOL Those who, having been thought dead, had, after a long absence in foreign countries, returned safely home; or those who, having been thought dead in battle, had afterwards unexpectedly escaped from their enemies and returned home. These, among the Romans, were not permitted to enter their own houses at the door, but were received at a passage opened in the roof. Enc. Lond.

HYSTEROTOMY. The Caesarean operation. See Caesarean Section.

HYTHE, In English law. A port, wharf, or small haven to embark or land merchandise at. Cowell; Blount.

I

I. The initial letter of the word "Instituta," used by some civilians in citing the Institutes of Justinian. Tayl. Civil Law, 24.

I. C. C. Interstate Commerce Commission; Indian Claims Commission.

I—CTUS. An abbreviation for "jurisconsultus," one learned in the law; a jurisconsult.

I. E. An abbreviation for "id est," that is; that is to say.

I 0 U. A memorandum of debt, consisting of these letters, ("I owe you,") a sum of money, and the debtor's signature, is termed an "I 0 U." Kinney v. Flynn, 2 R.I. 329.

I. R. S. Internal Revenue Service.

IBERNAGIUM. In old English law. The season for sowing winter corn. Also spelled "hibernaglum" and "hybernagium" (q. v.).

IBI SEMPER DEBET FIERI TRIATIO UBI JURATORES MELIOREM POSSUNT HABERE NOTITIAM. 7 Coke, lb. A trial should always be had where the jurors can be the best informed.

IBIDEM. Lat. In the same place; in the same book; on the same page, etc. Abbreviated to "ibid." or "ib."

ICENI. The ancient name for the people of Suffolk, Norfolk, Cambridgeshire, and Huntingdon. shire, in England.

ICONA. An image, figure, or representation of a thing. Du Cange.

ICTUS. In old English law. A stroke or blow from a club or stone; a bruise, contusion, or swelling produced by a blow from a club or stone, as distinguished from "plaga," (a wound.) Fleta, lib. 1, c. 41, § 3.

ICTUS ORBIS. In medical jurisprudence. A maim, a bruise, or swelling; any hurt without cutting the skin. When the skin is cut, the injury is called a "wound." Bract. lib. 2, tr. 2, cc. 5, 24.

ID CERTUM EST QUOD CERTUM REDDI POTEST. That is certain which can be made certain. 2 B1.Comm. 143; 1 B1.Comm. 78; 4 Kent, Comm. 462; Broom, Max. 624.

ID CERTUM EST QUOD CERTUM REDDI POTEST, SED ID MAGIS CERTUM EST QUOD DE SEMETIPSO EST CERTUM. That is certain which can be made certain, but that is more certain which is certain of itself. 9 Coke, 47a.

ID EST. Lat. That is. Commonly abbreviated "i. e."

ID PERFECTUM EST QUOD EX OMNIBUS SUIS PARTIBUS CONSTAT. That is perfect which consists of all its parts. 9 Coke 9.

ID POSSUMUS QUOD DE JURE POSSUMUS. Lane, 116. We may do only that which by law we are allowed to do.

ID QUOD EST MAGIS REMOTUM, NON TRAHIT AD SE QUOD EST MAGIS JUNCTUM, SED E CONTRARIO IN OMNI CASU. That which is more remote does not draw to itself that which is nearer, but the contrary in every case. Co. Litt. 164.

ID QUOD NOSTRUM EST SINE FACTO NOSTRO AD ALIUM TRANSFERRI NON POTEST. That which is ours cannot be transferred to another without our act. Dig. 50, 17, 11.

ID SOLUM NOSTRUM QUOD DEBITIS DEDUCTIS NOSTRUM EST. That only is ours which remains to us after deduction of debts. Tray. Lat. Max. 227.

IDEM. Lat. The same. According to Lord Coke, "idem" has two significations, sc., idem syllabus seu verbis, (the same in syllabus or words,) and idem re et sense, (the same in substance and in sense.) 10 Coke, 124a.

In Old Practice. The said, or aforesaid; said, aforesaid. Distinguished from "prcedictus" in old entries, though having the same general signification. Townsh. P1.15, 16.

IDEM AGENS ET PATIENS ESSE NON POTEST. Jenk. Cent. 40. The same person cannot be both agent and patient; e., the doer and person to whom the thing is done.

IDEM EST FACERE, ET NON PROHIBERE CUM POSSIS; ET QUI NON PROHIBIT, CUM PROHIBERE POSSIT, IN CULPA EST, (AUT JUBET.) 3 Inst. 158. To commit, and not to prohibit when in your power, is the same thing; and he who does not prohibit when he can prohibit is in fault, or does the same as ordering it to be done.

IDEM EST NIHIL DICERE, ET INSUFFICIENTER DICERE. It is the same thing to say nothing, and to say a thing insufficiently. To say a thing in an insufficient manner is the same as not to say it at all. Applied to the plea of a prisoner. 2 Inst. 178.

IDEM EST NON ESSE, ET NON APPARERE. It is the same thing not to be as not to appear. Jenk. Cent. 207. Not to appear is the same thing as not to be. Broom, Max. 165.

IDEM EST NON PROBARI ET NON ESSE; NON DEFICIT JUS, SED PROBATIO. What is not proved and what does not exist are the same; it is not a defect of the law, but of proof.

IDEM EST SCIRE AUT SCIRE DEBERE AUT POTUISSE. To be bound to know or to be able to know is the same as to know.

IDEM PER IDEM. The same for the same. An illustration of a kind that really adds no additional element to the consideration of the question.

IDEM SEMPER ANTECEDENTI PROXIMO REFERTUR. Co. Litt. 685. "The same" is always referred to its next antecedent.

IDEM SONANS. Sounding the same or alike; having the same sound. A term applied to names which are substantially the same, though slightly varied in the spelling, as "Lawrence" and "Lawn ance," and the like. 1 Cromp. & M. 806; 3 Chit. Gen. Pr. 171; Golson v. State, 15 Ala.App. 420, 73 So. 753.

Two names are said to be "idem sonantes" if the attentive ear finds difficulty in distinguishing them when pronounced, or if common and long-continued usage has by corruption or abbreviation made them identical in pronunciation. State v. Griffle, 118 Mo. 188, 23 S.W. 878. The rule of "idem sonans" is that absolute accuracy in spelling names is not required in a legal document or proceedings either civil or criminal; that if the name, as spelled in the document, though different from the correct spelling thereof, conveys to the ear, when pronounced according to the commonly accepted methods, a sound practically identical with the correct name as commonly pronounced, the name thus given is a sufficient identification of the individual referred to, and no advantage can be taken of the clerical error. State v. Hattaway, 180 La. 12, 156 So. 159. But the doctrine of "idem sonans" has been much enlarged by modern decisions, to conform to the growing rule that a variance, to be material, must be such as has misled the opposite party to his prejudice.

IDENTICAL. Exactly the same for all practical purposes. Cam v. Moore, 74 Fla. 77, 76 So. 337, 340.

IDENTIFICATION. Proof of identity; the proving that a person, subject, or article before the court is the very same that he or it is alleged, charged, or reputed to be; as where a witness recognizes the prisoner at the bar as the same person whom he saw committing the crime; or where handwriting, stolen goods, counterfeit coin, etc., are recognized as the same which once passed under the observation of the person identifying them. Hall v. Cotton, 167 Ky. 464, 180 S.W. 779, 781, L.R.A.1916C, 1124.

IDENTITAS VERA COLLIGITUR EX MULTITUDINE SIGNORUM. True identity is collected from a multitude of signs. Bac. Max.

IDENTITATE NOMINIS. In English law. An ancient writ (now obsolete) which lay for one taken and arrested in any personal action, and commit. ted to prison, by mistake for another man of the same name. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 267.

IDENTITY. In the Law of Evidence. Sameness; the fact that a subject, person, or thing before a court is the same as it is represented, claimed, or charged to be. Burrill, Circ. Ev. 382, 453, 631, 644.

In Patent Law. Such sameness between two designs, inventions, combinations, etc., as will constitute the one an infringement of the patent granted for the other.

To constitute "identity of invention," and therefore infringement, not only must the result obtained be the same, but, in case the means used for its attainment is a combination of known elements, the elements combined in both cases must be the same, and combined in the same way, so that each element shall perform the same function: provided that the differences alleged are not merely colorable according to the rule forbidding the use of known equivalents. Electric Railroad Signal Co. v. Hall Railroad Signal Co., 114 U.S. 87, 5 Sup.Ct. 1069, 29 L. Ed. 96; Latta v. Shawk, 14 Fed.Cas. 1188. "Identity of design" means sameness of appearance, or, in other words, sameness of effect upon the eye,—not the eye of an expert, but of an ordinary intelligent observer. Smith v. Whitman Saddle Co., 148 U.S. 674, 13 Sup.Ct. 768, 37 L.Ed. 606.

IDEO. Lat. Therefore. Calvin.

IDEO CONSIDERATUM EST. Lat. Therefore it is considered. These were the words used at the beginning of the entry of judgment in an action, when the forms were in Latin. They are also used as a name for that portion of the record.

IDEOT. An old form for idiot (q. v.).

IDES. A division of time among the Romans. In March, May, July, and October, the Ides were on the 15th of the month; in the remaining months, on the 13th. This method of reckoning is still retained in the chancery of Rome, and in the calendar of the breviary. Wharton.

Under the word "Ides" in Bouvier's Law Diet., Rawle's 3d Rev., p. 1486, will be found a complete table of the calends, nones, and ides.

IDIOCHIRA. Graeco-Lat. In the civil law. An instrument privately executed, as distinguished from such as were executed before a public officer. Cod. 8, 18, 11; Calvin.

IDIOCY, IDIOPATHIC INSANITY. See Insanity.

IDIOPATHIC DISEASE. A morbid state or condition not preceded or occasioned by any other disease. Christ v. Pacific Mutual Life Ins. Co., 231 Ill.App. 439.

IDIOT. A person who has been without understanding from his nativity, and whom the law, therefore, presumes never likely to attain any. Shelf. Lun. 2. See Insanity. State v. Haner, 186 Iowa, 1259, 173 N.W. 225; Jones v. Commonwealth, 154 Ky. 752, 159 S.W. 568, 569.

IDIOTA. In the Civil Law. An unlearned, illiterate, or simple person. Calvin. A private man; one not in office.

In Common Law. An idiot or fool,

IDIOTA INQUIRENDO, WRIT DE. This is the name of an old writ which directs the sheriff to inquire whether a man be an idiot or not. The inquisition is to be made by a jury of twelve men. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 232. And, if the man were found an idiot, the profits of his lands and the custody of his person might be granted by the king to any subject who had interest enough to obtain them. 1 Bl.Comm. 303.

IDONEUM SE FACERE; IDONEARE SE. To purge one's self by oath of a crime of which one is accused.

IDONEUS. Lat. In the civil and common law. Sufficient; competent; fit or proper; responsible; unimpeachable. Idoneus homo, a responsible or solvent person; a good and lawful man. Sufficient; adequate; satisfactory. Idonea cautio, sufficient security.

IDONIETAS. In old English law. Ability or fitness (of a parson). Artic. Cleri, c. 13.

IF. In deeds and wills, this word, as a rule, implies a condition precedent, unless it be controlled by other words. 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 809, § 2152; Sutton v. West, 77 N.C. 431. Hughes v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., 297 N.Y.S. 116, 122, 163 Misc. 31.

IFUNGIA. In old English law. The finest white bread, formerly called "cocked bread." Blount.

IGLISE. L. Fr. A church. Kelham. Another form of "eglise."

IGNIS JUDICIUM. Lat. The old judicial trial by fire. Blount.

IGNITEGIUM. In old English law. The curfew, or evening bell. Cowell. See Curfew.

IGNOMINY. Public disgrace; infamy; reproach; dishonor. Ignominy is the opposite of esteem. Wolff, § 145. See Brown v. Kingsley, 38 Iowa 220.

IGNORAMUS. Lat. "We are ignorant;" "We ignore it." Formerly the grand jury used to write this word on bills of indictment when, after having heard the evidence, they thought the accusation against the prisoner was groundless, intimating that, though the facts might possibly be true, the truth did not appear to them; but now they usually write in English the words "Not a true bill," or "Not found," if that is their verdict; but they are still said to ignore the bill. Brown.

IGNORANCE. The want or absence of knowledge.

Ignorance of law is want of knowledge or acquaintance with the laws of the land in so far as they apply to the act, relation, duty, or matter under consideration. Ignorance of fact is want of knowledge of some fact or facts constituting or relating to the subject-matter in hand. Marshall v. Coleman, 187 Ill. 556, 58 N.E. 628.

Ignorance is not a state of the mind in the sense in which sanity and insanity are. When the mind is ignorant of a fact, its condition still remains sound; the power of thinking, of judging, of willing, is just as complete before communication of the fact as after ; the essence or texture, so to speak, of the mind, is not, as in the case of insanity, affected or impaired. Ignorance of a particular fact consists in this : that the mind, although sound and capable of healthy action, has never acted upon the fact in question, because the subject has never been brought to the notice of the perceptive faculties. Meeker v. Boylan, 28 N.J.Law, 274.

Synonyms

"Ignorance" and "error" or "mistake" are not convertible terms. The former is a lack of information or absence of knowledge; the latter, a misapprehension or confusion of information, or a mistaken supposition of the possession of knowledge. Error as to a fact may imply ignorance of the truth; but ignorance does not necessarily imply error. Cuibreath v. Culbreath, 7 Ga. 70, 50 Am.Dec. 375.

General

Culpable ignorance is that which results from a failure to exercise ordinary care to acquire knowledge, and knowledge which could be acquired by the exercise of ordinary care is by law imputed to the person and he is held to have constructive knowledge. Luck v. Buffalo Lakes, Tex. Civ.App., 144 S.W.2d 672, 676.

Essential ignorance is ignorance in relation to some essential circumstance so intimately connected with the matter in question, and which so influences the parties, that it induces them to act in the business. Poth. Vente, nn. 3, 4; 2 Kent, Comm. 367.

Nonessential or accidental ignorance is that which has not of itself any necessary connection with the business in question, and which is not the true consideration for entering into the contract.

Involuntary ignorance is that which does not proceed from choice, and which cannot be overcome by the use of any means of knowledge known to a person and within his power; as the ignorance of a law which has not yet been promulgated.

Voluntary ignorance exists when a party might, by taking reasonable pains, have acquired the necessary knowledge. For example, every man might acquire a knowledge of the laws which have been promulgated. Doct. & Stud. 1, 46; Plowd. 343.

IGNORANTIA. Lat. Ignorance; want of knowledge. Distinguished from mistake, (error,) or wrong conception. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 178; Dig. 22, 6. Divided by Lord Coke into ignorantia facti (ignorance of fact) and ignorantia juris (ignorance of law). And the former, he adds, is twofold—lectionis et linquce (ignorance of reading and ignorance of language). 2 Coke, 3b.

IGNORANTIA EORUM QUIE QUIS SCIRE TENETUR NON EXCUSAT. Ignorance of those things which one is bound to know excuses not. Hale, P. C. 42; Broom, Max. 267.

IGNORANTIA FACTI EXCUSAT. Ignorance of fact excuses or is a ground of relief. 2 Coke, 3b. Acts done and contracts made under mistake or ignorance of a material fact are voidable and relievable in law and equity. 2 Kent, Comm. 491, and notes.

IGNORANTIA FACTI EXCUSAT, IGNORANTIA JURIS NON EXCUSAT. Ignorance of the fact excuses; ignorance of the law excuses not. Every man must be taken to be cognizant of the law; otherwise there is no saying to what extent the excuse of ignorance may not be carried. 1 Coke, 177; Broom, Max. 253.

IGNORANTIA JURIS QUOD QUISQUE TENETUR SCIRE, NEMINE1YI EXCUSAT. Ignorance of the [or a] law, which every one is bound to know, excuses no man. A mistake in point of law is, in criminal cases, no sort of defense. 4 Bl. Comm. 27; 4 Steph.Comm. 81; Broom, Max. 253; 7 Car. & P. 456. And, in civil cases, ignorance of the law, with a full knowledge of the facts, furnishes no ground, either in law or equity, to rescind agreements, or reclaim money paid, or set aside solemn acts of the parties. 2 Kent, Comm. 491, and note.

IGNORANTIA JURIS SUI NON PRIEJUDICAT JURI. Ignorance of one's right does not prejudice the right. Lofft, 552.

IGNORANTIA LEGIS NEMINEM EXCUSAT. Ignorance of law excuses no one. 4 Bouv. Inst. no. 3828; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 111; 7 Watts, 374.

IGNORANTIA PRIESUMITUR UBI SCIENTIA NON PROBATUR. Ignorance is presumed where knowledge is not proved. Bouvier.

IGNORARE LEGIS EST LATA CULPA. To be ignorant of the law is gross neglect. Bouvier.

IGNORATIO ELENCHI. Lat. A term of logic, sometimes applied to pleadings and to arguments on appeal, which signifies a mistake of the question, that is, the mistake of one who, failing to discern the real question which he is to meet and answer, addresses his allegations or arguments to a collateral matter or something beside the point. Case upon the Statute for Distribution, Wythe Va. 309.

IGNORATIS TERMINIS ARTIS, IGNORATUR ET ARS. Where the' terms of an art are unknown, the art itself is unknown also. Co. Litt. 2a.

IGNORE. To be ignorant of, or unacquainted with. To disregard willfully; to refuse to recognize; to decline to take notice of. Cleburne County v. Morton, 69 Ark. 48, 60 S.W. 307.

To reject as groundless, false or unsupported by evidence; as when a grand jury ignores a bill of indictment.

IGNOSCITUR EI QUI SANGUINEM SUUM QUALITER REDEMPTUM VOLUIT. The law holds him excused from obligation who chose to redeem his blood (or life) upon any terms. Whatever a man may do under the fear of losing his life or limbs will not be held binding upon him in law. 1 Bl.Comm. 131.

IKBAL. Acceptance (of a bond, etc.). Wilson's Gloss. Ind.

IKBAL DAWA. Confession of judgment. Wilson's Gloss. Ind.

IKENILD STREET. One of the four great Roman roads in Britain; supposed to be so called from the Iceni.

IKRAH. Compulsion; especially constraint exercised by one person over another to do an illegal act, or to act contrary to his inclination. Wilson's Gloss. Ind.

IKRAR. Agreement, assent, or ratification. Wilson's Gloss. Ind.

IKRAR NAMA. A deed of assent and acknowledgment. Wilson's Gloss. Ind.

ILL. In old pleading. Bad; defective in law; null; naught; the opposite of good or valid.

ILL FAME. Evil repute; notorious bad character. Houses of prostitution, gaming houses, and other such disorderly places are called "houses of ill fame," and a person who frequents them is a person of ill fame. See Boles v. State, 46 Ala. 206.

ILLATA ET INVECTA. Lat. Things brought into the house for use by the tenant were so called, and were liable to the jus hypothecce of Roman law, just as they are to the landlord's right of distress at common law.

ILLEGAL. Not authorized by law; illicit; unlawful; contrary to law; Protest of Downing, 164 Okl. 181, 23 P.2d 173.

Sometimes this term means merely that which lacks authority of or support from law; but more frequently it imports a violation. Etymologically, the word seems to convey the negative meaning only. But in ordinary use it has a severer, stronger signification; the idea of censure or condemnation for breaking law is usually presented. But the law implied in illegal is not necessarily an express statute. Things are called "illegal" for a violation of common-law principles. And the term does not imply that the act spoken of is immoral or wicked; it implies only a breach of the law. Tiedt v. Carstensen, 61 Iowa, 334, 16 N.W. 214.

ILLEGAL CONDITIONS. All those that are impossible, or contrary to law, immoral, or repugnant to the nature of the transaction.

ILLEGAL CONTRACT. An agreement with unlawful object and not merely lacking in valid subject-matter, but made for positively invalid purpose. American-LaFrance & Foamite Industries v. Arlington County, 169 Va. 1, 192 S.E. 758, 761.

ILLEGAL INTEREST. Usury; interest at a higher rate than the law allows. Parsons v. Babcock, 40 Neb. 119, 58 N.W. 726.

ILLEGAL TRADE. Such traffic or commerce as is carried on in violation of the municipal law, or contrary to the law of nations. See Illicit.

ILLEGALITY. That which is contrary to the principles of law, as contradistinguished from mere rules of procedure. It denotes a complete defect in the proceedings. Ex parte Davis, 118 Or. 693, 247 P. 809, 811.

ILLEGITIMACY. The condition before the law, or the social status, of a bastard; the state or condition of one whose parents were not intermarried at the time of his birth.

ILLEGITIMATE. That which is contrary to raw; it is usually applied to bastards, or children born out of lawful wedlock.

The Louisiana Code divided illegitimate children into two classes : (1) Those born from two persons who, at the moment when such children were conceived, could have lawfully intermarried; and (2) those who are born from persons to whose marriage there existed at the time some legal impediment. Both classes, however, could be acknowledged and take by devise. Compton y. Prescott, 12 Rob., La., 56.

ILLEVIABLE. Not leviable; that cannot or ought not to be levied. Cowell.

ILLICENCIATUS. In old English law. Without license. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 5, § 12.

ILLICIT. Not permitted or allowed; prohibited; unlawful; as an illicit trade; illicit intercourse. State v. Miller, 60 Vt. 90, 12 A. 526.

ILLICIT CONNECTION. Unlawful sexual intercourse. State v. King, 9 S.D. 628, 70 N.W. 1046.

ILLICIT COHABITATION. The living together as man and wife of two persons who are not lawfully married, with the implication that they habitually practice fornication. Thomas v. United States, D.C.Mass., 14 F.2d 228, 229.

ILLICIT DISTILLERY. One carried on without a compliance with the provisions of the laws of the United States relating to the taxation of spirituous liquor. U. S. v. Johnson, C.C.Ga., 26 F. 684.

ILLICIT TRADE. Policies of marine insurance usually contain a covenant of warranty against "illicit trade," meaning thereby trade which is forbidden, or declared unlawful, by the laws of the country where the cargo is to be delivered. I Pars. Mar. Ins. 614.

"It is not the same with 'contraband trade,' although the words are sometimes used as synonymous. Illicit or prohibited trade is one which cannot be carried on without a distinct violation of some positive law of the country where the transaction is to take place."

ILLICITE. Lat. Unlawfully. This word has a technical meaning, and is requisite in an indictment where the act charged is unlawful; as in the case of a riot. 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 25, § 96.

ILLICITUM COLLEGIUM. Lat. An illegal corporation.

ILLITERATE. Unlettered; ignorant; unlearned. Generally used of one who cannot read and write. In re Succession of Carroll, 28 La.Ann. 388.

ILLNESS. In insurance law. A disease or ailment of such a character as to affect the general soundness and healthfulness of the system seriously, and not a mere temporary indisposition which does not tend to undermine or weaken the constitution of the insured. Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. Sellers, 54 Ind.App. 326, 102 N.E. 894, 897. Zogg v. Bankers' Life Co. of Des Moines, Iowa, C.C.A.W.Va., 62 F.2d 575, 578.

ILLOCABLE. Incapable of being placed out or hired.

ILLUD. Lat. That.

ILLUD, QUOD ALIAS LICITUM NON EST, NECESSITAS FACIT LICITUM; ET NECESSITAS INDUCIT PRIVILEGIUM QUOAD JURA PRIVATA. Bac. Max. That which is otherwise not permitted, necessity permits; and necessity makes a privilege as to private rights.

ILLUD, QUOD ALTERI UNITUR, EXTINGUITUR, NEQUE AMPLIUS PER SE VACARE LICET. Godol. Ecc. Law, 169. That which is united to another is extinguished, nor can it be any more independent.

ILLUSION. In medical jurisprudence. An image or impression in the mind, excited by some external object addressing itself to one or more of the senses, but which, instead of corresponding with the reality, is perverted, distorted, or wholly mistaken, the error being attributable to the imagination of the observer, not to any defect in the organs of sense. See Hallucination, and see "Delusion," under Insanity.

ILLUSORY. Deceiving by false appearances; nominal, as distinguished from substantial; fallacious; illusive. Bolles v. Toledo Trust Co., 144 Ohio St. 195, 58 N.E.2d 381, 390.

ILLUSORY APPOINTMENT. Formerly the appointment of a merely nominal share of the property to one of the objects of a power, in order to escape the rule that an exclusive appointment could not be made unless it was authorized by the instrument creating the power, was considered illusory and void in equity. But this rule has been abolished in England. (1 Wm. IV. c. 46; 37 & 38 Vict. c. 37.) Sweet. Brown v. Fidelity Union Trust Co., 126 N.J.Eq. 406, 9 A.2d 322.

ILLUSORY APPOINTMENT ACT. The statute 1 Wm. IV. c. 46. This statute enacts that no appointment made after its passing, (July 16, 1830,) in exercise of a power to appoint property, real or personal, among several objects, shall be invalid, or impeached in equity, on the ground that an unsubstantial, illusory, or nominal share only was thereby appointed, or left unappointed, to devolve upon any one or more of the objects of such power; but that the appointment shall be valid in equity, as at law. See, too, 37 & 38 Vict. c. 37. Wharton.

ILLUSTRIOUS. The prefix to the title of a prince of the blood in England.

IMAGINE. In English law. In cases of treason the law makes it a crime to imagine the death of the king. But, in order to complete the crime, this act of the mind must be demonstrated by some overt act. The terms "imagining" and "compassing" are in this connection synonymous. 4 Bl. Comm. 78.

IMAN, IMAM, or IMAUM. A Mohammedan prince having supreme spiritual as well as temporal power; a regular priest of the mosque.

IMBARGO. An old form of "embargo," (q. v.) St. 18 Car. II. c. 5.

IMBASING OF MONEY. The act of mixing the specie with an alloy below the standard of sterling, 1 Hale, P. C. 102.

IMBECILITY. See Insanity.

IMBEZZLE. An occasional or obsolete form of "embezzle" (q. v.).

IMBLADARE. In old English law. To plant or sow grain. Bract. fol. 176b.

IMBRACERY. See Embracery.

IMBROCUS. A brook, gutter, or water-passage. Cowell.

IMITATION. The making of one thing in the similitude or likeness of another; as, counterfeit coin is said to be made "in imitation" of the genuine. Wagner v. Daly, 67 Hun. 477, 22 N.Y.S. 493.

An imitation of a trade-mark is that which so far resembles the genuine trade-mark as to be likely to induce the belief that it is genuine, whether by the use of words or letters similar in appearance or in sound, or by any sign, device, or other means.

The test of "colorable imitation" is, not whether a difference may be recognized between the names of two competing articles when placed side by side, but whether the difference will be recognized by the purchaser with no opportunity for comparison. The Best Foods v. Hemphill Packing Co., D.C.Del., 5 F.2d 355, 357.

IMMATERIAL. Not material, essential, or necessary; not important or pertinent; not decisive; of no substantial consequence; without weight; of no significance. State v. Cordaro, 211 Iowa 224, 233 N.W. 51, 53.

IMMATERIAL AVERMENT. An averment alleging with needless particularity or unnecessary circumstances what is material and necessary, and which might properly have been stated more generally, and without such circumstances and particulars; or, in other words, a statement of unnecessary particulars in connection with and as descriptive of what is material. Dunlap v. Kelly, 105 Mo.App. 1, 78 S.W. 664; Bulova v. E. L. Barnett, Inc., 111 Misc. 150, 181 N.Y.S. 247, 250.

IMMATERIAL FACTS. Those which are not essential to the right of action or defense.

IMMATERIAL ISSUE. In pleading. An issue taken on an immaterial point; that is, a point not proper to decide the action. Steph. Pl. 99, 130; 2 Tidd, Pr. 921.

IMMATERIAL VARIANCE. Discrepancy between the pleading and proof of a character so slight that the adverse party cannot say that he was misled thereby. E. B. Ryan Co. v. Russell, 52 Mont. 596, 161 P. 307, 308.

IMMEDIATE. Present; at once; without delay; not deferred by any interval of time.. In this sense, the word, without any very precise signification, denotes that action is or must be taken either instantly or without any considerable loss of time. A reasonable time in view of particular facts and circumstances of case under consideration. Mullins v. Masonic Protective Ass'n, 181 Mo. App. 394, 168 S.W. 843, 844. George v. Aetna Casualty and Surety Co., 121 Neb. 647, 238 N.W. 36, 38. Next in line or relation; directly connected; not secondary or remote. Bunner v. Patti, 343 Mo. 274, 121 S.W.2d 153, 155. Not separated in respect to place; not separated by the intervention of any intermediate object, cause, relation, or right. Thus we speak of an action as prosecuted for the "immediate benefit" of A., of a devise as made to the "immediate issue" of B., etc.

IMMEDIATE CAUSE. The last of a series or chain of causes tending to a given result, and which, of itself, and without the intervention of any further cause, .directly produces the result or event. Deisenrieter v. Kraus-Merkel Malting Co., 72 N.W. 735, 97 Wis. 279; Longabaugh v. Railroad Co., 9 Nev. 271. See, also, Proximate.

A cause may be immediate in this sense, and yet not "proximate ;" and conversely, the proximate cause (that which directly and efficiently brings about the result) may not be immediate. The familiar illustration is that of a drunken man falling into the water and drowning. His intoxication is the proximate cause of his death, if it can be said that he would not have fallen into the water when sober; but the immediate cause of death is suffocation by drowning.

IMMEDIATE CONTROL (of motor vehicle upon approaching or traversing railroad crossing). Such constant control as would enable driver to instantly govern vehicle's movements, including the power to stop within a distance in which such a vehicle, in good mechanical condition, driven by a reasonably skillful driver, and traveling at a lawful rate of speed, could be stopped. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. v. Burton, 125 S.E. 868, 33 Ga. App. 199.

IMMEDIATE DESCENT. See Descent.

IMMEDIATE NOTICE. As required by policy as for proof of loss means within a reasonable time. Lydon v. New York Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 89 F.2d 78, 82.

IMMEDIATELY. Without interval of time, without delay, straightway, or without any delay or lapse of time. Drumbar v. Jeddo-Highland Coal Co., 155 Pa.Super. 57, 37 A.2d 25, 27.

The words, "immediately" and "forthwith" have the same meaning. They are stronger than the expression "within a reasonable time" and imply prompt, vigorous action without any delay. Alsam Holding Co. v. Consolidated Taxpayers' Mut. Ins. Co., 4 N.Y.S.2d 498, 505, 167 Mac. 732.

IMMEMORIAL. Beyond human memory; time out of mind.

IMMEMORIAL POSSESSION. In Louisiana. Possession of which no man living has seen the beginning, and the existence of which he has learned from his elders. Civ.Code La. art. 766.

IMMEMORIAL USAGE. A practice which has existed time out of mind; custom; prescription. Miller v. Garlock, 8 Barb. (N.Y.) 154.

IMMEUBLES. Fr. These are, in French law, the immovables of English law. Things are immeubles from any one of three causes: (1) From their own nature, e. g., lands and houses; (2) from their destination, e. g., animals and instruments of agriculture when supplied by the landlord; or (3) by the object to which they are annexed, e. g., easements. Brown.

IMMIGRATION. The coming into a country of foreigners for purposes of permanent residence. The correlative term "emigration" denotes the act of such persons in leaving their former country.

IMMINENT. Near at hand; mediate rather than immediate; close rather than touching; impending; on the point of happening; threatening; menacing; perilous. Furlow v. State, 72 Fla. 464, 73 So. 362; Jaroniec v. C. O. Hasselbarth, Inc., 228 N.Y.S. 302, 304, 223 App.Div. 182.

IMMINENT DANGER. In relation to homicide in self-defense, this term means immediate danger, such as must be instantly met, such as cannot be guarded against by calling for the assistance of others or the protection of the law. State v. Smith, 43 Or. 109, 71 P. 973. Or, as otherwise defined, such an appearance of threatened and impending injury as would put a reasonable and prudent man to his instant defense. State v. Fontenot, 50 La.Ann. 537, 23 So. 634, 69 Am.St.Rep. 455.

IMMINENTLY DANGEROUS ARTICLE. One that is reasonably certain to place life or limb in peril. Employers' Liability Assur. Corporation v. Columbus McKinnon Chain Co., D.C.N.Y., 13 F.2d 128.

IMMISCERE. Lat. In the civil law. To mix or mingle with; to meddle with; to join with. Calvin.

IMMITTERE. Lat. In the Civil Law. To put or let into, as a beam into a wall. Calvin.; Dig. 50, 17, 242, 1.

In old English law, to put cattle on a common. Fleta, lib. 4, c. 20, § 7.

IMMOBILIA SITUM SEQUUNTUR. Immovable things follow their site or position; are governed by the law of the place where they are fixed. 2 Kent, Comm. 67. Cf. Mobilia Sequuntur Personam.

IMMOBILIS. Lat. Immovable. Immobilia or res immobiles, immovable things, such as lands and buildings. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 160.

IMMODERATE. Exceeding just, usual, or suitable bounds; not within reasonable limits. United States v. Oglesby Grocery Co., D.C.Ga., 264 F. 691, 695; People v. McMurchy, 249 Mich. 147, 228 N.W. 723, 726.

IMMORAL. Contrary to good morals; inconsistent with the rules and principles of morality; inimical to public welfare according to the standards of a given community, as expressed in law or otherwise. Exchange Nat. Bank of Fitzgerald v. Henderson, 139 Ga. 260, 77 S.E. 36, 37, 51 L.R.A. (N.S.) 549. Morally evil; impure; unprincipled; vicious; or dissolute. U. S. v. One Book, Entitled "Contraception," by Marie C. Stopes, D.C.N.Y., 51 F.2d 525, 527.

IMMORAL CONDUCT. Within rules authorizing disbarment of attorney is that conduct which is willful, flagrant, or shameless, and which shows a moral indifference to the opinions of the good and respectable members of the community. Warkentin v. Kleinwachter, 166 Okl. 218, 27 P.2d 160.

IMMORAL CONSIDERATION. One contrary to good morals, and therefore invalid. Contracts based upon an immoral consideration are generally void.

IMMORAL CONTRACTS. Contracts founded upon considerations contra bonos mores are void.

IMMORALITY. That which is contra bonos mores. See Immoral.

IMMOVABLES. In the civil law. Property which, from its nature, destination, or the object to which it is applied, cannot move itself, or be removed. Breaux v. Ganucheau, 3 La.App. 481, 482; Scott v. Brennan, 3 La.App. 452, 453.

Immovable things are, in general, such as cannot either move themselves or be removed from one place to another. But this definition, strictly speaking, is applicable only. to such things as are immovable by their own nature, and not to such as are so only by the disposition of the law.

IMMUNITY. Exemption, as from serving in an office, or performing duties which the law generally requires other citizens to perform. Ex parte Levy, 43 Ark. 54, 51 Am.Rep. 550. Freedom from duty or penalty. Leatherwood v. Hill, 10 Ariz. 243, 89 P. 521, 523. The term aptly describes an exemption from taxation. Buchanan v. Knoxville & 0. R. Co., C.C.A.Tenn., 71 F. 324, 334, 18 C.C.A. 122. A particular privilege. Webster, Dict.; Sacramento Orphanage, etc., Home v. Chambers, 25 Cal.App. 536, 144 P. 317, 319.

IMPAIR. To weaken, to make worse, to lessen in power, diminish, or relax, or otherwise affect in an injurious manner. Davey v. IEtna L. Ins. Co., C.C.N.J., 20 F. 482; State ex rel. Woman's Ben. Ass'n v. Port of Palm Beach Dist., 121 Fla. 746, 164 So. 851, 856.

IMPAIRING THE OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS. A law which impairs the obligation of a contract is one which renders the contract in itself less valuable or less enforceable, whether by changing its terms and stipulations, its legal qualities and conditions, or by regulating the remedy for its enforcement. City of Indianapolis v. Robison, 186 Ind. 660, 117 N.E. 861.

To "impair the obligation of a contract" within Const. U.S. art. 1, § 10, is to weaken it, lessen its value, or make it worse in any respect or in any degree, and any law which changes the intention and legal effect of the parties, giving to one a greater and to the other a less interest or benefit, or which imposes conditions not included in the contract or dispenses with the performance of those included, impairs the obligation of the contract. O'Connor v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., 97 Conn. 8, 115 A. 484, 486.

A statute "impairs the obligation of a contract" when by its terms it nullifies or materially changes existing contract obligations. Oil Fork Development Co. v. Huddleston, 202 Ky. 261, 259 S.W. 334, 335; McNee v. Wall, D.C.Fla., 4 F.Supp. 496, 498.

The word "impair" means, according to the standard writers in our language, simply "to diminish; to injure; to make worse," etc. It is remarkable that in framing the provision of the federal Constitution providing that no law should be passed, "impairing the obligation of any contract," the convention did not use the term "lessen" or "decrease" or "destroy," but one more comprehensive, which prohibited making worse in any respect a contract legitimate in its creation. The object, then, of its provision, may have been to establish an important principle, and that was the entire inviolability of contracts. Blair v. Williams, 14 Ky. (4 Litt.) 34, 35; Lapsley v. Brashears, 14 Ky. (4 Litt.) 47, 69.

See 2 Story, Const. §§ 1374-1399; 1 Kent, Comm. 413-422; Pom. Const. Law; Black, Const. Law (3d Ed.) p. 720 et seq.

IMPALARE. To impound. Du Cange.

IMPANEL. In English practice. To impanel a jury signifies the entering by the sheriff upon a piece of parchment, termed a "panel," the names of the jurors who have been summoned to appear in court on a certain day to form a jury of the country to hear such matters as may be brought before them. Brown.

In American practice. Besides the meaning above given, "impanel" signifies the act of the clerk of the court in making up a list of the jurors who have been selected for the trial of a particular cause. All the steps of ascertaining who shall be the proper jurors to sit in the trial of a particular case up to the final formation. People v. Poole, 284 Ill. 39, 119 N.E. 916.

Impaneling has nothing to do with drawing, selecting, or swearing jurors, but means simply making the list of those who have been selected. Porter v. People, 7 How.Prac. (N.Y.) 441; State ex rel. Green v. Pearson, 153 Fla. 314, 14 So.2d 565, 567.

IMPARCARE. In old English law. To impound. Reg. Orig. 92b. To shut up, or confine in prison. Inducti sunt in carcerem et imparcati, they were carried to prison and shut up. Bract. fol. 124.

IMPARGAMENTUM. The right of impounding cattle.

IMPARL. To have license to settle a litigation amicably; to obtain delay for adjustment.

IMPARLANCE. In early practice, imparlance meant time given to either of the parties to an action to answer the pleading of the other. It thus amounted to a continuance of the action to a further day. Literally the term signified leave given to the parties to talk together; i. e., with a view to settling their differences amicably. But in modern practice it denotes a time given to the defendant to plead.

A general imparlance is the entry of a general prayer and allowance of time to plead till the next term, without reserving to the defendant the benefit of any exception; so that after such an imparlance the defendant cannot object to the jurisdiction of the court, or plead any matter in abatement. This kind of imparlance is always from one term to another. Colby v. Knapp, 13 N.H. 175; Mack v. Lewis, 67 Vt. 383, 31 Atl. 888.

A general special imparlance contains a saving of all exceptions whatsoever, so that the defendant after this may plead not only in abatement, but he may also plead a plea which affects the jurisdiction of the court, as privilege. He cannot, however, plead a tender, and that he was always ready to pay, because by craving time, he admits that he is not ready, and so falsifies his plea.

A special imparlance reserves to the defendant all exceptions to the writ, bill, or count; and therefore after it the defendant may plead in abatement, though not to the jurisdiction of the court. 1 Tidd, Pr. 462, 463.

IMPARSONEE. L. Fr. In ecclesiastical law. One who is inducted and in possession of a benefice. Parson imparsonee (persona impersonata). Cowell; Dyer, 40.

IMPARTIAL. Favoring neither; disinterested; treating all alike; unbiased; equitable, fair, and just. Evans v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, 107 Cal.App. 372, 290 P. 662, 666.

The provision of the Bill of Rights requiring that the accused shall have a fair trial by an impartial jury, means that the jury must be not partial, not favoring one party more than another, unprejudiced, distinterested, equitable, and just, and that the merits of the case shall not be prejudged. Duncan v. State, 79 Tex.Cr.R. 206, 184 S.W. 195, 196.

IMPARTIAL JURY. Within constitutional provision is one which is of impartial frame of mind at beginning of trial, is influenced only by legal and competent evidence produced during trial, and bases its verdict upon evidence connecting defendant with the commission of the crime charged. Const.U.S. Amend. 6. Durham v. State, 182 Tenn. 577, 188 S.W.2d 555, 558, 160 A.L.R. 746.

For "Fair and Impartial Jury," and "Fair and Impartial Trial," see those titles.

IMPARTIBLE FEUD. See Feudum Individuum.

IMPATRONIZATION. In ecclesiastical law. The act of putting into full possession of a benefice.

IMPEACH. To accuse; to charge a liability upon; to sue. To dispute, disparage, deny, or contradict; as, to impeach a judgment or decree; or as used in the rule that a jury cannot "impeach their verdict." Wolfgram v. Schoepke, 123 Wis. 19, 100 N. W. 1056. To proceed against a public officer for crime or misfeasance, before a proper court, by the presentation of a written accusation called "articles of impeachment."

In the Law of Evidence. To call in question the veracity of a witness, by means of evidence adduced for that purpose, or the adducing of proof that a witness is unworthy of belief. Johnston v. Belk-McKnight Co. of Newberry, 188 S.C. 149, 198 S.E. 395, 399.

IMPEACHMENT. A criminal proceeding against a public officer, before a quasi political court, instituted by a written accusation called "articles of impeachment;" for example, a written accusation by the house of representatives of the United States to the senate of the United States against an officer.

"Impeachment" of the Governor, within the meaning of section 16, art. 6, of the Constitution, is the adoption of articles of impeachment by the House of Representatives, and the presentation thereof to the Senate, and the indication by that body that the same are accepted for the purpose of permitting prosecution thereof, and the impeachment of the Governor operates to suspend him; the duties and emoluments of the office automatically devolving upon the Lieutenant Governor for the remainder of the term or until the disability is removed by the acquittal of the Governor of the charges preferred against him. State v. Chambers, 96 Okl. 78, 220 P. 890, 891, 30 A.L.R. 1144; People ex rel. Robin v. Hayes, 143 N.Y.S. 325, 329, 82 Misc. 165.

In England, a prosecution by the house of commons before the house of lords of a commoner for treason, or other high crimes and misdemeanors, or of a peer for any crime.

Evidence

The adducing of proof that a witness is unworthy of belief. State v. Roybal, 33 N.M. 540, 273 P. 919, 922.

General

Articles of impeachment. The formal written allegation of the causes for an impeachment, answering the same purpose as an indictment in an ordinary criminal proceeding.

Collateral impeachment. See Collateral attack.

Impeachment of annuity. A term sometimes used in English law to denote anything that operates as a hindrance, impediment or obstruction of the making of the profits out of which the annuity is to arise. Pitt v. Williams, 4 Adol. & El. 885.

Impeachment of waste. Liability for waste committed; or a demand or suit for compensation for waste committed upon lands or tenements by a tenant thereof who, having only a leasehold or particular estate, had no right to commit waste. 2 Bl. Comm. 283; Sanderson v. Jones, 6 Fla. 480, 63 Am.Dec. 217.

Impeachment of witness. Adducing proof that a witness who has testified in a cause is unworthy of credit. White v. Railroad Co., 142 Ind. 648, 42 N.E. 456.

IMPECHIARE. To impeach, to accuse, or prosecute for felony or treason.

IMPEDE. To obstruct; hinder; check; delay. Erie R. Co. v. Board of Public Utility Com'rs, 98 A. 13, 19, 89 N.J.L. 57.

IMPEDIATUS. Disabled from mischief by expeditation (q. v.). Cowell.

IMPEDIENS. In old practice. One who hinders; an impedient. The defendant or deforciant in a fine was sometimes so called. Cowell; Blount.

IMPEDIMENTO. In Spanish law. A prohibition to contract marriage, established by law between certain persons.

IMPEDIMENTS. Disabilities, or hindrances to the making of contracts, such as coverture, infancy, want of reason, etc.

In the Civil Law. Bars to marriage.

Absolute impediments are those which prevent the person subject to them from marrying at all, without either the nullity of marriage or its being punishable. Dirimant impediments are those which render a marriage void; as where one of the contracting parties is unable to marry by reason of a prior undissolved marriage. Prohibitive impediments are those which do not render the marriage null, but subject the parties to a punishment. Relative impediments are those which regard only certain persons with respect to each other; as between two particular persons who are related within the prohibited degrees. Bowyer, Mod. Civil Law, 44, 45.

IMPEDITOR. In old English law. A disturber in the action of quare impedit. St. Marlb. c. 12.

IMPENSIE. Lat. In the civil law. Expenses; outlays. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 168; Calvin. Divided into necessary, (necessaries,) useful, (utiles,) and tasteful or ornamental, (voluptuarice.) Dig. 50, 16, 79. See Id. 25, 1.

IMPERATIVE. Mandatory. See Directory.

IMPERATOR. Emperor. The title of the Roman emperors, and also of the Kings of England before the Norman conquest. Cod. 1, 14, 12; 1 BL Comm. 242. See Emperor.

IMPERFECT. As used in various legal compound terms, this word means defective or incomplete; wanting in some legal or formal requisite; wanting in legal sanction or effectiveness; as in speaking of imperfect "obligations," "ownership," "rights," "title," "usufruct," or "war." See those nouns.

IMPERII MAJESTAS EST TUTELIE SALUS. Co. Litt. 64. The majesty of the empire is the safety of its protection.

IMPERITIA. Lat. Unskillfulness; want of skill.

IMPERITIA CULP1E ADNUMERATUR. Want of skill is reckoned as culpa; that is, as blamable conduct or neglect. Dig. 50, 17, 132.

IMPERITIA EST MAXIMA MECHANICORUM PCENA. Unskillfulness is the greatest punishment of mechanics; [that is, from its effect in making them liable to those by whom they are employed.] 11 Coke, 54a. The word "pcena" in some translations is erroneously rendered "fault."

IMPERIUM. The right to command, which includes the right to employ the force of the state to enforce the laws. This is one of the principal attributes of the power of the executive. 1 Toullier, no. 58.

IMPERSONALITAS. Lat. Impersonality. A mode of expression where no reference is made to any person, such as the expression "ut dicitur," (as is said.) Co. Litt. 352b.

IMPERSONALITAS NON CONCLUDIT NEC LIGAT. Co. Litt. 352 b. Impersonality neither concludes nor binds.

IMPERTINENCE. Irrelevancy; the fault of not properly pertaining to the issue or proceeding. The introduction of any matters into a bill, answer, or other pleading or proceeding in a suit, which are not properly before the court for decision, at any particular stage of the suit. Story, Eq. Pl. § 266; Harrison v. Perea, 18 S.Ct. 129, 168 U.S. 311, 42 L.Ed. 478.

In Practice. A question propounded to a witness, or evidence offered or sought to be elicited, is called "impertinent" when it has no logical bearing upon the issue, is not necessarily connected with it, or does not belong to the matter in hand. 1 Whart. Ev. § 20.

On the distinction between pertinency and relevancy, we may quote the following remark of Dr. Wharton : "Relevancy is that which conduces to the proof of a pertinent hypothesis ; a pertinent hypothesis being one which, if sustained, would logically influence the issue."

IMPERTINENT. In Equity Pleading. That which does not belong to a pleading, interrogatory, or other proceeding; out of place; superfluous; irrelevant. Chew v. Eagan, 87 N.J.Eq. 80, 99 A. 611; Bean v. Central Maine Power Co., 133 Me. 9, 173 A. 498, 501.

At Law. A term applied to matter not necessary to constitute the cause of action or ground of defense. Cowp. 683; 5 East, 275; Tucker v. Randall, 2 Mass. 283. It constitutes surplusage, (which see.)

IMPESCARE. In old records. To impeach or accuse. Impescatus, impeached. Blount.

IMPETITIO VASTI. Impeachment of waste, (q. v.)

IMPETRARE. In old English practice. To obtain by request, as a writ or privilege. Bract. fols. 57, 172b. This application of the word seems to be derived from the civil law. Calvin.

IMPETRATION. In old English law. The obtaining anything by petition or entreaty. Particularly, the obtaining of a benefice from Rome by solicitation, which benefice belonged to the disposal of the king or other lay patron. Webster; Cowell.

IMPIER. Umpire (q. v.).

IMPEERMENT. Impairing or prejudicing. Jacob.

IMPIGNORATA. Pledged; given in pledge, (pignori data;) mortgaged. A term applied in Bracton to land. Bract. fol. 20.

IMPIGNORATION. The act of pawning or putting to pledge.

IMPIUS ET CRUDELIS JUDICANDUS EST QUI LIBERTATI NON FAVET. He is to be judged impious and cruel who does not favor liberty. Co. Litt. 124.

IMPLACITARE. Lat. To implead; to sue.

EVIPLEAD. In practice. To sue or prosecute by due course of law. People v. Clarke, 9 N.Y. 368.

IMPLEADED. Sued or prosecuted; used particularly in the titles of causes where there are several defendants; as "A. B., impleaded with C. D."

IMPLEMENTS. Such things as are used or employed for a trade, or furniture of a house. Whatever may supply wants; particularly applied to tools, utensils, vessels, instruments of labor; as, the implements of trade or of husbandry. Goddard v. Chaffee, 2 Allen (Mass.) 395, 79 Am.Dec. 796. Mississippi Road Supply Ca. v. Hester, 185 Miss. 839, 188 So. 281, 287, 124 A.L.R. 574.

IMPLICATA. A term used in mercantile law, derived from the Italian. In order to avoid the risk of making fruitless voyages, merchants have been in the habit of receiving small adventures, on freight, at so much per cent, to which they are entitled at all events, even if the adventure be lost; and this is called "implicata." Wharton.

IMPLICATION. Intendment or inference, as distinguished from the actual expression of a thing in words. In a will, an estate may pass by mere implication, without any express words to direct its course. 2 Bl. Comm. 381.

An inference of something not directly declared, but arising from what is admitted or expressed.

In construing a will conjecture must not be taken for implication; but necessary implication means, not natural necessity, but so strong a probability of intention that an intention contrary to that which is imputed to the testator cannot be supposed. 1 Ves. & B. 466.

"Implication" is also used in the sense of "inference;" e., where the existence of an intention is inferred from acts not done for the sole purpose of communicating it, but for some other purpose. Sweet.

Necessary implication

In construing a will, necessary implication means not natural necessity, but so strong a probability of intention that an intention contrary to that which is imputed to the testator cannot be supposed. Wilkinson v. Adam, 1 Ves. & B. 466; Gilbert v. Craddock, 67 Kan. 346, 72 P. 869.

IMPLIED. This word is used in law as contrasted with "express;" e., where the intention in regard to the subject-matter is not manifested by explicit and direct words, but is gathered by implication or necessary deduction from the circumstances, the general language, or the conduct of the parties.

As to implied "Abrogation," "Agreement," "Assumpsit," "Condition," "Confession," "Consent," "Consideration," "Contract," "Covenant," "Dedication," "Easement," "Invitation," "Malice," "Notice," "Obligation," "Powers," "Trust," "Use," "Waiver," and "Warranty," see those titles.

IMPORTATION. The act of bringing goods and merchandise into a country from a foreign country. Cunard Steamship Co. v. Mellon, 43 S.Ct. 504,, 262 U.S. 100, 67 L.Ed. 894, 27 A.L.R. 1306.

IMPORTED. This word, in general, has the same meaning in the tariff laws that its etymology shows, in porto, to carry in. To "import" is to bear or carry into. An "imported" article is one brought or carried into a country from abroad. The Conqueror, 49 Fed. 99. See Imports.

IMPORTS. Importations; goods or other property imported or brought into the country from a foreign country.

IMPORTUNITY. Pressing solicitation; urgent request; application for a claim or favor which is urged with troublesome frequency or pertinacity. Webster.

IMPOSE. To levy or exact as by authority; to lay as a burden, tax, duty or charge. State v. Nickerson, 97 Neb. 837, 151 N.W. 981, 982.

IMPOSITION. An impost; tax; contribution. Paterson v. Society, 24 N.J.L. 400; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Heppenheimer, 58 N.J.L. 633, 34 A. 1061, 32 L. R.A. 643; Town of Brandon v. Harvey, 105 Vt. 435, 168 A. 708, 710.

IMPOSSIBILITY. That which, in the constitution and course of nature or the law, no man can do or perform. Klauber v. San Diego Street-Car Co., 95 Cal. 353, 30 P. 555.

Impossibility of performance of contract, absolving party from liability for nonperformance, means not only strict impossibility, but impracticability because of extreme arid unreasonable difficulty, expense, injury or loss involved.

Fisher v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 313 Ill. App. 66, 39 N.E.2d 67, 70; Transbay Const. Co. v. City and County of San Francisco, D.C.Cal., 35 F.Supp. 433, 436.

impossibie contract. One which the law will not hold binding upon the parties, because of the natural or legal impossibility of the performance by one party of that which is the consideration for the promise of the other. 7 Wait, Act. & Def. 124.

Impossible contracts, which will be deemed void in the eye of the law, or of which the performance will be excused, are such contracts as cannot be performed, either because of the nature of the obligation undertaken, or because of some supervening event which renders the performance of the obligation either physically or legally impossible. 10 Amer. & Eng.Enc.Law, 176.

Impossibility is of the following several sorts:

An act is physically impossible when it is contrary to the course of nature. Such an impossibility may be either absolute, i. e., impossible in any case, (e. g., to stop earth rotation) or relative, (sometimes called "impossibility in fact") i. e., arising from the circumstances of the case, (e. g., for A. to make a payment to B., he being a deceased person.) To the latter class belongs what is sometimes called "practical impossibility," which exists when the act can be done, but only at an excessive or unreasonable cost. An act is legally or juridically impossible when a rule of law makes it impossible to do it; e. g., for A. to make a valid will before his majority. This class of acts must not be confounded with those which are possible, although forbidden by law, as to commit a theft. An act is logically impossible when it is contrary to the nature of the transaction, as where A. gives property to B. expressly for his own benefit, on condition that he transfers it to C. Sweet.

IMPOSSIBILIUM NULLA OBLIGATIO EST. There is no obligation to do impossible things. Dig. 50, 17, 185; Broom, Max. 249.

IMPOSTS. Taxes, duties, or impositions levied for divers reasons. Crew Levick Co. v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, 38 S.Ct. 126, 245 U.S. 292, 62 L.Ed. 295.

Impost is a tax received by the prince for such merchandises as are brought into any haven within his dominions from foreign nations. It may in some sort be distinguished from customs, because customs are rather that profit the prince maketh of wares shipped out; yet they are frequently confounded. Cowell.

IMPOTENCE. In medical jurisprudence. Inability to copulate. Properly used of the male; but it has also been used synonymously with "sterility." Smith v. Smith, 206 Mo.App. 646, 229 S.W. 398; Heinemann v. Heinemann, 118 Or. 178, 245 P. 1082, 1083.

Impotency as a ground for divorce means want of potentia copulandi or incapacity to consummate the marriage, and not merely incapacity for procreation. Reed v. Reed, 26 Tenn.App. 690, 177 S.W.2d 26, 27.

IMPOTENTIA EXCUSAT LEGEM. Co.Litt. 29. The impossibility of doing what is required by the law excuses from the performance.

IMPOTENTIAM, PROPERTY PROPTER. A qualified property, which may subsist in animals ferce naturce on account of their inability, as where hawks, herons, or other birds build in a person's trees, or conies, etc., make their nests or burrows in a person's land, and have young there, such person has a qualified property in them till they can fly or run away, and then such property expires. 2 Steph.Comm. (7th Ed.) 8.

IMPOUND. To shut up stray animals or distrained goods in a pound. Chenango County Humane Soc. v. Polmatier, 177 N.Y.S. 101, 103, 188 App.Div. 419. To take into the custody of the law or of a court. Thus, a court will sometimes impound a suspicious document produced at a trial.

IMPRESCRIPTIBILITY. The state or quality of being incapable of prescription; not of such a character that a right to it can be gained by prescription.

IMPRESCRIPTIBLE RIGHTS. Such rights as a person may use or not, at pleasure, since they cannot be lost to him by the claims of another founded on prescription.

IMPRESSION, CASE OF FIRST. One without a precedent; one presenting a wholly new state of facts; one involving a question never before determined.

IMPRESSMENT. A power possessed by the English crown of taking persons or property to aid in the defense of the country, with or without the consent of the persons concerned. It is usually exercised to obtain hands for the royal ships in time of war, by taking seamen engaged in merchant vessels, (1 Bl.Comm. 420; Maud & P. Shipp. 123;) but in former times impressment of merchant ships was also practiced. The admiralty issues protections against impressment in certain cases, either under statutes passed in favor of certain callings (e. g., persons employed in the Greenland fisheries) or voluntarily. Sweet.

IMPREST MONEY. Money paid on enlisting or impressing soldiers or sailors.

IMPRETIABILIS. Lat. Beyond price; invaluable.

IMPRIMATUR. Lat. Let it be printed. A license or allowance, granted by the constituted authorities, giving permission to print and publish a book. This allowance was formerly necessary, in England, before any book could lawfully be printed, and in some other countries is still required.

IMPRIMERE. To press upon; to impress or press; to imprint or print.

IMPRIMERY. In some of the ancient English statutes this word is used to signify a printing-office, the art of printing, a print or impression.

IMPRIMIS. Lat. In the first place; first of all.

IMPRISON. To put in a prison; to put in a place of confinement. To confine a person, or restrain his liberty, in any way.

IMPRISONMENT. The act of putting or confining a man in prison; the restraint of a man's personal liberty; coercion exercised upon a person to prevent the free exercise of his powers of locomotion. State v. Shaw, 73 Vt. 149, 50 A. 863.

It is not a necessary part of the definition that the confinement should be in a place usually appropriated to that purpose; it may be in a locality used only for the specific occasion; or it may take place without the actual application of any physical agencies of restraint, (such as locks or bars,) but by verbal compulsion and the display of available force. Pike v. Hanson, 9 N.H. 491. Every confinement of the person is an "imprisonment," whether it be in a common prison, or in a private house, or in the stocks, or even by forcibly detaining one in the public streets. Norton v. Mathers, 222 Iowa 1170, 271 N.W. 321, 324.

False imprisonment

The unlawful arrest or detention of a person without warrant, or by an illegal warrant, or a warrant illegally executed, and either in a prison or a place used temporarily for that purpose, or by force and constraint without confinement. Eberling v. State, 136 Ind. 117, 35 N.E. 1023. False imprisonment consists in the unlawful detention of the person of another, for any length of time, whereby he is deprived of his personal liberty. Mahan v. Adam, 144 Md. 355, 124 A. 901, 904. The unlawful detention of the occupant of an automobile may be accomplished by driving so rapidly that he cannot alight. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm.Ed., § 5528.26.

The term is also used as the name of the action which lies for this species of injury. 3 Bl.Comm. 138; Buttrey v. Wilhite, 208 Ala 573. 94 So. 585; Christ v. McDonald, 152 Or. 494, 52 P.2d 655, 658.

IMPRISTI. Adherents; followers. Those who side with or take the part of another, either in his defense or otherwise.

IMPROBABLE. Unlikely to be true, or to occur, not to be readily believed. Johnson v. Tregle, La. App., 8 So.2d 755, 758.

IMPROBATION. In Scotch law. An action brought for the purpose of having some instrument declared false and forged. 1 Forb.Inst. pt. 4, p. 161. The verb "improve" (q, v.) was used in the same sense.

IMPROPER. Not suitable; unfit; not suited to the character, time, and place. Godbey v. Godbey, 70 Ohio App. 455, 44 N.E.2d 810, 813.

IMPROPER CUMULATION OF ACTIONS. An attempt to join in one proceeding inconsistent causes of action. Toms v. Nugent, La.App., 12 So.2d 713, 715.

IMPROPER FEUDS. These were derivative feuds; as, for instance, those that were originally bartered and sold to the feudatory for a price, or were held upon base or less honorable services, or upon a rent in lieu of military service, or were themselves alienable, without mutual license, or descended indifferently to males or females. Wharton.

IMPROPER INFLUENCE. Undue influence (q. v.) Millican v. Millican, 24 Tex. 446.

IMPROPER NAVIGATION. Anything improperly done with the ship or part of the ship in the course of the voyage. L.R. 6 C.P. 563. See, also, 53 Law J.P.D. 65.

IMPROPRIATION. In ecclesiastical law. The annexing an ecclesiastical benefice to the use of a lay person, whether individual or corporate, in the same way as appropriation is the annexing of any such benefice to the proper and perpetual use of some spiritual corporation, whether sole or aggregate, to enjoy forever. Brown.

IMPROPRIATE RECTOR. In ecclesiastical law. Commonly signifies a lay rector as opposed to a spiritual rector; just as impropriate tithes are tithes in the hands of a lay owner, as opposed to appropriate tithes, which are tithes in the hands of a spiritual owner. Brown.

IMPROVE. In Scotch law. To disprove; to invalidate or impeach; to prove false or forged. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 4, p. 162.

To improve a lease means to grant a lease of unusual duration to encourage a tenant, when the soil is exhausted, etc. Bell; Stair, Inst. p. 676, § 23.

To meliorate, make better, to increase the value or good qualities of, mend, repair, as to "improve" a street by grading, parking, curbing, paving, etc. State ex rel. County of Ramsey v. Babcock, 186 Minn, 132, 242 N.W. 474, 476.

IMPROVED. Improved land is such as has been reclaimed, is used for the purpose of husbandry, and is cultivated as such, whether the appropriation is for tillage, meadow, or pasture. "Improve" is synonymous with "cultivate." Clark v. Phelps, 4 Cow. (N.Y.) 190.

IMPROVEMENT. A valuable addition made to property (usually real estate) or an amelioration in its condition, amounting to more than mere repairs or replacement of waste, costing labor or capital, and intended to enhance its value, beauty or utility or to adapt it for new or further purposes. Spencer v. Tobey, 22 Barb., N.Y., 269; Allen v. McKay, 120 Cal. 332, 52 P. 828.

In American land law. An act by which a locator or settler expresses his intention to cultivate or clear certain land; an act expressive of the actual possession of land; as by erecting a cabin, planting a corn-field, deadening trees in a forest; or by merely marking trees, or even by piling up a brush-heap. Burrill. In re Leet Tp. Road, 159 Pa. 72, 28 A. 238.

An "improvement," under our land system, does not mean a general enhancement of the value of the tract from the occupant's operations. It has a more limited meaning, which has in view the population of our forests, and the increase of agricultural products. All works which are directed to the creation of homes for families, or are substantial steps towards bringing lands into cultivation, have in their results the special character of "improvements," and, under the land laws of the United States and of the several states, are encouraged. Sometimes their minimum extent is defined as requisite to convey rights. In other cases not. But the test. which runs through all the cases is always this : Are they real, and made bona fide, in accordance with the policy of the law, or are they only colorable, and made for the purpose of fraud and speculation? Simpson v. Robinson, 37 Ark. 137.

In the law of patents. An addition to, or modification of, a previous invention or discovery, intended or claimed to increase its utility or value. 2 Kent, Comm. 366-372. Steiner Sales Co. v. Schwartz Sales Co., C.C.A.Utah, 98 F.2d 999, 1010.

It includes two necessary ideas: the idea of a complete and practical operative art or instrument and the idea of some change in such art or instrument not affecting its essential character but enabling it to produce its appropriate results in a more perfect or economical manner. Rob. Pat. § 210.

Local improvement. See Local Improvement.

IMPROVEMENTS. A term used in leases, of doubtful meaning. It would seem to apply principally to buildings, though generally it extends to the amelioration of every description of property, whether real or personal; but, when contained in any document, its meaning is generally explained by other words. 1 Chit. Gen. Pr. 174.

IMPROVIDENCE. As used in a statute excluding one found incompetent to execute the duties of an administrator by reason of improvidence, means that want of care and foresight in the management of property which would be likely to render the estate and effects of the intestate unsafe, and liable to be lost or diminished in value, in case the administration should be committed to the improvident person. In re Fulper's Estate, 99 N. J.Eq. 293, 132 A. 834, 843.

IMPROVIDENTLY. A judgment, decree, rule, injunction, etc., when given or rendered without adequate consideration by the court, or without proper information as to all the circumstances affecting it, or based upon a mistaken assumption or misleading information or advice, is sometimes said to have been "improvidently" given or issued.

IMPRUIARE. In old records. To improve land. Impruiamentum, the improvement so made of it. Cowell.

IMPUBES. Lat. In the civil law. A minor under the age of puberty; a male under fourteen years of age; a female under twelve. Calvin.; Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 138.

IMPULSE. As to "irresistible" or "uncontrollable" impulse, see Insanity.

IMPUNITAS CONTINUUM AFFECTUM TRIBUIT DELINQUENDI. 4 Coke, 45. Impunity confirms the disposition to commit crime.

IMPUNITIES SEMPER AD DETERIORA INVITAT. 5 Coke, 109. Impunity always invites to greater crimes.

IMPUNITY. Exemption or protection from penalty or punishment. Dillon v. Rogers, 36 Tex. 153.

IMPUTATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Legal liability.

IMPUTATION OF PAYMENT. In the civil law. The application of a payment made by a debtor to his creditor.

IMPUTED. As used in legal phrases, this word means attributed vicariously; that is, an act, fact, or quality is said to be "imputed" to a person when it is ascribed or charged to him, not because he is personally cognizant of it or responsible for it, but because another person is, over whom he has control or for whose acts or knowledge he is responsible.

IMPUTED KNOWLEDGE. This phrase is sometimes used as equivalent to "implied notice," i. e., knowledge attributed or charged to a person (often contrary to the fact) because the facts in question were open to his discovery and it was his duty to inform himself as to them. Roche v. Llewellyn Iron Works Co., 140 Cal. 563, 74 P. 147.

IMPUTED NEGLIGENCE. Negligence which is not directly attributable to the person himself, but which is the negligence of a person who is in privity with him, and with whose fault he is chargeable. Smith v. Railroad Co., 38 N.Y.S. 666, 4 App. Div. 493.

IMPUTED NOTICE. Information as to a given fact or circumstance charged or attributed to a person, and affecting his rights or conduct on the ground that actual notice was given to some person whose duty was to report it to the person to be affected, as, his agent or his attorney of record.

IN. In the law of real estate, this preposition has always been used to denote the fact of seisin, title, or possession, and apparently serves as an elliptical expression for some such phrase as "in possession," or as an abbreviation for "intitled" or "invested with title." Thus, in the old books, a tenant is said to be "in by lease of his lessor." Litt. § 82.

An elastic preposition in other cases, expressing relation of presence, existence, situation, inclusion, action, etc.; inclosed or surrounded by limits, as in a room; also meaning for, in and about, on, within, etc., according to context. Ex parte Perry, 71 Fla. 250, 71 So. 174, 176. Rester v. Moody & Stewart, 172 La. 510, 134 So. 690, 692.

IN ACTION. Attainable or recoverable by action; not in possession. A term applied to property of which a party has not the possession, but only a right to recover it by action. Things in action are rights of personal things, which nevertheless are not in possession. See Chose in Action.

IN ADVERSUM. Against an adverse, unwilling, or resisting party. "A decree not by consent, but in adversum." 3 Story, 318.

IN ZEDIFICIIS LAPIS MALE POSITUS NON EST REMOVENDUS. 11 Coke, 69. A stone badly placed in buildings is not to be removed.

IN IEQUA MANU. In equal hand. Fleta, lib. 3, c. 14, § 2.

IN ,EQUALI JURE. In equal right; on an equality in point of right.

IN LEQUALI JURE MELIOR EST CONDITIO POSSIDENTIS. In [a case of] equal right the condition of the party in possession is the better Plowd. 296; Broom, Max. 713.

IN ZEQUALI MANU. In equal hand; held equally or indifferently between two parties. Where an instrument was deposited by the parties to it in the hands of a third person, to keep on certain conditions, it was said to be held in cequali mane. Reg. Orig. 28.

IN FRAUDEM LEGIS. In fraud of the law. 3 Bl.Comm. 94. With the intent or view of evading the law. Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 424, 432.

IN FULL. Relating to the whole or full amount., as a receipt in full. Complete; giving all details. Bard v. Wood, 3 Mete. (Mass.) 75.

IN FULL LIFE. Continuing in both physical and civil existence; that is, neither actually dead nor civiliter mortuus.

IN FUTURO. In future; at a future time; the opposite of in prcesenti. 2 Bl.Comm. 166, 175.

IN GENERALI PASSAGIO. In the general passage; that is, on the journey to Palestine with the general company or body of Crusaders. This term was of frequent occurrence in the old law of essoins, as a means of accounting for the absence of the party, and was distinguished from simplex passagium, which meant that he was performing a pilgrimage to the Holy Land alone.

IN GENERALIBUS VERSATUR ERROR. Error dwells in general expressions. Pitman v. Hooper, 3 Sumn. 290, Fed. Cas. No. 11,186; Underwood v. Carney, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 292.

IN GENERE. In kind; in the same genus or class; the same in quantity and quality, but not individually the same. In the Roman law, things which may be given or restored in genere are distinguished from such as must be given or restored in specie; that is, identically. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 161.

IN GREMIO LEGIS. In the bosom of the law; in the protection of the law; in abeyance. 1 Coke, 131a; T. Raym. 319; Hooper v. Farmers' Union Warehouse Co., 21 Ala.App. 91, 105 So. 725, 726.

IN GROSS. In a large quantity or sum; without division or particulars; by wholesale. Green v. Taylor, 10 Fed.Cas.No.1,126. At large; not annexed to or dependent upon another thing. Common in gross is such as is neither appendant nor appurtenant to land, but is annexed to a man's person. 2 Bl.Comm. 34.

IN HAC PARTE. In this behalf; on this side.

IN VERBA. In these words; in the same words.

IN HIEREDES NON SOLENT TRANSIRE ACTIONES QUIE PCENALES EX MALEFICIO SUNT. 2 Inst. 442. Penal actions arising from anything of a criminal nature do not pass to heirs.

IN HIS ENIM QU)E SUNT FAVORABILIA ANIQUAMVIS SUNT DAMNOSA REBUS, FIAT ALIQUANDO EXTENTIO STATUTI. In things that are favorable to the spirit, though injurious to property, an extension of the statute should sometimes be made. 10 Coke, 101.

IN HIS QUIE DE JURE COMMUNI OMNIBUS CONCEDUNTUR, CONSUETUDO ALICUJUS PATRIIE VEL LOCI NON EST ALLEGENDA. 11 Coke, 85. In those things which by common right are conceded to all, the custom of a particular district or place is not to be alleged.

IN HOC. In this; in respect to this.

IN IIS QUIE SUNT MERZE FACULTATIS NUNQUAM PR4ESCRIBITUR. Prescription does not run against a mere power or faculty to act. Tray. Leg. Max.

IN IISDEM TERMINIS. In the same terms. 9 East, 487.

IN INDIVIDUO. In the distinct, identical, or individual form; in specie. Story, Bailm. § 97.

IN INFINITUM. Infinitely; indefinitely. Imports indefinite succession or continuance.

IN INITIALIBUS. In the preliminaries. A term in Scotch practice, applied to the preliminary examination of a witness as to the following points: Whether he knows the parties, or bears ill will to either of them, or has received any reward or promise of reward for what he may say, or can lose or gain by the cause, or has been told by any person what to say. If the witness answer these questions satisfactorily, he is then examined in causa, in the cause. Bell, Dict. "Evidence."

IN INITIO. In or at the beginning. In initio litis, at the beginning, or in the first stage of the suit. Bract. fol. 400.

IN INTEGRUM. To the original or former state. Calvin.

IN INVIDIAM. To excite a prejudice.

IN INVITUM. Against an unwilling party; against one not assenting. A term applied to proceedings against an adverse party, to which he does not consent.

IN IPSIS FAUCIBUS. In the very throat or entrance. In ipsis faucibus of a port, actually entering a port. 1 C.Rob.Adm. 233, 234.

IN ITINERE. In eyre; on a journey or circuit. In old English law, the justices in itinere (or in eyre) were those who made a circuit through the kingdom once in seven years for the purposes of trying causes. 3 Bl.Comm. 58. In course of transportation; on the way; not delivered to the vendee. In this sense the phrase is equivalent to "in transitu."

IN JUDGMENT. In a court of justice; in a seat of judgment. Lord Hale is called "one of the greatest and best men who ever sat in judgment." 1 East, 306.

IN JUDICIIS, MINOR! ZETATI SUCCURRITUR. In courts or judicial proceedings, infancy is aided or favored. Jenk.Cent. 46, case 89.

IN JUDICIO. In Roman law. In the course of an actual trial; before a judge, (judex.) A cause, during its preparatory stages, conducted before the prtor, was said to be in jure; in its second stage, after it had been sent to a judex for trial, it was said to be in judicio.

IN JUDICIO NON CREDITUR NISI JURATIS. Cro.Car. 64. In a trial, credence is given only to those who are sworn.

IN JURE. In law; according to law.

In the Roman practice, the procedure in an action was divided into two stages. The first was said to be in jure; it took place before the prtor, and included the formal and introductory part and the settlement of questions of law. The second stage was committed to the judex, and comprised the investigation and trial of the facts; this was said to be in judicio.

IN JURE ALTERIUS. In another's right. Hale, Anal. § 26.

IN JURE, NON REMOTA CAUSA SED PROXIMA SPECTATUR. Bac.Max. reg. 1. In law, the proximate, and not the remote, cause is regarded.

IN JURE PROPRIO. In one's own right. Hale, Anal. § 26.

IN JUS VOCARE. To call, cite, or summon to court. Inst. 4, 16, 3; Calvin. In jus vocando, summoning to court. 3 Bl.Comm. 279.

IN KIND. In the same kind, class, or genus. A loan is returned "in kind" when not the identical article, but one corresponding and equivalent to it, is given to the lender. See In Genere.

The agreement that a collector of taxes was to receive his commission "in kind" means the same kind of funds in which the tax is collected; Wilson v. State, 51 Ark. 213, 10 S.W. 491.

IN LAW. In the intendment, contemplation, or inference of the law; implied or inferred by law; existing in law or by force of law. See In Fact.

IN LECTO MORTALI. On the deathbed. Fleta, lib. 5, c. 28, § 12.

IN LIBERAM ELEMOSINAM. In free alms. Land given for a charitable motive was said to be so given. See Frankalmoin.

IN LIEU OF. Instead of; in place of; in substitution of. State v. Escalade, 91 So. 135, 136, 150 La. 638; Joiner v. Joiner, 117 Miss. 507, 78 So. 369, 370.

IN LIMINE. On or at the threshold; at the very beginning; preliminarily.

IN LITEM. For a suit; to the suit. Greenl.Ev. § 348.

IN LOCO. In place; in lieu; instead; in the place or stead. Townsh.Pl. 38.

IN LOCO PARENTIS. In the place of a parent; instead of a parent; charged, factitiously, with a parent's rights, duties, and responsibilities. Wetherby v. Dixon, 19 Ves. 412; Brinkerhoff v. Merselis, 24 N.J.L. 683; Howard v. United States, D.C.Ky., 2 F.2d 170, 174; Meisner v. United States, D.C.Mo., 295 F. 866, 868.

IN MAJORE SUMMA CONTINETUR MINOR. 5 Coke, 115. In the greater sum is contained the less.

IN MAJOREM CAUTELAM. For greater security. 1 Strange, 105, arg.

IN MALAM PARTEM. In a bad sense, so as to wear an evil appearance.

IN MALEFICIIS VOLUNTAS SPECTATUR, NON EXITUS. In evil deeds regard must be had to the intention, and not to the result. Dig. 48, 8, 14; Broom, Max. 324.

IN MALEFICIO, RATIHABITIO MANDATO COMPARATUR. In a case of malfeasance, ratification is equivalent to command. Dig. 50, 17, 152, 2.

IN MAXIMA POTENTIA MINIMA LICENTIA. In the greatest power there is the least freedom. Hob. 159.

IN MEDIAS RES. Into the heart of the subject, without preface or introduction.

IN MEDIO. Intermediate. A term applied, in Scotch practice, to a fund held between parties litigant.

IN MERCIBUS ILLICITIS NON SIT COMMERCIUM. There should be no commerce in illicit or prohibited goods. 3 Kent, Comm. 262, note.

IN MERCY. To be in mercy is to be at the discretion of the king, lord, or judge in respect to the imposition of a fine or other punishment.

IN MISERICORDIA. The entry on the record where a party was in mercy was, "Ideo in misericordia," etc. Sometimes "misericordia" means the being quit of all amercements.

IN MITIORI SENSU. In the milder sense; in the less aggravated acceptation.

In actions of slander, it was formerly the rule that, if the words alleged would admit of two constructions, they should be taken in the less injurious and defamatory sense, or in mitiori sense,

IN MODUM ASS'S/E. In the manner or form of an assize. Bract. fol. 183b. In modum juratce, in manner of a jury. Id. fol. 181b.

IN MORA. In default; literally, in delay. In the civil law, a borrower who omits or refuses to return the thing loaned at the proper time is said to be in mora. Story, Bailm. §§ 254, 259.

In Scotch law. A creditor who has begun without completing diligence necessary for attaching the property of his debtor is said to be in mora. Bell.

IN MORTUA MANU. Property owned by religious societies was said to be held in mortua manu, or in mortmain, since religious men were civiliter mortui. 1 Bl.Comm. 479; Tayl.Gloss.

IN NOMINE DEI, AMEN. In the name of God, Amen. A solemn introduction, anciently used in wills and many other instruments. The translation is often used in wills at the present day.

IN NOTIS. In the notes.

IN NOVO CASU, NOVUM REMEDIUM APPONENDUM EST. 2 Inst. 3. A new remedy is to be applied to a new case.

IN NUBIBUS. In the clouds; in abeyance; in custody of law. In nubibus, in mare, in terra, vel in custodid legis, in the air, sea, or earth, or in the custody of the law. Tayl.Gloss. In case of abeyance, the inheritance is figuratively said to rest in nubibus, or in gremio legis.

IN NULLIUS BONIS. Among the goods or property of no person; belonging to no person, as treasure-trove and wreck were anciently considered.

IN NULLO EST ERRATUM. In nothing is there error. The name of the common plea or joinder in error, denying the existence of error in the record or proceedings; which is in the nature of a demurrer, and at once refers the matter of law arising thereon to the judgment of the court. 2 Tidd, Pr. 1173; Booth v. Com., 7 Mete. (Mass.) 285, 287.

IN OBSCURA VOLUNTATE MANUMITTENTIS, FAVENDUM EST LIBERTATI. Where the expression of the will of one who seeks to manumit a slave is ambiguous, liberty is to be favored. Dig. 50, 17, 179.

IN OBSCURIS, INSPICI SOLERE QUOD VERISIMILIUS EST, AUT QUOD PLERUMQUE FIERI SOLET. In obscure cases, we usually look at what is most probable, or what most commonly happens. Dig. 50, 17, 114.

IN OBSCURIS, QUOD MINIMUM EST SEQUIMUR. In obscure or doubtful cases, we follow that which is the least. Dig. 50, 17, 9; 2 Kent, Comm. 557.

IN ODIUM SPOLIATORIS. In hatred of a despoiler, robber, or wrong-doer. The Saratoga, 1 Gall. 174, Fed.Cas.No.12,355; Arthur v. The Cassius, 2 Story, 99, Fed.Cas.No.564. 1 Greenl.Ev. § 348.

IN ODIUM SPOLIATORIS OMNIA PRIESUMUNTUR. To the prejudice (in condemnation) of a despoiler all things are presumed; every presumption is made against a wrongdoer. 1 Vern. 452.

IN OMNI ACTIONE UBI DUX CONCURRUNT DISTRICTIONES, VIDELICET, IN REM ET IN PERSONAM, ILLA DISTRICTIO TENENDA EST QUPE MAGIS TIMETUR ET MAGIS LIGAT. In every action where two distresses concur, that is, in rem and in personam, that is to be chosen which is most dreaded, and which binds most firmly. Bract. fol. 372; Fleta, 1. 6, c. 14, § 28.

IN OMNI RE NASCITUR RES QUZE IPSAM REM EXTERMINAT. In everything there arises a thing which destroys the thing itself. Everything contains the element of its own destruction. 2 Inst. 15.

IN OMNIBUS. In all things; on all points. "A case parallel in omnibus." 10 Mod. 104.

IN OMNIBUS CONTRACTIBUS, SIVE NOMINATIS SIVE INNOMINATIS, PERMUTATIO CONTINETUR. In all contracts, whether nominate or innominate, an exchange [of value, i. e., a consideration] is implied. Gravin. lib. 2, § 12; 2 Bl. Comm. 444, note.

IN OMNIBUS OBLIGATIONIBUS IN QUIBUS DIES NON PONITUR, PRIESENTI DIE DEBETUR. In all obligations in which a date is not put, the debt is due on the present day; the liability accrues immediately. Dig. 50, 17, 14.

IN OMNIBUS [FERE] P(ENALIBUS JUDICIIS, ET 2ETATL ET IMPRUDENTI2E SUCCURRITUR. In nearly all penal judgments, immaturity of age and imbecility of mind are favored. Dig. 50, 17, 108; Broom, Max. 314.

IN OMNIBUS QUIDEM, MAXIME TAMEN IN JURE, ZEQUITAS SPECTANDA SIT. In all things, but especially in law, equity is to be regarded. Dig. 50, 17, 90; Story, Bailm. § 257.

IN PACATO SOLO. In a country which is at peace.

IN PACE DEI ET REGIS. In the peace of God and the king. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 31, § 6. Formal words in old appeals of murder.

IN PAIS. This phrase, as applied to a legal transaction, primarily means that it has taken place without legal proceedings. Thus a widow was said to make a request in pais for her dower when she simply applied to the heir without issuing a writ. (Co. Litt. 32b.) So conveyances are divided into those by matter of record and those by matter in pais. In some cases, however, "matters in pais" are opposed not only to "matters of record," but also to "matters in writing," i. e., deeds, as where estoppel by deed is distinguished from estoppel by matter in pais. Id. 352a.) Sweet. See, also, Pais.

IN PAIS, ESTOPPEL IN. An estoppel not arising from deed or record or written contract. Steph.Pl. 197; Duke v. Griffith, 9 Utah 476, 35 P. 512. The doctrine is that a person may be precluded by his act or conduct or silence, when it is his duty to speak, from asserting a right which he otherwise would have had. Marshall v. Wilson, 175 Or. 506, 154 P.2d 547, 551. The effect of a party's voluntary conduct whereby he is precluded from asserting rights as against another person who has in good faith relied upon such conduct and has been led thereby to change his condition for the worse and who acquires some corresponding right of property or contract. Oswego Falls Corporation v. City of Fulton, 265 N.Y.S. 436, 148 Misc. 170.

Elements or fundamentals of "estoppel in pals" include admission, statement, or act inconsistent with claim afterwards asserted, National Match Co. v. Empire Storage & Ice Co., 227 Mo.App. 1115, 58 S.W.2d 797; Peyrefitte v. Union Homestead Ass'n, La.App., 185 So. 693, 697; change of position to loss or injury of party claiming estoppel, Personal Finance Co. of Providence v. Henley-Kimball Co., 61 R.I. 402, 1 A.2d 121, 125, 117 A.L.R. 1476; Malloy v. City of Chicago, 369 Ill. 97, 15 N.E.2d 861, 865; circumstances such that party estopped knew or should have known facts to be otherwise or pretended to know facts which he did not know, Briscoe v. O'Connor, 119 N.J.Eq. 378, 182 A. 855; false representation or concealment of material facts, Pickens v. Maryland Casualty Co., 141 Neb. 105, 2 N.W.2d 593, 596; inducement to alter position, Haschenberger v. Dennis, 118 Neb. 411, 225 N.W. 25, 26, 63 A.L.R. 493; Wollenberger v. Hoover, 346 Ill. 511, 179 N.E. 42, 67; intention that false representation or concealment be acted on, Malloy v. City of Chicago, 369 Ill. 97, 15 N.E.2d 861, 865; Peterson v. City of Parsons, 139 Kan. 701, 33 P.2d 715, 720; knowledge of facts, by party to be estopped, Darling Stores v. Fidelity-Bankers Trust Co., 178 Tenn. 165, 156 S.W.2d 419, 424; Peterson v. City of Parsons, 139 Kan. 701, 33 P.2d 715, 720; lack of knowledge or means of knowledge of party claiming estoppel, Triplex Shoe Co. v. Rice & Hutchins, 17 Dei.Ch. 356, 152 A. 342, 350, 72 A.L.R. 932; Sinclair Refining Co. v. Jenkins Petroleum Process Co., C.C.A.Me., 99 F.2d 9, 13, 14; misleading of one person by another person to his prejudice or injury, Garmon v. Davis, 63 Ga.App. 815, 12 S.E.2d 209, 211; Current News Features v. Pulitzer Pub. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 81 F.2d 288, 292; prejudice or loss or injury to party claiming estoppel, City of St. Louis v. Mississippi River Fuel Corporation, D.C.Mo., 57 F.Supp. 549, 554; In re Bremer's Estate, 141 Neb. 251, 3 N.W.2d 411, 413, 414; reliance by one party on belief induced by other party, Clover v. Peterson, 203 Minn. 337, 281 N.W. 275, 278; Strand v. State, 16 Wash.2d 107, 132 P.2d 1011, 1016.

Ratification is distinguishable in that the substance of "ratification" is confirmation of the unauthorized act or contract after it has been done or made, whereas substance of "estoppel" is the principal's inducement to another to act to his prejudice. Harvey v. J. P. Morgan & Co., Mun.Ct., 2 N.Y.S.2d 520, 531, 166 Misc. 455.

Silence when one should speak may be the basis of estoppel, Thomas v. Conyers, 198 N.C. 229, 151 S.E. 270, 273; waiver is distinguishable in that it is not essential to waiver that the opposite party do anything on the strength of the statement relied upon, Langley v. Norris, Tex.Civ.App., 167 S.W.2d 603, 613; waiver designates act or consequence of act of one person only; it is voluntary act and implies abandonment of right or privilege. McDanels v. General Ins. Co. of America, 1 Cal.App.2d 454, 36 P.2d 829, 832.

See, also, Equitable Estoppel.

IN PAPER. A term formerly applied to the proceedings in a cause before the record was made up. 3 Bl.Comm. 406; 2 Burrows, 1098. Probably from the circumstance of the record being always on parchment. The opposite of "on record." 1 Burrows, 322.

IN PARI CAUSA. In an equal cause. In a cause where the parties on each side have equal rights.

IN PARI CAUSA POSSESSOR POTIOR HABERL DEBET. In an equal cause he who has the possession should be preferred. Dig. 50, 17, 128, 1.

IN PARI DELICTO. In equal fault; equally culpable or criminal; in a case of equal fault or guilt. Rozell v. Vansyckle, 11 Wash. 79, 39 Pac. 270.

A person who is in part delicto with another differs from a particeps criminis in this, that the former term always includes the latter, but the latter does not always include the former. 8 East, 381.

IN PARI DELICTO POTIOR EST CONDITIO POSSIDENTIS, [DEFENDENTIS.] In a case of equal or mutual fault [between two parties] the condition of the party in possession [or defending] is the better one. 2 Burrows, 926.

Where each party is equally in fault, the law favors him who is actually in possession. Broom, Max. 290, 729. Where the fault is mutual, the law will leave the case as it finds it. Story, Ag. § 195; Reaves Lumber Co. v. Cain-Hurley Lumber Co., 152 Tenn. 339, 279 S.W. 257, 258.

IN PARI MATERIA. Upon the same matter or subject. Statutes in pari materia are to be construed together. State v. Gerhardt, 145 Ind. 439, 44 N.E. 469, 33 L.R.A. 313.

IN PATIENDO. In suffering, permitting, or allowing.

IN PECTORE JUDICIS. In the breast of the judge. Latch, 180. A phrase applied to a judgment.

DT PEJOREM PARTEM. In the worst part; on the worst side. Latch, 159, 160.

IN PERPETUAM REI MEMORIAM. In perpetual memory of a matter; for preserving a record of a matter. Applied to depositions taken in order to preserve the testimony of the deponent.

IN PERPETUITY. Endless duration; forever. Central R. Co. of New Jersey v. New York Telephone Co., 101 N.J.L. 353, 128 A. 160, 161.

IN PERPETUAM REI TESTIMONIUM. In perpetual testimony of a matter; for the purpose of declaring and settling a thing forever. 1 Bl. Comm. 86.

IN PERSON. A party, plaintiff or defendant, who sues out a writ or other process, or appears to conduct his case in court himself, instead of through a solicitor or counsel, is said to act and appear in person.

IN PERSONAM, IN REM. In the Roman law, from which they are taken, the expressions "in rem" and "in personam" were always opposed to one another, an act or proceeding in personam being one done or directed against or with reference to a specific person, while an act or proceeding in rem was one done or directed with reference to no specific person, and consequently against or with reference to all whom it might concern, or "all the world." The phrases were especially applied to actions; an actio in personam being the remedy where a claim against a specific person arose out of an obligation, whether ex contractu or ex maleficio, while an actio in rem was one brought for the assertion of a right of property, easement, status, etc., against one who denied or infringed it. See Inst. 4, 6, 1; Gaius, 4, 1, 1-10.

From this use of the terms, they have come to be applied to signify the antithesis of "available against a particular person," and "available against the world at large." Thus, Jura in personam are rights primarily available against specific persons; Jura in rem, rights only available against the world at large. Hook v. Hoffman, 147 P. 722, 727, 16 Ariz. 540; Beck v. Natalie Oil Co., 143 La. 153, 78 So. 430.

So a judgment or decree is said to be in rem when it binds third persons. Such is the sentence of a court of admiralty on a question of prize, or a decree of nullity or dissolution of marriage, or a decree of a court in a foreign country as to the status of a person domiciled there.

Lastly, the terms are sometimes used to signify that a judicial proceeding operates on a thing or a person. Thus, it is said of the court of chancery that it acts in personam, and not in rem, meaning that its decrees operate by compelling defendants to do what they are ordered to do, and not by producing the effect directly. Sweet. See Cross v. Armstrong, 44 Ohio St. 613, 10 N.E. 160.

Judgment in Personam

See that title.

IN PERSONAM ACTIO EST, QUA CUM EO AGIMUS QUI OBLIGATUS EST NOBIS AD FACIENDUM ALIQUID VEL DANDUM. The action in personam is that by which we sue him who is under obligation to us to do something or give something. Dig. 44, 7, 25; Bract. 101b.

IN PIOS USUS. For pious uses; for religious purposes. 2 Bl.Comm. 505.

IN PLACE. In mining law, rock or mineralized matter is "in place" when remaining as nature placed it, that is, unsevered from the circumjacent rock, or which is fixed solid and immovable in the form of a vein or lode. Williams v. Gibson, 84 Ala. 228, 4 So. 350, 5 Am.St.Rep. 368.

IN PLENA VITA. In full life. Yearb. P. 18 Hen. VI. 2.

IN PLENO COMITATU. In full county court. 3 Bl.Comm. 36.

IN PLENO LUMINE. In public; in common knowledge; in the light of day.

IN PCENALIBUS CAUSIS BENIGNIUS INTERPRETANDUM EST. In penal causes or cases, the more favorable interpretation should be adopted. Dig. 50, 17, (197), 155, 2; Plowd. 86b, 124; 2 Hale, P.C. 365.

IN POSSE. In possibility; not in actual existence. See In Esse.

IN POTESTATE PARENTIS. In the power of a parent. Inst. 1, 8, pr.; Id. 1, 9; 2 Bl.Comm. 498.

IN PRAEMISSORUM FIDEM. In confirmation or attestation of the premises. A notarial phrase.

IN PRAEPARATORIIS AD JUDICIUM FAVETUR ACTORI. 2 Inst. 57. In things preceding judgment the plaintiff is favored.

IN PRIESENTI. At the present time. 2 Bl. Comm. 166. Used in opposition to in futuro. Van Wyck v. Knevals, 1 S.Ct. 336, 106 U.S. 360, 27 L. Ed. 201.

IN PRIESENTIA MAJOR'S POTESTATIS, MINOR POTESTAS CESSAT. In the presence of the superior power, the inferior power ceases. Jenk. Cent. 214, c. 53. The less authority is merged in the greater. Broom, Max. 111.

IN PRENDER. L. Fr. In taking. A term applied to such incorporeal hereditaments as a party entitled to them was to take for himself; such as common. 2 Steph.Comm. 23; 3 Bl.Comm. 15. See In Render.

IN PRETIO EMPTIONIS ET VENDITIONIS, NAT1URALITER LICET CONTRAHENTIBUS SE CIRCUMVENIRE. In the price of buying and selling, it is naturally allowed to the contracting parties to overreach each other. 1 Story, Cont. 606.

IN PRIMIS. In the first place. A phrase used in argument.

IN PRINCIPIO. At the beginning.

IN PROMPTU. In readiness; at hand. Usually written impromptu.

IN PROPRIA CAUSA NEMO JUDEX. No one can be judge in his own cause. 12 Code, 13.

IN PROPRIA PERSONA. In one's own proper person.

It is a rule in pleading that pleas to the jurisdiction of the court must be plead in propria persona, because if pleaded by attorney they admit the jurisdiction, as an attorney is an officer of the court, and he is presumed to plead after having obtained leave, which admits the jurisdiction. Lawes, Pl. 91.

In some jurisdictions, however, this rule is no longer recognized. 1 C.J. 255.

IN QUO QUIS DELINQUIT, IN EO DE JURE EST PUNIENDUS. In whatever thing one offends, in that is he rightfully to be punished. Co. Litt. 233b; Wing. Max. 204, max. 58. The punishment shall have relation to the nature of the offense.

IN RE. In the affair; in the matter of; concerning; re. This is the usual method of entitling a judicial proceeding in which there are not adversary parties, but merely some res concerning which judicial action is to be taken, such as a bankrupt's estate, an estate in the probate court, a proposed public highway, etc. It is also sometimes used as a designation of a proceeding where one party makes an application on his own behalf, but such proceedings are more usually entitled "Ex parte _____."

IN RE COMMUNI MELIOR EST CONDITIO PROHIBENTIS. In common property the condition of the one prohibiting is the better. In other words, either co-owner has a right of veto against the acts of the other. Gulf Refining Co. of Louisiana v. Carroll, 145 La. 299, 82 So. 277, 279.

IN RE COMMUNI NEMINEM DOMINORUM JURE FACERE QUICQUAM, INVITO ALTERO, POSSE. One co-proprietor can exercise no authority over the common property against the will of the other. Dig. 10, 3, 28. In other words, either co-owner has a right of veto against the acts of the other. Gulf Refining Co. of Louisiana v. Carroll, 145 La. 299, 82 So. 277, 279.

IN RE COMMUNI POTIOR EST CONDITIO PROHIBENTIS. In a partnership the condition of one who forbids is the more favorable.

IN RE DUBIA, BENIGNIOREM INTERPRETATIONEM SEQUI, NON MINUS JUSTIUS EST QUAM TUTIUS. In a doubtful matter, to follow the more liberal interpretation is not less the juster than the safer course. Dig. 50, 17, 192, 1.

IN RE DUBIA, MAGIS INFICIATIO QUAM AFFIRMATIO INTELLIGENDA. In a doubtful matter, the denial or negative is to be understood, [or regarded,] rather than the affirmative. Godb. 37.

IN RE LUPANARI, TESTES LUPANARES ADMITTENT1UR. In a matter concerning a brothel, prostitutes are admitted as witnesses. Van Epps v. Van Epps, 6 Barb. (N.Y.) 320, 324.

IN RE PARI POTIOREM CAUSAM ESSE PROHIBENTIS CONSTAT. In a thing equally shared [by several] it is clear that the party refusing [to permit the use of it] has the better cause. Dig. 10, 3, 28. A maxim applied to partnerships, where one partner has a right to withhold his assent to the acts of his copartner. 3 Kent.Comm. 45.

IN RE PROPRIA INIQUUM ADMODUM EST ALICUI LICENTIAM TRIBUERE SENTENTIJE. It is extremely unjust that any one should be judge in his own cause.

IN REBUS (Lat.) In things, cases, or matters.

IN REBUS MANIFESTIS, ERRAT QUI AUCTORITATES LEGUM ALLEGAT; QUIA PERSPICUA VERA NON SUNT PROBANDA. In clear cases, he mistakes who cites legal authorities; for obvious truths are not to be proved. 5 Coke, 67a. Applied to cases too plain to require the support of authority; "because," says the report, "he who endeavors to prove them obscures them."

IN REBUS QU1E SUNT FAVORABILIA ANIMA, QUAMVIS SUNT DAMNOSA REBUS, FIAT ALIQUANDO EXTENSIO STATUTI. 10 Coke, 101. In things that are favorable to the spirit, though injurious to things, an extension of a statute should sometimes be made.

IN REGARD TO. Concerning; relating to; in respect of; with respect to; about. Hart v. Hart, 181 Iowa 527, 164 N.W. 849, 850.

IN REM. A technical term used to designate proceedings or actions instituted against the thing, in contradistinction to personal actions, which are said to be in personam. See In Personam.

It is true that, In a strict sense, a proceeding in rem is one taken directly against property, and has for its object the disposition of property, without reference to the title of individual claimants; but, in a larger and more general sense, the terms are applied to actions between parties, where the direct object is to reach and dispose of property owned by them, or of some interest therein. Such are cases commenced by attachment against the property of debtors, or instituted to partition real estate, foreclose a mortgage, or enforce a lien. So far as they affect property in this state, they are substantially proceedings in rem In the broader sense which we have mentioned. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 734, 24 L. Ed. 565; Continental Gin Co. v. Arnold, 66 Oki. 132, 167 P. 613, 617, L.R.A.1918B, 511.

In the strict sense of the term, a proceeding "In rem" is one which is taken directly against property or one which is brought to enforce a right in the thing itself. Austin v. Royal League, 316 Ill. 188, 147 N.E. 106, 109.

A divorce suit is a "suit in rem," the essential characteristic of which is found in the power of the state through the decree or judgment of its court to dispose of the subject-matter of the suit, the res, in accordance with the object of the suit, whether that subject-matter be physical property or the status of one or both of the parties litigant, which decree operates immediately and absolutely upoh the status of the suitor which is the res in the suit without the necessity of execution, attachment, or contempt proceedings to enforce it. Lister v. Lister, 86 N.J.Eq. 30, 97 A. 170, 173.

A proceeding "in rem" is in effect a proceeding against the owner, as well as a proceeding against the goods, for it is his breach of the law which has to be proven to establish the forfeiture, and it is his property which is sought to be forfeited. Mack v. Westbrook, 148 Ga. 690, 98 S.E. 339, 343.

Judgment in rem. See that title.

Quasi in rem. A term applied to proceedings which are not strictly and purely in rem, but are brought against the defendant personally, though the real object is to deal with particular property or subject property to the discharge of claims asserted; for example, foreign attachment, or proceedings to foreclose a mortgage, remove a cloud from title, or effect a partition. Freeman v. Alderson, 7 S.Ct. 165, 119 U.S. 187, 30 L.Ed. 372; Hill v. Henry, 66 N.J.Eq. 150, 57 A. 555.

IN REM ACTIO EST PER QUAM REM NOSTRAM QUIE AB ALIO POSSIDETUR PETIMUS, ET SEMPER ADVERSUS EUM EST QUI REM POSSIDET. The action in rem is that by which we seek our property which is possessed by another, and is always against him who possesses the property. Dig. 44, 7, 25; Bract. fol. 102.

IN RENDER. A thing is said to lie in render when it must be rendered or given by the tenant; as rent. It is said to lie in prender when it consists in the right in the lord or other person to take something. See In Prender.

IN REPUBLICA MAXIME CONSERVANDA SUNT JURA BELLI. In a state the laws of war are to be especially upheld. 2 Inst. 58.

IN RERUM NATURA. In the nature of things; in the realm of actuality; in existence. In a dilatory plea, an allegation that the plaintiff is not in rerum natura is equivalent to averring that the person named is fictitious. 3 Bl.Comm. 301.

In civil law, this phrase is applied to things. Inst. 2, 20, 7. It is a broader term than in rebus humanis: g. before quickening, an infant is in rerum natura, but not in rebus humanis; after quickening, he is in rebus humanis as well as in rerum natura. Calvinus, Lex.

IN RESTITUTIONEM, NON IN PCENAM HIERES SUCCEDIT. The heir succeeds to the restitution, not to the penalty. An heir may be compelled to make restitution of a sum unlawfully appropriated by the ancestor, but is not answerable criminally, as for a penalty. 2 Inst. 198.

IN RESTITUTIONIBUS BENIGNISSIMA INTERPRETATIO FACIENDA EST. Co.Litt. 112. The most benignant interpretation is to be made in restitutions.

IN SATISFACTIONIBUS NON PERMITTITUR AMPLIUS FIERI QUAM SEMEL FACTUM EST. In payments, more must not be received than has been received once for all. 9 Coke, 53.

IN SCRINIO JUDICIS. In the writing-case of the judge; among the judge's papers. "That is a thing that rests in scrinio judicis, and does not appear in the body of the decree." Hardr. 51.

IN SEPARALI. In several; in severalty. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 54, § 20.

IN SIMILI MATERIA. Dealing with the same or a kindred subject-matter.

IN SIMPLICI PEREGRINATIONE. In simple pilgrimage. Bract. fol. 338. A phrase in the old law of essoins. See In Generali Passagio.

IN SOLIDO. In the civil law. For the whole; as a whole. An obligation in solido is one where each of the several obligors is liable for the whole; that is, it is joint and several. Henderson v. Wadsworth, 6 S.Ct. 140, 115 U.S. 264, 29 L.Ed. 377. Possession in solidum is exclusive possession.

When several persons obligate themselves to the obligee by the terms "in solido," or use any other expressions which clearly show that they intend that each one shall be separately bound to perform the whole of the obligation, it is called an "obligation in solido" on the part of the obligors. Civ.Code La. art. 2082.

IN SOLIDUM. For the whole. Si plures sint fide jussores, quotquot erunt numero, singuli in solidum tenentur, if there be several sureties, however numerous they may be, they are individually bound for the whole debt. Inst. 3, 21, 4. In parte sive in solidum, for a part or for the whole. Id. 4, 1, 16. See Id. 4, 6, 20; Id. 4, 7, 2.

IN SOLO. In the soil or ground. In solo alieno, in another's ground. In solo proprio, in one's own ground. 2 Steph.Comm. 20.

IN SPECIE. Specific; specifically. Thus, to decree performance in specie is to decree specific performance. In kind; in the same or like form. A thing is said to exist in specie when it retains its existence as a distinct individual of a particular class.

IN STATU QUO. In the condition in which it was. See Status Quo. McReynolds v. Harrigfeld, 26 Idaho 26, 140 P. 1096, 1098.

IN STIPULATIONIBUS CUM QUIERITUR QUID ACTUM SIT VERBA CONTRA STIPULATOREM INTERPRETANDA SUNT. In the construction of agreements words are interpreted against the person using them. Thus, the construction of the stipulatio is against the stipulator, and the construction of the promissio against the promissor. Dig. 45, 1, 38, 18; Broom, Max. 599.

IN STIPULATIONIBUS, ID TEMPUS SPECTATOR QUO CONTRAHIMUS. In stipulations, the time when we contract is regarded. Dig. 50, 17, 144, 1.

IN STIRPES. In the law of intestate succession. According to the roots or stocks; by representation; as distinguished from succession per capita. See Per Stirpes; Per Capita.

IN SUBSIDIUM. In aid.

IN SUO QUISQUE NEGOTIO HEBETIOR EST QUAM IN ALIENO. Every one is more dull in his own business than in another's.

IN TALI CASU EDITUM ET PROVISUM. See In Casu Proviso.

IN TANTUM. In so much; so much; so far; so greatly. Reg. Orig. 97, 106.

IN TERMINIS TERMINANTIBUS. In terms of determination; exactly in point. 11 Coke, 40b. In express or determinate terms. 1 Leon. 93.

IN TERROREM. In terror or warning; by way of threat. Applied to legacies given upon condition that the recipient shall not dispute the validity or the dispositions of the will; such a condition being usually regarded as a mere threat.

IN TERROREM POPULI. Lat. To the terror of the people. A technical phrase necessary in indictments for riots. 4 Car. & P. 373.

IN TESTAMENTIS PLENIUS TESTATORIS INTENTIONEM SCRUTAMUR. In wills we more especially seek out the intention of the testator. 3 Bulst. 103; Broom, Max. 555.

IN TESTAMENTIS PLENIUS VOLUNTATES TESTANTIUM INTERPRETANTUR. Dig. 50, 17, 12. In wills the intention of testators is more especially regarded. "That is to say," says Mr. Broom, (Max., 568,) "a will will receive a more liberal construction than its strict meaning, if alone considered, would permit."

IN TESTAMENTIS RATIO TACITA NON DEBET CONSIDERARI, SED VERBA SOLUM SPECTARI DEBENT; ADEO PER DIVINATIONEM MENTIS A VERB'S RECEDERE DURUM EST. In wills an unexpressed meaning ought not to be considered, but the words alone ought to be looked to; so hard is it to recede from the words by guessing at the intention.

IN TESTIMONIUM. Lat. In witness; in evidence whereof.

IN THE FIELD. Any place, on land or water, apart from permanent cantonments or fortifications where military operations are being conducted. Hines v. Mikell, C.C.A., 259 F. 28, 30.

IN THE PEACE OF THE STATE. In definition of murder as unlawful and felonious killing of human being "in the peace of the state," the quoted phrase means the same as "in the king's peace" under the English common law, and negatives the idea that deceased was actually engaged in waging war against the state. State v. Corneille, 153 La. 929, 96 So. 813, 817.

IN TOTIDEM VERBIS. In so many words; in precisely the same words; word for word.

IN TOTO. In the whole; wholly; completely; as the award is void in toto.

IN TOTO ET PARS CONTINETUR. In the whole the part also is contained. Dig. 50, 17, 113.

IN TRADITIONIBUS SCRIPTORUM, NON QUOD DICTUM EST, SED QUOD GESTUM EST, INSPICITUR. In the delivery of writings, not what is said, but what is done, is looked to. 9 Coke, 137a.

IN TRAJECTU. In the passage over; on the voyage over. Sir William Scott, 3 C.Rob.Adm. 141.

IN TRANSITU. In transit; on the way or passage; while passing from one person or place to another. 2 Kent.Comm. 540-552. Amory Mfg. Co. v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 89 Tex. 419, 37 S.W. 856, 59 Am.St.Rep. 65. On the voyage. 1 C.Rob.Adm. 338.

IN UTROQUE JURE. In both laws; e., the civil and canon law.

IN VACUO. Without object; without concomitants or coherence.

IN VADIO. In gage or pledge. 2 Bl.Comm. 157.

IN VENTRE SA MERE. L. Fr. In his mother's womb; spoken of an unborn child.

IN VERAM QUANTITATEM FIDEJUSSOR TENEATUR, NISI PRO CERTA QUANTITATE ACCESSIT. Let the surety be holden for the true quantity, unless he agree for a certain quantity, Bean v. Parker, 17 Mass. 597.

IN VERBIS, NON VERBA, SED RES ET RATIO, QUIERENDA EST. Jenk. Cent. 132. In the construction of words, not the mere words, but the thing and the meaning, are to be inquired after.

IN VINCULIS. In chains; in actual custody. Gilb. Forum Rom. 97.

Applied also, figuratively, to the condition of a person who is compelled to submit to terms which oppression and his necessities impose on him. 1 Story, Eq.Jur. § 302.

IN VIRIDI OBSERVANTIA. Present to the minds of men, and in full force and operation.

IN VOCIBUS VIDENDUM NON A QUO SED AD QUID SUMATUR. In discourses, it is to be considered not from what, but to what, it is advanced. Ellesmere, Postn. 62.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF. The initial words of the concluding clause in deeds: "In witness whereof the said parties have hereunto set their hands," etc. A translation of the Latin phrase "in cujus rei testimonium."

INADEQUATE. Insufficient; disproportionate; lacking in effectiveness or in conformity to a prescribed standard or measure.

INADEQUATE CONSIDERATION. One not adequate or equal in value to the thing conveyed. Farrell v. Third Nat. Bank, 20 Tenn.App. 540, 101 S.W.2d 158, 163.

INADEQUATE DAMAGES. See Damages.

INADEQUATE PRICE. A term applied to indicate the want of a sufficient consideration for a thing sold, or such a price as would ordinarily be entirely incommensurate with its intrinsic value. State v. Purcell, 131 Mo. 312, 33 S.W. 13.

INADEQUATE REMEDY AT LAW. Within the meaning of the rule that equity will not entertain a suit if there is an adequate remedy at law, this does not mean that there must be a failure to collect money or damages at law, but the remedy is considered inadequate if it is, in its nature and character, unfitted or not adapted to the end in view, as, for instance, when the relief sought is preventive rather than compensatory. Cruickshank v. Bidwell, 20 S.Ct. 280, 176 U.S. 73, 44 L. Ed. 377.

INADMISSIBLE. That which, under the established rules of law, cannot be admitted or received; e. g., parol evidence to contradict a written contract.

INADVERTENCE. Heedlessness; lack of attention; want of care; carelessness; failure of a person to pay careful and prudent attention to the progress of a negotiation or a proceeding in court by which his rights may be affected. Used chiefly in statutory enumerations of the grounds on which a judgment or decree may be vacated or set aside; as, "mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect." Skinner v. Terry, 107 N.C. 103, 12 S.E. 118. State ex rel. Regis v. District Court of Second Judicial Dist. in and for Silver Bow County, 102 Mont. 74, 55 P.2d 1295, 1298.

INIEDIFICATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Building on another's land with one's own materials, or on one's own land with another's materials.

INALIENABLE. Not subject to alienation; the characteristic of those things which cannot be bought or sold or transferred from one person to another, such as rivers and public highways, and certain personal rights; e. g., liberty.

INAUGURATION. The act of installing or inducting into office with formal ceremonies, as the coronation of a sovereign, the inauguration of a president or governor, or the consecration of a prelate. A word applied by the Romans to the ceremony of dedicating a temple, or raising a man to the priesthood, after the augurs had been consulted.

INBLAURA. In old records. Profit or product of ground. Cowell.

INBOARD. In maritime law, and particularly with reference to the stowage of cargo, this term is contrasted with "outboard." It does not necessarily mean under deck, but is applied to a cargo so piled or stowed that it does not project over the "board" (side or rail) of the vessel. Allen v. St. Louis Ins. Co., 46 N.Y.Super.Ct. 181.

INBORH. In Saxon law. A security, pledge, or hypotheca, consisting of the chattels of a person unable to obtain a personal "borg," or surety.

INBOROW. A forecourt or gate-house. A certain barony was inborow and outborow between England and Scotland. Cowell.

INBOUND COMMON. An uninclosed common, marked out, however, by boundaries.

INC. Incorporated. Goldberg, Bowen & Co. v. Dimick, 169 Cal. 187, 146 P. 672, 673; Norwood Bldg. v. Jackson, • Tex.Civ.App., 175 S.W.2d 262, 265.

INCAPACITY. Want of capacity; want of power or ability to take or dispose; want of legal ability to act. Ellicott v. Ellicott, 90 Md. 321, 45 A. 183, 48 L.R.A. 58. Inefficiency; incompetency; lack of adequate power. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Richmond, Tex.Com.App., 291 S.W. 1085, 1087.

Legal incapacity

This expression implies that the person in view has the right vested in him, but is prevented by some impediment from exercising it; as in the case of minors, femes covert, lunatics, etc. An administrator has no right until letters are issued to him. Therefore he cannot benefit (as respects the time before obtaining letters) by a saving clause in a statute of limitations in favor of persons under a legal incapacity to sue. Cates v. Brattle, 1 Root (Conn.) 187.

Total incapacity

In Workmen's Compensation Acts, such disqualification from performing the usual tasks of a workman that he cannot procure and retain employment. Western Indemnity Co. v. Corder, Tex.Civ.App., 249 S.W. 316, 317; Georgia Casualty Co. v. Ginn, Tex.Civ.App., 272 S.W. 601, 603; Moore v. Peet Bros. Mfg. Co., 99 Kan. 443, 162 P. 295, 296. Incapacity for work is total not only so long as the injured employee is unable to do any work of any character, but also while he remains unable, as a result of his injury, either to resume his former occupation or to procure remunerative employment at a different occupation suitable to his impaired capacity. Such period of total incapacity may be followed by a period of partial incapacity, during which the injured employee is able both to procure and to perform work at some occupation suitable to his then-existing capacity, but less remunerative than the work in which he was engaged at the time of his injury. That situation constitutes "partial incapacity." Austin Bros. Bridge Co. v. Whitmire, 121 S.E. 345, 346, 31 Ga.App. 560. Synonymous with "total disability." Consolidation Coal Co. v. Crislip, 289 S.W. 270, 273, 217 Ky. 371. See Disability.

INCARCERATION. Imprisonment; confinement in a jail or penitentiary. See Imprisonment.

This term is seldom used in law, though found occasionally in statutes. When so used, it appears always to mean confinement by competent public authority or under due legal process, whereas "imprisonment" may be effected by a private person without warrant of law. and if unjustifiable is called "false imprisonment." No occurrence of such a phrase as "false incarceration" has been noted.

INCASTELLARE. To make a building serve as a castle. Jacob.

INCAUSTUM, or ENCAUSTUM. Ink. Fleta, 1, 2, c. 27, § 5.

INCAUTE FACTUM PRO NON FACTO RABETUB. A thing done unwarily (or unadvisedly) will be taken as not done. Dig. 28, 4, 1.

INCENDIARY. A house-burner; one guilty of arson; one who maliciously and willfully sets another person's building on fire.

INCENDIUM /ERE ALIENO NON EXUIT DEBITOREM. Cod. 4, 2, 11. A fire does not release a debtor from his debt.

INCEPTION. Commencement; opening; initiation. The beginning of the operation of a contract or will, or of a note, mortgage, lien, etc.; the beginning of a cause or suit in court. Oriental Hotel Co. v. Griffiths, 88 Tex. 574, 33 S.W. 652, 30 L.R.A. 765, 53 Am.St.Rep. 790.

INCERTA PRO NULLIS HABENTUR. Uncertain things are held for nothing. Da^{y}.Ir.K.B. 33.

INCERTA QUANTITAS VITIAT ACTUM. 1 Rolle R. 465. An uncertain quantity vitiates the act.

INCERTIE PERSONAE. Uncertain persons, as posthumous heirs, a corporation, the poor, a ju-ristic person, or persons who cannot be ascertained until after the execution of a will. Sohm.Inst. Rom.L.104, 458.

INCEST. The crime of sexual intercourse or cohabitation between a man and woman who are related to each other within the degrees wherein marriage is prohibited by law. People v. Stratton, 141 Cal. 604, 75 P. 166. Signs v. State, 35 Okl. Cr. 340, 250 P. 938, 940.

INCESTUOSI. Those offspring incestuously begotten. Mack.Rom.L. § 143.

INCESTUOUS ADULTERY. The elements of this offense are that defendant, being married to one person, has had sexual intercourse with another related to the defendant within the prohibited degrees. Cook v. State, 11 Ga. 53, 56 Am.Dec. 410.

INCESTUOUS BASTARDS. Incestuous bastards are those who are produced by the illegal connection of two persons who are relations within the degrees prohibited by law. Civ.Code La. art. 183.

INCH. A measure of length, containing one-twelfth part of a foot; originally supposed equal to three barleycorns.

Inch of candle. A mode of sale at one time in use among merchants. A notice is first given upon the exchange, or other public place, as to the time of sale. The goods to be sold are divided into lots, printed papers of which, and the conditions of sale, are published. When the sale takes place, a small piece of candle, about an inch long is kept burning, and the last bidder, when the candle goes out, is entitled to the lot or parcel for which he bids. Wharton.

Inch of water. The unit for the measurement of a volume of water or of hydraulic power, being the quantity of water which, under a given constant head or pressure, will escape through an orifice one inch square (or a circular orifice having a diameter of one inch) in a vertical plane. Jackson Milling Co. v. Chandos, 82 Wis. 437, 52 N. W. 759.

Miner's inch. The quantity of water which will escape from a ditch or reservoir through an orifice in its side one inch square, the center of the orifice being six inches below the constant level of the water, equivalent to about 1.6 cubic feet of water per minute. Defined by statute in Colorado as "an inch-square orifice under a five-inch pressure, a five-inch pressure being from the top of the orifice of the box put into the banks of the ditch to the surface of water." Mills' Ann.St.Colo. § 4643 (Comp.Laws 1921, § 4111). See Longmire v. Smith, 26 Wash. 439, 67 P. 246, 58 L.R.A. 308. The standard miner's inch of water, as fixed by St.Ca1.1901, p. 660, is the equivalent of 1 1/2 cubic feet of water per minute measured through any aperture or orifice, making it equivalent to one-fortieth of a second foot. Lillis v. Silver Creek & Panoche Land & Water Co., 32 Cal.App. 668, 163 P. 1040, 1043.

INCHARTARE. To give, or grant, and assure anything by a written instrument.

INCHOATE. Imperfect; partial; unfinished; begun, but not completed; as a contract not executed by all the parties. Good v. Crist, 23 Ohio App. 484, 156 N.E. 146, 148. Pacific Freight Lines v. Pioneer Express Co., 39 Cal.App.2d 609, 103 P.2d 1056, 1058.

INCHOATE DOWER. A wife's interest in the lands of her husband during his life, which may become a right of dower upon his death. Smith v. Shaw, 150 Mass. 297, 22 N.E. 924.

A contingent claim or possibility of acquiring dower by outliving husband and arises, not out of contract, but as an institution of law constituting a mere chose in action incapable of transfer by separate grant but susceptible of extinguishment, which is effected by wife joining with husband in deed, which operates as release or satisfaction of interest and not as conveyance. Auerbach v. Chase Nat. Bank of City of New York, 296 N.Y.S. 487, 489, 251 App. Div. 543.

INCHOATE INSTRUMENT. Instruments which the law requires to be registered or recorded are said to be "inchoate" prior to registration, in that they are then good only between the parties and privies and as to persons having notice. Wilkins v. McCorkle, 112 Tenn. 688, 80 S.W. 834.

INCHOATE INTEREST. An interest in real estate which is not a present interest, but which may ripen into a vested estate, if not barred, extinguished, or divested. Rupe v. Hadley, 113 Ind. 416, 16 N.E. 391.

INCHOATE LIEN. The lien of a judgment, from the day of its entry, subject to be defeated by its vacation, becoming a consummate lien if the motion for a new trial is thereafter overruled; such lien then relating back to the original entry of the judgment. Sterling v. Parker-Washington Co., 185 Mo.App. 192, 170 S.W. 1156, 1159.

INCHOATE RIGHT. In patent law. The right of an inventor to his invention while his application is pending which matures as "property" when the patent issues. Mullins Mfg. Co. v. Booth, C. C.A.Mich., 125 F.2d 660, 664.

INCIDENT. Used both substantively and adjectively of a thing which, either usually or naturally and inseparably, depends upon, appertains to, or follows another that is more worthy. Watts v. Copeland, 170 S.C. 449, 170 S.E. 780, 783. Used as a noun, it denotes anything which inseparably belongs to, or is connected with, or inherent in, another thing, called the "principal." In this sense, a court-baron is incident to a manor. Also, less strictly, it denotes anything which is usually connected with another, or connected for some purposes, though not inseparably. Thus, the right of alienation is incident to an estate in fee-simple, though separable in equity. Cromwell v. Phipps, Sur., 1 N.Y.S. 278; Mount Carmel Fruit Co. v. Webster, 140 Cal. 183, 73 P. 826.

INCIDENTAL. Depending upon or appertaining to something else as primary; something necessary, appertaining to, or depending upon another which is termed the principal; something incidental to the main purpose. The Robin Goodfellow, D.C.Wash., 20 F.2d 924, 925.

The term "incidental powers," within the rule that a corporation possesses only those powers which its charter confers upon it, either expressly or as incidental to its existence, means such powers as are directly and immediately appropriate to the execution of the powers expressly granted and exist only to enable the corporation to carry out the purpose of its creation. State ex inf. Harvey v. Missouri Athletic Club, 261 Mo. 576, 170 S. W. 904, 909, L.R.A. 1915C, 876, Ann.Cas.1916D, 931; State ex rel. Barrett v. First Nat. Bank, 297 Mo. 397, 249 S. W. 619, 622, 30 A.L.R. 918.

INCIDENTAL TO EMPLOYMENT. A risk is "incidental to employment" within Workmen's Compensation Act, when it belongs to or is connected with what a workman has to do in fulfilling his contract of service. Barresse v. Standard Silk Dyeing Co., 10 N.J.Misc. 892, 161 A. 653, 654.

INCIDERE. Lat. In the civil and old English law. To fall into; to fall out; to happen; to come to pass. Calvin. To fall upon or under; to become subject or liable to. Incidere in legem, to incur the penalty of a law. Brissonius.

INCILE. Lat. In the civil law. A trench. A place sunk by the side of a stream, so called because it is cut (incidatur) into or through the stone or earth. Dig. 43, 21, 1, 5. The term seems to have included ditches (f ossce) and wells, (pu*tei.)*

INCINERATION. Burning to ashes; destruction of a substance by fire, as, the corpse of a murdered person.

INCIPITUR. Lat. It is begun; it begins. In old practice, when the pleadings in an action at law, instead of being recited at large on the issue-roll, were set out merely by their commencements, this was described as entering the incipitur; e., the beginning.

INCISED WOUND. In medical jurisprudence. A cut or incision on a human body; a wound made by a cutting instrument, such as a razor. Burrill, Circ.Ev. 693; Whart. & S. Med. Jur. § 808.

INCITE. To arouse; urge; provoke; encourage; spur on; goad; stir up; instigate; set in motion; as, to "incite" a riot. Also, generally, in criminal law to instigate, persuade, or move another to commit a crime; in this sense nearly synonymous with "abet." Long v. State, 23 Neb. 33, 36 N.W. 310; United States v. Ault, D.C.Wash., 263 F. 800, 810; Commonwealth v. Egan, 113 Pa.Super. 375, 173 A. 764, 766.

INCIVILE. Lat. Irregular; improper; out of the due course of law.

INCIVILE EST, NISI TOTA LEGE PERSPECTA, UNA ALIQUA PARTICULA EJUS PROPOSITA, JUDICARE, VEL RESPONDERE. It is improper, without looking at the whole of a law, to give judgment or advice, upon a view of any one clause of it. Dig. 1, 3, 24.

INCIVILE EST, NISI TOTA SENTENTIA INSPECTA, DE ALIQUA PARTE JUDICARE. It is irregular, or legally improper, to pass an opinion upon any part of a sentence, without examining the whole. Hob. 171a.

INCIVISM. Unfriendliness to the state or government of which one is a citizen.

INCLAUSA. In old records. A home close or inclosure near the house. Paroch. Antiq. 31; Cowell.

INCLOSE. To surround; to encompass; to bound; fence, or hem in, on all sides. White Chapel Memorial Ass'n v. Willson, 260 Mich. 238, 244 N.W. 460. To shut up. "To inclose a jury," in Scotch practice, is to shut them up in a room by themselves. Bell. Union Pac. Ry. Co. v. Harris, 28 Kan. 210; Campbell v. Gilbert, 57 Ala. 569.

INCLOSED LANDS. Lands which are actually inclosed and surrounded with fences. Kimball v. Carter, 95 Va. 77, 27 S.E. 823, 38 L.R.A. 570.

INCLOSURE. In English law. Act of freeing land from rights of common, commonable rights, and generally all rights which obstruct cultivation and the productive employment of labor on the soil.

Land surrounded by some visible obstruction. Whittet v. Bertsch, 39 R.I. 31, 97 A. 18, 19, L.R.A. 1916E, 710. An artificial fence around one's estate. See Close.

INCLOSURE ACTS. English statutes regulating the subject of inclosure. The most notable was that of 1801.

INCLOSURE COMMISSION ACT, 1845. The statute 8 and 9 Vict. c. 118, establishing a board of commissioners for England and Wales and empowering them, on the application of persons interested to the amount of one-third of the value of the land, and provided the consent of persons interested to the amount of two-thirds of the land and of the lord of the manor (in case the land be waste of a manor) be ultimately obtained, to inquire into the case and to report to parliament as to the expediency of making the inclosure. 1 Steph.Com. 655.

INCLUDE. (Lat. inclaudere, to shut in, keep within). To confine within, hold as in an inclosure, take in, attain, shut up, contain, inclose, comprise, comprehend, embrace, involve. Including may, according to context, express an enlargement and have the meaning of and or in addition to, or merely specify a particular thing already included within general words theretofore used. Miller v. Johnston, 173 N.C. 62, 91 S.E. 593. Prairie Oil and Gas Co. v. Motter, D.C.Kan., 1 F.Supp. 464, 468; Decorated Metal Mfg. Co. v. U. S., 12 Ct.Cust.App. 140; In re Sheppard's Estate, 179 N.Y.S. 409, 412, 189 App.Div. 370; Rose v. State, 184 S.W. 60, 61, 122 Ark. 509; United States ex rel. Lyons v. Hines, 103 F.2d 737, 740, 70 App.D.C. 36, 122 A.L.R. 674.

INCLUSIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERIUS. The inclusion of one is the exclusion of another. The certain designation of one person is an absolute exclusion of all others. n Coke, 58b; Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d 321, 325.

INCLUSIVE. Embraced; comprehended; comprehending the stated limits or extremes. Opposed to "exclusive."

INCLUSIVE SURVEY. In land law, one which includes within its boundaries prior claims excepted from the computation of the area within such boundaries and excepted in the grant. Stockton -v. Morris, 19 S.E. 531, 39 W.Va. 432.

INCOLA. Lat. In the civil law. An inhabitant; .a dweller or resident. Properly, one who has transferred his domicile to any country.

INCOLAS DOMICILIUM FACIT. Residence creates domicile. Arnold v. United Ins. Co., 1 Johns. Cas., N.Y., 363, 366.

INCOME. The return in money from one's business, labor, or capital invested; gains, profits, or private revenue. In re Slocum, 169 N.Y. 153, 62 N.E. 130.

The gain derived from capital, from labor or effort, or both combined, including profit or gain through sale or conversion of capital ; income is not a gain accruing to capital or a growth in the value of the investment, but is a gain, a profit, something of exchangeable value, proceeding from the property, severed from the capital, however invested or employed, and coming in, being derived, that is, received or drawn by the recipient for his separate use, benefit, and disposal. Goodrich v. Edwards, 41 S.Ct. 390, 255 U.S. 527, 65 L.Ed. 758. The true increase in amount of wealth which comes to a person during a stated period of time. Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation v. Filoon, 310 Mass. 374, 38 N.E.2d 693, 700.

INCOME TAX. A tax relating to the product or income from property or from business pursuits; a tax on the yearly profits arising from property, professions, trades, or offices; a tax on a person's income, emoluments, profits, and the like, or the excess thereof over a certain amount. Interstate Bond Co. v. State Revenue Commission of Georgia, 50 Ga.App. 744, 179 S.E. 559.

An income tax is not levied upon property, funds, or profits, but upon the right of an individual or corporation to receive income or profits. Paine v. City of Oshkosh, 190 Wis. 69, 208 N.W. 790, 791. Under various constitutional and statutory provisions, a tax on incomes is sometimes said to be an excise tax and not a tax on property, Hattiesburg Grocery Co. v. Robertson, 126 Miss. 34, 88 So. 4, 5, 25 A.L.R. 748; nor on business, but a tax on the proceeds arising therefrom, Young v. Illinois Athletic Club, 310 Ill. 75, 141 N.E. 369, 371, 30 A.L.R. 985. But in other cases an income tax is said to be a property and not a personal or excise tax: Commonwealth v. P. Horillard Co., 129 Va. 74, 105 S.E. 683, 684; Kennedy v. Commissioner of Corporations & Taxation, 256 Mass. 426, 152 N.E. 747, 748.

An "excise tax" is an indirect charge for the privilege of following an occupation or trade, or carrying on a business; while an "income tax" is a direct tax imposed upon income, and is as directly imposed as is a tax on land. United States v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co., D.C.Pa., 262 F. 188, 190.

INCOME TAX DEFICIENCY. Exists whenever taxpayer has failed to make adequate return of income, notwithstanding lack of determination by commissioner or his agents. Moore v. Cleveland Ry. Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 108 F.2d 656, 659.

INCOMMODUM NON SOLVIT ARGUMENTUM. An inconvenience does not destroy an argument.

INCOMMUNICATION. In Spanish law. The condition of a prisoner who is not permitted to see or to speak with any person visiting him during his confinement. A person accused cannot be subjected to this treatment unless it be expressly ordered by the judge, for some grave offense, and it cannot be continued for a longer period than is absolutely necessary. This precaution is resorted to for the purpose of preventing the accused from knowing beforehand the testimony of the witnesses, or from attempting to corrupt them and concert such measures as will efface the traces of his guilt. As soon, therefore, as the danger of his doing so has ceased, the interdiction ceases likewise. Escriche.

INCOMMUTABLE. Not capable of or entitled to be commuted. See Commutation.

INCOMPATIBILITY. Incapability of existing or being exercised together.

Thus the relations of landlord and of tenant cannot exist in one man at the same time in reference to the same land. "Incompatibility" which at common law operates to vacate one office by reason of incumbency of another exists when the character and nature of offices or relation to each other are such that one person should not hold both because of the contrariety and antagonism which would result toward incumbent of one office in attempt to discharge duties of other office faithfully and impartially. It is apparent when the holder of one office is subordinate to or has supervision over the other, or has the power of appointment, removal, or punishment of that other, or the audit of his accounts, or the regulation of his compensation. State ex rel. Schenck v. Barrett, 121 Conn. 237, 184 A. 379, 381.

INCOMPATIBLE. Not compatible, incapable of harmonizing or agreeing, mutually repelling, incongruous. And two or more relations, offices, functions, or rights which cannot naturally, or may not legally, exist in or be exercised by the same person at the same time, are said to be incompatible. People v. Green, 46 How.Prac., N.Y., 170; Com. v. Sheriff, 4 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 276; State v. Johnson, 37 N.M. 280, 21 P.2d 813, 89 A.L.R. 1368. See, also, Incompatibility.

INCOMPETENCY. Lack of ability, legal qualification, or fitness to discharge the required duty. In re Leonard's Estate, 95 Mich. 295, 54 N.W. 1082.

In New York, the word "incompetency" is used to designate the condition or legal status of a person who is unable or unfitted to manage his own affairs by reason of insanity, imbecility, or feeble-mindedness, and for whom, therefore, a committee may be appointed; and such a person is designated and "incompetent." In re Palestine's Estate, 270 N. Y.S. 844, 151 Misc. 100.

In French law. Inability or insufficiency of a judge to try a cause brought before him, proceeding from lack of jurisdiction.

INCOMPETENT EVIDENCE. Evidence which is not admissible under the established rules of evidence; evidence which the law does not permit to be presented at all, or in relation to the particular matter, on account of lack of originality or of some defect in the witness, the document, or the nature of the evidence itself. Texas Brewing Co. v. Dickey, Tex.Civ.App., 43 S.W. 578; Bell v. Bumstead, 14 N.Y.S. 697, 60 Hun. 580.

As applied to evidence, the word "incompetent" means not proper to be received; inadmissible, as distinguished from that which the court should admit for the consideration of the jury, though they may not find it worthy of credence.

INCONCLUSIVE. That which may be disproved or rebutted; not shutting out further proof or consideration. Applied to evidence and presumptions.

INCONSISTENT. Mutually repugnant or contradictory; contrary, the one to the other, so that both cannot' stand, but the acceptance or establishment of the one implies the abrogation or abandonment of the other; as, in speaking of "inconsistent defenses," or the repeal by a statute of "all laws inconsistent herewith." Borough of Oakland v. Board of Conservation and Development, 98 N.J.L. 99, 118 A. 787, 788. Berry v. City of Fort Worth, Tex.Civ.App., 110 S.W.2d 95, 103.

INCONSULTO. Lat. In the civil law. Unadvisedly; unintentionally. Dig. 28, 4, 1.

INCONTESTABILITY CLAUSE. In life policy means that within the limits of the coverage, the policy shall stand unaffected by any defense that it was invalid in its inception or thereafter became invalid by reason of a condition broken by insured. Berkshire Life Ins. Co. v. Weinig, 290 N.Y. 6, 47 N.E.2d 418, 421. Jolley v. Jefferson Standard Life Ins. Co., 199 N.C. 269, 154 S.E. 400, 402.

INCONTINENCE. Want of chastity; indulgence in unlawful carnal connection. State v. Hewlin, 128 N.C. 571, 37 S.E. 952.

INCONTINENT!. See In Continenti.

INCONVENIENCE. In the rule that statutes should be so construed as to avoid "inconvenience," this means, as applied to the public, the sacrifice or jeoparding of important public interests or hampering the legitimate activities of government or the transaction of public business, and, as applied to individuals, serious hardship or injustice. Black, Interp.Laws, 102; Betts v. U. S., C.C.A.Mass., 132 F. 237, 65 C.C.A. 452.

INCOPOLITUS. A proctor or vicar.

INCORPORALIA BELLO NON ADQUIRUNTUR. Incorporeal things are not acquired by war. 6 Maule & S. 104.

INCORPORAMUS. We incorporate. One of the words by which a corporation may be created in England. 1 Bl.Comm. 473; 3 Steph.Comm. 173.

INCORPORATE. To create a corporation; to confer a corporate franchise upon determinate persons.

To declare that another document shall be taken as part of the document in which the declaration is made as much as if it were set out at length therein. Railroad Co. v. Cupp, 8 Ind.App. 388, 35 N.E. 703.

INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY. A society of attorneys and solicitors whose function it is to carry out the acts of parliament and orders of court with reference to articled clerks; to keep an alphabetical roll of solicitors; to issue certificates to persons duly admitted and enrolled, and to exercise a general control over the conduct of solicitors in practice, and to bring cases of misconduct before the judges. 3 Steph. Corn. 217.

INCORPORATION. The act or process of forming or creating a corporation; the formation of a legal or political body, with the quality of perpetual existence and succession, unless limited by the act of incorporation. Abbott v. Limited Mut. Compensation Ins. Co., 30 Cal.App.2d 157, 85 P.2d 961, 964.

The method of making one document of any kind become a part of another separate document by referring to the former in the latter, and declaring that the former shall be taken and considered as a part of the latter the same as if it were fully set out therein. This is more fully described as "incorporation by reference." If the one document is copied at length in the other, it is called "actual incorporation."

In the civil law. The union of one domain to another.

INCORPOREAL. Without body; not of material nature; the opposite of "corporeal," (q. v.).

INCORPOREAL CHATTELS. A class of incorporeal rights growing out of or incident to things personal; such as patent-rights and copyrights. 2 Steph.Comm. 72. See Boreel v. New York, 2 Sandf. (N.Y.) 559.

INCORPOREAL HEREDITAMENTS. See Hereditaments.

INCORPOREAL PROPERTY. In the civil law. That which consists in legal right merely. The same as choses in action at common law.

INCORPOREAL THINGS. In the civil law. Things which can neither be seen nor touched, such as consist in rights only, such as the mind alone can perceive. Inst. 2, 2; Civ. Code La. art. 460; Sullivan v. Richardson, 33 Fla. 1, 14 So. 692.

INCORRIGIBLE. Incapable of being corrected, amended, or improved; with respect to juvenile offenders, unmanageable by parents or guardians. People v. Purcell, 70 Colo. 399, 201 P. 881. Shinn v. Barrow, Tex.Civ.App., 121 S.W.2d 450, 451.

INCORRIGIBLE ROGUE. A species of rogue or offender, described in the statutes 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 38. 4 Steph.Comm. 309.

INCORRUPTIBLE. That which cannot be affected by immoral or debasing influences, such as bribery or the hope of gain or advancement.

INCREASE. Enlargement, growth, development, increment, addition, accession, extension, production, profit, interest, issue. Heitzig v. Goetten, 347 Ill. 619, 180 N.E. 428, 433. The produce of land; the offspring of animals. Sorrells v. Sigel-Campion Live Stock Commission Co., 27 Colo.App. 154, 148 P. 279, 280.

INCREASE, AFFIDAVIT OF. Affidavit of payment of increased costs, produced on taxation.

INCREASE, COSTS OF. In English law. It was formerly a practice with the jury to award to the successful party in an action the nominal sum of 40s. only for his costs; and the court assessed by their own officer the actual amount of the successful party's costs; and the amount so assessed, over and above the nominal sum awarded by the jury, was thence called "costs of increase." Lush, Com. Law Pr. 775. The practice has now wholly ceased. Rapal. & Law.

INCREMENT. An increasing, growth in bulk, quantity, number, value, etc.; enlargement, increase. That which is gained or added; the act or process of increasing, augmenting, or growing; enlargement, that which is added; increase; opposed to decrement. In re Corning's Will, 289 N. Y.S. 1101, 1103, 160 Misc. 434.

INCREMENTUM. Lat. Increase or improvement, opposed to decrementum or abatement.

INCRIMINATE. To charge with crime; to expose to an accusation or charge of crime; to involve oneself or another in a criminal prosecution or the danger thereof; as, in the rule that a witness is not bound to give testimony which would tend to incriminate him. In re Dendy, Tex. Civ.App., 175 S.W.2d 297, 302.

INCRIMINATING ADMISSION. An acknowledgment of facts tending to establish guilt. People v. Gibbs, 349 Ill. 83, 181 N.E. 628, 630.

INCRIMINATING CIRCUMSTANCE. A fact or circumstance, collateral to the fact of the commission of a crime, which tends to show either that such a crime has been committed or that some particular person committed it. Davis v. State, 51 Neb. 301, 70 N.W. 984.

INCRIMINATORY STATEMENT. A statement which tends to establish guilt of the accused or from which, with other facts, his guilt may be inferred, or which tends to disprove some defense. Shellman v. State, 157 Ga. 788, 122 S.E. 205, 207.

INCROACHMENT. An unlawful gaining upon the right or possession of another. See Encroachment.

INCULPATE. To impute blame or guilt; to accuse; to involve in guilt or crime.

INCULPATORY. In the law of evidence. Going or tending to establish guilt; intended to establish guilt; criminative. Burrill, Circ. Ev. 251, 252; People v. White, 35 Cal.App.2d 61, 94 P.2d 617, 621.

INCUMBENT. A person who is in present possession of an office; one who is legally authorized to discharge the duties of an office. State v. Blakemore, 15 S.W. 960,104 Mo. 340.

In ecclesiastical law, the term signifies a clergyman who is in possession of a benefice.

INCUMBER. To incumber land is to make it subject to a charge or liability; e. g., by mortgaging it. Incumbrances include not only mortgages and other voluntary charges, but also liens, lites pendentes, registered judgments, and writs of execution, etc. Sweet; Newhall v. Insurance Co., 52 Me. 181.

INCUMBRANCE. Any right to, or interest in, land which may subsist in another to the diminution of its value, but consistent with the passing of the fee. Huyck v. Andrews, 113 N.Y. 81, 20 N. E. 581, 3 L.R.A. 789, 10 AntSt.Rep. 432; Miller v. Schwinn, Inc., 113 F.2d 748, 751, 752, 753, 72 App. D.C. 282.

A claim, lien, charge, or liability attached to and binding real property. Harrison v. Railroad Co., 91 Iowa, 114, 58 N.W. 1081; Johnson v. Bridge, 60 Cal.App. 629, 213 P. 512, 513. An incumbrance may be a mortgage, Funk v. Voneida, 11 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 112, 14 Am.Dec. 617; a judgment lien, Bowman v. Franklin Ins. Co., 40 Md. 631; an attachment, Kelsey v. Remer, 43 Conn. 129, 21 Am. Rep. 638; an inchoate right of dower, Bigelow v. Hubbard, 97 Mass. 195; a mechanic's lien, Redmon v. Insurance Co., 51 Wis. 293, 8 N.W. 226, 37 Am. Rep. 830; a lease, Shunk v. Fuller, 118 Kan. 682, 236 P. 449, 451; Estep v. Bailey, 94 Or. 59, 185 P. 227, 229; restriction in deed, Hyman v. Boyle, 239 Mich. 357, 214 N.W. 163, 164; encroachment of a building, Gamorsil Realty Corporation v. Graef, 220 N.Y.S.221, 222, 128 Misc. 596; an easement or right of way, Krotzer v. Clark, 178 Cal. 736, 174 P..657 658; Thackeray v. Knight, 57 Utah, 21, 192 P. 263, 265; accrued and unpaid taxes, Ex parte Helm, 209 Ala. 1, 95 So. 546; the statutory right of redemption, Roy v. F. M. Martin & Son, 16 Ala.App. 650, 81 So. 142, 143.

The term "incumbrance" is sometimes used to denote a burden or charge on personal property as e. g. a chattel mortgage on a stock of goods. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Jones, 31 Ariz. 8, 250 P. 248, 251.

INCUMBRANCER. The holder of an incumbrance, e. g., a mortgage, on the estate of another. De Voe v. Rundle, 33 Wash. 604, 74 P. 836.

INCUMBRANCES, COVENANT AGAINST. See Covenant.

INCUR. To have liabilities cast upon one by act or operation of law, as distinguished from contract, where the party acts affirmatively. Beekman v. Van Dolsen, 70 Hun, 288, 24 N.Y.S. 414. Boise Development Co. v. City of Boise, 26 Idaho 347, 143 P. 531, 534.

INCURABLE DISEASE. Any disease which has reached an incurable stage in the patient afflicted therewith, according to general state of knowledge of the medical profession. Freeman v. State Board of Medical Examiners, 54 Okl. 531, 154 P. 56, 57, L.R.A.1916D, 436; State Board of Medical Examiners v. Jordan, 92 Wash. 234, 158 P. 982, 985.

INCURRAMENTUM. L. Lat. The liability to a fine, penalty, or amercement. Cowell.

INDE. Lat. Thence; thenceforth; thereof; thereupon; for that cause.

INDE DAVE LEGES NE FORTIOR OMNIA POSSET. Laws are made to prevent the stronger from having the power to do everything. Da[y]. Ir. K. B. 36.

INDEBITATUS. Lat. Indebted. Nunquam indebitatus, never indebted. The title of the plea substituted in England for nil debet.

INDEBITATUS ASSUMPSIT. Lat. Being indebted, he promised or undertook. That form of the action of assumpsit in which the declaration alleges a debt or obligation to be due from the defendant, and then avers that, in consideration thereof, he promised to pay or discharge the same.

This form of action is brought to recover in damages the amount of the debt or demand and upon the trial the jury will, according to evidence, give verdict for whole or part of that sum; 3 Bla.Com. 155; Selw.N.P. 68; whereas debt and covenant proceed directly for the debt, and damages are given only for the detention of the debt.

INDEBITI SOLUTIO. Lat. In the civil and Scotch law. A payment of what is not due. When made through ignorance or by mistake, the amount paid might be recovered back by an action termed "conditio indebiti." (Dig. 12, 6.) Bell.

INDEBITUM. In the civil law. Not due or owing. (Dig. 12, 6.) Calvin.

INDEBTEDNESS. The state of being in debt, without regard to the ability or inability of the party to pay the same. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. 343; Jewell v. Nuhn, 173 Iowa 112, 155 N.W. 174, 177, Ann.Cas.1918D, 356. The owing of a sum of money upon a certain and express agreement. City of Perry v. Johnson, 233 P. 679, 680, 106 Okl. 32.

Strictly the word implies an absolute or complete liabinity. McCrea v. First Nat. Bank, 162 Minn. 455, 203 N.W. 220; West Florida Grocery Co. v. Teutonia Fire Ins. Co., 74 Fla. 220, 77 So. 209, 211, L.R.A.1918B, 968. A contingent liability, such as that of a surety before the principal has made default, does not constitute indebtedness. On the other hand, the money need not be immediately payable. Obligations yet to become due constitute indebtedness, as well as those already due. St. Louis Perpetual Ins. Co. v. Goodfellow, 9 Mo. 149. And in a broad sense and in common understanding the word may mean anything that is due and owing. Jones v. Heinzle, 75 Ind.App. 431, 130 N.E. 815, 816.

Involuntary indebtedness. Of a county, a liability imposed by law, which the county is not privileged to evade or postpone. Dexter Horton Trust & Savings Bank v. Clearwater County, D.C. Idaho, 235 F. 743, 756; Wingate v. Clatsop County, 71 Or. 94, 142 P. 561, 562.

Voluntary indebtedness. One which a county Is at liberty to evade or postpone until means are provided for the payment of the expenses incident thereto; opposed to involuntary indebtedness. Wingate v. Clatsop County, 71 Or. 94, 142 P. 561, 562.

INDECENCY. An act against good behavior and a just delicacy. Timmons v. U. S., C.C.A.Ohio, 85 F. 205, 30 C.C.A. 74.

This is scarcely a technical term of the law, and is not susceptible of exact definition or description in its juridical uses. The question whether or not a given act, publication, etc., is indecent is for the court and jury in the particular case.

INDECENT. Offensive to common propriety; offending against modesty or delicacy; grossly vulgar; obscene; lewd; unseemly; unbecoming; indecorous; unfit to be seen or heard. Hutcheson v. State, 24 Ga.App. 54, 99 S.E. 715; Wood v. State, 45 Ga.App. 783, 165 S.E. 908.

Indecent assault. The act of a male person taking indecent liberties with the person of a female. Martin v. Jansen, 113 Wash. 290, 193 P. 674, 675; Commonwealth v. Gregory, 132 Pa.Super. 507, 1 A.2d 501, without her consent and against her will, but with no intent to commit the crime of rape.

Indecent exhibition. Any exhibition contra bonos mores, as the taking a dead body for the purpose of dissection or public exhibition. 2 T.R. 734.

Indecent exposure. Exposure to sight of the private parts of the body in a lewd or indecent manner in a public place. It is an indictable offense at common law, and by statute in many of the states. Commonwealth v. Broadland, 315 Mass. 20, 51 N.E.2d 961, 962. See, further, Exposure of Person.

Indecent liberties. In the statutory offense of "taking indecent liberties with the person of a female child," this phrase means such liberties as the common sense of society would regard as indecent and improper. According to some authorities, it involves an assault or attempt at sexual intercourse, (State v. Kunz, 90 Minn. 526, 97 N. W. 131,) but according to others, it is not necessary that the liberties or familiarities should have related to the private parts of the child, (People v. Hicks, 98 Mich. 86, 56 N.W. 1102.)

Indecent publications. Such as are offensive to modesty and delicacy; obscene; lewd; tending to the corruption of morals. Dunlop v. U. S., 17 S. Ct. 375, 165 U.S. 486, 41 L.Ed. 799.

Public indecency. This phrase has no fixed legal meaning, is vague and indefinite, and cannot, in itself, imply a definite offense. The courts, by a kind of judicial legislation, in England and the United States, have usually limited the operation of the term to public displays of the naked person, the publication, sale, or exhibition of obscene books and prints, or the exhibition of a monster, —acts which have a direct bearing on public morals, and affect the body of society. Irven v. State, 138 Tex.Cr.R. 368, 136 S.W.2d 608, 609.

INDECIMABLE. In old English law. That which is not titheable, or liable to pay tithe. 2 Inst. 490.

INDEFEASIBLE. That which cannot be defeated, revoked, or made void. This term is usually applied to an estate or right which cannot be defeated.

INDEFENSUS. Lat. In old English practice. Undefended; undenied by pleading. A defendant who makes no defense or plea. Blount.

INDEFINITE. Without fixed boundaries or distinguishing characteristics; not definite, determinate, or precise. In re Knoll's Estate, 262 N.Y.S. 619, 146 Misc. 613.

INDEFINITE FAILURE OF ISSUE. A failure of issue not merely at the death of the party whose issue are referred to, but at any subsequent period, however remote. 1 Steph.Comm. 562. A failure of issue whenever it shall happen, sooner or later, without any fixed, certain, or definite period within which it must happen. 4 Kent.Comm. 274. Anderson v. Jackson, 16 Johns. (N.Y.) 399, 8 Am.Dec. 330.

INDEFINITE LEGACY. See Legacy.

INDEFINITE NUMBER. A number which may be increased or diminished at pleasure.

INDEFINITE PAYMENT. In Scotch law. Payment without specification. Indefinite payment is where a debtor, owing several debts to one creditor, makes a payment to the creditor, without specifying to which of the debts he means the payment to be applied. See Bell.

INDEFINITUM AEQUIPOLLET UNIVERSAL!. The undefined is equivalent to the whole. 1 Vent. 368.

INDEFINITUM SUPPLET LOCUM UNIVERSALIS. The undefined or general supplies the place of the whole. Branch. Princ. 4 Co. 77.

INDEMNIFICATUS. Lat. Indemnified. See Indemnify.

INDEMNIFY. To save harmless; to secure against loss or damage; to give security for the reimbursement of a person in case of an anticipated loss falling upon him. Hasbrouck v. Carr, 19 N.M. 586, 145 P. 133, 136.

To make good; to compensate; to make reimbursement to one of a loss already incurred by him. Cousins v. Paxton & Gallagher Co., 98 N. W. 277, 122 Iowa 465; U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Williams, 148 Md. 289, 129 A. 660, 664.

INDEMNIS. Lat. Without hurt, harm, or damage; harmless.

INDEMNITEE. The person who, in a contract of indemnity, is to be indemnified or protected by the other. Hasbrouck v. Carr, 19 N.M. 586, 145 P. 133, 136.

INDEMNITOR. The person who is bound, by an indemnity contract, to indemnify or protect the other. Hasbrouck v. Carr, 19 N.M. 586, 145 P. 133, 136.

INDEMNITY. A collateral contract or assurance, by which one person engages to secure another against an anticipated loss or to prevent him from being damnified by the legal consequences ot an act or forbearance on the part of one of the parties or of some third person. National Bank of Tifton v. Smith, 142 Ga. 663, 83 S.E. 526, 528, L. R.A.1915B, 1116.

The term is also used to denote a compensation given to make the person whole from a loss already sustained; as where the government gives indemnity for private property taken by it for public use. Proctor v. Dillon, 235 Mass. 538, 129 N.E. 265, 269. It means, also, restitution or reimbursement. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Georgia Power Co., 51 Ga.App. 579, 181 S.E. 111.

A legislative act, assuring a general dispensation from punishment or exemption from prosecution to persons involved in offenses, omissions of official duty, or acts in excess of authority, is called an indemnity; strictly it is an act of indemnity. Loss. See Loss.

Thus, insurance is a contract of indemnity. So an indemnifying bond is given to a sheriff who fears to proceed under an execution where the property is claimed by a stranger.

INDEMNITY AGAINST LIABILITY. A contract to indemnify when liability of person indemnified arises, irrespective of whether person indemnified has suffered actual loss. Indemnity against loss, on the other hand, does not render indemnitor liable until person indemnified makes payment or sustains loss. City of Topeka v. Ritchie, 102 Kan. 384, 170 P. 1003, 1004.

INDEMNITY BOND. A bond for the payment of a penal sum conditioned to be void if the obligor shall indemnify and save harmless the obligee against some anticipated loss.

INDEMNITY CONTRACT. A contract between two parties whereby the one undertakes and agrees to indemnify the other against loss or damage arising from some contemplated act on the part of the indemnitor, or from some responsibility assumed by the indemnitee, or from the claim or demand of a third person, that is, to make good to him such pecuniary damage as he may suffer. See Wicker v. Hoppock, 6 Wall. 99, 18 L.Ed. 752.

INDEMNITY LANDS. Lands granted to railroads, in aid of their construction, being portions of the public domain, to be selected in lieu of other parcels embraced within the original grant, but which were lost to the railroad by previous disposition or by reservation for other purposes. Altschul v. Clark, 39 Or. 315, 65 P. 991.

INDEMNITY POLICY. As distinguished from general liability policy, a policy on which no action can be maintained except to indemnify for money actually paid. Most v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Mo.App., 196 S.W. 1064, 1065.

See Indemnity insurance and Liability insurance under Insurance.

INDEMPNIS. The old form of writing indemnis. Townsh. Pl. 19. So, indempnificatus for indemnificatus.

INDENIZATION. The act of making a denizen, or of naturalizing.

INDENT, n. In American law. A certificate or indented certificate issued by the government of the United States at the close of the Revolution, for the principal or interest of the public debt. Webster; U. S. v. Irwin, 26 Fed.Cas. 546.

INDENT, v. To cut in a serrated or waiving line. In old conveyancing, if a deed was made by more parties than one, it was usual to make as many copies of it as there were parties, and each was cut or indented (either in acute angles, like the teeth of a saw, or in a waving line) at the top or side, to tally or correspond with the others, and the deed so made was called an "indenture." Anciently, both parts were written on the same piece of parchment, with some word or letters written between them through which the parchment was cut, but afterwards, the word or letters being omitted, indenting came into use, the idea of which was that the genuineness of each part might be proved by its fitting into the angles cut in the other. But at length even this was discontinued, and at present the term serves only, to give name to the species of deed executed by; two or more parties, as opposed to a deed-poll (q. v.) 2 Bl. Comm, 295.

To bind by indentures; to apprentice; as to indent a young man to a shoe-maker. Webster.

INDENTURE. A deed to which two or more persons are parties, and in which these enter into reciprocal and corresponding grants or obligations towards each other; whereas a deed-poll is properly one in which only the party making it executes it, or binds himself by it as a deed, though the grantors or grantees therein may be several in number. 3 Washb, Real Prop. 311, See Indent, v.

INDENTURE OF A FINE. Indentures made and engrossed at the chirographer's office and delivered to the cognizor and the cognizee, usually beginning with the words: "Hcec est finalis concordia." And then reciting the whole proceedings at length. 2 Bla, Corn. 351.

INDENTURE OF APPRENTICESHIP. A contract in two parts, by which a person, generally a minor, is bound to serve another in his trade, art, or occupation for a stated time, on condition of being instructed in the same.

INDEPENDENCE. The state or condition of being free from dependence, subjection, or control. A state of perfect irresponsibility. Political independence is the attribute of a nation or state which is entirely autonomous, and not subject to the government, control, or dictation of any exterior power.

INDEPENDENT. Not dependent; not subject to control, restriction, modification, or limitation from a given outside source.

INDEPENDENT ADJUSTER. A person, firm or corporation who holds himself or itself out for employment to more than one insurance company, is not a regular employee of the company, does not work exclusively for one company and is paid in each case assigned for time consumed and expenses incurred. Cole v. State, 37 N.Y.S.2d 1002, 1006, 179 Misc. 172.

INDEPENDENT ADVICE. Concerning a trust deed or will which must be shown where a fiduciary relationship exists, means that the donor had the preliminary benefit of conferring fully and privately upon the subject of his intended gift with a person who was not only competent to inform him correctly as to its legal effect, but who was, furthermore, so disassociated from the interests of the donee as to be in a position to advise with the donor impartially and confidentially as to the consequences to himself of his proposed benefaction. Madden v. Glathart, 125 Kan. 466, 265 P. 42, 45.

INDEPENDENT CONTRACT, See Contract.

INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR. One who, exercising an independent employment, contracts to do a piece of work according to his own methods and without being subject to the control of his employer except as to the result of the work. People v. Orange County Road Const, Co., 175 N.Y. 84, 67 N.E. 129, 65 L.R.A. 33. Fox v. Dunning, 124 Okl. 228, 255 P. 582, 584; Bell v. State, 153 Md. 333, 138 A. 227, 228, 58 A.L.R. 1051.

One who exercises an independent employment and contracts to do a piece of work according to his own judgment and methods, and without being subject to his employer except as to the results of the work, and who has the right to employ and direct the action of the workmen, independently of such employer and freed from any superior authority in him to say how the specified work shall be done, or what the laborers shall do as it progresses. Johnson v. Asheville Hosiery Co., 199 N.C. 38, 153 S.E. 591, 593. It is very generally held that the right of control as to the mode of doing the work contracted for is the principal consideration in determining whether one employed is an "independent contractor" or servant. Thompson v. Twiss, 90 Conn. 444, 97 A. 328, 330, L.R.A.1916E, 506. If the employee is merely subject to the control or direction of the employer as to the result to be obtained, he is an independent contractor ; if he is subject to the control of the employer as to the means to be employed, he is not an independent contractor. Gulf Refining Co. v. Wilkinson, 94 Fla. 664, 114 So. 503. Nettleship v. Shipman, 161 Wash. 292, 296 P. 1056, 1057.

INDEPENDENT COVENANT, See Covenant.

INDEPENDENTER SE HABET ASSECURATIO A VIAGGIO NAVIS. The voyage insured is an independent or distinct thing from the voyage of the ship. 3 Kent, Comm. 318, note.

INDETERMINATE. That which is uncertain, or not particularly designated; as if I sell you one hundred bushels of wheat, without stating what wheat. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 950.

INDETERMINATE OBLIGATION. See Obligation.

INDETERMINATE SENTENCE. A sentence to imprisonment for the maximum period defined by law, subject to termination by the parole board or other agency at any time after service of the minimum period. Such a sentence is invalid unless specifically authorized by statute. 24 C.J.S. p. 1217.

INDEX. A book containing references, alphabetically arranged, to the contents of a series or collection of volumes; or an addition to a single volume or set of volumes containing such references to its contents.

INDEX ANIMI SERMO. Language is the exponent of the intention. The language of a statute or instrument is the best guide to the intention. Broom, Max, 622, INDIAN COUNTRY. As the term is used in the federal statutes, is a country to which the Indians retained the right of use and occupancy, involving under certain restrictions freedom of action and of enjoyment in their capacity as a distinct people, and ceases to be such when their title is extinguished, unless by virtue of some reservation expressed at the time and clearly appearing. Schaap v. United States, C.C.A.Ark., 210 F. 853, 855; Royal Brewing Co. v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co., D.C.Kan., 211 F. 146, 148. This term does not necessarily import territory owned and occupied by Indians, but it means all those portions of the United States designated by this name in the legislation of congress. Waters v. Campbell, 4 Sawy. 121, Fed.Cas. No.17,264.

INDIAN DEPREDATIONS ACTS. As early as May 19, 1796, an act was passed by congress, providing an eventual indemnification to citizens of the United States for depredations committed by Indians in taking or destroying their property; 1 St.L. 472. Other acts of a similar character were passed from time to time. By the act of March 3, 1891, congress conferred on the court of claims jurisdiction of claims for property taken and destroyed by Indians.

INDIAN RESERVATION. A part of public domain set aside by proper authority for use and occupation of tribe or tribes of Indians. Peters v. Pauma School Dist. of San Diego County, 91 Cal. App, 792, 267 P. 576, 577; United States v. Parton, D.C.N.C., 46 F.Supp. "843, 844.

INDIAN TITLE. Claim of Indian tribes of right, because of immemorial occupancy, to roam certain territory to exclusion of any other Indians. Northwestern Bands of Shoshone Indians v. U. S., Ct, Cl., 65 S.Ct. 690, 692, 324 U.S. 335, 89 L.Ed. 985.

INDIAN TRIBE. A separate and distinct community or body of the aboriginal Indian race of men found in the United States. Montoya v. U. S., 21 S.Ct. 358, 180 U.S. 261, 45 L.Ed. 521.

INDIANS. The aboriginal inhabitants of North America. Frazee v. Spokane County, 29 Wash. 278, 69 P. 782.

INDICARE, Lat. In the civil law. To show or discover. To fix or tell the price of a thing. Calvin. To inform against; to accuse.

INDICATIF. An abolished writ by which a prosecution was in some cases removed from a court-christian to the queen's bench. Enc. Lond, INDICATION. In the law of evidence. A sign or token; a fact pointing to some inference or conclusion. Burrill, Circ. -EY. 251, 252, 263, 275.

INDICATIVE EVIDENCE. This is not evidence properly so called, but the mere suggestion of evidence proper, which may possibly be procured if the suggestion is followed up. Brown.

INDICAVIT. In English practice. A writ of prohibition that lies for a patron of a church, whose clerk is sued in the spiritual court by the clerk of another patron, for tithes amounting to a fourth part of the value of the living. 3 Bl.Comm. 91; 3 Steph.Comm. 711. So termed from the emphatic word of the Latin form. Reg.Orig. 35b, 36.

IN DICTA. Signs; indications. Circumstances which point to the existence of a given fact as probable, but not certain. For example, "indicia of partnership" are any circumstances which would induce the belief that a given person was in reality, though not ostensibly, a member of a given firm.

The term is much used in the civil law in a sense nearly or entirely synonymous with circumstantial evidence. It denotes facts which give rise to inferences, rather than the inferences themselves. Graham Ice Cream Co. v. Petros, 127 Neb. 172, 254 N.W. 869.

INDICIUM. In the civil law. A sign or mark. A species of proof, answering very nearly to the circumstantial evidence of the common law. Best, Pres. p. 13, § 11, note; Wills, Circ. Ev, 34.

INDICT, See Indictment.

INDICTABLE. Proper or necessary to be prosecuted by process of indictment. Indictable offenses embrace common-law offenses or statutory offenses the punishments for which are infamous. Lakes v. Goodloe, 195 Ky, 240, 242 S.W. 632, 639.

INDICTED. Charged in an indictment with a criminal offense. See Indictment.

INDICTEE. A person indicted.

INDICTIO. In old public law. A declaration; a proclamation. Indictio belli, a declaration or indiction of war. An indictment.

INDICTION, CYCLE OF. A mode of computing time by the space of fifteen years, instituted by Cbnstantine the Great; originally the period for the payment of certain taxes. Some of the charters of King Edgar and Henry III. are dated by indictions. Wharton.

INDICTMENT. An accusation in writing found and presented by a grand jury, legally convoked and sworn, to the court in which it is impaneled, charging that a person therein named has done some act, or been guilty of some omission, which, by law, is a public offense, punishable on indictment. Kennedy v. State, 86 Tex.Cr.R. 450, 216 S.W. 1086; State v. Engler, 217 Iowa 138, 251 N.W. 88.

A presentment differs from an indictment in that it is an accusation made by a grand jury of their own motion, either upon their own observation and knowledge, or upon evidence before them; while an indictment is preferred at the suit of the government, and is usually framed in the first instance by the prosecuting officer of the government, and by him laid before, the grand jury, to be found or ignored. An information resembles in its form and substance an indictment, but is filed at the mere discretion of the proper law officer of the government, without the intervention or approval of a grand jury, and an affidavit is a charge made and preferred by an individual. 2 Story,

Const. §§ 1784, 1786; People v. Foster, 198 Cal. 112, 243 P. 667, 670.

In Scotch law. The form of process by which a criminal is brought to trial at the instance of the lord advocate. Where a private party is a principal prosecutor, he brings his charge in what is termed the "form of criminal letters."

Joint Indictment

When several offenders are joined in the same indictment, as when principals in the first and second degree, and accessaries before and after the fact, are all joined in the same indictment. 2 Hale, P.C. 173; Brown.

INDICTMENT DE FELONY EST CONTRA PACEM DOMINI REGIS, CORONAM ET DIGNITATEM SUAM, IN GENERE ET NON IN INDIVIDUO; QUIA IN ANGLIA NON EST INTERREGNUM. Jenk. Cent. 205. Indictment for felony is against the peace of our lord the king, his crown and dignity in general, and not against his individual person; because in England there is no interregnum.

INDICTOR. He who causes another to be indicted. The latter is sometimes called the "indictee."

INDIFFERENT. Impartial; unbiased; disinterested. People v. Vermilyea, 7 Cow. (N.Y.) 122; Fox v. Hills, 1 Conn. 307.

INDIGENA. In old English law. A subject born; one born within the realm, or naturalized by act of parliament. Co.Litt. 8a. The opposite of "alienigena," (q. v.).

INDIGENT. In a general sense, one who is needy and poor, or one who has not sufficient property to furnish him a living nor anyone able to support him to whom he is entitled to look for support. Storrs Agricultural School v. Whitney, 54 Conn. 342, 8 A. 141.

INDIGENT INSANE PERSON. An insane person with insufficient estate to pay for his maintenance in the hospital, after providing for those who could claim his support. Massachusetts Gen eral Hospital v. Inhabitants of Belmont, 233 Mass. 190, 124 N.E. 21, 23.

INDIGNITY. In the law of divorce, a species of cruelty addressed to the mind, sensibilities, self-respect, or personal honor of the subject, rather than to the body, and defined as "unmerited contemptuous conduct towards another; any action towards another which manifests contempt for him; contumely, incivility, or injury accompanied with insult." Goodman v. Goodman, 80 Mo.App. 281; 1 Bish. Mar. & Div. § 826; O'l-Tern v. O'Hern, 206 Mo.App. 651, 228 S.W. 533, 536.

The phrase "indignities to the person," as used in statutes, has reference to bodily indignities, as distinguished from such as may be offered to the mind, sensibilities, or reputation. Kurtz v. Kurtz, 38 Ark. 123. But compare Miller v. Miller, 78 N.C. 105.

INDIRECT. Not direct in relation or connection; not having an immediate bearing or application; not related in the natural way. Runyon v. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co., 48 Ohio App. 251, 192 N.E. 882, 883. Almost always used in law in opposition to "direct," though not the only antithesis of the latter word, as the terms "collateral" and "cross" are sometimes used in contrast with "direct"

As to indirect "Attack," "Confession," "Contempt," and "Tax," see those titles.

INDIRECT EVIDENCE. Is that which only tends to establish the issue by proof of various facts sustaining by their consistency the hypothesis claimed. It consists of both inferences and presumptions. Lake County v. Neilon, 44 Or. 14, 74 P. 212, 214.

See, also, Circumstantial Evidence; Inference; Presumption.

INDIRECT TAX. A tax upon some right or privilege or corporate franchise. Madison Suburban Utility Dist. of Davidson County v. Carson, 232 S.W.2d 277, 280, 191 Tenn. 300; a tax laid upon the happening of an event as distinguished from its tangible fruits. Chickering v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, C.C.A.1, 118 F.2d 254, 258.

INDISPENSABLE. That which cannot be spared, omitted, or dispensed with.

INDISPENSABLE EVIDENCE. That without which a particular fact cannot be proved. Ballinger's Ann. Codes & St. Or. 1901, § 689 (Code 1930, § 9-113).

INDISPENSABLE PARTIES. In a suit in equity, those who not only have an interest in the subject-matter of the controversy, but an interest of such a nature that a final decree cannot be made without either affecting their interests or leaving the controversy in such a condition that its final determination may be wholly inconsistent with equity and good conscience. Kendig v. Dean, 97 U.S. 425, 24 L.Ed. 1061. State of Washington v. United States, C.C.A.Or. & Wash., 87 F.2d 421, 426, 427, 429, 431.

INDISTANTER. Forthwith; without delay.

INDITEE. L. Fr. In old English law. A person indicted. Mirr. c. 1, § 3; 9 Coke, pref.

INDIVIDUAL. As a noun, this term denotes a single person as distinguished from a group or class, and also, very commonly, a private or natural person as distinguished from a partnership, corporation, or association; but it is said that this restrictive signification is not necessarily inherent in the word, and that it may, in proper cases, include artificial persons. State v. Bell Telephone Co., 36 Ohio St. 310, 38 Am.Rep. 583.

As an adjective, "individual" means pertaining or belonging to, or characteristic of, one single person, either in opposition to a firm, association, or corporation, or considered in his relation thereto.

INDIVIDUAL ASSETS. In the law of partnership, property belonging to a member of a partnership as his separate and private fortune, apart from the assets or property belonging to the firm as such or the partner's interest therein.

INDIVIDUAL DEBTS. Such as are due from a member of a partnership in his private or personal capacity, as distinguished from those due from the firm or partnership. Goddard v. Hapgood, 25 Vt. 360, 60 Am.Dec. 272.

INDIVIDUAL SYSTEM OF LOCATION. A term formerly used in Pennsylvania to designate the location of public lands by surveys, in which the land called for by each warrant was separately surveyed. Ferguson v. Bloom, 144 Pa. 549, 23 A. 49.

INDIVIDUALLY. Separately and personally, as distinguished from jointly or officially, and as opposed to collective or associate action or common interest. Southern Distributing Co. v. Carraway, 189 N.C. 420, 127 S.E. 427, 428.

INDIVIDUUM. Lat. In the civil law. That cannot be divided. Calvin.

INDIVISIBLE. Not susceptible of division or apportionment; inseparable; entire. Thus, a contract, covenant, consideration, etc., may be divisible or indivisible; e., separable or entire. Garon v. Credit Foncier Canadien, 37 R.I. 273, 92 A. 561, 564. See, also, Contract.

INDIVISUM. Lat. That which two or more persons hold in common without partition; undivided.

INDORSAT. In old Scotch law. Indorsed. 2 Pitc, Crim, Tr. 41.

INDORSE. To write a name on the back of a paper or document. Bills of exchange and promissory notes are indorsed by a party's writing his name on the back. Hartwell v. Hemmenway, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 117.

"Indorse" is a technical term, having sufficient legal certainty without words of more particular description. Brooks v. Edson, 7 Vt. 351.

See In Dorso,

INDORSEE. The person to whom a bill of exchange, promissory note, bill of lading, etc., is assigned by indorsement.

INDORSEE IN DUE COURSE. An indorsee in due course is one who, in good faith, in the ordinary course of business, and for value, before its apparent maturity or presumptive dishonor, and without knowledge of its actual dishonor, acquires a negotiable instrument duly indorsed to him, or indorsed generally, or payable to the bearer. More v. Finger, 128 Cal. 313, 60 P. 933.

INDORSEMENT. The act of a payee, drawee, accommodation indorser, or holder of a bill, note, check, or other negotiable instrument, in writing his name upon the back of the same, with or without further or qualifying words, whereby the property in the same is assigned and transferred to another.

That which is so written upon the back of a negotiable instrument. State v. Hearn, 115 Ohio St. 340, 154 N.E. 244, 245.

In the law of negotiable instruments, a new and substantive contract by which title to the instrument is transferred and by which indorser becomes a party to the instrument and is liable, on certain conditions for its payment. Johnson v. Beickey, 64 Utah, 43, 228 P. 189, 191. In this respect indorsement differs from a common-law assignment. Jones County Trust & Savings Bank v. Kurt, 192 Iowa, 965, 182 N.W. 409, 413.

One who writes his name upon a negotiable instrument, otherwise than as a maker or acceptor, and delivers it, with his name thereon, to another person, is called an "indorser," and his act is called "indorsement."

The word "indorsement" is also used with reference to writs, insurance policies, certificates of stock, etc. The term as used in the Uniform Stock Transfer Act contemplates a writing passing or attempting to pass title or an interest. Stoltz v. Carroll, 99 Ohio St. 289, 124 N.E. 226, 231. As applied to a writ or warrant "indorsement" is an entry made on the back thereof. Gondas Gondas, 99 N.J.Eq. 473, 134 A. 615, 617.

Accommodation indorsement

In the law of negotiable instruments, one made by a third person without any consideration, but merely for the benefit of the holder of the instrument, or to enable the maker to obtain money or credit on it. Unless otherwise explained, it is understood to be a loan of the indorser's credit without restriction. Young v. Exchange Bank of Kentucky, 152 Ky. 293, 153 S.W. 444, 445, Ann.Cas.1915B, 148.

Blank indorsement

One made by the mere writing of the indorser's name on the back of the note or bill, without mention of the name of any person in whose favor the indorsement is made, but with the implied understanding that any lawful holder may fill in his own name above the indorsement if he so chooses. Northern Trading Co. v. Drexel State Bank of Chicago, 37 N.D. 521, 164 N.W. 151, 154; Aufderheide v. Moeller, 221 Mo.App. 442, 281 S.W. 965, 967.

Conditional indorsement

One by which the indorser annexes some condition (other than the failure of prior parties to pay) to his liability. The condition may be either precedent or subsequent. 1 Daniel, Neg.Inst. 697.

Full indorsement

One by which the indorser orders the money to be paid to some particular person by name; it differs from a blank indorsement, which consists merely in the name of the indorser written on the back of the instrument. Kilpatrick v. Heaton, 3 Brev., S.C., 92; Lee v. Chillicothe Branch of State Bank, 15 Fed.Cas. 153.

Irregular indorsement

One made by a third person before delivery of the note to the payee; an indorsement in blank by a third person above the name of the payee, or when the payee does not indorse at all. Bank of Bellows Falls v. Dorset Marble Co., 61 Vt. 106, 17 Atl. 43; Metropolitan Bank v. Muller, 50 La.Ann. 1278, 24 South. 295, 69 Am.St.Rep. 475.

Proper indorsement

Such indorsement as the law merchant requires to authorize payment to the holder of the instrument. Security State Bank v. State Bank of Brantford, N. D., 31 N.D. 454, 154 N.W. 282, 283.

Qualified indorsement

One which restrains or limits, or qualifies or enlarges, the liability of the indorser, in any manner different from what the law generally imports as his true liability, deducible from the nature of the instrument. Chitty, Bills, 261; Stover Bank v. Welpman, Mo.App., 284 S.W. 177, 180. A transfer of a bill of exchange or promissory note to an indorsee, without any liability to the indorser. The words usually employed for this purpose are "sans recours," without recourse. 1 Bouv.Inst. No. 1138.

Regular indorsement

An indorsement in blank by a third person under the name of the payee or after delivery of the note to him. Bank of Bellows Falls v. Dorset Marble Co., 61 Vt. 106, 17 Atl. 42.

Restrictive indorsement

One which stops the negotiability of the instrument, or which contains such a definite direction as to the payment as to preclude the indorsee from making any further transfer of the instrument. People's Bank v. Jefferson County Sav. Bank, 106 Ala. 524, 17 So. 728, 54 Am.St.Rep. 59. Defined by statute in some states as an indorsement which either prohibits the further negotiation of the instrument, or constitutes the indorsee the agent of the indorser, or vests the title in the indorsee in trust for or to the use of some other person. Negotiable Instruments Law N. D. § 36 (Comp.Laws 1913, § 6921) ; Bates' Ann.St.Ohio 1904, 3172h (Gen.Code, § 8141).

Special indorsement

An indorsement in full, which specifically names the indorsee. Carolina Sav. Bank v. Florence Tobacco Co., 45 S. C; 373, 23 S.E. 139.

Special indorsement of writ

In English practice. The writ of summons in an action may, under Order iii. 6, be indorsed with the particulars of the amount sought to be recovered in the action, after giving credit for any payment or set-off ; and this special indorsement (as it is called) of the writ is applicable in all actions where the plaintiff seeks merely to recover a debt or liquidated demand in money payable by the defendant, with or without interest, arising upon a contract, express or implied, as, for instance, on a bill of exchange, promissory note, check, or other simple contract debt, or on a bond or contract under seal for payment of a liquidated amount of money, or on a statute where the sum sought to be recovered is a fixed sum of money or in the nature of a debt, or on a guaranty, whether under seal or not. Brown.

INDORSER. He who indorses; e., being the payee or holder, writes his name on the back of a bill of exchange, etc.

INDUBITABLE PROOF. Evidence which is not only found credible, but is of such weight and directness as to make out the facts alleged beyond a doubt. Jermyn v. McClure, 195 Pa. 245, 45 A. 938.

INDUCE. To bring on or about, to affect, cause, to influence to an act or course of conduct, lead by persuasion or reasoning, incite by motives, prevail on. State v. Stratford, 55 Idaho 65, 37 P.2d 681, 682.

INDUCEMENT. In Contracts. The benefit or advantage which the promisor is to receive from a contract is the inducement for making it. Collins v. Harris, 130 Wash. 394, 227 P. 508, 509.

In Criminal Evidence. Motive; that which leads or tempts to the commission of crime. Burrill, Circ. Ev. 283.

In Pleading. That portion of a declaration or of any subsequent pleading in an action which is brought forward by way of explanatory introduction to the main allegations. Brown. Houston v. Tyler, 140 Mo. 252, 36 S.W. 654.

INDUCLE. In International Law. A truce; a suspension of hostilities; an agreement during war to abstain for a time from warlike acts.

In Old Maritime Law. A period of twenty days after the safe arrival of a vessel under bottomry, to dispose of the cargo, and raise the money to pay the creditor, with interest.

In Old English Practice. Delay or indulgence allowed a party to an action; further time to appear in a cause. Bract. fol. 352b; Fleta, lib. 4, c.. 5, § 8.

In Scotch Practice. Time allowed for the performance of an act. Time to appear to a citation. Time to collect evidence or prepare a defense.

Induciae legales. In Scotch law. The days between the citation of the defendant and the day of appearance; the days between the test day and day of return of the writ.

INDUCT. To put in enjoyment or possession, especially to introduce into possession of an office or benefice, with customary ceremonies, to bring in, initiate, to be put formally in possession, inaugurate or install. State ex rel. Slattery v. Raupp, 303 Mo. 684, 263 S.W. 834, 835.

INDUCTI SUNT IN CARCEREM ET IMPARCATI. See Imparcare.

INDUCTIO. Lat. In the civil law. Obliteration, by drawing the pen or stylus over the writing. Dig. 28, 4; Calvin.

INDUCTION. In ecclesiastical law. The ceremony by which an incumbent who has been instituted to a benefice is vested with full possession of all the profits belonging to the church, so that he becomes seised of the temporalities of the church, and is then complete incumbent. It is performed by virtue of a mandate of induction directed by the bishop to the arch-deacon, who either performs it in person, or directs his precept to one or more other clergymen to do it. Phillim. Ecc. Law, 477.

In military law. Induction is complete where a man successfully passes the physical examination and is accepted by the army for training and service, and all the steps prescribed by statute and regulations having the force of law have been taken, whether he takes the oath administered to him or not. United States ex rel. Diamond v. Smith, D.C.Mass., 47 F.Supp. 607, 609.

INDULGENCE. In the Roman Catholic Church. A remission of the punishment due to sins, granted by the pope or church, and supposed to save the sinner from purgatory. Its abuse led to the Reformation in Germany. Wharton. Forbearance, (q. v.)

INDULTO. In Ecclesiastical law. A dispensation granted by the pope to do or obtain something contrary to the common law.

In Spanish Law. The condonation or remission of the punishment imposed on a criminal for his offense. This power is exclusively vested in the king.

INDUMENT. Endowment, (q. v.)

INDUSTRIAL AND PROVIDENT SOCIETIES. Societies formed in England for carrying on any labor, trade, or handicraft, whether wholesale or retail, including the buying and selling of land and also (but subject to certain restrictions) the business of banking.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS. Schools (established by voluntary contribution) in which industrial training is provided, and in which children are lodged, clothed, and fed, as well as taught.

INDUSTRIAL TRACK. One connecting with main line track and used and equipped for moving freight in carloads to or from one or more industries thereby reached and served, in incidental services such as loading, reloading, or storing, and in incidental switching or yard movements. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Texas & P. R. Co., C.C.A. Tex., 4 F.2d 904, 906, 907; Miller Engineering Co. v. Louisiana Ry. & Na[y]. Co., 144 La. 786, 81, So. 314, 317.

INDUSTRIAM, PER. Lat. A qualified property in animals ferce naturce may be acquired per industriam, e., by a man's reclaiming and making them tame by art, industry, and education; or by [g]o confining them within his own immediate power that they cannot escape and use their natural liberty. 2 Steph.Comm. 5.

INDUSTRY. Any department or branch of art, occupation, or business conducted as a means of livelihood or for profit; especially, one which employs much labor and capital and is a distinct branch of trade. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. State, 83 Okl. 161, 201 P. 260, 264; Dessen v. Department of Labor and Industries of Washington, 190 Wash. 69, 66 P.2d 867, 869.

INEBRIATE. A person addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors; an habitual drunkard. Taylor v. Koenigstein, 128 Neb. 809, 260 N.W. 544. Maher v. Brown, 225 Iowa 341, 280 N.W. 553, 554.

INE, CODE OF. A code of the West Saxons dating from 688 to 695. Adopted by Alford, probably with alterations. Seebohm, Tribal Customs, 386.

INEFFICIENCY. Quality of being incapable or indisposed to do the things required of an officer. Holmes v. Osborn, 57 Ariz. 522, 115 P.2d 775, 783.

INELIGIBILITY. Disqualification or legal incapacity to be elected to an office. Thus, an alien or naturalized citizen is ineligible to be elected president of the United States. Carroll v. Green, 148 Ind. 362, 47 N.E. 223.

This incapacity arises from various causes; and a person may be incapable of being elected to one office who may be elected to another; the incapacity may also be perpetual or temporary.

INELIGIBLE. Disqualified to be elected to an office; also disqualified to hold an office if elected or appointed to it. State v. Murray, 28 Wis. 99, 9 Am.Rep. 489; State ex rel. Graham v. Hall, 73 N. D. 428, 15 N.W.2d 736, 739.

INESSE POTEST DONATION!, MODUS, CONDITIO SIVE CAUSA; UT MODUS EST; SI CONDITIO; QUIA CAUSA. In a gift there may be manner, condition, and cause; as [ut] introduces a manner; if, [si,] a condition; because, [quia,] a cause. Dyer, 138.

INESCAPABLE PERIL. Within last clear chance doctrine, means peril which the plaintiff is helpless to avoid by his own efforts, but which requires action on part of defendant to avert it. Melenson v. Howell, 344 Mo. 1137, 130 S.W.2d 555, 560.

INEST DE JURE. Lat. It is implied of right; it is implied by law.

INEVITABLE. Incapable of being avoided; fortuitous; transcending the power of human care, foresight, or exertion to avoid or prevent, and therefore suspending legal relations so far as to excuse from the performance of contract obligations, or from liability for* consequent loss.

INEVITABLE ACCIDENT. An unavoidable accident; one produced by an irresistible physical cause; an accident which cannot be .prevented by human skill or foresight, but results from natural causes, such as lightning or storms, perils of the sea, inundations or earthquakes, or sudden death or illness. By irresistible force is meant an interposition of human agency, from its nature and power absolutely uncontrollable. Brousseau v. The Hudson, 11 La.Ann. 428; Leland v. Empire Engineering Co., 108 A. 570, 575, 135 Md. 208.

An accident is "inevitable", so as to preclude recovery on ground of negligence, if person by whom it occurs neither has nor is legally bound to have sufficient power to avoid it or prevent its injuring another. Stephens v. Virginia Elec. & Power Co., 184 Va. 94, 34 S.E.2d 374, 377.

Inevitable accident occurs where a vessel is pursuing a lawful avocation in a lawful manner, using the proper precautions against danger, and an accident occurs. The highest degree of caution that can be used is not required. It is enough that it is reasonable under the circumstances; such as is usual in similar cases, and has been found by long experience to be sufficient to answer the end in view,- the safety of life and property. The Grace Girdler, 7 Wall. 196, 19 L.Ed. 113. Inevitable accident is only when the disaster happens from natural causes, without negligence or fault on either side, and when both parties have endeavored, by every means in their power, with due care and caution, and with a proper display of nautical skill, to prevent the occurrence of the accident. The Philip J. Kenny, C.C.A.N.J., 60 F.2d 457, 458.

INEWARDUS. A guard; a watchman. Domesday.

INFALISTATUS. In old English law. Exposed upon the sands, or seashore. A species of punishment mentioned in Hengham. Cowell.

INFAMIA. Lat. Infamy; ignominy or disgrace.

By infamia juris is meant infamy established by law as the consequence of crime; infamia facti is where the party is supposed to be guilty of such crime, but it has not been judicially proved. Comm. v. Green, 17 Mass. 515, 541.

INFAMIS. Lat. In Roman law. A person whose right of reputation was diminished (involving the loss of some of the rights of citizenship) either on account of his infamous avocation or because of conviction for crime. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 135.

INFAMOUS. Shameful or disgraceful. Stevens v. Wilber, 136 Or. 599, 300 P. 329, 330.

INFAMOUS CRIME. See Crime.

INFAMOUS PUNISHMENT. See Punishment.

INFAMY. A qualification of a man's legal status produced by his conviction of an infamous crime and the consequent loss of honor and credit, which, at common law, rendered him incompetent as a witness, and by statute in some jurisdictions entails other disabilities. State v. Clark, 60 Kan. 450, 56 P. 767.

INFANCY. Minority; the state of a person who is under the age of legal majority,—at common law, twenty-one years. According to the sense in which this term is used, it may denote the condition of the person merely with reference to his years, or the contractual disabilities which nonage entails, or his status with regard to other powers or relations. Keating v. Railroad Co., 94 Mich. 219, 53 N.W. 1053.

Natural infancy. A period of non-responsible life, which ends with the seventh year. Wharton.

INFANGENTHEF. In old English law. A privilege of lords of certain manors to judge any thief taken within their fee. See Outfangthef.

INFANS. Lat. In the civil law. A child under the age of seven years; so called "quasi impos fandi," (as not having the faculty of speech.) Cod. Theodos, 8, 18, 8.

INFANS NON MULTUM A FURIOSO DISTAT. An infant does not differ much from a lunatic. Bract. 1. 3, c. 2, § 8; Dig. 50, 17, 5, 40; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 223, 224, 242.

INFANT. A person within age, not of age, or not of full age; a person under the age of twenty-one years; a minor. Co. Litt. 171b; 1 Bl.Comm. 463-466; 2 Kent, Comm. 233. Beavers v. Southern Ry. Co., 212 Ala. 600, 103 So. 887, 889.

INFANTIA. Lat. In the civil law. The period of infancy between birth and the age of seven years. Calvin.

INFANTICIDE. The murder or killing of an infant soon after its birth. The fact of the birth distinguishes this act from "feticide" or "procuring abortion," which terms denote the destruction of the fetus in the womb. See, also, Prolicide.

INFANTS' MARRIAGE ACT. The statute 18 & 19 Viet. c. 43. By virtue of this act every infant, (if a male, of twenty, or, if a female, of seventeen, years,—section 4,) upon or in contemplation of marriage, may, with the sanction of the chancery division of the high court, make a valid settlement or contract for a settlement of property. Wharton.

INFANZON. In Spanish law. A person of noble birth, who exercises within his domains and inheritance no other rights and privileges than those conceded to him. Escriche.

INFECTION. In medical jurisprudence. The transmission of disease or disease germs from one person to another, either directly by contact with morbidly affected surfaces, or more remotely through inhalation, absorption of food or liquid tainted with excremental matter, contact with contaminated clothing or bedding, or other agencies.

A distinction is sometimes made between "infection" and "contagion," by restricting the latter term to the communication of disease by direct contact. Grayson v. Lynch, 163 U.S. 468, 16 S.Ct. 1064, 41 L.Ed. 230. But "infection" is the wider term and in proper use includes "contagion," and is frequently extended so as to include the local inauguration of disease from other than human sources, as from miasmas, poisonous plants, etc. In another, and perhaps more accurate sense, contagion is the entrance or lodgment of pathogenic germs in the system as a result of direct contact; infection is their fixation in the system or the inauguration of disease as a consequence. In this meaning, infection does not always result from contagion, and on the other hand it may result from the introduction of disease germs into the system otherwise than by contagion.

Auto-infection. The communication of disease from one part of the body to another by mechanical transmission of virus from a diseased to a healthy part.

Infectious disease. One capable of being transmitted or communicated by means of infection.

INFEFT. In Scotch law. To give seisin or possession of lands; to invest or enfeoff. 1 Karnes, Eq. 215.

INFEFTMENT. In Old Scotch law. Investiture or infeudation, including both charter and seisin. 1 Forb. Inst. pt. 2, p. 110.

In Later law. Saisine, or the instrument of possession. Bell.

INFENSARE CURIAM. Lat. An expression applied to a court when it suggested to an advocate something which he had omitted through mistake or ignorance. Spelman.

INFEOFFMENT. The act or instrument of feoffment. In Scotland it is synonymous with "saisine," meaning the instrument of possession. Formerly it was synonymous with "investiture." Bell.

INFERENCE. In the law of evidence. A truth or proposition drawn from another which is supposed or admitted to be true. A process of reasoning by which a fact or proposition sought to be established is deduced as a logical consequence from other facts, or a state of facts, already proved or admitted. Whitehouse v. Bolster, 95 Me. 458, 50 A. 240; Joske v. Irvine, 91 Tex. 574, 44 S.W. 1059.

A deduction which the reason of the jury makes from the facts proved, without an express direction of law to that effect. Puget Sound Electric Ry. v. Benson, C.C.A. Wash., 253 F. 710, 714.

A "presumption" and an "inference" are not the same thing, a presumption being a deduction which the law requires a trier of facts to make, an inference being a deduction which the trier may or may not make, according to his own conclusions; a presumption is mandatory, an inference, permissible. Cross v. Passumpsic Fiber Leather Co., 90 Vt. 397, 98 A. 1010, 1014; Joyce v. Missouri & Kansas Telephone Co., Mo.App., 211 S.W. 900, 901.

INFERENCE ON INFERENCE, RULE OF. Means that one presumption or inference may not be based upon another. McManimen v. Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois, 317 Ill.App. 649, 47 N.E.2d 385.

INFERENTIAL. In the law of evidence. Operating in the way of inference; argumentative. Presumptive evidence is sometimes termed "inferential." Corn. v. Harman, 4 Pa. 272.

INFERENTIAL FACTS. Such as are established not directly by testimony or other evidence, but by inferences or conclusions drawn from the evidence. Railway Co. v. Miller, 141 Ind. 533, 37 N.E. 343.

INFERIOR. One who, in relation to another, has less power and is below him; one who is bound to obey another. He who makes the law is the superior: he who is bound to obey it, the inferior. 1 Bouv. Inst. no. 8.

INFERIOR COURT. This term may denote any court subordinate to the chief appellate tribunal in the particular judicial system; but it is commonly used as the designation of a court of special, limited, or statutory jurisdiction, whose record must show the existence and attaching of jurisdiction in any given case, in order to give presumptive validity to its judgment. In re Heard's Guardianship, 174 Miss. 37, 163 So. 685, 687.

The English courts of judicature are classed generally under two heads,—the superior courts and the inferior courts; the former division comprising the courts at Westminster, the latter comprising all the other courts in general, many of which, however, are far from being of inferior importance in the common acceptation of the word. Brown.

INFEUDATION. The placing in possession of a freehold estate; also the granting of tithes to laymen.

INFICIARI. Lat. In the civil law. To deny; to deny one's liability; to refuse to pay a debt or restore a pledge; to deny the allegation of a plaintiff; to deny the charge of an accuser. Calvin.

INFICIATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Denial; the denial of a debt or liability; the denial of the claim or allegation of a party plaintiff. Calvin.

INFIDEL. One who does not believe in the existence of a God who will reward or punish in this world or that which is to come. Hale v. Everett, 53 N.H. 54, 16 Am.Rep. 82. One who professes no religion that can bind his conscience to speak the truth. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 368. One who does not recognize the inspiration or obligation of the Holy Scriptures, or generally recognized features of the Christian religion. Gibson v. Ins. Co., 37 N.Y. 580.

INFIDELIS. In Old English law. An infidel or heathen.

In Feudal law. One who violated fealty.

INFIDELITAS. In feudal law. Infidelity; faithlessness to one's feudal oath. Spelman.

INFIDUCIARE. In old European law. To pledge property. Spelman.

INFIHT. Sax. An assault made on a person inhabiting the same dwelling.

INFINITUM IN JURE REPROBATUR. That which is endless is reprobated in law. 12 Coke, 24. Applied to litigation.

INFIRM. Weak, feeble. The testimony of an "infirm" witness may be taken de bene esse in some circumstances. 1 P. Wms. 117.

INFIRMATIVE. In the law of evidence. Having the quality of diminishing force; having a tendency to weaken or render infirm. 3 Benth. Jud. Ev. 14; Best, Pres. § 217. Exculpatory is used by some authors as synonymous. Wills, Circ. Ev. 120; Best, Pres. § 217.

INFIRMATIVE CONSIDERATION. In the law of evidence. A consideration, supposition, or hypothesis of which the criminative facts of a case admit, and which tends to weaken the inference or presumption of guilt deducible from them. Burrill, Circ. Ev. 153-455.

INFIRMATIVE FACT. In the law of evidence. A fact set up, proved, or even supposed, in opposition to the criminative facts of a case, the tendency of which is to weaken the force of the inference of guilt deducible from them. 3 Benth. Jud. Ev. 14; Best, Pres. § 217, et seq.

INFIRMATIVE HYPOTHESIS. A term sometimes used in criminal evidence to denote an hypothesis or theory of the case which assumes the defendant's innocence, and explains the criminative evidence in a manner consistent with that assumption.

INFIRMITY. In an application for insurance an ailment or disease of a substantial character, which apparently in some material degree impairs the physical condition and health of the applicant and increases the chance of his death or sickness and which if known, would have been likely to, deter the insurance company from issing the policy. Eastern Dist. Piece Dye Works v. Travelers' Ins. Co., 234 N.Y. 441, 138 N.E. 401, 404, 26 A.L.R. 1505.

INFLUENCE. See Undue Influence.

INFORMAL. Deficient in legal form; inartificially drawn up.

INFORMALITY. Want of legal form. State v. Gallimon, 24 N.C. 377; Franklin v. Mackey, 16 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 118; Hunt v. Curry, 37 Ark. 108.

INFORMATION. An accusation exhibited against a person for some criminal offense, without an indictment. 4 Bl.Comm. 308. An accusation in the nature of an indictment, from which it differs only in being presented by a competent public officer on his oath of office, instead of a grand jury on.

their oath. 1 Bish. Crim. Proc. § 141; People v. Sponsler, 46 N.W. 459, 1 Dak. 289; Howard v. State, 143 Tenn. 539, 227 S.W. 36. A written accusation sworn to before a magistrate, upon which, an indictment is afterwards founded. Commonwealth v. Cooke, 55 Pa.Super.Ct. 435, 439.

The word is also frequently used in the law in its sense of communicated knowledge. Masline v. New York, N. FL & H. R. Co., 95 Conn: 702, 112 A. 639, 640. And affidavits are frequently made, and pleadings and other documents verified, on "information and belief."

In French Law. The act or instrument which contains the depositions of witnesses against the accused. Poth. Proc. Civil, § 2, art. 5.

Criminal information. A formal accusation of crime, differing from an indixtment only in that it is preferred by a prosecuting officer instead of by a grand jury. People v. Gahagan, 368 Ill. 475, 14 N.E.2d 838, 839.

Information in the nature of a quo warranto. A proceeding against the usurper of a franchise or office. Jarman v. Mason, 102 Okl. 278, 229 P. 459, 460. See Quo Warranto.

INFORMATUS NON SUM. In practice. I am not informed. A formal answer made by the defendant's attorney in court to the effect that he has not been advised of any defense to be made to the action. Thereupon judgment by default passes.

INFORMER. A person who informs or prefers an accusation against another, whom he suspects of the violation of some penal statute.

Common informer. A common prosecutor. A person who habitually ferrets out crimes and offenses and lays information thereof before the ministers of justice, in order to set a prosecution on foot, not because of his office or any special duty in the matter, but for the sake of the share of the fine or penalty which the law allots to the informer in certain cases. Also used in a less invidious sense, as designating persons who were authorized and empowered to bring action for penalties. U. S. v. Stocking, D.C.Mont., 87 F. 861; In re Barker, 56 Vt. 20.

INFORTIATUM. The name given by the glossators to the second of the three parts or volumes into which the Pandects were divided. It commences with the third title of the twenty-fourth book and ends with the thirty-eighth book. The glossators at Bologna had at first only two parts, the first called "Digestum Vetus," (the old Digest,) and the last called "Digestum Novum," (the New Digest.) When they afterwards received the middle or second part, they separated from the Digesturn, Novum the beginning it had then, and added it to the second part, from which enlargement the latter received the name "Infortiatum." Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 110.

INFORTUNIUM, HOMICIDE PER. Where a man doing a lawful act, without intention of hurt, unfortunately kills another.

INFRA. (Lat.) Below, under, beneath, underneath. The opposite of supra, above. Thus, we say, primo grade est—supra, pater, mater, infra, filius, filia: in the first degree of kindred in the ascending line, above is the father and the mother, below, in the descending line, son and daughter. Inst. 3. 6. 1.

In another sense, this word signifies within: as, infra corpus civitatis, within the body of the country; infra prcesidia, within the guards. So of time, during: infra furorem, during the madness. This use is not classical. The use of infra for infra seems to have sprung up among the barbarians after the fall of the Roman empire.

INFRA AETATEM. Under age; not of age. Applied to minors.

INFRA ANNOS NUBILES. Under marriageable years; not yet of marriageable age.

INFRA ANNUM. Under or within a year. Bract. fol. 7.

INFRA ANNUM LUCTUS. (Within the year of mourning.) The phrase is used in reference to the marriage of a widow within a year after her husband's death, which was prohibited by the civil law.

INFRA BRACHIA. Within her arms. Used of a husband de jure, as well as de facto. 2 Inst. 317. Also inter brachia. Bract. fol. 148b. It was in this sense that a woman could only have an appeal for murder of her husband inter brachia sua.

INFRA CIVITATEM. Within the state. 1 Camp. 23, 24.

INFRA CORPUS COMITATUS. Within the body (territorial limits) of a county. In English law, waters which are infra corpus comitatus are exempt from the jurisdiction of the admiralty. Waring v. Clarke, 5 How. 441, 451, 12 L.Ed. 226.

INFRA DIGNITATEM CURLE. Beneath the dignity of the court; unworthy of the consideration of the court. Where a bill in equity is brought upon a matter too trifling to deserve the attention of the court, it is demurrable, as being infra dignitatem curice. Smets v. Williams, 4 Paige, Ch. (N.Y.) 364.

INFRA FUROREM. During madness; while in a state of insanity. Bract. fol. 19b.

INFRA HOSPITIUM. Within the inn. When a traveler's baggage comes infra hospitium, e., in the care and under the custody of the innkeeper, the latter's liability attaches. Davidson v. Madison Corporation, 247 N.Y.S. 789, 795, 231 App. Div. 421.

INFRA JURISDICTIONEM. Within the jurisdiction. 2 Strange, 827.

INFRA LIGEANTIAM REGIS. Within the king's ligeance. Comb. 212.

INFRA METAS. Within the bounds or limits. Infra metas forestce, within the bounds of the forest. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 41, § 12. Infra metas hospitii, within the limits of the household; within the verge. Id. lib. 2, c. 2, § 2.

INFRA PR2ESIDIA. Within the protection; within the defenses. In international law, when a prize, or other captured property, is brought into a port of the captors, or within their lines, or otherwise under their complete custody, so that the chance of rescue is lost, it is said to be infra proesiclia.

INFRA QUATUOR MARIA. Within the four seas; within the kingdom of England; within the jurisdiction.

INFRA QUATUOR PARIETES. Within four walls. 2 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 106, § 1089.

INFRA REGNUM. Within the realm.

INFRA SEX ANNOS. Within six years. Used in the Latin form of the plea of the statute of limitations.

INFRA TRIDUUM. Within three days. Formal words in old appeals. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 31, § 6; Id. c. 35, § 3.

INFRACTION. A breach, violation, or infringement; as of a law, a contract, a right or duty.

In French law, this term is used as a general designation of all punishable actions.

INFRINGEMENT. A breaking into; a trespass or encroachment upon; a violation of a law, regulation, contract, or right. Used especially of invasions of the rights secured by patents, copyrights, and trademarks. Goodyear Shoe Machinery Co. v. Jackson, C.C.A.Mass., 112 F. 146, 50 C.C.A. 159, 55 L.R.A. 692.

Infringement of patent. The unauthorized making, using, or selling for practical use, or for profit, of an invention covered by a valid claim of a patent during the life of the patent. It may involve any one or all of the acts of making, using, and selling. Johnston v. Davenport Brick & Tile Co., D.C.Iowa, 237 F. 668, 671. Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. American Zylonite Co., C.C.N.Y., 30 F. 437.

To constitute infringement of a patent claim there must be present in the infringing device or combination every element of such claim or its equivalent, so combined as to produce substantially the same result operating in substantially the same way. Safety Car Heating & Lighting Co. v. Gould Coupler Co., D.C.N.Y., 230 F. 848, 851; Montgomery Ward and Co. v. Clair, C.C.A.Mo., 123 F.2d 878, 881.

There is "infringement" where the departure is merely colorable. E. H. Bardes Range & Foundry Co. v. American Engineering Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 109 F.2d 696, 698; United States Rubber Co. v. General Tire & Rubber Co., C.C.A. Ohio, 128 F.2d 104, 108, 109; Swan Carburetor Co. v. General Motors Corporation, D.C.Ohio, 43 F.Supp. 499, 504.

Contributory infringement. The intentional aiding of one person by another in the unlawful making or selling of a patented invention; usually done by making or selling one part of the patented invention, or one element of the combination, with the intent and purpose of so aiding. Thomson-Houston Electric Co. v. Specialty Co., C.C. Conn., 72 F. 1016; Safety Car Heating & Lighting Co. v. Gould Coupler Co., D.C.N.Y., 229 F. 429, 439.

Infringement of copyright. A copy, more or less servile, of a copyrighted work. Mere likeness is insufficient, and an original treatment of a subject, open alike to treatment by the copyright holder and others does not constitute infringement. Pellegrini v. Allegrini, D.C.Pa., 2 F.2d 610, 612. There must be appropriation of substantial portions of the copyright matter. Roe-Lawton v. Hal E. Roach Studios, D.C.Cal., 18 F.2d 126, 127; Eggers v. Sun Sales Corporation, C.C.A.2, 263 F. 373, 375. But intention to infringe is not essential. Chappell & Co. v. Costa, D.C.N.Y., 45 F.Supp. 554, 555, 556; Towle v. Ross, D.C.Or., 32 F.Supp. 125, 127.

Under 17 US.C.A. § 1, one transmitting unauthorized performance of copyrighted musical composition by radio from a broadcasting station maintained and operated to stimulate sale of radio products is an "infringer," and is liable therefor. Jerome H. Remick & Co. v. General Electric Co., D.C.N.Y., 16 F.2d 829.

Infringement of trademark. The unauthorized use or colorable imitation of the mark already appropriated by another, on goods of a similar class. Block v. Jung Arch Brace Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 300 F. 308, 309. Weiss v. Tucker, 222 N.Y.S. 487, 488, 129 Misc. 648; Northam Warren Corporation v. Universal Cosmetic Co., C.C.A.Ill., 18 F.2d 774, 775. It exists if words or designs used by defendant are identical with or so similar to plaintiff's that they are likely to cause confusion, or deceive or mislead others. McGraw-Hill Pub. Co. v. American Aviation Associates, 117 F.2d 293, 294, 73 App.D.C. 131; Seattle Street Railway & Municipal Employees Relief Ass'n v. Amalgamated Ass'n of Street, Electric Railway & Motor Coach Employees of America, 101 P.2d 338, 344, 3 Wash.2d 520; California Fruit Growers Exchange v. Windsor Beverages, C.C.A.I11., 118 F.2d 149, 152.

INFRINGER. One who appropriates another's patented invention. Stebler v. Riverside Heights Orange Growers' Ass'n, C.C.A.Cal., 205 F. 735, 739. One who affixes the trademark of another to similar articles in such way that his use of it is liable to cause confusion in the trade, or is calculated to mislead purchasers and induce them to buy infringer's articles as goods of the other thus depriving the latter of the full benefit of his property. James Heddon's Sons v. Millsite Steel & Wire Works, C.C.A.Mich., 128 F.2d 6, 8.

INFUGARE. Lat. To put to flight.

INFULA. A coif, or a cassock. Jacob.

INFUSION. In medical jurisprudence. The process of steeping in liquor; an operation by which the medicinal qualities of a substance may be extracted by a liquor without boiling. Also the product of this operation. "Infusion" and "decoction," though not identical, are ejusdem generis in law. 3 Camp. 74. Decoction. A pharmaceutical operation, which consists in pouring a hot or cold fluid upon a substance whose medical properties it is desired to extract. The product of this operation.

INGE. Meadow, or pasture. Jacob.

INGENIUM. (1) Artifice, trick, fraud; (2) an engine or device. Spelman. (3) A net or hook. (4) A machine, Spelman, Gloss., especially for warlike purposes; also, for navigation of a ship. Du Cange, INGENUITAS. Lat. Freedom; liberty; the state or condition of one who is free. Also liberty given to a servant by manumission.

INGENUITAS REGNI. In old English law. The freemen, yeomanry, or commonalty of the kingdom. Cowell. Applied sometimes also to the barons.

INGENUITY. Acuteness of understanding. Tolfree v. Wetzler, D.C.N.J., 22 F.2d.214.

INGENUUS. In Roman law. A person who, immediately that he was born, was a free person. He was opposed to libertinus, or libertus, who, having been born a slave, was afterwards manumitted or made free. It is not the same as the English law term "generosus," which denoted a person not merely free, but of good family. There were no distinctions among ingenui; but among libertine there were (prior to Justinian's abolition of the distinctions) three varieties, namely: Those of the highest rank, called "Cives Romani;" those of the second rank, called "Latini Juniani;" and those of the lowest rank, called "Dediticii." Brown.

INGRATITUDE. In Roman law, ingratitude was accounted a sufficient cause for revoking a gift or recalling the liberty of a freedman. Such is also the law of France, with respect to the first case. But the English law has left the matter entirely to the moral sense.

INGRESS, EGRESS, AND REGRESS. These words express the right of a lessee to enter, go upon, and return from the lands in question.

INGRESSU. In English law. An ancient writ of entry, by which the plaintiff or complainant sought an entry into his lands. Abolished in 1833.

INGRESSUS. In old English law. Ingress; entry. The relief paid by an heir to the lord was sometimes so called. Cowell.

INGROSSATOR. An engrosser. Ingrossator magna rotuli, engrosser of the great roll; afterwards called "clerk of the pipe." Spelman; Cowell.

INGROSSING. The act of making a fair and perfect copy of any document from a rough draft of it, in order that it may be executed or put to its final purpose.

INGUINAL. A term referring to the groin. Cavalier v. Chevrolet Motor Co. of New York, 178 N.Y.S. 489, 490, 189 App.Div. 412.

INHABIT. Synonymous with dwell, live, sojourn, stay, rest. MacLeod v. Stelle, 43 Idaho, 64, 249 P. 254, 256.

INHABITANT. One who resides actually and permanently in a given place, and has his domicile there. Ex parte Shaw, 12 S.Ct. 935, 145 U.S. 444, 36 L.Ed. 768; The Pizarro, 2 Wheat. 245, 4 L.Ed. 226.

"The words 'inhabitant,' 'citizen,' and 'resident,' as employed in different constitutions to define the qualifitations of electors, mean substantially the same thing; and one is an inhabitant, resident, or citizen at the place where he has his domicile or home." Cooley, Const.Lim. *600; State ex rel. Sathre v. Moodie, 65 N.D. 340, 258 N.W. 558, 564. But the terms "resident" and "inhabitant" have also been held not synonymous, the latter implying a more fixed and permanent abode than the former, and importing privileges and duties to which a mere resident would not be subject. Tazewell County v. Davenport, 40 Ill. 197; State, to Use of Knox County Collector, v. Bunce, 187 Mo.App. 607, 173 S.W. 101, 102.

When relating to municipal rights, powers, or duties, the word inhabitant is almost universally used as signifying precisely the same as domiciled; Borland v. City of Boston, 132 Mass. 98, 42 Am.Rep. 424.

A corporation can be an inhabitant only in the state of its incorporation. Sperry Products v. Association of American Railroads, C.C.A.N.Y., 132 F.2d 408, 411; Vogel v. Crown Cork & Seal Co., D.C.Md., 36 F.Supp. 74, 75; International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers v. Tennessee Copper Co., D.C.Tenn., 31 F.Supp. 1015, 1017; Deutsch v. Times Pub. Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 33 F.Supp. 957, 958.

INHABITED HOUSE DUTY. A tax assessed in England on inhabited dwelling houses, according to their annual value, (St. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 36; 32 & 33 Vict. c. 14, § 11,) which is payable by the occupier, the landlord being deemed the occupier where the house is let to several persons. (St. 48 Geo. III. c. 55, Schedule B.) Houses occupied solely for business purposes are exempt from duty, although a care-taker may dwell therein, and houses partially occupied for business purposes are to that extent exempt. Sweet.

INHERE. To exist in and inseparable from something else; to stick fast. Majestic Theater Co. v. Lutz, 210 Ky. 92, 275 S.W. 16, 20.

INHERENT POWER. An authority possessed without its being derived from another. A right, ability, or faculty of doing a thing, without receiving that right, ability, or faculty from another. See, also, "Power."

INHERENT POWERS OF A COURT. Those reasonably necessary for administration of justice. State ex rel. Gentry v. Becker, 351 Mo. 769, 174 S. W.2d 181, 183. Ex parte Wetzel, 243 Ala. 130, 8 So.2d 824, 825.

INHERENTLY DANGEROUS. Danger inhering in instrumentality or condition itself at all times, so as to require special precautions to prevent injury, not danger arising from mere casual or collateral negligence of others with respect thereto under particular circumstances. Brown v. City of Craig, 350 Mo. 836, 168 S.W.2d 1080, 1082; Emery v. Thompson, 347 Mo. 494, 148 S.W.2d 479, 480; Hull v. Gillioz, 344 Mo. 1227, 130 S.W.2d 623, 628; Street v. W. E. Callahan Const. Co., Mo.App., 147 S.W.2d 153, 155.

INHERETRIX. The old term for "heiress." Co. Litt. 13a.

INHERIT. To take by inheritance; to take as heir on death of ancestor; to take by descent from ancestor; to take or receive, as right or title, by law from ancestor at his decease. Condren v. Marlin, 113 Okl. 259, 241 P. 826, 827. In re Buell's Estate, 167 Or. 295, 117 P.2d 832, 836. "To inherit to" a person is a common expression in the books. 2 Bl. Comm. 254, 255; 3 Coke, 41.

The word is also used in its popular sense, as the equivalent of to take or receive. Manchester v. Loomis, 191 Iowa 554, 181 N.W. 415, 442.

INHERITABLE BLOOD. Blood which has the purity (freedom from attainder) and legitimacy necessary to give its possessor the character of a lawful heir; that which is capable of being the medium for the transmission of an inheritance.

INHERITANCE. An estate in things real, descending to the heir. 2 Bl. Comm. 201; Rountree v. Pursell, 39 N.E. 747, 11 Ind.App. 522. Such an estate in lands or tenements or other things as may be inherited by the heir. Termes de la Ley. An estate or property which a man has by descent, as heir to another, or which he may transmit to another, as his heir. Litt. § 9.

A perpetuity in lands or tenements to a man and his heirs. Cowell; Blount. The method by which children or relatives take property from another at his death. Priddy v. Green, Tex.Civ.App., 220 S.W. 243, 248; Horner v. Webster, 33 N.J.L. 413.

Though "inheritance" in its restricted sense means something obtained through laws of descent and distribution from an intestate, in its popular use it includes property obtained by devise or descent. Pacheco v. Fernandez. Tex. Civ.App., 277 S.W. 197, 198; Higby v. Martin, 167 Okl. 10, 28 P.2d 1097, 1102.

"Inheritance" is also used in the old books where "hereditament" is now commonly employed. Thus, Coke divides inheritances into corporeal and incorporeal, into real, personal, and mixed, and into entire and several.

Civil Law

The succession of 'the heir to all the rights and property of the estate-leaver. It is either testamentary, where the heir is created by will, or ab intestato, where it arises merely by operation of law. Heinec. § 484.

In General

Estate of inheritance. See Estate.

Inheritance act. The English statute of 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 106, by which the law of inheritance or descent was considerably modified. 1 Steph. Comm. 359, 500.

Inheritance tax. A tax on the transfer or passing of estates or property by legacy, devise, or intestate succession; not a tax on the property itself, but on the right to acquire it by descent or testamentary gift. In re Gihon's Estate, 169 N.Y. 443; First Nat. Bank v. Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, 258 Mass. 253, 154 N.E. 844, 845. A tax on the succession to, or transfer of, property occasioned by death. Waddell v. Doughton, 194 N.C. 537, 140 S.E. 160.

"Estate taxes" are based on the power to transmit or the transmission from the dead to the living, while "legacy taxes," or "inheritance taxes," are based on the transmission or right to receive the property. Frick v. Lewellyn, D.C.Pa., 298 F. 803, 810.

INHIBITION. In Ecclesiastical law. A writ issuing from a superior ecclesiastical court, forbidding an inferior judge to proceed further in a cause pending before him. In this sense it is closely analogous to the writ of prohibition at common law. Also the command of a bishop or ecclesiastical judge that a clergyman shall cease from taking any duty.

In English law. The name of a writ which forbids a judge from further proceeding in a cause depending before him; it is in the nature of a prohibition. Termes de la Ley; Fitzh. N. B. 39.

In Scotch law. A species of diligence or process by which a debtor is prohibited from contracting any debt which may become a burden on his heritable property, in competition with the creditor at whose instance the inhibition is taken out; and from granting any deed of alienation, etc., to the prejudice of the creditor. Brande.

In the Civil law. A prohibition which the law makes or a judge ordains to an individual. Hallifax; Civil Law, p. 126.

INHIBITION AGAINST A WIFE. In Scotch law. A writ in the sovereign's name, passing the signet, which prohibits all and sundry from having transactions with a wife or giving her credit. Bell; Ersk. Inst. 1, 6, 26.

INHOC. In old records. A nook or corner of a common or fallow field, inclosed and cultivated. Kennett, Par. Antiq. 297, 298; Cowell.

INHONESTUS. In old English law. Unseemly; not in due order. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 31, § 8.

INHUMAN TREATMENT. In the law of divorce. Such barbarous cruelty or severity as endangers the life or health of the party to whom it is addressed, or creates a well-founded apprehension of such danger. Whaley v. Whaley, 68 Iowa 647, 27 N.W. 809; Cole v. Cole, 23 Iowa 433. The phrase commonly employed in statutes is "cruel and inhuman treatment," from which it may be inferred that "inhumanity" is an extreme or aggravated "cruelty."

INIQUISSIMA PAX EST ANTEPONENDA JUSTISSIMO BELLO. The most unjust peace is to be preferred to the justest war. Root v. Stuyvesant, 18 Wend. (N.Y.) 257, 305.

INIQUITY. In Scotch practice. A technical expression applied to the decision of an inferior judge who has decided contrary to law; he is said to have committed iniquity. Bell.

INIQUUM EST ALIOS PERMITTERE, ALIOS INHIBERE MERCATURAM. It is inequitable to permit some to trade and to prohibit others. 3 Inst. 181.

INIQUUM EST ALIQUEM REI SUI ESSE JUDICEM. It is wrong for a man to be a judge in his own cause. Branch, Princ.; 12 Coke, 113.

INIQUUM EST INGENUIS HOMINIBUS NON ESSE LIBERAM RERUM SUARUM ALIENATIONEM. It is unjust that freemen should not have the free disposal of their own property. Co. Litt. 223a; 4 Kent, Comm, 131; Hob. 87.

INITIAL. That which begins or stands at the beginning. The first letter of a man's name. Elberson v. Richards, 42 N.J.L. 70.

INITIAL CARRIER. In the law of bailments. *The carrier who first receives the goods and begins the process of their transportation, afterwards delivering them to another carrier for the further prosecution or completion of their journey. See Beard v. Railway Co., 79 Iowa 527, 44 N.W. 803.

But it has also been defined as the one contracting with the shipper, and not necessarily the one whose line constitutes the first link in transportation. Knapp v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., 33 N.D. 291, 156 N.W. 1019, 1023.

INITIALIA TESTIMONII. In Scotch law. Preliminaries of testimony. The preliminary examination of a witness, before examining him in chief, answering to the voir dire of the English law, though taking a somewhat wider range. Wharton.

INITIATE. Commenced; inchoate. Curtest' initiate is the interest which a husband has in the wife's lands after a child is born who may inherit, but before the wife dies.

To propose for approval—as schedule of rates. Idaho Power Co. v. Thompson, D.C.Idaho, 19 F.2d 547, 579.

INITIATION FEE. The sum paid on joining an organization for privileges of membership. Derby v. U. S., D.C.Mass., 17 F.2d 119, 120.

INITIATIVE. The power of the people to propose bills and laws, and to enact or reject them at the polls, independent of legislative assembly. City of Litchfield v. Hart, 306 Ill.App. 621, 29 N.E. 2d 678, 679.

In French law. The name given to the important prerogative conferred by the charte constitutionnelle, article 16, on the king to propose through his ministers projects of laws. 1 Toullier, no. 39.

INIURCOLLEGUIA. A body of Soviet lawyers in Moscow organized and constituted pursuant to statute under jurisdiction and control of the U. S. S. R. Ministry of Justice for the purpose of exclusive representation of Soviet nationals in foreign legal matters. In re Mitzkel's Estate, 233 N.Y.S.2d 519, 524, 36 Misc.2d 671; In re Kapocius' Estate, 234 N.Y.S.2d 346, 348, 36 Misc.2d 1087.

INJUNCTION. A prohibitive writ issued by a court of equity, at the suit of a party complainant, directed to a party defendant in the action, or to a party made a defendant for that purpose, forbidding the latter to do some act, or to permit his servants or agents to do some act, which he is threatening or attempting to commit, or restraining him in the continuance thereof, such act being unjust and inequitable, injurious to the plaintiff, and not such as can be adequately redressed by an action at law. Dupre v. Anderson, 45 La.Ann. 1134, 13 So. 743; City of Alma v. Loehr, 42 Kan. 368, 22 P. 424. A judicial process operating in personam, and requiring person to whom it is directed to do or refrain from doing a particular thing. Gainsburg v. Dodge, 193 Ark. 473, 101 S.W.2d 178, 180.

Final injunction

One granted when the rights of the parties are determined; distinguished from a preliminary injunction. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Oakland, C.C.Cal., 58 F. 54.

Interlocutory injunction

One granted prior to the final hearing and determination of the matter in issue, and which is to continue until answer, or until the final hearing, or until the further order of the court. Gas & Electric Securities Co. v. Manhattan & Queens Traction Corporation. C.C.A.N.Y., 266 F. 625, 632

Mandatory injunction

One which (1) commands the defendant to do some positive act or particular thing; (2) prohibits him from refusing (or persisting in a refusal) to do or permit some act to which the plaintiff has a legal right; or (3) restrains the defendant from permitting his previous wrongful act to continue operative, thus virtually compelling him to undo it. Bailey v. Schnitzius, 43 N.J.Eq. 178, 16 A. 680.

Permanent injunction

One intended to remain in force until the final termination of the particular suit. Riggins v. Thompson, 96 Tex. 154, 71 S.W. 14.

Perpetual injunction

An injunction which finally disposes of the suit, and is indefinite in point of lime. Riggins v. Thompson, 96 Tex. 154, 71 S.W. 14.

Preliminary injunction

An injunction granted at the institution of a suit, to restrain the defendant from doing or continuing some act, the right to which is in dispute, and which may either be discharged or made perpetual, according to the result of the controversy, as soon as the rights of the parties are determined. Darlington Oil Co. v. Pee Dee Oil Co., 62 S.C. 196, 40 S.E. 169: Appeal of Mammoth Vein Consol. Coal Co., 54 Pa. 188.

Preventive injunction

One which prohibits the defendant from doing a particular act or commands him to refrain from it. Leaksville Woolen Mills v. Spray Water Power & Land Co., 183 N.C. 511, 112 S.E. 24, 25.

Provisional injunction

Another name for a preliminary or temporary injunction or an injunction pendente lite.

Special injunction

An injunction obtained only on motion and petition, usually with notice to the other party. Aldrich v. Kirkland, 6 Rich.Law S.C. 340; 4 Steph.Comm. 12, note z.

Temporary injunction

A preliminary or provisional injunction, or one granted pendente lite; as opposed to a final or perpetual injunction.

Jesse French Piano Co. v, Porter, 134 Ala. 302, 32 So. 678, 92 Am.St.Rep. 31.

INJURE. To violate the legal right of another or inflict an actionable wrong. Krom v. Antigo Gas Co., 154 Wis. 528, 143 N.W. 163, 164. To do harm to; to hurt; damage; impair; to hurt or wound, as the person; to impair the soundness of, as health. Ziolkowski v. Continental Casualty Co., 284 Ill.App. 505, 1 N.E.2d 410, 412. As applied to a building, "injure" means to materially impair or destroy any part of the existing structure. F. W. Woolworth Co. v. Nelson, 204 Ala. 172, 85 So. 449, 451, 13 A.L.R. 820.

INJURES GRAVES. Fr. In French law. Grievous insults or injuries, including personal insults and reproachful language, constituting a just cause of divorce. Butler v. Butler, 1 Pars. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 344.

INJURIA. Lat. Injury; wrong; the privation or violation of right. 3 Bl. Comm. 2; J. A. & C. E. Bennett v. Winston-Salem Southbound R. Co., 170 N.C. 389, 87 S.E. 133, 134, L.R.A. 1916D, 1074.

INJURIA ABSQUE DAMNO. Injury or wrong without damage. A wrong done, but from which nc loss or damage results, and which, therefore, will not sustain an action.

INJURIA FIT EI CUI CONVICIUM DICTUM EST, VEL DE EO FACTUM CARMEN FAMOSUM. An injury is done to him of whom a reproachful thing is said, or concerning whom an infamous song is made. 9 Coke, 60.

INJURIA ILLATA JUDICI, SEU LOCUM TENENTI REGIS, VIDETUR IPSI REGI ILLATA MAXIME SI FIAT IN EXERCENTEM OFFICIUM. 3 Inst. 1. An injury offered to a judge, or person representing the king, is considered as offered to the king himself, especially if it be done in the exercise of his office.

INJURIA NON EXCUSAT INJURIAM. One wrong does not justify another. Broom, Max. 395. See 6 El. & Bl. 47.

INJURIA NON PRIESUMITUR. Injury is not presumed. Co. Litt. 232. Cruel, oppressive, or tortious conduct will not be presumed. Best. Ev. p. 336, § 298.

INJURIA SERVI DOMINUM PERTINGIT. The master is liable for injury done by his servant. Lofft, 229.

INJURIA PROPRIA NON CADET IN BENEFICIUM FACIENTIS. One's own wrong shall not fall to the advantage of him that does it. A man will not be allowed to derive benefit from his own wrongful act. Branch, Princ.

INJURIOUS WORDS. In Louisiana. Slander, or libelous words. Civil Code La. art. 3501.

INJURY. Any wrong or damage done to another, either in his person, rights, reputation, or property. Woodruff v. Mining Co., C.C.Cal., 18 F. 781; Hitch v. Edgecombe County, 132 N.C. 573, 44 S.E. 30. An act which damages, harms, or hurts. Ritchie v. Standard Surety & Casualty Co. of New York, 13 N.Y.S.2d 1022, 1023, 257 App.Div. 545.

The words "damage," "loss," and "injury" are used interchangeably, and, within legislative meaning and judicial interpretation, import the same thing. In re City of Pittsburgh, 90 A. 329, 331, 243 Pa. 392, 52 L.R.A.,N.S., 262.

The term "injury," used to describe an error for which a reversal may be had, means an error which affects the result. Ryan v. State, 8 Okl.Cr. 623, 129 P. 685, 687.

os

Civil Law

A delict committed in contempt or outrage of any one, whereby his body, his dignity, or his reputation is maliciously injured. Voet, Com. ad Pand. 47, t. 10, no. 1.

In General

Absolute injuries. Injuries to those rights which a person possesses as being a member of society.

Accidental injury. A bodily injury by accident. Ideal Fuel Co. v. Industrial Commission, 298 Ill. 463, 131 N.E. 649, 650.

Within the Workmen's Compensation Act, one which occurs in the course of the employment, unexpectedly, and without the affirmative act or design of the employe; it being something which is unforeseen and not expected by the person to whom it happens. Jakub v. Industrial Commission, 288 Ill. 87, 123 N.E. 263, 264. Any injury to an employee in the course of his employment due to any occurrence referable to a definite time, and of the happening of which he can give notice to his employer, regardless of whether the injury is a visible hurt from external force, or disease or infection induced by sudden and castastrophic exposure. Lerner v. Rump Bros., 209 N.Y.S. 698, 701, 212 App.Div. 747. The term is to receive a broad and liberal construction with a view to compensating injured employes where injury resulted through some accidental means, was unexpected and undesigned and may be the result of mere mischance or miscalculation as to effect of voluntary action. Thomas v. Ford Motor Co., 114 Okl. 3, 242 P. 765, 766. It includes an accident causing injury to the physical structure of the body, notwithstanding a natural weakness predisposing to injury. Wilkins v. Ben's Home Oil Co., 166 Minn. 41, 207 N.W. 183. The words indicate, not so much the existence of an accident, but rather the idea that the injury was unexpected or unintended. Victory Sparkler & Specialty Co. v. Francks, 147 Md. 368, 128 A. 635, 639, 44 A.L.R. 363.

Civil injury. Injuries to person or property, resulting from a breach of contract, delict, or criminal offense, which may be redressed by means of a civil action. Cullinan v. Burkhard, 41 Misc.Rep. 321, 84 N.Y.S. 825.

An infringement or privation of the civil rights which belong to individuals, considered merely as individuals. State v. Magee Pub. Co., 29 N.M. 455, 224 P. 1028, 38 A. L. R. 142.

Irreparable injury. This phrase does not mean such an injury as is beyond the possibility of repair, or beyond possible compensation in damages, or necessarily great damage, but includes an injury, whether great or small, which ought not to be submitted to, on the one hand, or inflicted, on the other; and which, because it is so large or so small, or is of such constant and frequent occurrence, or because no certain pecuniary standard exists for the measurement of damages, cannot receive reasonable redress in a court of law.

Sanderlin v. Baxter, 76 Va. 306, 44 Am.Rep. 165. Wrongs of a repeated and continuing character, or which occasion damages that are estimated only by conjecture, and not by any accurate standard, are included. Johnson v. Kier, 3 Pittsb. R. (Pa.) 204; Scherman v. Stern, 117 A. 631, 633, 93 N.J.Eq. 626; Birchfield v. Bourland, Tex.Civ.App., 187 S.W. 422, 423.

Personal injury. A hurt or damage done to a man's person, such as a cut or bruise, a broken limb, or the like, as distinguished from an injury to his property or his reputation. The phrase is chiefly used in connection with actions of tort for negligence. Norris v. Grove, 100 Mich. 256, 58 N.W. 1006; State v. Clayborne, 14 Wash. 622, 45 P. 303. But the term is also used (chiefly in statutes) in a much wider sense, and as including any injury which is an invasion of personal rights, and in this signification it may include such injuries as libel or slander, criminal conversation with a wife, seduction of a daughter, and mental suffering. McDonald v. Brown, 23 R.I. 546, 51 A. 213, 58 L.R.A. 768, 91 Am.St.Rep. 659.

In Workmen's Compensation Acts, "personal injury" means any harm or damage to the health of an employee, however caused, whether by accident, disease, or otherwise, which arises in the course of and out of his employment, and incapacitates him in whole or in part. Hines v. Norwalk Lcck Co., 100 Conn. 533, 124 A. 17, 20; Lane v. Horn & Hardart Baking Co., 261 Pa. 329, 104 A. 615, 616, 13 A.L.R. 963; Hanson v. Dickinson, 188 Iowa, 728, 176 N.W. 823, 824. A disease of mind or body which arises in the course of employment with nothing more is not within the Massachusetts act, but it must come from or by an injury, although that injury need not be a single definite act, but may extend over a continuous period of time. In re Maggelet, 228 Mass. 57, 116 N.E. 972, 973, L.R.A.1918F, 864; Taylor v. Swift & Co., 114 Kan. 431, 219 P. 516, 519. A "personal injury," as that term is used in the Workmen's Compensation Act, refers not to some break in some part of the body, or some wound thereon, or the like, but rather to the consequence or disability that results therefrom. Indian Creek Coal & Mining Co. v. Calvert, 68 Ind.App. 474, 119 N.E. 519, 525.

Permanent injury. An injury that, according to every reasonable probability, will continue throughout the remainder of one's life. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. Taylor, 196 Ala. 37, 71 So. 676, 678.

Private injuries. Infringements of the private or civil rights belonging to individuals considered as individuals.

Public injuries. Breaches and violations of rights and duties which affect the whole community as a community.

Real injury. A real injury is inflicted by any act by which a person's honor or dignity is affected.

Relative injuries. Injuries to those rights which a person possesses in relation to the person who is immediately affected by the wrongful act done.

Reparable injury. The general principle is that an injury, the damage from which is merely in the nature of pecuniary loss, and can be exactly and fully repaired by compensation in money, is a "reparable injury" for which a bond of sufficient amount and properly secured may afford an adequate indemnity. Barrow v. Duplantis, 148 La. 149, 86 So. 718, 723.

Verbal injury. A verbal injury, when directed against a private person, consists in the uttering contumelious words, which tend to injure his reputation by making him little or ridiculous.

INJUSTICE. The withholding or denial of justice. In law, almost invariably applied to the act, fault, or omission of a court, as distinguished from that of an individual. Holton v. Olcott, 58 N.H. 598; In re Moulton, 50 N.H. 532.

"Fraud" is deception practised by the party; "injustice" is the fault or error of the court. They are not equivalent words in substance, or in a statute authorizing a new trial on a showing of fraud or injustice. Fraud is always the result of contrivance and deception; injustice may be done by the negligence, mistake, or omission of the court itself. Silvey v. U. S., 7 Ct.C1. 324.

INJUSTUM EST, NISI TOTA LEGE INSPECTA, DE UNA ALIQUA EJUS PARTICULA PROPOSITA JUDICARE VEL RESPONDERE, 8 Coke, 117b. It is unjust to decide or respond as to any particular part of a law without examining the whole of the law.

INLAGARE. In old English law. To restore to protection of law. To restore a man from the condition of outlawry. Opposed to utlagare. Bract. lib. 3, tr. 2, c. 14, § 1; Du Cange.

INLAGATION. Restoration to the protection of law. Restoration from a condition of outlawry.

INLAGH. A person within the law's protection; contrary to utlagh, an outlaw. Cowell.

INLAND. Within a country, state or territory; within the same country.

In old English law, inland was used for the demesne (q. v.) of a manor; that part which lay next or most convenient for the lord's mansion-house, as within the view thereof, and which, therefore, he kept in his own hands for support of his family and for hospitality; in distinction from outland or utland, which was the portion let out to tenants. Cowell; Kennett; Spelman.

INLAND BILL OF EXCHANGE. A bill of which both the drawer and drawee reside within the same state or country. Otherwise called a "domestic bill," and distinguished from a "foreign bill." Buckner v. Finley, 2 Pet. 589, 7 L.Ed. 528; Lonsdale v. Brown, 15 Fed.Cas. 857; Strawbridge v. Robinson, 10 Ill. 472, 50 Am.Dec. 420.

See Bill.

INLAND NAVIGATION. Within the meaning of the legislation of congress upon the subject, this phrase means navigation upon the rivers of the country, but not upon the great lakes. Moore v. American Transp. Co., 24 How. 38, 16 L.Ed. 674.

INLAND TRADE. Trade wholly carried on at home; as distinguished from commerce. See commerce.

INLAND WATERS. Such waters as canals, lakes, rivers, water-courses, inlets and bays, exclusive of the open sea, though the water in question may open or empty into the ocean. United States v. Steam Vessels of War, 1 S.Ct. 539, 106 U.S. 607, 27 L.Ed. 286; The Cotton Plant, 10 Wall. 581, 19 L.Ed. 983; Cogswell v. Chubb, 36 N.Y.S. 1076, 1 App.Div. 93.

INLANTAL, INLANTALE. Demesne or inland, opposed to delantal, or land tenanted. Cowell.

INLAUGHE, Sax. In old English law. Under the law, (sub lege,) in a frank-pledge, or decennary. Bract. fol. 125b.

INLAW. To place under the protection of the law. "Swearing obedience to the king in a leet, which doth inlaw the subject." Bacon.

INLEASED. In old English law. Entangled, or ensnared. 2 Inst. 247; Cowell; Blount.

INLIGARE. In old European law. To confederate; to join in a league, (in ligam coire.) Spelman.

INMATE. A person who lodges or dwells in the same house with another, occupying different rooms, but using the same door for passing in and out of the house. Webster; Jacob.

INMATE OF HOUSE OF PROSTITUTION. Those words apply only to the woman who goes there more or less regularly and who plies her trade there, and do not include a man found therein who has gone there for the purpose of illicit sexual intercourse. People v. Anonymous, 292 N. Y.S. 282, 285, 161 Misc. 379.

INN. An inn is a house where a traveler is furnished with everything which he has occasion for while on his way. Waitt Const. Co. y. Chase, 188 N.Y.S. 589, 592, 197 App.Div. 327. A house where all who conduct themselves properly, and who are able and ready to pay for their entertainment, are received, if there is accommodation for them, and who, without any stipulated engagement as to the duration of their stay, or as to the rate of compensation, are, while there, supplied at a reasonable charge with their meals, their lodging, and such services and attention as are necessarily incident to the use of the house as a temporary home. Ford v. Waldorf System, 57 RI. 131, 188 A. 633, 635. A place where the public will be received and accommodations provided to guests for compensation. Edwards v. City of Los Angeles, 48 Cal.App.2d 62, 119 P.2d 370, 373, 374.

Under the term "inn" the law includes all taverns, hotels, and houses of public general entertainment for guests. Code Ga. 1882, § 2114 (Civ. Code 1910, § 3505).

See, also Hotel.

The words "inn," "tavern," and "hotel" are used synonymously to designate what is ordinarily and popularly known as an "inn" or "tavern," or place for the entertainment of travelers, and where all their wants can be supplied. A restaurant where meals only are furnished is not an inn or tavern. Carpenter v. Taylor, 1 Hilt., N.Y., 193. An inn is distinguished from a private boarding-house mainly in this : that the keeper of the latter is at liberty to choose his guests, while the innkeeper is obliged to entertain and furnish all travelers of good conduct and means of payment with what they may have occasion for, as such travelers, while on their way. Pinkerton v. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557, 91 Am. Dec. 657. Another distinction is that in a boarding-house the guest is under an express contract for a certain time at a certain rate, whereas, in an inn the guest is entertained from day to day upon an implied contract. Willard v. Reinhardt, 2 E.D.Smith, N.Y., 148. A lodging house does not become an "inn" because a register is kept. Roberts v. Case Hotel Co., 175 N.Y.S. 123, 127, 106 Misc. 481.

Common Inn. A house for the entertainment of travelers and passengers, in which lodging and necessaries are provided for them and for their horses and attendants. Cromwell v. Stephens, 2 Daly (N.Y.) 15. The word "common," in this connection, does not appear to add anything to the common-law definition of an inn, except in so far as it lays stress on the fact that the house is for the entertainment of the general public or for all suitable persons who apply for accommodations.

INNAMIUM. In old English law. A pledge.

INNAVIGABILITY. In insurance law. The condition of being innavigable, (q. v.) The foreign writers distinguish "innavigability" from "shipwreck." 3 Kent, Comm. 323, and note. The term is also applied to the condition of streams which are not large enough or deep enough, or are otherwise unsuited, for navigation.

INNAVIGABLE. As applied to streams, not capable of or suitable for navigation; impassable by ships or vessels.

As applied to vessels in the law of marine insurance, it means unfit for navigation; so damaged by misadventures at sea as to be no longer capable of making a voyage. See 3 Kent, Comm. 323, note.

INNER BARRISTER. A serjeant or king's counsel, in England, who is admitted to plead within the bar.

INNER HOUSE. The name given to the chambers in which the first and second divisions of the court of session in Scotland hold their sittings. See Outer House.

INNINGS. In old records. Lands recovered from the sea by draining and banking. Cowell.

INNKEEPER. One who keeps an inn or house for the lodging and entertainment of travelers. The keeper of a common inn for the lodging and entertainment of travelers and passengers, their horses and attendants, for a reasonable compensation. Story, Bailm. § 475. One who keeps a tavern or coffeehouse in which lodging is provided. 2 Steph. Comm. 133. See Inn.

One who receives as guests all who choose to visit his house, without any previous agreement as to the time of their stay, or the terms. His liability as innkeeper ceases when his guest pays his bill, and leaves the house with the declared intention of not returning, notwithstanding the guest leaves his baggage behind him. Wintermute v. Clark, 5 Sandf., N.Y., 242.

The words "innkeeper" and "hotel keeper" are synonymous, but each is distinct from a "boarding house keeper," in that the innkeeper has no right to select his guests, but must receive every one applying for accommodation who conducts himself in a proper manner, etc., while the keeper of a boarding house is one who maintains a house for the accommodation of those who enter under contract for entertainment at a certain rate for a certain period at an agreed compensation. McClaugherty v. Cline, 128 Tenn. 605, 163 S.W. 801. One who entertains strangers occasionally, although he may receive compensation for it, is not an innkeeper.

INNOCENCE. The absence of guilt.

INNOCENT. Free from guilt; acting in good faith and without knowledge of incriminatory circumstances, or of defects or objections.

INNOCENT AGENT. In criminal law. One who, being ignorant of any unlawful intent on the part of his principal, is merely the instrument of the guilty party in committing an offense; one who does an unlawful act at the solicitation or request of another, but who, from defect of understanding or ignorance of the inculpatory facts, incurs no legal guilt. Smith v. State, 21 Tex.App. 107, 17 S.W. 552; State v. Carr, 28 Or. 389, 42 P. 215.

INNOCENT CONVEYANCES. A technical term of the English law of conveyancing, used to designate such conveyances as may be made by a leasehold tenant without working a forfeiture. These are said to be lease and re-lease, bargain and sale, and, in case of a life-tenant, a covenant to stand seised. 1 Chit. Pr. 243.

INNOCENT PURCHASER. One who, by an honest contract or agreement, purchases property or acquires an interest therein, without knowledge, or means of knowledge sufficient to charge him in law with knowledge, of any infirmity in the title of the seller. Republic Power and Service Co. v. Continental Credit Corporation, 178 Ark. 966, 12 S.W.2d 906, 908.

INNOCENT TRESPASS. A trespass to land, committed, not recklessly, but through inadvertence or mistake, or in good faith, under an honest belief that the trespasser was acting within his legal rights. Elk Garden Big Vein Mining Co. v. Gerstell, 100 W.Va. 472, 131 S.E. 152, 153.

INNOCENT TRESPASSER. One who enters another's land unlawfully, but inadvertently or unintentionally, or in the honest, reasonable belief of his own right so to do, and removes sand or other material therefrom, is an "innocent trespasser." American Sand & Gravel Co. v. Spencer, 55 Ind. App. 523, 103 N.E. 426, 427.

INNOCENT WOMAN. One who has never had illicit intercourse with a man. State v. Cline, 170 N.C. 751, 87 S.E. 106, 107.

INNOMINATE. In the civil law. Not named or classed; belonging to no specific class; ranking under a general head. A term applied to those contracts for which no certain or precise remedy was appointed, but a general action on the case only. Dig. 2, 1, 4, 7, 2; Id. 19, 4, 5.

INNOMINATE CONTRACTS, literally, are the "unclassified" contracts of Roman law. They are contracts which are neither re, verbis, literis, nor consensu simply, but some mixture of or variation upon two or more of such contracts. They are principally the contracts of permutatio, de cestimato, precarium, and transactio. Brown.

INNONIA. In old English law. A close or inclosure, (clausum, inclausura.) Spelman.

INNOTESCIMUS. Lat. We make known. A term formerly applied to letters patent, derived from the emphatic word at the conclusion of the Latin forms. It was a species of exemplification of charters of feoffment or other instruments not of record. 5 Coke, 54a.

INNOVATION. In Scotch law. The exchange of one obligation for another, so as to make the second obligation come in the place of the first, and be the only subsisting obligation against the debtor. Bell. The same with "novation," (q. v.)

INNOXIARE. In old English law. To purge one of a fault and make him innocent.

INNS OF CHANCERY. So called because anciently inhabited by such clerks as chiefly studied the framing of writs, which regularly belonged to the cursitors, who were officers of the court of chancery. There are nine of them,—Clement's, Clifford's, and Lyon's Inn; Furnival's, Thavies', and Symond's Inn; New Inn; and Barnard's and Staples' Inn. These were formerly preparatory colleges for students, and many entered them before they were admitted into the inns of court. They consist chiefly of solicitors, and possess corporate property, hall, chambers, etc., but perform no public functions like the inns of court. Wharton.

INNS OF COURT. These are certain private unincorporated associations, in the nature of collegiate houses, located in London, and invested with the exclusive privilege of calling men to the bar; that is, conferring the rank or degree of a barrister. They were founded probably about the beginning of the fourteenth century. The principal inns of court are the Inner Temple, Middle Temple, Lincoln's Inn, and Gray's Inn. (The two former originally belonged to the Knights Templar; the two latter to the earls of Lincoln and Gray respectively.) These bodies now have a "common council of legal education," for giving lectures and holding examinations. The inns of chancery, distinguishable from the foregoing, but generally classed with them under the general name, are the buildings known as "Clifford's Inn," "Clement's Inn," "New Inn," "Staples' Inn," and "Barnard's Inn." They were formerly a sort of collegiate houses in which law students learned the elements of law before being admitted into the inns of court, but they have long ceased to occupy that position.

INNUENDO. This Latin word (commonly translated "meaning") was the technical beginning of that clause in a declaration or indictment for slander or libel in which the meaning of the alleged libelous words was explained, or the application of the language charged to the plaintiff was pointed out. Hence It gave its name to the whole clause; and this usage is still retained, although an equivalent English word is now substituted. Thus, it may be charged that the defendant said "he (meaning the said plaintiff) is a perjurer."

An "innuendo" in pleading in libel action is a statement by plaintiff of construction which he puts upon words which are alleged to be libelous and which meaning he will induce jury to adopt at trial. Burr v. Winnett Times Pub. Co., 80 Mont. 70, 258 P. 242, 244.

The word is also used, (though more rarely,) in other species of pleadings, to introduce an explanation of a preceding word, charge, or averment. Guide Pub. Co. v. Futrell, 175 Va. 77, 7 S.E.2d 133, 138.

It is said to mean no more than the words "id est," "scilicet," or "meaning," or "aforesaid," as explanatory of a subject-matter sufficiently expressed before; as "such a one, meaning the defendant," or "such a subject, meaning the subject in question." Cowp. 683. It is only explanatory of some matter already expressed. It serves to point out where there is precedent matter, but never for a new charge. It may apply what is already expressed, but cannot add to or enlarge or change the sense of the previous words. See Grand v. Dreyfus, 122 Cal. 58, 54 P. 389; Kee v. Armstrong, Byrd & Co., 75 Okl. 84, 182 P. 494, 498, 5 A.L.R. 1349. The office of an "innuendo" is to explain the words published, and to give to them their true meaning, and it cannot introduce new matter, add to or enlarge the sense of those words, or impute to them a meaning not warranted by the publication, when taken alone, or read in connection with the inducement and colloquium. Bowie v. Evening News, 148 Md. 569, 129 A. 797, 800; Drebin v. Jewish World Pub. Co., 262 Pa. 169, 105 A. 58, 59. Its office is to set a meaning upon words or language of doubtful or ambiguous import which alone would not be actionable. Rail v. National Newspaper Ass'n, 198 Mo.App. 463, 192 S.W. 129, 134.

INOFFICIOSUM. In the civil law. Inofficious; contrary to natural duty or affection. Used of a will of a parent which disinherited a child without just cause, or that of a child which disinherited a parent, and which could be contested by querela inofficiosi testamenti. Dig. 2, 5, 3, 13; Paulus, lib. 4, tit. 5, § 1.

INOFFICIOUS TESTAMENT. A will not in accordance with the testator's natural affection and moral duties. In re Willford's Will (N.J.) 51 A. 502. But particularly, in the civil law, a will which deprives the heirs of that portion of the estate to which the law entitles them, and of which they cannot legally be disinherited. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 714; Civ. Code La. art. 3556, subd. 16. A testament contrary to the natural duty of the parent, because it totally disinherited the child, without expressly giving the reason therefor.

INOFICIOCIDAD. In Spanish law. Every thing done contrary to a duty or obligation assumed, as well as in opposition to the piety and affection dictated by nature: inofficiosum dicitur id omne quod contra pietatis officium factum est. The term applies especially to testaments, donations, dower, etc., which may be either revoked or reduced when they affect injuriously the rights of creditors or heirs.

INOPS CONSILII. Lat. Destitute of counsel; without legal counsel. A term applied to the acts or condition of one acting without legal advice, as a testator drafting his own will.

INORDINATUS. An intestate.

INPENY and GUTPENY. In old English law. A customary payment of a penny on entering into and going out of a tenancy, (pro exitu de tenura, et pro ingressu.) Spelman.

INQUEST. A body of men appointed by law to inquire into certain matters. The grand jury is sometimes called the "grand inquest." The judicial inquiry made by a jury summoned for the purpose is called an "inquest." The finding of such men, upon an investigation, is also called an "inquest." People v. Coombs, 55 N.Y.S. 276, 36 App.Div. 284; Davis v. Bibb County, 116 Ga. 23, 42 S.E. 403.

The inquiry by a coroner, termed a "coroner's inquest," into the manner of the death of any one who has been slain, or has died suddenly or in prison.

This name is also given to a species of proceeding under the New York practice, allowable where the defendant in a civil action has not filed an affidavit of merits nor verified his answer. In such case the issue may be taken up, out of its regular order, on plaintiff's motion, and tried without the admission of any affirmative defense.

An inquest is a trial of an issue of fact where the plaintiff alone introduces testimony. The defendant is entitled to appear at the taking of the inquest, and to cross-examine the plaintiff's witnesses; and, if he do appear, the inquest must be taken before a jury, unless a jury be expressly waived by him. Haines v. Davis, 6 How.Prac., N.Y., 118.

The term "inquest," as applied to Surrogates' Courts, is a term of larger signification than as applied to proceedings at common law, and includes the exercise of the surrogate's function to determine all the circumstances concerning the genuineness of a will offered for probate, and the validity of its execution, without reference to whether there is a contest or not; his judicial power arising only after he has determined that the will is genuine and validly executed. In re Hermann's Will, 145 N.Y.S. 291, 297, 83 Misc. 283.

General

Coroner's inquest. See Coroner.

Inquest, arrest of. See Arrest.

Inquest of lunacy. See Inquisition (or Inquest) of Lunacy.

Inquest of office. In English practice. An inquiry made by the king's (or the queen's) officer, his sheriff, coroner, or escheator, virtute or by writ sent to them for that purpose, or by commissioners specially appointed, concerning any matter that entitles the king to the possession of lands or tenements, goods or chattels; as to inquire whether the king's tenant for life died seised, whereby the reversion accrues to the king; whether A., who held immediately of the crown, died without heir, in which case the lands belong to the king by escheat; whether B. be attainted of treason, whereby his estate is forfeited to the crown; whether C., who has purchased land, be an alien, which is another cause of forfeiture, etc. 3 Bl. Comm. 258. These inquests of office were more frequent in practice during the continuance of the military tenures than at present; and were devised by law as an authentic means to give the king his right by solemn matter of record. Id. 258, 259; 4 Steph. Comm. 40, 41. Sometimes simply termed "office," as in the phrase "office found," (q. v.). Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Mingus, 17 S.Ct. 348, 165 U.S. 413, 41 L.Ed. 770; Baker v. Shy, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 89.

Inquest of sheriffs. An inquest which directs a general inquiry as to the methods in which the sheriffs had been conducting the local government of the country (1170). 1 Holdsw. H. E. L. 21.

INQUILINUS. In Roman law. A tenant; one who hires and occupies another's house; but particularly, a tenant of a hired house in a city, as distinguished from colonus, the hirer of a house or estate in the country. Calvin.

INQUIRENDO. An authority given to some official person to institute an inquiry concerning the crown's interests.

INQUIRY, WRIT OF. A writ sued out by a plaintiff in a case where the defendant has let the proceedings go by default, and an interlocutory judgment has been given for damages generally, where the damages do not admit of calculation. It issues to the sheriff of the county in which the venue is laid, and commands him to inquire, by a jury of twelve men, concerning the amount of damages. The sheriff thereupon tries the cause in his sheriff's court, and some amount must always be returned to the court. But the return of the inquest merely informs the court, which may, if it choose, in all cases assess damages and thereupon give final judgment. 2 Archb. Pr., Waterman ed. 952; 3 Bla. Corn. 398; 3 Chitty, Stat. 495, 497.

INQUISITIO. In old English law. An inquisition or inquest. Inquisitio post mortem, an inquisition after death. An inquest of office held, during the continuance of the military tenures, upon the death of every one of the king's tenants, to inquire of what lands he died seised, who was his heir, and of what age, in order to entitle the king to his marriage, wardship, relief, primer seisin, or other advantages, as the circumstances of the case might turn out. 3 Bl. Comm. 258. Inquisitio patrice, the inquisition of the country; the ordinary jury, as distinguished from the grand assise. Bract. fol. 15b.

INQUISITION. In practice. An inquiry or inquest; particularly, an investigation of certain facts made by a sheriff, together with a jury impaneled by him for the purpose. The instrument of writing on which their decision is made is also called an inquisition.

In its broadest sense, "inquisition," includes any judicial inquiry. Phillips v. Vessells, 2 W.W.Harr. (Del.) 490, 126 A. 51.

INQUISITION AFTER DEATH. See Inquisitio.

INQUISITION (or INQUEST) OF LUNACY. A quasi-judicial examination into the sanity or insanity of a given person, ordered by a court having jurisdiction, on a proper application and sufficient preliminary showing of facts, held by the sheriff (or marshal, or a magistrate, or the court itself, according to the local practice) with the assistance of a special jury, usually of six men, who are to hear evidence and render a verdict in accordance with the facts. This is the usual foundation for an order appointing a guardian or conservator for a person adjudged to be insane, or for committing him to an insane asylum. See Hughes v. Jones, 116 N.Y. 67, 22 N.E. 446, 5 L.R.A. 637, 15 Am.St.Rep. 386; Hadaway v. Smith, 71 Md. 319, 18 A. 589.

INQUISITOR. A designation of sheriffs, coroners super visum corporis, and the like, who have power to inquire into certain matters.

In Ecclesiastical law. The name of an officer who is authorized to inquire into heresies, and the like, and to punish them. A judge.

INROLL. A form of "enroll," used in the old books. 3 Rep. Ch. 63, 73; 3 East, 410.

INROLLMENT. See Enrollment.

INSANE. Unsound in mind; of unsound mind; deranged, disordered, or diseased in mind. Violently deranged; mad.

INSANITY. Unsoundness of mind; madness; mental alienation or derangement; a morbid psychic condition resulting from iisorder of the brain, whether arising from malformation or defective organization or morbid processes affecting the brain primarily or diseased states of the general system implicating it secondarily, which involves the intellect, the emotions, the will, and the moral sense, or some of these faculties, and which is characterized especially by their non-development, derangement, or perversion, and is manifested, in most forms, by delusions, incapacity to reason or to j udge, or by uncontrollable impulses. In law, such a want of reason, memory, and intelligence as prevents a man from comprehending the nature and consequences of his acts or from distinguishing between right and wrong conduct. Crosswell v. People, 13 Mich. 427, 87 Am.Dec. 774; Johnson v. Insurance Co., 83 Me. 182, 22 A. 107; Frazer v. Frazer, 2 Del.Ch. 263.

"Insanity" does not include certain states of transitory mental disorder, such as trances, epilepsy, hysteria, and delirium. Martin v. Fraternal Reserve Life Ass'n, 200 Ill. App. 359, 364, and from both the pathologic and the legal definitions are to be excluded temporary mental aberrations caused by or accompanying alcoholic or other intoxication and the delirium of fever.

The distinction between the medical and the legal idea of insanity has, perhaps, not been better stated than by Ray, who is quoted by Ordronaux, and again by Witthaus & Becker "Insanity in medicine has to do with a prolonged departure of the individual from his natural mental state arising from bodily disease." "Insanity in law covers nothing more than the relation of the person and the particular act which is the subject of judicial investigation. The legal problem must resolve itself into the inquiry, whether there was mental capacity and moral freedom to do or abstain from doing the particular act." 1 Whitth. & Beck.Med.Jur. 181; U. S. v. Faulkner, D.C.Tex., 35 F. 730.

Other definitions

Insanity is a manifestation of disease of the brain, characterized by a general or partial derangement of one or more faculties of the mind, and in which, while consciousness is not abolished, mental freedom is perverted, weakened, or destroyed. Hammond, Nervous System, 332. The prolonged departure, without any adequate cause, from the states of feeling and modes of thinking usual to the individual in health. Bouvier. By insanity is not meant (in law) a total deprivation of reason, but only an inability, from defect of perception, memory, and judgment, to do the act in question, [with an intelligent apprehension of its nature and consequences.] So, by a lucid interval is not meant a perfect restoration to reason, but a restoration so far as to be able, beyond doubt, to comprehend and to do the act with such reason, memory, and judgment as to make it a legal act. Frazer v. Frazer, 2 Del. Ch. 263.

Eccentricities and idiosyncracies, however gross, do not constitute "Insanity." In re Hansen's Will, 50 Utah, 207, 167 P. 256, 261. And drunkenness is not insanity, nor does it answer to what is termed an unsound mind, unless the derangement which it causes becomes fixed and continued by the drunkenness 'being habitual, or by chronic alcoholism, and thereby rendering the party incapable of distinguishing between right and wrong, the same as insanity produced by any other cause. Rucker v. State, 119 Ohio St. 189, 162 N.E. 802, 805.

Synonyms

Delusion is sometimes loosely used as synonymous with insanity. But this is incorrect. Delusion is not the substance but the evidence of insanity. Ryan v. People, 60 Colo. 425, 153 P. 756, 757, L.R.A. 1917F, 646, Ann.Cas.1917C, 605.

The presence of an insane delusion is a recognized test of insanity in all cases except amentia and imbecility, and where there is no frenzy or raving madness; and in this sense an insane delusion is a fixed belief in the mind of the patient of the existence of a fact which has no objective existence but is purely the figment of his imagination, and which is so extravagant that no sane person would believe it under the circumstances of the case, the belief, nevertheless, being so unchangeable that the patient is incapable of being permanently disabused by argument or proof. Walker v. Struthers, 273 Ill. 387, 112 N.E. 961, 966. The characteristic which distinguishes an "insane" delusion from other mistaken beliefs is that it is not a product of the reason but of the imagination, that is, not a mistake of fact induced by deception, fraud, insufficient evidence, or erroneous reasoning, but the spontaneous conception of a perverted imagination, having no basis whatever in reason or evidence. Riggs v. Missionary Soc., 35 Hun, N.Y., 658; Buchanan v. Pierie, 205 Pa. 123, 54 Atl. 583, 97 Am.St.Rep. 725. An "insane delusion" is an idea or belief which springs spontaneously from a diseased or perverted mind without reason or without foundation in fact. It is distinguishable from a belief which is founded upon prejudice or aversion, no matter how unreasonable or unfounded the prejudice or aversion may be, and if it is the product of a reasoning mind, no matter how slight the evidence on which it is based, it cannot be classed as an insane delusion. Coffey v. Miller, 160 Ky. 415, 169 S.W. 852, 854, Ann.Cas.1916C, 30.

As to the distinctions between "Delusion" and "Illusion" and "Hallucination," see those titles.

Derangement. This term includes all forms of mental unsoundness, except of the natural born idiot. Hiett v. Shull, 36 W.Va. 563, 15 S.E. 147.

Idiocy is congenital amentia, that is, a want of reason and intelligence existing from birth and due to structural defect or malformation of the brain. It is a congenital obliteration of the chief mental powers, and is defined in law as that condition in which the patient has never had, from his birth, even the least glimmering of reason; for a man is not legally an "idiot" if he can tell his parents, his age, or other like common matters. This is not the condition of a deranged mind, but that of a total absence of mind, so that, while idiocy is generally classed under the general designation of "insanity," it is rather to be regarded as a natural defect than as a disease or as the result of a disease. It differs from "lunacy," because there are no lucid intervals or periods of ordinary intelligence. In re Beaumont, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 53, 29 Am.Dec. 33; Clark v. Robinson, 88 Ill. 502.

Imbecility. A more or less advanced decay and feebleness of the intellectual faculties; that weakness of mind which, without depriving the person entirely of the use of his reason, leaves only the faculty of conceiving the most common and ordinary ideas and such as relate almost always to physical wants and habits. It varies in shades and degrees from merely excessive folly and eccentricity to an almost total vacuity of mind or amentia, and the test of legal capacity, in this condition, is the stage to which the weakness of mind has advanced, as measured by the degree of reason, judgment, and memory remaining. It may proceed from paresis or general paralysis, from senile decay, or from the advanced stages of any of the ordinary forms of insanity; and the term is rather descriptive of the consequences of insanity than of any particular type of the disease. Campbell v. Campbell, 130 Ill. 466, 22 N.E. 620, 6 L.R.A. 167.

Mere imbecility or weakness of mind, however great, is not "insanity." There must be a total want of understanding. Johnson v. Millard, 110 Neb. 830, 195 N.W. 485, 487.

Lunacy. At the common law, was a term used to describe the state of one who, by sickness, grief, or other accident, has wholly lost his memory and understanding. Co. Litt. 246b, 247a; Corn. v. Haskell, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 496. It is distinguished from idiocy, an idiot being one who from his birth has had no memory or understanding, while lunacy implies the possession and subsequent loss of mental powers. Bicknell v. Spear, 77 N.Y.S. 920, 38 Misc. Rep. 389. On the other hand, lunacy is a total deprivation or suspension of the ordinary powers of the mind, and is to be distinguished from imbecility, where there is a more or less advanced decay and feebleness of the intellectual faculties. In re Vanauken, 10 N.J.Eq. 186, 195; Odell v. Buck, 21 Wend. (N.Y.) 142. As to all other forms of insanity, lunacy was originally distinguished by the occurrence of lucid intervals, and hence might be described as a periodical or recurrent insanity. In re Anderson, 132 N.C. 243, 43 S.E. 649. But while these distinctions are still observed in some jurisdictions, they are more generally disregarded; so that, at present, in inquisitions of lunacy and other such proceedings, the term "lunacy" has almost everywhere come to be synonymous with "insanity," Smith v. Hickenbottom, 57 Iowa, 733, 11 N.W. 664, 667, and is used as a general description of all forms of derange.. ment or mental unsoundness, this rule being established by statute in many states and by judicial decisions in others, In re Clark, 175 N.Y. 139, 67 N. E. 212.

Cases of arrested mental development would come within the definition of lunacy, that is, where the patient was born with a normal brain, but the cessation of mental growth occurred in infancy or so near it that he never acquired any greater intelligence or discretion than belongs to a normally healthy child. Such a subject might be scientifically denominated an "idiot," but not legally, for in law the latter term is applicable only to congenital amentia. The term "lucid interval" means not an apparent tranquility or seeming repose, or cessation of the violent symptoms of the disorder, or a simple diminution or remission of the disease, but a temporary cure—an intermission so clearly marked that it perfectly resembles a return of health; and it must be such a restoration of the faculties as enables the patient beyond doubt to comprehend the nature of his acts and transact his affairs as usual; and it must be continued for a length of time sufficient to give certainty to the temporary restoration of reason. Godden v. Burke, 35 La.Ann. 160, 173; Frazer v. Frazer, 2 Del. Ch. 260.

Non compos mentis. Lat. Not of sound mind. A generic term applicable to all insane persons, of whatsoever specific type the insanity may be and from whatever cause arising, provided there be an entire loss of reason, as distinguished from mere weakness of mind. Somers v. Pumphrey, 24 Ind. 244. Potts v. House, 6 Ga. 350, 50 Am. Dec. 329.

Forms and Varieties of Insanity

Without attempting a scientific classification of the numerous types and forms of insanity, (as to which it may be said that there is as yet no final agreement among psychologists and alienists either as to analysis or nomenclature,) definitions and explanations will here be appended of the compound and descriptive terms most commonly met with in medical jurisprudence. And, first, as to the origins or causes of the disease:

Choreic insanity is insanity arising from chorea, the latter being a nervous disease, more commonly attacking children than adults, characterized by irregular and involuntary twitchings of the muscles of the limbs and face, popularly called "St. Vitus' dance."

Congenital insanity is that which exists from the birth of the patient, and is (in law) properly called "idiocy." See supra.

Cretinism is a form of imperfect or arrested mental development, which may amount to idiocy, with physical degeneracy or deformity or lack of development; endemic in Switzerland and some other parts of Europe, but the term is applied to similar states occurring elsewhere.

Delirium tremens. A disease of the nervous system, induced by the excessive and protracted use of intoxicating liquors. ;Etna Life Ins. Co. v. Deming, 123 Ind. 384, 24 N.E. 86, 87, usually occurring in habitual drinkers after a few days' total abstinence from liquors, but sometimes resulting directly and immediately from drunkenness, Erwin v. State, 10 Tex.App. 700, 702; Knickerbocker Life Ins. Co. v. Foley, 105 U.S. 350, 354, 26 L.Ed. 1055; Evers v. State, 31 Tex.Cr.R. 318, 20 S.W. 744, 748, 18 L.R.A. 421, 37 Am.St.Rep. 811; and affecting the brain so as to produce incoherence and lack of continuity in the intellectual processes, a suspension or perversion of the power of volition, and delusions, particularly of a terrifying nature, but not generally prompting to violence except in the effort to escape trom imaginary dangers. It is recognized in law as a form of insanity, and may be of such a nature or intensity as to render the patient legally incapable of committing a crime. United States v. McGlue, 1 Curt. 1, 26 Fed.Cas. 1093; Insurance Co. v. Deming, 123 Ind. 384, 24 N.E. 86; Maconnehey v. State, 5 Ohio St. 77; Erwin v. State, 10 Tex.App. 700.

In some states the insanity of alcoholic intoxication is classed as "temporary," where induced by the voluntary recent use of ardent spirits and carried to such a degree that the person becomes incapable of judging the consequences or the moral aspect of his acts, and "settled," where the condition is that of delirium tremens. Settled insanity, in this sense, excuses from civil or criminal responsibility; temporary insanity does not. The ground of the distinction is that the former is a remote effect of imbibing alcoholic liquors and is not voluntarily incurred, while the latter is a direct result voluntarily sought for. Evers v. State, 31 Tex.Cr.R. 318, 20 S.W. 744, 18 L.R.A. 421, 37 Am.St.Rep. 811; State v. Kidwell, 62 W.Va. 466, 59 S.E. 494, 495, 13 L.R.A.,N.S., 1024.

Folie brightique. A French term sometimes used to designate an access of insanity resulting from nephritis or "Bright's disease." In re McKean's Will, 66 N.Y.S. 44, 31 Misc. 703.

Idiopathic insanity is such as results from a disease of the brain itself, lesions of the cortex, cerebral anemia, etc.

Paranoia. A form of mental distress known as delusionary insanity, and a person afflicted with it has delusions which dominate, but do not destroy, the mental capacity, and, though sane as to other subjects, as to the delusion and its direct consequences the person is insane. Mounger v. Gandy, 110 Miss. 133, 69 So. 817, 818.

It is sometimes characterized as logical perversion, and is said to have "misplaced the antiquated term monomania, which not only implied that the delusion was restricted to one subject, but was otherwise insufficient and misleading." The memory, emotions, judgment, and conceptions are in most cases unimpaired, though each of these mental divisions may be involved. 2 Clevenger, Med.Jur. 860. It is characterized by systematized delusions, the term taking the place of "monomania" or "partial insanity". Taylor v. McClintock, 87 Ark. 243, 112 S.W. 405.

Pellagrous insanity. Insanity caused by or derived from pellagra, which is an endemic disease of southern Europe, (though not confined to that region,) characterized by erythema, digestive derangement, and nervous affections. (Cent. Dict.)

Polyneuritic insanity. Insanity arising from an inflammation of the nerves, of the kind called "polyneuritis" or "multiple neuritis" because it involves several nerves at the same time. This is often preceded by tuberculosis and almost always by alcoholism, and is characterized specially by delusions and falsification of the memory. It is otherwise called "Korssakoff's disease." (Kraepelin.)

Puerperal insanity. A mental derangement occurring in women at the time of child-birth or immediately after; it is also called "eclampsia parturientium."

Syphilitic insanity. A paresis or progressive imbecility resulting from the infection of syphilis.

It is sometimes called (as being a sequence or result of that disease) "metasyphilis" or "parasyphilis."

Tabetic dementia. A form of mental derange. ment or insanity complicated with "tabes dorsalis" or locomotor ataxia, which generally precedes, or sometimes follows, the mental attack. As to insanity resulting from cerebral embolism, see Embolism; from epilepsy, see Epilepsy. As to chronic alcoholism as a form of insanity, see Alcoholism.

Traumatic insanity is such as results from a wound or injury, particularly to the head or brain, such as fracture of the skull or concussion of the brain.

General Descriptive and Clinical Terms

Affective insanity. A modern comprehensive term descriptive of all those forms of insanity which affect or relate to the feelings and emotions and hence to the ethical and social relations of the individual.

Circular insanity. Another name for maniacal-depressive insanity, which see.

"Emotional insanity" or mania transitoria applies to the case of one in the possession of his ordinary reasoning faculties who allows his passions to convert him into a temporary maniac. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Terry, 15 Wall. 580, 583, 21 L.Ed. 236.

In a criminal case the law rejects the doctrine of what is called emotional insanity, which begins on the eve of the criminal act, and leaves off when it is committed. People v. Kernaghan, 72 Cal. 609, 14 P. 566, 568; Graves v. State, 45 N.J.L. (16 Vroom) 347, 350, 46 Am.Rep. 778.

Folie circulaire. The French name for circular insanity or maniacal-depressive insanity.

General paralysis. Dementia paralytica or paresis.

Habitual insanity. Such insanity as is, in its nature, continuous and chronic. Wright v. Market Bank, Tenn.Ch.App., 60 S.W. 623, 624.

Involutional insanity. That which sometimes accompanies the "involution" of the physical structure and physiology of the individual, the reverse of their "evolution," hence practically equivalent to the imbecility of old age or senile dementia.

Katatonia. A form of insanity distinguished by periods of acute mania and melancholia and especially by cataleptic states or conditions; the "insanity of rigidity." (Kahlbaum.) A type of insanity characterized particularly by "stereotypism," an instinctive inclination to purposeless repetition of the same expressions of the will, and "negativism," a senseless resistance against every outward influence. (Kraepelin.)

Legal insanity. Legal insanity is a disorder of the intellect, and is distinguished from "moral insanity," which is a disorder of the feelings and propensities. In re Forman's Will, 54 Barb. 274, 291; Bensberg v. Washington University, 251 Mo. 641, 158 S.W. 330, 336. A disease of the brain, rendering a person incapable of distinguishing between right and wrong with respect to the offense charged. State v. Privitt, 175 Mo. 207, 75 S.W. 457, 459.

Maniacal-depressive insanity. A form of insanity characterized by alternating periods of high maniacal excitement and of depressed and stuporous conditions in the nature of or resembling melancholia, often occurring as a series or cycle of isolated attacks, with more or less complete restoration to health in the intervals. (Kraepelin.) This is otherwise called "circular insanity" or "circular stupor."

Moral insanity. A morbid perversion of the feelings, affections, or propensities, but without any illusions or derangement of the intellectual faculties; irresistible impulse or an incapacity to resist the prompting of the passions, though accompanied by the power of discerning the moral or immoral character of the act. Moral insanity is not admitted as a bar to civil or criminal responsibility for the patient's acts, unless there is also shown to be intellectual disturbance, as manifested by insane delusions or the other recognized criteria of legal insanity. Taylor v. McClintock, 87 Ark. 243, 112 S.W. 405, 412; Bensberg v. Washington University, 251 Mo. 641, 158 S.W. 330, 336.

In a very few of the states where moral insanity is recognized as a defense, it means an incapacity of resistance, as where there was an entire destruction of the freedom of the will, although the person perceived the moral or immoral character of the act. State v. Leehman, 2 S.D. 171, 49 N.W. 3, 5.

Partial insanity, as a legal term, may mean either monomania (see infra) or an intermediate stage in the development of mental derangement. In the former sense, it does not relieve the patient from responsibility for his acts, except where instigated directly by his particular delusion or obsession: Trich v. Trich, 165 Pa. 586, 30 A. 1053. In the latter sense, it denotes a clouding or weakening of the mind, not inconsistent with some measure of memory, reason, and judgment. But the term, in this sense, does not convey any very definite meaning, since it may range from mere feeble-mindedness to almost the last stages of imbecility. Appeal of Dunham, 27 Conn. 205; State v. Jones, 50 N.H. 369, 383, 9 Am.Rep. 242.

Psychoneurosis. Mental disease without recognizable anatomical lesion, and without evidence and history of preceding chronic mental degeneration. Under this head come melancholia, mania, primary acute dementia, and mania hallucinatoria. Cent. Dict.

"Neurosis," in its broadest sense, may include any disease or disorder of the mind, and hence all the forms of insanity proper. But the term "psychoneurosis" is now employed by Freud and other European specialists to describe that class of exaggerated individual peculiarities or idiosyncrasies of thought towards special objects or topics which are absent from the perfectly normal mind, and which yet have so little influence upon the patient's conduct or his general modes of thought that they cannot properly be described as "insanity" or as any form of "mania," especially because ordinarily unaccompanied by any kind of delusions. At most, they lie on the debatable border-land between sanity and insanity. These idiosyncrasies or obsessions may arise from superstition, from a real incident in the patient's past history upon which he has brooded until it has assumed an unreal importance or significance, or from general neurasthenic conditions. Such, for example, are a terrified shrinking from certain kinds of animals, unreasonable dread of being shut up in some enclosed place or of being alone in a crowd, excessive fear of being poistoned, groundless conviction of irredeemable sinfulness, and countless other prepossessions, which may range from mere weak-minded superstition to actual monomania.

Recurrent insanity. Insanity which returns from time to time, hence equivalent to "lunacy" (see supra) in its common-law sense, as a mental disorder broken by lucid intervals. There is no presumption that fitful and exceptional attacks of insanity are continuous. Leache v. State, 22 Tex. App. 279, 3 S.W. 538, 58 Am.Rep. 638.

Settled insanity. The term applied to delirium tremens, which is a kind of insanity produced by alcoholism, caused by the breaking down of the person's system by long-continued or habitual drunkenness, and brought on by abstinence from drink. It is thus termed, to distinguish it from. "temporary insanity," or drunkenness directly resulting from drink. Evers v. State, 31 Tex.Cr. R. 318, 20 S.W. 744, 748, 18 L.R.A. 421, 37 Am.St. Rep. 811.

Temporary delusion. The word implies unsoundness or derangement of mind or intellect, not a mere temporary or slight delusion, which might be occasioned by fever or accident. Karow v. New York Continental Ins. Co., 57 Wis. 56, 15 N.W. 27, 31, 46 Am.Rep. 17.

Other Forms of Insanity

Amentia, dementia, and mania. The classification of insanity into these three types or forms, though once common, has of late given way to a more scientific nomenclature, based chiefly on the origin or cause of the disease in the particular patient and its clinical history. These terms, however, are still occasionally encountered in medical jurisprudence, and the names of some of their subdivisions are in constant use.

Amentia. A total lack of intelligence, reason, or mental capacity. Sometimes so used as to cover imbecility or dotage, or even as applicable to all forms of insanity; but properly restricted to a lack of mental capacity due to original defective organization of the brain (idiocy) or arrested cerebral development, as distinguished from the degeneration of intellectual faculties which once were normal.

Dementia. A form of insanity resulting from degeneration or disorder of the brain (idiopathic or traumatic, but not congenital) and characterized by general mental weakness and decrepitude, forgetfulness, loss of coherence, and total inability to reason, but not accompanied by delusions or uncontrollable impulses. Dennett v. Dennett, 44 N.H. 531, 84 Am.Dec. 97; People v. Lake, 2 Parker, Cr.R. (N.Y.) 218; Graham v. Deuterman, 91 N.E. 61, 62, 244 Ill. 124; Hibbard v. Baker, 104 N.W. 399, 400, 141 Mich. 124.

Among the sub-divisions of dementia should be noticed the following : Acute primary dementia is a form of temporary dementia, though often extreme in its intensity, and occurring in young people or adolescents, accompanied by general physical debility or exhaustion and induced by conditions likely to produce that state, as malnutrition, overwork, dissipation, or too rapid growth. Dementia paralytica is a progressive form of insanity, beginning with slight degeneration of the physical, intellectual, and moral powers, and leading to complete loss of mentality, or imbecility, with general paralysis. Also called paresis, paretic dementia, or cirrhosis of the brain, or (popularly) "softening of the brain." Dementia prcecox. A term applicable either to the early stages of dementia or to the dementia of adolescence, but more commonly applied to the latter. It is often (but not invariably) attributable to onanism or self-abuse, and is characterized by mental and moral stupidity, absence of any strong feeling of the impressions of life or interest in its events, blunting or obscuration of the moral sense, weakness of judgment, flightiness of thought, senseless laughter without mirth, automatic obedience, and apathetic despondency. (Kraepelin.) Senile dementia. Dementia occurring in persons of advanced age, and characterized by slowness and weakness of the mental processes and general physical degeneration, verging on or passing into imbecility, indicating the breaking down of the mental powers in advance of bodily decay. Hiett v. Shull, 36 W.Va. 563, 15 S.E. 146. Toxic dementia. Weakness of mind or feeble cerebral activity, approaching imbecility, resulting from continued administration or use of slow poisons or of the mere active poisons in repeated small doses, as in cases of lead poisoning and in some cases of addiction to such drugs as opium or alcohol.

Dementia praecox paranoid. A medical term indicating that form of dementia in which the patient exhibits ideas of persecution and has delusions. Rasmussen v. George Benz & Sons, 168 - Minn. 319, 210 N.W. 75, 76.

Dipsomania. An irresistible impulse to indulge in intoxication, either alcohol or other drugs-opiums. This mania, or dipsomania, is classed as one of the minor forms of insanity. Repeated intoxication for a number of 'ears, which is entirely voluntary, is not dipsomania. One having the power to refrain from the use of intoxicants, and who becomes intoxicated voluntarily, is not affected with dipsomania. Ballard v. State, 19 Neb. 609, 28 N.W. 271, 273. State v. Reidell, 14 A. 550, 9 Houst. (Del.) 470.

Erotomania. A form of mania similar to nymphomania, except that the present term is applied to patients of both sexes, and that (according to some authorities) it is applicable to all cases of excessive sexual craving irrespective of origin; while nymphomania is restricted to cases where the disease is caused by a local disorder of the sexual organs reacting on the brain. In erotomania, there is often an absence of any lesion of the intellectual powers. Krafft-Ebing, Psycopathia Sexualis, Chaddock's ed. And it is to be observed that the term "erotomania" is now often used, especially by French writers, to describe a morbid propensity for "falling in love" or an exaggerated and excited condition of amativeness or love-sickness, which may affect the general physical health, but is not necessarily correlated with any sexual craving, and which, though it may unnaturally color the imagination and distort the subject's view of life and affairs, does not at all amount to insanity, and should not be so considered when it leads to crimes of violence, as in the common case of a rejected lover who kills his mistress.

Fit of mania. A fit of mania includes a temporary depression or aberration of the mind, which sometimes accompanies or follows intoxication, and is often accompanied by delusions, hallucinations, and illusions. Gunter v. State, 3 So. 600, 607, 83 Ala. 96.

Homicidal mania. A form of mania in which the morbid state of the mind manifests itself in an irresistible inclination or impulse to commit homicide, prompted usually by an insane delusion either as to the necessity- of self-defense or the avenging of injuries, or as to the patient being the appointed instrument of a superhuman justice. Com. v. Sayre, 5 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 425.

Hypomania. A mild or slightly developed form or type of mania.

Kleptomania. See Kleptomania.

Mania. That form of insanity in which the patient is subject to hallucinations and illusions, accompanied by a high state of general mental excitement, sometimes amounting to fury. Hall v. Unger, 2 Abb. U. S. 510, 11 Fed.Cas. 261; People v. Lake, 2 Parker Cr.R., N.Y., 218.

In the case first above cited, the following description Is given by Justice Field : "Mania is that form of insanity where the mental derangement is accompanied with more or less of excitement. Sometimes the excitement amounts to a fury. The individual in such cases is subject to hallucinations and illusions. He is impressed with the reality of events which have never occurred, and of things which do not exist, and acts more or less in conformity with his belief in these particulars. The mania may be general, and affect all or most of the operations of the mind ; or it may be partial, and be confined to particular subjects. In the latter case it is generally termed 'monomania.' " In a more popular but less scientific sense, "mania" denotes a morbid or unnatural or excessive craving, issuing in impulses of such fixity and intensity that they cannot be resisted by the patient in the enfeebled state of the will and blurred moral concepts which accompany the disease. It is used in this sense in such compounds as "homicidal mania," "dipsomania," and the like.

Mania a potu. Delirium tremens, or a species of temporary insanity resulting as a secondary effect produced by the excessive and protracted indulgence in intoxicating liquors. See State v. Hurley, Houst.Cr.Cas. (Del.) 28, 35.

Mania fanatica. A form of insanity characterized by a morbid state of religious feeling. Ekin v. McCracken, 11 Phila., Pa. 540.

Mania transitoria. The term applies to the case of one in the possession of his ordinary reasoning faculties, who allows his passions to convert him into a temporary maniac. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Terry, 82 U.S. (15 Wall.) 580, 583, 21 L.Ed. 236.

Megalomania. The so-called "delirium of grandeur" or "folie de grandeur;" a form of mania in which the besetting delusion of the patient is that he is some person of great celebrity or exalted rank, historical or contemporary.

Melancholia. A form of insanity the characteristics of which are extreme mental depression, with delusions and hallucinations, the latter relating especially to the financial or social position of the patient or to impending or threatened dangers to his person, property, or reputation, or issuing in distorted conceptions of his relations to society or his family or of his rights and duties in general. State v. Reidell, 9 Houst., Del., 470, 14 A. 551; People v. Krist, 168 N.Y. 19, 60 N.E. 1057. Hypochondria or hypochondriasis. A form of melancholia in which the patient has exaggerated or causeless fears concerning his health or suffers from imaginary disease. Toxiphobia. Morbid dread of being poisoned; a form of insanity manifesting itself by an excessive and unfounded apprehension of death by poison.

Methomania. An irresistible craving for alcoholic or other intoxicating liquors, manifested by the periodical recurrence of drunken debauches. State v. Savage, 89 Ala. 1, 7 So. 183, 7 L.R.A. 426.

Monomania. A perversion of the understanding in regard to a single object or a small number of objects, with the predominance of mental excitement, as distinguished from "mania," which means a condition in which the perversion of the understanding embraces all kinds of objects, and is accompanied with general mental excitement. State v. John, 30 N.C. 330, 337, 49 Am.Dec. 396; Freed v. Brown, 55 Ind. 310, 317; People v. Lake, 2 Parker, Cr.R. (N.Y.) 215, 218. A perversion or derangement of the reason or understanding with reference to a single subject or small class of subjects, with considerable mental excitement and delusions, while, as to all matters outside the range of the peculiar infirmity, the intellectual faculties remain unimpaired and function normally. Hopps v. People, 31 Ill. 390, 83 Am.Dec. 231; Bohler v. Hicks, 120 Ga. 800, 48 S.E. 306, 307.

Necrophilism. A form of affective insanity manifesting itself in an unnatural and revolting fondness for corpses, the patient desiring to be in their presence, to caress them, to exhume them, or sometimes to mutilate them, and even (in a form of sexual perversion) to violate them.

Nymphomania. A form of mania characterized by a morbid, excessive, and uncontrollable craving for sexual intercourse. This term is applied only to women. The term for a corresponding mania in men is "satyriasis."

Oikei mania. A form of insanity manifesting itself in a morbid state of the domestic affections, as an unreasonable dislike of wife or child without cause or provocation. Ekin v. McCracken, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 540.

Paranoia. Monomania in general, or the obsession of a delusion or system of delusions which dominate without destroying the mental capacity, leaving the patient sane as to all matters outside their particular range, though subject to perverted ideas, false beliefs, and uncontrollable impulses within that range; and particularly, the form of monomania where the delusion is as to wrongs, injuries, or persecution inflicted upon the patient and his consequently justifiable resentment or revenge. Winters v. State, 61 N.J.L. 613, 41 Atl. 220; People v. Braun, 158 N.Y. 558, 53 N.E. 529. Paranoia is called by Kraepelin "progressive systematized insanity," because the delusions of being wronged or of persecution and of excessive self-esteem develop quite slowly, without independent disturbances of emotional life or of the will becoming prominent, and because there occurs regularly a mental working up of the delusion to form a delusionary view of the world,-in fact, a system,-leading to a derangement of the stand-point which the patient takes up towards the events of life.

Pyromania. Incendiarism; a form of affective insanity in which the mania takes the form of an irresistable impulse to burn or set fire to things.

Sebastomania. Religious insanity; demonomania.

Toxicomania. An excessive addiction to the use of toxic or poisonous drugs or other substances-, a form of mania or affective insanity characterized by an irresistible impulse to indulgence in opium, cocaine, chloral, alcohol, etc.

Specific Definitions and Applications in Law

There are numerous legal proceedings where insanity may be shown, and the rule for establishing mental capacity or the want of it varies according to the object or purpose of the proceeding. Among these may be enumerated the following: A criminal prosecution where insanity is alleged as a defense; a proceeding to defeat a will on the ground of the insanity of the testator; a suit to avoid a contract (including that of marriage) for similar reasons; a proceeding to secure the commitment of a person alleged to be insane to an asylum; a proceeding to appoint a guardian or conservator for an alleged lunatic; a plea or proceeding to avoid the effect of the statute of limitations on account of insanity. What might be regarded as insanity in one of such cases would not necessarily be so regarded in another. No definite rule can be laid down which would apply to all cases alike. Snyder v. Snyder, 142 Ill. 60, 31 N.E. 303; Clarke v. Irwin, 63 Neb. 539, 88 N.W. 783. But the following rules or tests for specific cases have been generally accepted and approved:

In criminal law and as a defense to an accusation of crime, insanity means such a perverted and deranged condition of the mental and moral faculties as to render the person incapable of distinguishing between right and wrong, or to render him at the time unconscious of the nature of the act he is committing, or such that, though he may be conscious of it and also of its normal quality, so as to know that the act in question is wrong, yet his will or volition has been (otherwise than voluntarily) so completely destroyed that his actions are not subject to it but are beyond his control. Or, as otherwise stated, insanity is such a state of mental derangement that the subject is incompetent of having a criminal intent, or incapable of so controlling his will as to avoid doing the act in question. Davis v. U. S., 17 S.Ct. 360, 165 U.S. 373, 41 L.Ed. 750; Doherty v. State, 50 A. 1113, 73 Vt. 380; Butler v. State, 102 Wis. 364, 78 N.W. 590.

An insane person cannot be legally charged with a criminal intent; State v. Brown, 36 Utah, 46, 102 P. 641, 24 L.R.A.,N.S., 545.

In Coleman's case, in New York it was held that the "test of the responsibility for criminal acts, when insanity is asserted, is the capacity of the accused to distinguish between right and wrong at the time and with respect to the act which is the subject of inquiry." 1 N.Y.Cr.Rep. 1. With variations of expression this is the prevailing doctrine of the American courts. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Terry, 15 Wall. 590, 21 L.Ed. 236.

The capacity to distinguish between right and wrong has been held not to be a safe test in all cases. State v. Felter, 25 Iowa 67, per Dillon, C. J. See also Brown v. Corn., 78 Pa. 122.

Insane delusion is of no avail as a defense unless, if true, the facts supposed to exist would have excused the crime. Thurman v. State, 32 Neb. 224, 49 N.W. 338; Smith v. State, 55 Ark. 259, 18 S. W. 237. Irresistible impulse to commit a crime is defined as that uncontrollable impulse produced by a disease of the mind, when that disease is sufficient to override judgment and obliterate the sense of right as to the acts done, and deprives the accused of power to choose between them. It was recognized as a defense in Stevens v. State, 31 Ind. 485, 99 Am. Dec. 634. But it is held that no impulse, however irresistible, is a defense, where there is a knowledge as to the particular act between right and wrong. State v. Brandon, 53 N.C. 463; State v. Miller, 141 Mo. 542, 20 S.W. 243, and that it was a crime morally, and punishable by the laws of the country; State v. Alexander, 30 S.C. 74, 8 S.E. 440, 14 Am.St.Rep. 879; Williams v. State, 50 Ark. 511, 9 S.W. 5.

Mere frenzy or ungovernable passion which controls the will and motives is not insanity sufficient to excuse crime. Garner v. State, 112 Miss. 317, 73 So. 50, 5L

What is sometimes called moral insanity, as distinguished from mental unsoundness, is not a defense to a charge of crime. Flanagan v. People, 52 N.Y. 467, 11 Am.Rep. 731; Andersen v. State, 43 Conn. 514, 21 Am.Rep. 669; St. Louis Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Graves, 6 Bush, Ky., 268.

Testamentary capacity includes an intelligent understanding of the testator's property, its extent and items, and of the nature of the act he is about to perform, together with a clear understanding and purpose as to the manner of its distribution and the persons who are to receive it. Lacking these, he is not mentally competent. The presence of insane delusions is not inconsistent with testamentary capacity, if they are of such a nature that they cannot reasonably be supposed to have affected the dispositions made by the will; and the same is true of the various forms of monomania and of all kinds of eccentricity and personal idiosyncrasy. But imbecility, senile dementia, and all forms of systematized mania which affect the understanding and judgment generally disable the patient from making a valid will. Harrison v. Rowan, 3 Wash. C. C. 585, Fed. Cas. No. 6,141; Wilson v. Mitchell, 101 Pa. 495; Trustees of Epworth Memorial Methodist Church v. Overman, 185 Ky. 773, 215 S.W. 942, 944. To constitute "senile dementia," incapacitating one to make a will, there must be such a failure of the mind as to deprive the testator of intelligent action. Gates v. Cole, 137 Iowa 613, 115 N.W. 236, 237, 238.

As a ground for avoiding or annulling a contract or conveyance, insanity does not mean a total deprivation of reason, but an inability, from defect of perception, memory, and judgment, to do the act in question or to understand its nature and consequences. Frazer v. Frazer, 2 Del. Ch. 260; Durrett v. McWhorter, 161 Ga. 179, 129 S.E. 870, 874. The insanity must have entered into and induced the particular contract or conveyance; it must appear that it was not the act of the free and untrammeled mind, and that on account of the diseased condition of the mind the person entered into a contract or made a conveyance which he would not have made if he had been in the possession of his reason. Dewey v. Aligire, 37 Neb. 6, 55 N.W. 276, 40 Am.St.Rep. 468.

Insanity sufficient to justify the annulment of a marriage means such a want of understanding at the time of the marriage as to render the party incapable of assenting to the contract of marriage. The morbid propensity to steal, called "kleptomania," does not answer this description. Lewis v. Lewis, 44 Minn. 124, 46 N.W. 323, '9 L.R.A. 505, 20 Am.St.Rep. 559. The marriage of a person insane was held void in Inhabitants of Middleborough v. Inhabitants of Rochester, 12 Mass. 363. Powell v. Powell, 18 Kan. 371, 26 Am.Rep. 774; Waymire v. Jetmore, 22 Ohio St. 271. A marriage contracted while one party was insane from delirium tremens was held void, but mere weakness of mind not amounting to derangement is not sufficient. Rawdon v. Rawdon, 28 Ala. 565 ; and Vir that merely, or intoxication, a court has no power to declare a marriage null and void. The same degree of mental capacity which enables a person to make a valid deed or will is sufficient to enable him to marry; Inhabitants of Atkinson v. Inhabitants of Medford, 46 Me. 510.

Tnsanity is not a defense in an action of tort; but damages are compensatory and not punitive; McIntyre v. Sholty, 121 Ill. 660, 13 N.E. 239, 2 Am. St.Rep. 140. Williams v. Hays, 143 N.Y. 442, 38 N. E. 449, 26 L.R.A. 153, 42 Am.St.Rep. 743.

One is "insane," so as to make self-destruction an accident, within the meaning of an insurance policy compensating death by accident, where he is so mentally diseased as to be incapable of understanding the nature of the act and unable to distinguish between right and wrong. London Guarantee & Accident Co. v. Officer, 78 Colo. 441, 242 P. 989, 991.

As a ground for restraining the personal liberty of the patient, it may be said in general that the form of insanity from which he suffers should be such as to make his going at large a source of danger to himself or to others, though this matter is largely regulated by statute, and in many places the law permits the commitment to insane asylums and hospitals of persons whose insanity does not manifest itself in homicidal or other destructive forms of mania, but who are incapable of caring for themselves and their property or who are simply fit subjects for treatment in hospitals and other institutions specially designed for the care of such patients.

To constitute insanity such as will authorize the appointment of a guardian or conservator for the patient, there must be such a deprivation of reason and judgment as to render him incapable of understanding and acting with discretion in the ordinary affairs of life; a want of sufficient mental capacity to transact ordinary business and to take care of and manage his property and affairs. See Snyder v. Snyder, 142 Ill. 60, 31 N.E. 303.

Insanity as a plea or proceeding to avoid the effect of the statute of limitations means practically the same thing as in relation to the appointment of a guardian. On the one hand, it does not require a total deprivation of reason or absence of understanding. On the other hand, it does not include mere weakness of mind short of imbecility. It means such a degree of derangement as renders the subject incapable of understanding the nature of the particular affair and his rights and remedies in regard to it and incapable of taking discreet and intelligent action. Burnham v. Mitchell, 34 Wis. 134. The time of sanity required in order to allow the statute to begin to run is such as will enable the party to examine his affairs and institute an action, and is for the jury.

There are a few other legal rights or relations into which the question of insanity enters, such as the capacity of a witness or of a voter; but they are governed by the same general principles. The test is capacity to understand and appreciate the nature of the particular act and to exercise intelligence in its performance. A witness must understand the nature and purpose of an oath and have enough intelligence and memory to relate correctly the facts within his knowledge. So a voter must understand the nature of the act to be performed and be able to make an intelligent choice of candidates. In either case, eccentricity, "crankiness," feeble-mindedness not amounting to imbecility, or insane delusions which do not affect the matter in hand, do not disqualify. See District of Columbia v. Armes, 2 S.Ct. 840, 107 U.S. 521, 27 L.Ed. 618.

INSANUS EST QUI, ABJECTA RATIONE, OMNIA CUM IMPETU ET FURORE FACIT. He is insane who, reason being thrown away, does everything with violence and rage. 4 Coke, 128.

INSCRIBERE. Lat. In the civil law. To subscribe an accusation. To bind one's self, in case of failure to prove an accusation, to suffer the same punishment which the accused would have suffered had he been proved guilty. Calvin.

INSCRIPTIO. Lat. In the civil law. A written accusation in which the accuser undertakes to suffer the punishment appropriate to the offense charged, if the accused is able to clear himself of the accusation. Calvin; Cod. 9, 1, 10; Id. 9, 2, 16, 17.

INSCRIPTION. In Evidence. Anything written or engraved upon a metallic or other solid substance, intended for great durability; as upon a tombstone, pillar, tablet, medal, ring, etc.

In Civil law. An engagement which a person who makes a solemn accusation of a crime against another enters into that he will suffer the same punishment, if he has accused the other falsely, which would have been inflicted upon him had he been guilty. Code, 9. 1. 10; 9. 2. 16 and 17.

In Modern Civil law. The entry of a mortgage, lien, or other document at large in a book of public records; corresponding to "recording" or "registration."

INSCRIPTIONES. The name given by the old English law to any written instrument by which anything was granted. Blount.

INSECT POWDER. "Insect powder" is a dry powder used to kill or expel insects; an insecticide or insectifuge. Parke, Davis & Co. v. U. S., C.C.A.La., 255 F. 933, 935.

INSECURE. Unsafe and dangerous. Sabol v. St. Louis Cooperage Co., 313 Mo. 527, 282 S.W. 425, 430.

INSENSIBLE. In pleading. Unintelligible; without sense or meaning, from the omission of material words, etc. Steph. Pl. 377. See Union Sewer Pipe Co. v. Olson, 82 Minn. 187, 84 N.W. 756.

INSETENA. In old records. An inditch; an interior ditch; one made within another, for greater security. Spelman.

INSIDIATOR. Lat. A soldier lying in ambush. Hence, one who lies in wait, a lurker, waylayer (rare). Harpers' Lat. Dict.

INSIDIATORES VIARUM. Lat. Highwaymen; persons who lie in wait in order to commit some felony or other misdemeanor.

INSIGNIA. Ensigns or arms; distinctive marks; badges; indicia; characteristics.

INSILIARIUS. An evil counsellor. Cowell.

INSILIUM. Evil advice or counsel. Cowell.

INSIMUL. Lat. Together; jointly. Townsh. Pl. 44.

INSIMUL COMPUTASSENT. They accounted together. The name of the count in assumpsit upon an account stated; it being averred that the parties had settled their accounts together, and defendant engaged to pay plaintiff the balance. Fraley v. Bispham, 10 Pa. 325, 51 Am.Dec. 486; Loventhal v. Morris, 103 Ala. 332, 15 So. 672.

INSIMUL TENUIT. One species of the writ of formedon brought against a stranger by a coparcener on the possession of the ancestor, etc. Jacob.

INSINUACION. In Spanish law. The presentation of a public document to a competent judge, in order to obtain his approbation and sanction of the same, and thereby give it judicial authenticity. Escriche.

INSINUARE. Lat. In the civil law. To put into; to deposit a writing in court, answering nearly to the modern expression "to file." Si non mandatum actis insinuatum est, if the power or authority be not deposited among the records of the court. Inst. 4, 11, 3. To declare or acknowledge before a judicial officer; to give an act an official form.

INSINUATIO. Lat. In old English law. Information or suggestion. Ex insinuatione, on the information. Reg. Jud. 25, 50.

INSINUATION. In the civil law. The transcription of an act on the public registers like our recording of deeds. It was not necessary in any other alienation but that appropriated to the purpose of donation. Inst. 2, 7, 2.

INSINUATION OF A WILL. In the civil law. The first production of a will, or the leaving it with the registrar, in order to its probate. Cowell; Blount.

INSOLATION. In medical jurisprudence. Sunstroke or heat-stroke; heat prostration.

INSOLVENCY. The condition of a person who is insolvent; inability to pay one's debts; lack of means to pay one's debts. Such a relative condition of a man's assets and liabilities that the former, if all made immediately available, would not be sufficient to discharge the latter. Or the condition of a person who is unable to pay his debts as they fall due, or in the usual course of trade and business. Dewey v. St. Albans Trust Co., 56 Vt. 475, 48 Am.Rep. 803; Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. 47, 20 L.Ed. 481; Frank v. Stearns, 111 Neb. 101, 195 N.W. 949, 951.

Independent of statute, it may generally be said that insolvency, when applied to a person, firm, or corporation engaged in trade, means inability to pay debts as they become due in the usual course of business. Parker v. First Nat. Bank, 96 Okl. 70, 220 P. 39; Bushman v. Bushman, 311 Mo. 551, 279 S.W. 122, 126. The mere fact that a corporation or an individual is unable to pay its debts upon a particular day does not constitute "insolvency." Wiggins Co. v. McMinnville Motor Car Co., 111 Or. 123, 225 P. 314, 317, and a bank is not "insolvent" if its assets are sufficient to meet its obligations within a reasonable time, although it did not have cash sufficient for its daily needs. Dunlap v. Seattle Nat. Bank, 93 Wash. 568, 161 P. 364, 368.

A man may be fully able to pay his debts, if he will, and yet in the eye of the law he is insolvent, if his property is so situated that it cannot be reached by process of law, and subjected, without his consent, to the payment of his debts. Pelham v. Chattahoochee Grocery Co., 156 Ala. 500, 47 So. 172.

Under Bankr.Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 1, cl. 19, as amended, (formerly 15), 30 Stat. 544 (11 U.S.C.A. § 1), and section 3a, cl. 4, as amended, (11 U.S.C.A. § 44), a person shall be deemed insolvent within the provisions of the act whenever the aggregate of his property, exclusive of any property which he may have conveyed, transferred, concealed, removed, or permitted to be concealed or removed, with intent to defraud, hinder, or delay his creditors, shall not at a fair valuation be sufficient in amount to pay his debts. In re Wm. S. Butler Co., C.C.A.Mass., 207 F. 705, 709; Anderson v. Myers, C.C.A.Fla., 296 F. 101, 103; Mountain States Power Co. v. A. L. Jordan Lumber Co., C.C.A. Mont., 293 F. 502, 507.

As to the distinction between bankruptcy and insolvency, see Bankruptcy.

Commercial Insolvency. See that title.

Insolvency fund. In English law. A fund, consisting of moneys and securities, which, at the time of the passing of the bankruptcy act, 1861, stood, in the Bank of England, to the credit of the commissioners of the insolvent debtors' court, and was, by the twenty-sixth section of that act, directed to be carried by the bank to the account of the accountant in bankruptcy. Provision has now been made for its transfer to the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt. Robs. Bankr. 20, 56.

Insolvency laws. Insolvency laws are generally statutory provisions by which the property of the debtor is surrendered for his debts; and upon this condition, and the assent of a certain proportion of his creditors, he is discharged from all further liabilities; Bartlet v. Prince, 9 Mass. 431; Otis v. Warren, 16 Mass. 53; 2 Kent 321; Ingr. Insolv. 9. Insolvency, according to some of the state statutes, may be of two kinds, voluntary and involuntary. Voluntary insolvency is the case in which the debtor institutes the proceedings, and is desirous of availing himself of the insolvent laws, and petitions for that purpose whereas involuntary insolvency is where the proceedings are instituted by the creditors in invitum, and so the debtor forced into insolvency.

Open insolvency. The condition of one who has no property, within the reach of the law, applicable to the payment of any debt. Hardesty v. Kinworthy, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 305; Somerby v. Brown, 73 Ind. 356.

INSOLVENT. (Lat. in, privative, solvo, to pay). The condition of a person who is unable to pay his debts. 2 Bla.Com. 285, 471; Brouwer v. Harbeck, 9 N.Y. 589. One who cannot or does not pay; one who is unable to pay his debts; one who is not solvent; one who has not means or property sufficient to pay his debts. One who is unable to pay commercial paper in the due course of business. Warren v. Nat. Bank, 10 Blatchf. 493, Fed. Cas. No. 17,202; Clarke v. Mott, 4 Cal.Unrep.Cas. 80, 33 P. 884. See, also, Insolvency.

Other definitions

One who is unable to pay his debts as they fall due in the usual course of trade or business, 2 Kent 389; 1 M. & S. 338; Lee v. Kilbourn, 3 Gray, Mass., 600; Mitchell v. Bradstreet Co., 116 Mo. 226, 22 S.W. 358, 724, 20 L.R.A. 138, 38 Am.St.Rep. 592; although his assets in value exceed the amount of his liability, In re Ramazzina, 110 Cal. 488, 42 P. 970; or the embarrassment is only temporary, Langham v. Lanier, 7 Tex.Civ.App. 4, 26 S.W. 255; but it is held that mere inability to pay debts promptly as they mature is not conclusive, Mensing v. Atchison, Tex.Civ.App., 26 S.W. 509; and that one who has sufficient property subject to legal process to satisfy all legal demands is not insolvent. Smith v. Collins, 94 Ala. 394, 10 So. 334. A corporation is insolvent when its assets are insufficient for the payment of its debts, and it has ceased to do business, or has taken, or is in the act of taking, a step which will practically incapacitate it from conducting the corporate enterprise with reasonable prospect of success, or its embarrassments are such that early suspension and failure must ensue. Corey v. Wadsworth, 99 Ala. 68, 11 So. 350, 23 L.R.A. 618, 42 Am.St.Rep. 29. A bank is insolvent when the cash value of its assets realizable in a reasonable time is not equal to its liabilities exclusive of stock liabilities. Ellis v. State, 138 Wis. 513, 119 N.W. 1110, 20 L.R.A.,N.S., 444, 131 Am.St.Rep. 1022.

INSOLVENT LAW. See Insolvency Laws.

INSPECT. To look, to view or oversee for the purpose of ascertaining the quality or condition of the thing or for purpose of examination. U. S. v. A. Bentley & Sons Co., D.C.Ohio, 293 F. 229, 239; O'Hare v. Peacock Dairies, 26 Cal.App.2d 753, 79 1^4.2d 433, 438.

INSPECTATOR. A prosecutor or adversary.

INSPECTION. A critical examination, close or careful scrutiny, a strict or prying examination, or an investigation. In re Becker, 192 N.Y.S. 754, 756, 200 App.Div. 178. An examination or testing of food, fluids, or other articles made subject by law to such examination, to ascertain their fitness for use or commerce. People of the State of New York v. Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, C. C.N.Y., 10 F. 361; Id., 2 S.Ct. 87, 107 U.S. 59, 27 L. Ed. 383; Turner v. Maryland, 2 S.Ct. 44, 107 U.S. 38, 27 L.Ed. 370. An examination by a private person of public records and documents; or of the books and papers of his opponent in an action, for the purpose of better preparing his own case for trial.

Reasonable inspection. As relates to duty of employer to provide employee with proper instrumentalities with which to work, does not mean such an inspection as would necessarily or infallibly disclose a defect if one existed, but only such inspection as reasonably prudent man, in the exercise of ordinary care, would make. Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Fountain, 145 Miss. 515, 111 So. 153, 154.

INSPECTION LAWS. Laws authorizing and directing the inspection and examination of various kinds of merchandise intended for sale, especially food, with a view to ascertaining its fitness for use, and excluding unwholesome or unmarketable goods from sale, and directing the appointment of official inspectors for that purpose. Const.U.S. art. 1, § 10, cl. 2; Story, Const. § 1017, et seq. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 202, 6 L.Ed. 23; Clintsman v. Northrop, 8 Cow. (N.Y.) 45; Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 18 S.Ct. 862, 171 U.S. 345, 41 L.Ed. 191; Turner v. State, 55 Md. 263.

INSPECTION OF DOCUMENTS. This phrase refers to the right of a party, in a civil action, to inspect and make copies of documents which are essential or material to the maintenance of his cause, and which are either in the custody of an officer of the law or in the possession of the adverse party.

INSPECTION, TRIAL BY. A mode of trial formerly in use in England, by which the judges of a court decided a point in dispute, upon the testimony of their own senses, without the intervention of a jury. This took place in cases where the fact upon which issue was taken must, from its nature, be evident to the court from ocular demonstration, or other irrefragable proof; and was adopted for the greater expedition of a cause. 3 Bl.Comm. 331.

INSPECTOR. The name given to certain officers whose duties are to examine and inspect things over which they have jurisdiction. Officers whose duty it is to examine the quality of certain articles of merchandise, food, weights and measures, etc.

INSPECTORSHIP, DEED OF. In English law. An instrument entered into between an insolvent debtor and his creditors, appointing one or more persons to inspect and oversee the winding up of such insolvent's affairs on behalf of the creditors.

INSPEXIM'US (Lat.). We have seen. A word sometimes used in letters patent, reciting a grant, inspeximus such former grant, and so reciting it verbatim; it then grants such further privileges as are thought convenient. 5 Co. 54.

INSTALL. To place in a seat, give a place to, to set, place, or instate in an office, rank, or order, etc. State ex rel. Slattery v. Raupp, 303 Mo. 684, 263 S.W. 834, 835. To set up or fix in position for use or service. King v. Elliott, 197 N.C. 93, 147 S.E. 701, 704.

INSTALLATION. The ceremony of inducting or investing with any charge, office, or rank, as the placing a bishop into his see, a dean or prebendary into his stall or seat, or a knight into his order. Wharton. The act by which an officer is put in public possession of the place he is to fill. The president of the United States, or a governor, is installed into office, by being sworn agreeably to the constitution and laws.

Installation of machinery means to place in position where it will reasonably accomplish purposes for which it is set up. Long v. Ulmer Machinery Co., 77 Cal.App. 66, 246 P. 113, 116.

INSTALLMENTS. Different portions of the same debt payable at different successive periods as agreed. Brown. Partial payments on account of a debt due. Kenney v. Los Feliz Inv. Co., 121 Cal.App. 378, 9 P.2d 225, 228.

INSTANCE. In pleading and practice. Solicitation, properly of an earnest or urgent kind. An act is often said to be done at a party's "special instance and request." Miller v. Mutual Grocery Co., 214 Ala. 62, 106 So. 396.

"Instance" does not imply the same degree of obligation to obey as does "command." Feore v. Trammel, 213 Ala. 293, 104 So. 808, 813.

In the civil and French law. A general term, designating all sorts of actions and judicial demands. Dig. 44, 7, 58.

In ecclesiastical law. Causes of instance are those proceeded in at the solicitation of some party, as opposed to causes of office, which run in the name of the judge. Hallifax, Civil Law, p. 156.

In Scotch law. That which may be insisted on at one diet or course of probation. Wharton.

INSTANCE COURT. In English law. That division or department of the court of admiralty which exercises all the ordinary admiralty jurisdiction, with the single exception of prize cases, the latter belonging to the branch called the "Prize Court." The term is sometimes used in American law for purposes of explanation, but has no proper application to admiralty courts in the United States, where the powers of both instance and prize courts are conferred without any distinction. 3 Kent, Comm. 355, 378; The Betsey, 3 Da11. 6, 1 L.Ed. 485; The Emulous, 1 Gall. 563, Fed.Cas.No.4,479.

INSTANCIA. In Spanish law. The institution and prosecution of a suit from its commencement until definitive judgment. The first instance, "primera instancia," is the prosecution of the suit before the judge competent to take cognizance of it at its inception; the second instance, "secunda instancia," is the exercise of the same action before the court of appellate jurisdiction; and the third instance, "tercera instancia," is the prosecution of the same suit, either by an application of revision before the appellate tribunal that has already decided the cause, or before some higher tribunal, having jurisdiction of the same. Escriche.

INSTANS EST FINIS UNIUS TEMPORIS ET PRINCIPIUM ALTERIUS. An instant is the end of one time and the beginning of another. Co_ Litt. 185.

INSTANT. Present, current, as instant case. Webster, Dict.

INSTANTANEOUS. An "instantaneous" crime is one which is fully consummated or completed in and by a single act (such as arson or murder) as distinguished from one which involves a series or repetition of acts. U. S. v. Owen, D.C.Or., 32 F. 537.

A death resulting within a few moments from a continuing injury is "instantaneous" within a statute respecting right of action for death. Beach v. City of St. Joseph, 192 Mich. 296, 158 N.W. 1045, 1046.

INSTANTER. Immediately; instantly; forthwith; without delay. Trial instanter was had where a prisoner between attainder and execution pleaded that he was not the same who was attainted.

When a party is ordered to plead instanter, he must plead the same day. The term is usually understood to mean within twenty-four hours. Fentress v. State, 16 Tex.App. 83; Champlin v. Champlin, 2 Edw.Ch., N.Y., 329.

INSTANTLY. Immediately; directly; without delay; at once.

INSTAR. Lat. Likeness; the likeness, size, or equivalent of a thing. Instar dentium, like teeth. 2 B1.Comm. 295. Instar omnium, equivalent or tantamount to all. Id. 146; 3 Bl.Comm. 231.

INSTAURUM. In old English deeds. A stock or store of cattle, and other things; the whole stock upon a farm, including cattle, wagons, plows, and all other implements of husbandry. 1 Mon. Angl. 548b; Fleta, lib. 2, c. 72, § 7. Terra instaurata, land ready stocked.

INSTIGATE. To stimulate or goad to an action, especially a bad action; one of its synonyms is "abet". Hughes v. Van Bruggen, 44 N.M. 534, 105 P.2d 494, 499.

INSTIGATION. Incitation; urging; solicitation. The act by which one incites another to do something, as to commit some crime or to commence a suit. State v. Fraker, 148 Mo. 143, 49 S.W. 1017.

INSTIRPARE. To plant or establish.

INSTITOR. Lat. In the civil law. A clerk in a store; an agent.

INSTITORIA ACTIO. Lat. In the civil law. The name of an action given to those who had contracted with an institor (q. v.) to compel the principal to performance. Inst. 4, 7, 2; Dig. 14, 3, 1; Story, Ag. § 426.

INSTITORIAL POWER. The charge given to a clerk to manage a shop or store. 1 Bell, Comm. 506, 507.

INSTITUTE, v. To inaugurate or commence; as to institute an action. Post v. U. S., 16 S.Ct. 611, 161 U.S. 583, 40 L.Ed. 816; Ballard v. Cash, 191 Ky. 312, 230 S.W. 48, 49; Latham v. Latham, 178 N.C. 100 S.E. 131, 132. To set up, to originate, to introduce. Brown v. City of Portland, 97 Or. 600, 190 P. 722, 724.

To nominate, constitute, or appoint; as to institute an heir by testament. Dig. 28, 5, 65.

INSTITUTE, n. In the civil law. A person named in the will as heir, but with a direction that he shall pass over the estate to another designated person, called the "substitute."

In Scotch law. The person to whom an estate is first given by destination or limitation; the others, or the heirs of tailzie, are called "substitutes."

INSTITUTED EXECUTOR. An instituted executor is one who is appointed by the testator without any condition.

INSTITUTES. A name sometimes given to textbooks containing the elementary principles of jurisprudence, arranged in an orderly and systematic manner. For example, the Institutes of Justinian, of Gaius, of Lord Coke.

Institutes of Gaius. An elementary work of the Roman jurist Gaius; important as having formed the foundation of the Institutes of Justinian, (q. v.). These Institutes were discovered by Niebuhr in 1816, in a codex rescriptus of the library of the cathedral chapter at Verona, and were first published at Berlin in 1820. Two editions have since appeared. Mackeld.Rom.Law, § 54.

Institutes of Justinian. One of the four component parts or principal divisions of the Corpus Juris Civilis, being an elementary treatise on the Roman law, in four books. This work was compiled from earlier sources, (resting principally on the Institutes of Gaius,) by a commission composed of Tribonian and two others, by command and under direction of the emperor Justinian, and was first published November 21, A. D. 533.

Institutes of Lord Coke. The name of four volumes by Lord Coke, published A. D. 1628. The first is an extensive comment upon a treatise on tenures, compiled by Littleton, a judge of the common pleas, temp. Edward IV. This comment is a rich mine of valuable common-law learning, collected and heaped together from the ancient reports and Year Books, but greatly defective in method. It is usually cited by the name of "Co. Litt," or as "1 Inst." The second volume is a comment upon old acts of parliament, without systematic order; the third a more methodical treatise on the pleas of the crown; and the fourth an account of the several species of courts. These are cited as 2, 3, or 4 "Inst.," without any author's name. Wharton.

Theophilus' Institutes. A paraphrase of Justinian, made, it is believed, soon after A. D. 533. This paraphrase maintained itself as a manual of law until the eighth or tenth century. This text was used in the time of Hexabiblos of Harmenipulus, the last of the Greek jurists. It is also conjectured that Theophilus was not the editor of his own paraphrase, but that it was drawn up by some of his pupils after his explanations and lectures, inasmuch as it contains certain barbarous phrases, and the texts of the manuscripts vary greatly from each other.

INSTITUTIO II1EREDIS. Lat. In Roman law. The appointment of the hcvres in the will. It corresponds very nearly to the nomination of an executor in English law. Without such an appointment the will was void at law, but the prcetor (i. e., equity) would, under certain circumstances, carry out the intentions of the testator. Brown.

INSTITUTION. The commencement or inauguration of anything. The first establishment of a law, rule, rite, etc. Any custom, system, organization, etc., firmly established. An elementary rule or principle.

An establishment, specially one of public character or one affecting a community. State v. Clausen, 85 Wash. 260, 148 P. 28, 32, Ann.Cas.1916B, 810. An established or organized society or corporation. It may be private in its character, designed for profit to those composing the organization, or public and charitable in its purposes. In re Peabody's Estate, 21 Cal.App.2d 690, 70 P.2d 249, 250. A foundation; as, a literary or charitable institution. Prescott Courier v. Board of Sup'rs of Yavapai County, 49 Ariz. 423, 67 P.2d 483, 486.

The term "institution" is sometimes used as descriptive of an establishment or place where the business or operations of a society or association is carried on; at other times it is used to designate the organized body. Benjamin Rose Institute v. Myers, 92 Ohio St. 252, 110 N.E. 924, 926, 927, L.R.A.1916D, 1170; Bartling v. Walt, 96 Neb. 532, 148 N.W. 507, 509.

Ecclesiastical Law

A kind of investiture of the spiritual part of the benefice, as induction is of the temporal; for by institution the care of the souls of the parish is committed to the charge of the clerk. Brown.

Civil Law

The appointment of an heir; the act by which a testator nominates one or more persons to succeed him in all his rights active and passive. Halifax, Anal. 39; Pothier, Tr. des Donations testamentaires, c. 2, s. 1, § 1; La Civ.Code, art. 1598 (Civ.Code, art. 1605) ; Dig. 28. 5; 1, 1; 28. 6. 1, 2, § 4.

Jurisprudence

The plural form of this word ("institutions") is sometimes used as the equivalent of "institutes," to denote an elementary textbook of the law.

Practice

The commencement of an action or prosecution; as, A. B. has instituted a suit against C. D. to recover damages for trespass.

Political Law

A law, rite, or ceremony enjoined by authority as a permanent rule of conduct or of government. Webster. An organized society, established either by law or the authority of individuals, for promoting any object, public or social. Dodge v. Williams, 46 Wis. 70, 1 N.W. 92, 50 N.W. 1103; State v. Edmondson, 88 Ohio St. 625, 106 N.E. 41, 44.

A system or body of usages, laws, or regulations, of extensive and recurring operation, containing within itself an organism by which it effects its own independent action, continuance, and generally its own further development. Its object is to generate, effect, regulate, or sanction a succession of acts, transactions, or productions of a peculiar kind or class. We are likewise in the habit of calling single laws or usages "institutions," if their operation is of vital importance and vast scope, and if their continuance is in a high degree independent of any interfering power. Lieb. Civil Lib. 300.

General

Public institution. One which is created and exists by law or public authority, e. g., an asylum, charity, college, university, schoolhouse, etc. Henderson v. Shreveport Gas, Electric Light & Power Co., 134 La. 39, 63 So. 616, 618, 51 L.R.A.,N.S., 448.

INSTITUTIONES. Lat. Works containing the elements of any science; institutions or institutes. One of Justinian's principal law collections, and a similar work of the Roman jurist Gaius, are so entitled. See Institutes.

INSTRUCT. To convey information as a client to an attorney, or as an attorney to a counsel; to authorize one to appear as advocate; to give a case in charge to the jury.

INSTRUCTION. In French criminal law. The first process of a criminal prosecution. It includes the examination of the accused, the preliminary interrogation of witnesses, collateral investigations, the gathering of evidence, the reduction of the whole to order, and the preparation of a document containing a detailed statement of the case, to serve as a brief for the prosecuting officers, and to furnish material for the indictment.

Juges d'instruction. In French law. Officers subject to the procureur imperial or gendral, who receive in cases of criminal offenses the complaints of the parties injured, and who summon and examine witnesses upon oath, and, after communication with the procureur imperial, draw up the forms of accusation. They have also the right, subject to the approval of the same superior officer, to admit the accused to bail. They are appointed for three years, but are re-eligible for a further period of office. They are usually chosen from among the regular judges.. Brown.

Common Law

Order given by a principal to his agent in relation to the business of his agency.

Practice

A detailed statement of the facts and circumstances constituting a cause of action made by a client to his attorney for the purpose of enabling the latter to draw a proper declaration or procure it to be done by a pleader.

Trial Practice

A direction given by the judge to the jury concerning the law of the case; a statement made by the judge to the jury informing them of the law applicable to the case in general or some aspect of it; an exposition of the rules or principles of law applicable to the case or some branch or phase of it, which the jury are bound to accept and apply. Lehman v. Hawks, 121 Ind. 541, 23 N.E. 670; Boggs v. U. S., 10 Okl. 424, 63 P. 969; Lawler v. McPheeters, 73 Ind. 579; Davis v. State, 155 Ark. 245, 244 S.W. 750, 752; Kolkman v. People, 89 Colo. 8, 300 P. 575, 583.

The generally accepted meaning of the word instruction, when applied to courts, means a direction that is to be obeyed. State v. Downing, 23 Idaho, 540, 130 P. 461, 462.

Peremptory instruction. An instruction given by a court to a jury which the latter must obey implicitly; as an instruction to return a verdict for the defendant, or for the plaintiff, as the case may be.

INSTRUMENT. A written document; a formal or legal document in writing, such as a contract, deed, will, bond, or lease. State v. Phillips, 157 Ind. 481, 62 N.E. 12; Cardenas v. Miller, 108 Cal. 250, 39 P. 783, 49 Am.St.Rep. 84.

Anything reduced to writing, a document of a formal or solemn character, a writing given as a means of affording evidence. Smith v. Smith, Ind. App., 110 N.E. 1013, 1014. A document or writing which gives formal expression to a legal act or agreement, for the purpose of creating, securing, modifying, or terminating a right; a writing executed and delivered as the evidence of an act or agreement. Moore v. Diamond Dry Goods Co., 47 Ariz. 128, 54 P.2d 553, 554.

In the law of evidence. Anything which may be presented as evidence to the senses of the adjudicating tribunal. 1 Whart.Ev. § 615.

INSTRUMENT OF APPEAL. The document by which an appeal is brought in an English matrimonial cause from the president of the probate, divorce, and admiralty division to the full court. It is analogous to a petition. Browne, Div. 322.

INSTRUMENT OF EVIDENCE. Instruments of evidence are the media through which the evidence of facts, either disputed or required to be proved, is conveyed to the mind of a judicial tribunal; and they comprise persons and living things as well as writings. Best, Ev. § 123, 1 Whart.Ev. § 615.

INSTRUMENT OF SAISINE. An instrument in Scotland by which the delivery of "saisine" (i. e., seisin, or the feudal possession of land) is attested. It is subscribed by a notary, in the presence of witnesses, and is executed in pursuance of a "precept of saisine," whereby the "grantor of the deed" desires "any notary public to whom these presents may be presented" to give saisine to the intended grantee or grantees. It must be entered and recorded in the registers of saisines. Mozley & Whiteley.

INSTRUMENTA. Lat. That kind of evidence which consists of writings not under seal; as court-rolls, accounts, and the like. 3 Co.Litt. 487.

INSTRUMENTAL. Serviceable, helpful. Culp v. Browne, Tex.Civ.App., 235 S.W. 675, 678.

INSTRUMENTALITY RULE. Under this rule, corporate existence will be disregarded where a corporation (subsidiary) is so organized and controlled and its affairs so conducted as to make it only an adjunct and instrumentality of another corporation (parent corporation). Jenkins Petroleum Process Co. v. Western Oil Corporation, D.C. Del., 21 F.Supp. 550, 551; and parent corporation will be responsible for the obligations of its subsidiary. Taylor v. Standard Gas & Electric Co., C.C.A.Okl., 96 F.2d 693, 704.

INSUBORDINATION. State of being insubordinate; disobedience to constituted authority. United States v. Krafft, C.C.A.N.J., 249 F. 919, 925, L.R.A.1918F, 402. Refusal to obey some order which a superior officer is entitled to give and have obeyed. Garvin v. Chambers, 195 Cal. 212, 232 P. 696, 701; Sheehan v. Board of Police Com'rs of City and County of San Francisco, 197 Cal. 70, 239 P. 844, 847. Not synonymous with incompetency. Cafferty v. Southern Tier Pub. Co., 173 N.Y.S. 774, 186 App.Div. 136.

"Insubordination" by a servant imports a willful disregard of express or implied directions of the employer and refusal to obey reasonable orders. MacIntosh v. Abbot, 231 Mass. 180, 120 N.E. 383.

INSUCKEN MULTURES. A quantity of corn paid by those who are thirled to a mill. See Thirlage.

INSUFFICIENT. Not sufficient; inadequate to some need, purpose, or use; wanting in needful value, ability, or fitness; incompetent; unfit; as insufficient food; insufficient means. It is the antonym of "sufficient." Nissen v. Miller, 44 N.M. 487, 105 P.2d 324, 325.

INSUFFICIENCY. In equity pleading. The legal inadequacy of an answer in equity which does not fully and specifically reply to some one or more of the material allegations, charges, or interrogatories set forth in the bill. White v. Joy, 13 N.Y. 89; Houghton v. Townsend, 8 How.Prac. (N.Y.) 446; Hill v. Fair Haven & W. R. Co., 75 Conn. 177, 52 A. 725.

INSUFFICIENCY OF EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT VERDICT. This phrase in a motion for new trial means that there is some evidence, but not enough in light of the evidence to the contrary to support a verdict. Arnold v. Haskins, 347 Mo. 320, 147 S. W.2d 469, 472. It means that there is no evidence which ought reasonably to satisfy jury that fact to be proved is established. Shtevelan v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 295 N.Y.S. 735, 736, 162 Misc. 835.

INSULA. Lat. An island; a house not connected with other houses, but separated by a surrounding space of ground. Calvin.

INSULATE. To separate from conducting bodies by means of nonconductors, as to prevent the transfer of electricity or heat. Mauney v. Electric Const. Co., 210 Ala. 554, 98 So. 874, 877.

INSUPER. Lat. Moreover; over and above.

An old exchequer term, applied to a charge made upon a person in his account. Blount.

INSURABLE. Capable of being insured against loss, damage, death, etc.; proper to be insured; affording a sufficient ground for insurance. Greenberg v. Continental Casualty Co., 24 Cal.App.2d 506, 75 P.2d 644, 649.

INSURABLE INTEREST. Such a real and substantial interest in specific property as will prevent a contract to indemnify the person interested against its loss from being a mere wager policy. Mutual F. Ins. Co. v. Wagner, Pa., 7 A. 104; Insurance Co. v. Brooks, 131 Ala. 614, 30 So. 876; Berry v. Insurance Co., 132 N.Y. 49, 30 N.E. 254, 28 Am. St.Rep. 548; Strong v. Insurance Co., 10 Pick. (Mass.) 43, 20 Am.Dec. 507; Insurance Co. v. Winsmore, 124 Pa. 61, 16 A. 516. Such an interest as will make the loss of the property of pecuniary damage to the insured; a right, benefit, or advantage arising out of the property or dependent thereon, or any liability in respect thereof, or any relation thereto or concern therein, of such a nature that it might be so affected by the contemplated peril as to directly damnify the insured. 2 Joyce, Ins. §§ 887, 888. German Ins. Co. v. Hyman, 34 Neb. 704, 52 N.W. 401, 402. Tischendorf v. Lynn Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 190 Wis. 33, 208 N.W. 917, 919, 45 A.L.R. 856; Liverpool & London & Globe Ins. Co. v. Bolling, 176 Va. 182, 10 S.E.2d 518, 521.

Every interest in property, or any relation thereto, or liability in respect thereof, of such a nature that a contemplated peril might directly damnify the insured, is an insurable interest.

In the case of life insurance, a reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit from the continued life of another; also, a reasonable ground, founded upon the relation of the parties to each other, either pecuniary or of blood or affinity, to expect some benefit or advantage from the continuance of the life of the assured. Insurance Co. v. Schaefer, 94 U.S. 460, 24 L.Ed. 251; National Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Ball, 157 Miss. 163, 127 So. 268; Colgrove v. Lowe, 343 Ill. 360, 175 N.E. 569, 572. Essential thing being that policy be obtained in good faith, not for purpose of speculating on hazard of life in which insured has no interest. Alexander v. Griffith Brokerage Co., 228 Mo.App. 773, 73 S.W.2d 418, 423.

INSURANCE. A contract whereby, for a stipulated consideration, one party undertakes to compensate the other for loss on a specified subject by specified perils. The party agreeing to make the compensation is usually called the "insurer" or "underwriter;" the other, the "insured" or "assured;" the agreed consideration, the "premium;" the written contract, a "policy;" the events insured against, "risks" or "perils;" and the subject, right, or interest to be protected, the "insurable interest." 1 Phil.Ins. §§ 1-5. A contract whereby one undertakes to indemnify another against loss, damage, or liability arising from an unknown or contingent event and is applicable only to some contingency or act to occur in future. Com. v. Provident Bicycle Ass'n, 178 Pa. 636, 36 A. 197, 36 L.R.A. 589; Commonwealth v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 254 Pa. 510 98 A. 1072, 1073; and is applicable only to some contingency or act to occur in future. Clardy v. Grand Lodge of Oklahoma, A. 0. U. W., 132 Okl. 165, 269 P. 1065, 1066. For "Family," see that title.

An agreement by which one party for a consideration promises to pay money or its equivalent or to do an act valuable to other party upon destruction, loss, or injury of something in which other party has an interest. Commissioner of Banking and Insurance v. Community Health Service, 129 N.J.L. 427, 30 A.2d 44, 46.

Classification

Accident insurance is that form of insurance which undertakes to indemnify the assured against expense, loss of time, and suffering resulting from accidents causing him physical injury, usually by payment at a fixed rate per week while the consequent disability lasts, and sometimes including the payment of a fixed sum to his heirs in case of his death by accident within the term of the policy. Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. v. Merrill, 155 Mass. 404, 29 N.E. 529.

Automobile insurance may embrace insurance against loss of or damage to a motor vehicle caused by fire, windstorm, theft, collision, or other insurable hazards, and also against legal liability for personal injuries or damage to property resulting from operation of the vehicle. 44 C.J.S. p. 492; Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., § 3461.

Burglary insurance. Insurance against loss of property by the depredations of burglars and thieves.

Casualty insurance. This term is generally used as equivalent to "accident" insurance. State v. Federal Inv. Co., 48 Minn. 110, 50 N.W. 1028. But in some states it means insurance against accidental injuries to property, as distinguished from accidents resulting in bodily injury or death, Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. v. Merrill, 155 Mass. 404, 29 N.E. 529.

Commercial insurance is a term applied to indemnity agreements, in the form of insurance bonds or policies, whereby parties to commercial contracts are to a designated extent guarantied against loss by reason of a breach of contractual obligations on the part of the other contracting party; to this class belong policies of contract credit and title insurance. Cowles v. Guaranty Co., 32 Wash. 120, 72 Pac. 1032, 98 Am.St.Rep. 838.

Employers' insurance. Employers' insurance policies are of two sorts, the "liability" contract, which obligates the insurer to pay the loss without first requiring that the assured do so, and the "indemnity" contract, which obligates the insurer to reimburse only after the employer has paid the debt to the injured employee. Davies v. Maryland Casualty Co., 89 Wash. 571, 154 P. 1116, 1117, L.R.A.1916D, 395, 398.

Employer's liability insurance. In this form of insurance the risk insured against is the liability of the assured to make compensation or pay damages for an accident, injury, or death occurring to a servant or other employee in the course of his employment, either at common law or under statutes imposing such liability on employers.

Fidelity insurance is that form of insurance in which the insurer undertakes to guaranty the fidelity of an officer, agent, or employee of the assured, or rather to indemnify the latter for losses caused by dishonesty or a want of fidelity on the part of such a person. People v. Rose, 174 Ill. 310, 51 N.E. 246, 44 L.R.A. 124.

Fire insurance. A contract of [J] insurance by which the underwriter, in consideration of the premium, undertakes to indemnify the insured against all losses in his houses, buildings, furniture, ships in port, or merchandise, \by means of accidental fire happening within a prescribed period. 3 Kent, Comm. 370; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 138 Mass. 27, 52 Am.Rep. 245;) Durham v. Fire & Marine Ins. Co., C.C.Or., 22 F. 470.

Fraternal insurance. The form of life or accident insurance furnished by a fraternal beneficial association, consisting in the undertaking to pay to a member, or his heirs in case of death, a stipulated sum of money, out of funds raised for that purpose by the payment of dues or assessments by all the members of the association.

Guaranty or fidelity insurance is a contract whereby one, for a consideration, agrees to indemnify another against loss arising from the want of integrity or fidelity of employees and persons holding positions of trust, or embezzlements by them, or against the insolvency of debtors, losses in trade, loss by non-payment of notes, or against breaches of contract. People v. Rose, 174 Ill. 310, 51 N.E. 246, 44 L.R.A. 124; Cowles v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 32 Wash. 120, 72 P. 1032.

Indemnity insurance. This term has come to have a well defined and recognized meaning in insurance parlance, and is applied to contracts which provide indemnity against loss, and not the contracts which provide for indemnity against liability. The latter are known as liability contracts or policies, and the former as indemnity contracts or policies. 44 C.J.S. pp. 480, 482. As applied to motor vehicles, the distinctions between the two types of policies are discussed in Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., §§ 4011-4015.

Industrial insurance. Small policies issued in consideration of weekly premium payments. Life & Casualty Ins. Co. v. King, 137 Tenn. 685, 195 S.W. 585, 588.

Liability insurance is that form of insurance which indemnifies against liability on account of injuries to the person or property of another. It is distinguished from "indemnity insurance" (see that title, supra), and may be issued to cover the liability of, for example, carriers, contractors, employers, landlords, manufacturers, owners, and railroads. Liability insurance may extend to automobiles, elevators, fly wheels, libel, theaters, and vessels. 44 C.J.S. p. 481.

Life insurance. That kind of insurance in which the risk contemplated is the death of a particular person; upon which event (if it occurs within a prescribed term, or, according to the contract, whenever it occurs) the insurer engages to pay a stipulated sum to the legal representatives of such person, or to a third person having an insurable interest in the life of such person.

Straight life insurance or whole life insurance is insurance for which premiums are collected so long as the insured may live, whereas, term insurance is insurance which promises payment only within a stipulated number of years. Doty v. American Nat. Ins. Co., 350 Mo. 192, 165 S.W.2d 862, 869, 143 A.L.R. 1062.

Live-stock insurance. Insurance upon the lives, health, and good condition of domestic animals of the useful kinds, such as horses and cows.

Marine insurance. A contract whereby, for a consideration stipulated to be paid by one interested in a ship, freight, or cargo, subject to the risks of marine navigation, another undertakes to indemnify him against some or all of those risks during a certain period or voyage. 1 Phil.Ins. 1. A contract whereby one party, for a stipulated premium, undertakes to indemnify the other against certain perils or sea-risks to which his ship, freight, and cargo, or some of them, may be exposed during a certain voyage, or a fixed period of time. An insurance against risks connected with navigation, to which a ship, cargo, freightage, profits, or other insurable interest in movable property may be exposed during a certain voyage or a fixed period of time. Civ.Code Cal. § 2655.

Motor vehicle insurance. See Automobile insurance, supra.

Old line life insurance. Insurance on a level or fiat rate plan where, for a fixed premium payable without condition at stated intervals, a certain sum is to be paid upon death without condition. Mattero v. Central Life Ins. Co., 202 Mo.App. 293, 215 S.W. 750, 751.

Plate-glass insurance. Insurance against loss from the accidental breaking of plate-glass in windows, doors, show-cases, etc.

Steam boiler insurance. Insurance against the destruction of steam boilers by their explosion, sometimes including indemnity against injuries to other property resulting from such explosion.

Title insurance. Insurance against loss or damage resulting from defects or failure of title to a particular parcel of realty, or from the enforcement of liens existing against it at the time of the insurance. This form of insurance is taken out by a purchaser of the property or one loaning money on mortgage, and is furnished by companies specially organized for the purpose, and which keep complete sets of abstracts or duplicates of the records, employ expert title-examiners, and prepare conveyances and transfers of all sorts. A "certificate of title" furnished by such a company is merely the formally expressed professional opinion of the company's examiner that the title is complete and perfect (or otherwise, as stated), and the company is liable only for a want of care, skill, or diligence on the part of its examiner; whereas an "insurance of title" warrants the validity of the title in any and all events. It is not always easy to distinguish between such insurance and a "guaranty of title" given by such a company, except that in the former case the maximum limit of liability is fixed by the policy, while In the latter case the undertaking is to make good any and all loss resulting from defect or failure of the title.

Tornado insurance. Insurance against injuries to crops, timber, houses, farm buildings, and other property from the effects of tornadoes, hurricanes, and cyclones.

Other Compound and Descriptive Terms

Additional insurance. To constitute prohibited "additional insurance" both policies must be on same subject-matter and on same interest therein. Clower v. Fidelity-Phenix Fire Ins. Co. of New York, 220 Mo.App. 1112, 296 S.W. 257, 260; Hurst Home Ins. Co. v. Deatley, 175 Ky. 728, 194 S.W. 910, 911, L.R.A.1917E, 750.

Assessment life insurance policy. A contract by which payments to insured are not unalterably fixed, but dependent on collection of assessments necessary to pay amounts insured, while an "old-line policy" unalterably fixes premiums and definitely and unchangeably fixes insurer's liability. Clark v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 126 Me. 7, 135 A. 357, 358.

Comprehensive coverage. A simple and convenient form of indemnity now commonly available in contracts of automobile insurance. It includes not only the conventional coverages against loss caused by fire, theft, wind, water, or malicious mischief, but is generally designed to protect against all damage to the insured vehicle except by collision or upset. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm. Ed., § 3653. Among losses commonly incurred and paid under comprehensive policies are those caused by lighted cigarettes. Other examples of such losses include scratching of the finish by matches, thorns, or dust storms; damage to the upholstery caused by a child's loss of control of the urinary function, and by the clawing or chewing of the upholstery by a pet dog; and damage to the fenders resulting when a goat mistook them for hors d'oeuvres. Appleman, Ins. Law and Prac., § 3222.

Concurrent insurance. That which to any extent insures the same interest against the same casualty, at the same time, as the primary insurance, on such terms that the insurers would bear proportionately the loss happening within the provisions of both policies. Rubber Co. v. Assur. Co., 64 N.J. L. 580, 46 A. 777; Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. v. Union Mercantile Co., 161 Ky. 718, 171 S.W. 407, 409; Camden Fire Ins. Ass'n v. Sutherland, Tex. Civ.App., 278 S.W. 907, 914.

Double insurance. See Double.

Excess insurance. See Excess Insurance.

General and special insurance. In marine insurance a general insurance is effected when the perils insured against are such as the law would imply from the nature of the contract considered in itself and supposing none to be specified in the policy; in the case of special insurance, further perils (in addition to implied perils) are expressed in the policy. Vandenheuvel v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns.Cas. (N.Y.) 127.

Loss. See Loss.

Insurance adjuster. One undertaking to ascertain and report the actual loss to the subject-matter of insurance due to the peril insured against. Laws Wash.1911, p. 163, § 2; Jensen v. Lincoln Hail Ins. Co., 125 Neb. 87, 249 N.W. 94.

Insurance agent. Person authorized to represent insurer in dealing with third parties in matters relating to insurance. American Casualty Co. of Reading, Pa., v. Ricas, 179 Md. 627, 22 A.2d 484, 487. An agent employed by an insurance company to solicit risks and effect insurances. Agents of insurance companies are called "general agents" when clothed with the general oversight of the companies' business in a state or large section of country, and "local agents" when their functions are limited and confined to some particular locality. McKinney v. Alton, 41 Ill.App. 512; State v. Accident Ass'n, 67 Wis. 624, 31 N.W. 229. See, also, Insurance broker, infra.

Insurance broker. One who acts as middleman between insured and company, and who solicits insurance from public under no employment from any special company and places order of insurance with company selected by insurer or, in absence of any selection, with company selected by such broker. Broker is agent for insured though at same time for some purposes he may be agent for insurer, and his acts and representations within scope of his authority as such agent are binding on insured. Pacific Fire Ins. Co. v. Bowers, 163 Va. 349, 175 S.E. 763.

An "insurance agent" is tied to his company, whereas an "insurance broker" is an independent middleman not tied to a particular company. Osborn v. Ozlin, Va., 310 U.S. 53, 60 S.Ct. 758, 761, 84 L.Ed. 1074.

Insurance commissioner. A public officer in several of the states, whose duty is to supervise the business of insurance as conducted in the state by foreign and domestic companies, for the protection and benefit of policy-holders, and especially to issue licenses, make periodical examinations into the condition of such companies, or receive, file, and publish periodical statements of their business as furnished by them.

Insurance company. A corporation or association whose business is to make contracts of insurance. They are either mutual companies or stock companies. A "mutual" insurance company is one whose fund for the payment of losses consists not of capital subscribed or furnished by outside parties, but of premiums mutually contributed by the parties insured, or in other words, one in which all persons insured become members of the association and contribute either cash or assessable premium notes, or both, to a common fund, out of which each is entitled to indemnity in case of loss. Mygatt v. Insurance Co., 21 N.Y. 65; Insurance Co. v. Hoge, 21 How. 35, 16 L.Ed. 61; Given v. Rettew, 162 Pa. 638, 29 A. 703. A "stock" company is one organized according to the usual form of business corporations, having a capital stock divided into shares, which, with current income and accumulated surplus, constitutes the fund for the payment of losses, policy-holders paying fixed premiums and not being members of the association unless they also happen to be stockholders.

Insurance policy. See Policy.

Insurance premium. The consideration paid by insured to insurer for insurance protection. Alyea-Nichols Co. v. U. S., D.C.I11., 12 F.2d 998, 1005. See Premium.

Insurance trust. An agreement between insured and trustee, whereby proceeds of policy are paid directly to trustee for investment and distribution to designated beneficiaries in manner and at such time as insured has directed in trust agreement. In re Reynolds' Estate, 131 Neb. 557, 268 N.W. 480, 486, 487.

Interinsurance is insurance system whereby several individuals, partnerships, or corporations, through common attorney in fact, underwrite one another's risks against loss under agreement that underwriters act separately and severally. Wysong v. Automobile Underwriters, 204 Ind. 493, 184 N.E. 783, 785, 94 A.L.R. 826; Hoopeston Canning Co. v. Cullen, 63 S.Ct. 602, 604, 318 U.S. 313, 87 L.Ed. 777, 145 A.L.R. 1113.

It is distinguishable from all other forms of insurance, in that every insured is interinsurer, and every insurer is insured. Underwriters' Exchange v. Indianapolis St. Ry. Co., 204 Ind. 676, 185 N.E. 504, 506.

Mutual insurance. That form of insurance provided by mutual companies. An essential characteristic of a mutual insurance company is collective and entire ownership and control by its members, all of whom must be policyholders. A mutual company may collect cash premiums from members in advance or it may assess members to pay losses and overhead. An insurance company can be mutual even though policyholders are not subject to assessment. To be a mutual insurance company, it is also essential that the company provide insurance to its members substantially at cost. Ohio Farmers indemnity Co. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 108 F.2d 665; Union Ins. Co. v. Hoge, 62 U.S. 35, 16 L.Ed. 61; Mutual Fire Ins. Co. of Germantown v. United States, 142 F.2d 344.

Over-insurance. Insurance effected upon property, either in one or several companies, to an amount which, separately or in the aggregate, exceeds the actual value of the property.

Reinsurance. Insurance of an insurer; a contract by which an insurer procures a third person (usually another insurance company) to insure him against loss or liability by reason of the original insurance.. Civ.Code Cal. § 2646; Insurance Co. v. Insurance Co., 38 Ohio St. 15, 43 Am.Rep. 413.

Specific insurance. That provided by a policy under the terms of which the insurance in the event of loss is to be distributed among the several items of property, a specific amount to each item. Wilson & Co. v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 300 Mo. 1, 254 S.W. 266, 282.

Term insurance. Insurance for a fixed time. Gilley v. Missouri State Life Ins. Co., 116 Tex. 43, 285 S.W. 807. Insurance covering only losses occurring before expiration of stated term. ;Etna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Commercial State Bank of Rantoul, D.c.m., 13 F.2d 474, 476.

INSURE. To make sure or secure, to guarantee, as, to insure safety to any one. State v. Mutual Mortuary Ass'n, 166 Tenn. 260, 61 S.W.2d 664. To engage to indemnify a person against pecuniary loss from specified perils. To act as an insurer. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Williams, 148 Md. 289, 129 A. 660, 664.

INSURED. The person who obtains insurance on his property, or upon whose life an insurance is effected. Kierce v. Lumbermen's Ins. Co. of Philadelphia, 162 Minn. 277, 202 N.W. 730, 731; Healy v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, Sup., 140 N.Y.S. 505, 506; Thompson v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 161 Iowa 446, 143 N.W. 518.

INSURER. The underwriter or insurance company with whom a contract of insurance is made.

INSURGENT. One who participates in an insurrection; one who opposes the execution of law by force of arms, or who rises in revolt against the constituted authorities. Hearon v. Calus, 178 S.C. 381, 183 S.E. 13. 20.

A distinction is often taken between "insurgent" and "rebel," in this : that the former term is not necessarily to be taken in a bad sense, inasmuch as an insurrection, though extralegal, may be just and timely in itself ; as where it is undertaken for the overthrow of tyranny or the reform of gross abuses.

INSURRECTION. A rebellion, or rising of citizens or subjects in resistance to their government See Insurgent.

Insurrection shall consist in any combined resistance to the lawful authority of the state, with intent to the denial thereof, when the same is manifested, or intended to be manifested, by acts of violence. Allegheny County v. Gibson, 90 Pa. 417, 35 Am. Rep. 670 ,

INTAKERS. In old English law. A kind of thieves inhabiting Redesdale, on the extreme northern border of England; so called because they took in or received such booties of cattle and other things as their accomplices, who were called "out-parters," brought in to them from the borders of Scotland. Spelman; Cowell.

INTAKES. Temporary inclosures made by customary tenants of a manor under a special custom authorizing them to inclose part of the waste until one or more crops have been raised on it. Elton, Common, 277.

INTANGIBLE ASSET. Such values as accrue to a going business as good will, trademarks, copyrights, franchises, or the like. It exists only in connection with something else, as the good will of a business. In re Armour's Estate, 94 A. 284, 294, 11 N.J. 257.

INTANGIBLE PROPERTY. Used chiefly in the law of taxation, this term means such property as has no intrinsic and marketable value, but is merely the representative or evidence of value, such as certificates of stock, bonds, promissory notes, and franchises. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Norman, C.C.Ky., 77 F. 26; In re Hanson's Estate, 195 N.Y.S. 255, 119 Mich. 100; City of Richmond v. Drewry-Hughes Co., 122ya.- 178, 90 S.E. 635.

INTEGER. Lat. Whole; untouched. Res Integra means a question which is new and undecided. 2 Kent, Comm. 177.

INTEGRATED. An agreement is integrated where the parties thereto adopt the ,yffiting or writings as the final and complete, expression of the agreement and an "integratiofOtis the writing or writings so adopted. Wilson v. Viking Corporation, 134 Pa.Super. 153, 3 A.2d 180, 183.

INTEGRATED BAR. See Integration, infra.

INTEGRATION. The act or process of making whole or entire. Webster.

The writing or writings adopted by the parties to an agreement as the final and complete expression of the agreement. Restatement, Contracts, § 228; Pettett v. Cooper, 62 Ohio App. 377, 24 N.E.2d 299, 302.

The act of organizing the bar of a state into an association, membership in which is a condition precedent to the right to practice law. Integration is accomplished by enactment of detailed statutes, by enactment of a short statute conferring authority upon the highest court of the state to integrate the bar, or by rule of court in the exercise of its inherent power. Integration of Bar Case, 244 Wis. 8, 11 N.W.2d 604, 608, 151 A.L.R. 586, rehearing denied 244 Wis. 8, 12 N.W. 2d 699; In re Integration of State Bar of Oklahoma, 185 Okl. 505, 95 P.2d 113.

Integrated Bar

"The integrated bar movement was initiated in this country about 35 years ago [i. e., about 1914] by the American Judicature Society and since that time at least 27 States have adopted it. None of them have returned to the old system of voluntary organization, but all commend the integrated bar highly. * * * When we say the bar is integrated we mean that every lawyer within a given area has membership in a cohesive organization. An organization of less than all the members of the bar in a given area would not be an integrated bar. The area may be the state, the county, or the city. The integrated bar has also been defined as the process by which every member of the bar is given an opportunity to do his part in performing the public service expected of him, and by which each member is obliged to bear his portion of the responsibility. * * * The integrated bar of California has promulgated the best pattern for an integrated bar program to which our attention has been. directed." Terrell, J., writing for a majority of the Supreme Court of Florida on the Petition of Florida State Bar Ass'n (1949), 40 So.2d 902, 904.

INTEGRITY. As occasionally used in statutes prescribing the qualifications of public officers, trustees, etc., this term means soundness of moral principle and character, as shown by one person dealing with others in the making and performance of contracts, and fidelity and honesty in the discharge of trusts; it is synonymous with "probity," "honesty," and "uprightness." In re Bauquier's Estate, 88 Cal. 302, 26 Pac. 178; In re Gordon's Estate, 142 Cal. 125, 75 Pac. 672.

INTELLIGIBILITY. In pleading. The statement of matters of fact directly (excluding the necessity of inference or argument to arrive at the meaning) and in such appropriate terms, so arranged, as to be comprehensible by a person of common or ordinary understanding. Davis v. Trump, 43 W.Va. 191, 27 S.E. 397, 64 Am.St.Rep. 849.

INTEMPERANCE. Habitual intemperance is that degree of intemperance from the use of intoxicating drinks which disqualifies the person a great portion of the time from properly attending to business, or which would reasonably inflict a course of great mental anguish upon an innocent party. Hope v. The Maccabees, 91 N.J.L. 148, 102 A. 689, 691, 1 A.L.R. 455; Andrews v. United States Casualty Co., 154 Wis. 82, 142 N.W. 487, 490.

INTEND. To design, resolve, purpose. To apply a rule of law in the nature of presumption; to discern and follow the probabilities of like cases.

INTENDANT. One who has the charge, management, or direction of some office, department, or public business.

Used in the constitutional and statutory law of some European governments to designate a principal officer of state corresponding to the cabinet ministers or secretaries of the various departments of the United States government, as, "intendant of marine," "intendant of finance."

The term was also used in Alabama to designate the chief executive officer of a city or town, having practically the same duties and functions as a mayor. Const. Ala. 1901, § 176; Intendant and Council of Greensboro v. Mullins, 13 Ala. 341,

INTENDED TO BE RECORDED. This phrase is frequently used in conveyances, when reciting some other conveyance which has not yet been recorded, but which forms a link in the chain of title. In Pennsylvania, it has been construed to be a covenant, on the part of the grantor, to procure the deed to be recorded in a reasonable time. Penn v. Preston, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 14.

INTENDED WIFE. Betrothed. Mace v. Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. of Massachusetts, 234 Mass. 299, 125 N.E. 569.

INTENDENTE. In Spanish law. The immediate agent of the minister of finance, or the chief and principal director of the different branches of the revenue, appointed in the various departments in each of the provinces into which the Spanish monarchy is divided. Escriche.

INTENDMENT OF LAW. The true meaning, the correct understanding or intention of the law; a presumption or inference made by the courts. Co. Litt. 78.

Common intendment. The natural and usual. sense; the common meaning or understanding; the plain meaning of any writing as apparent on its face without straining or distorting the construction.

INTENT. Design, resolve, or determination with which person acts. Witters v. United States, 106 F.2d 837, 840, 70 App.D.C. 316, 125 A.L.R. 1031; being a state of mind, is rarely susceptible of direct proof, but must ordinarily be inferred from the facts. State v. Walker, 109 W.Va. 351, 154 S. E. 866, 867. It presupposes knowledge. Reinhard v. Lawrence Warehouse Co., 41 Cal.App.2d 741, 107 P.2d 501, 504.

"Intent" and "motive" are not in law one and the same thing. State v. Logan, 344 Mo. 351, 126 S.W.2d 256, 260, 122 A.L.R. 417. "Intent" in legal sense is purpose to use particular means to effect certain result; whereas, "motive" is reason which leads minds to desire that result. United Fidelity Life Ins. Co. v. Adair, Tex.Civ.App., 29 S.W.2d 940, 943.

"Intent" expresses mental action at its most advanced point, or as it actually accompanies an outward, corporal act which has been determined on. Intent shows the presence of will in the act which consummates a crime. It is the exercise of intelligent will, the mind being fully aware of the nature and consequences of the act which is about to be done, and with such knowledge, and with full liberty of action, willing and electing to do it. Burrill, Circ.Ev. 284, and notes.

General intent. An intention, purpose, or design, either without specific plan or particular object, or without reference to such plan or object.

Meaning; purpose; signification; intendment; applied to words or language. See Certainty.

Common intent. The natural sense given to words.

Estoppel. See Estoppel.

INTENTIO. Lat.

In the Civil law. The formal complaint or claim of a plaintiff before the prtetor.

In Old English law. A count or declaration in a real action (narratio). Bract. lib. 4, tr. 2, c. 2; Fleta, lib. 4, c. 7; Du Cange.

INTENTIO CZECA MALA. A blind or obscure meaning is bad or ineffectual. 2 Bulst. 179. Said of a testator's intention.

INTENTIO INSERVIRE DEBET LEGIBUS, NON LEGES INTENTIONI. The intention [of a party] ought to be subservient to [or in accordance with] the laws, not the laws to the intention. Co. Litt. 314a, 314b.

INTENTIO MEA IMPONIT NOMEN OPERI MEO. Hob. 123. My intent gives a name to my act.

INTENTION. Determination to act in a certain way or to do a certain thing. State ex rel. Verbon v. County of St. Louis, 216 Minn. 140, 12 N.W.2d 193, 196; In re McCafferty's Will, 254 N.Y.S. 789, 795, 142 Misc. 371. Meaning; will; purpose; design. 4 Kent, Comm. 534.

"Intention," when used with reference to the construction of wills and other documents, means the sense and meaning of it, as gathered from the words used therein. Parol evidence is not ordinarily admissible to explain this. When used with reference to civil and criminal responsibility, a person who contemplates any result, as not unlikely to follow from a deliberate act of his own, may be said to intend that result, whether he desire it or not. Thus, if a man should, for a wager, discharge a gun among a multitude of people, and any should be killed, he would be deemed guilty of intending the death of such person; for every man is presumed to intend the natural consequence of his own actions. Intention is often confounded with motive, as when we speak of a man's "good intentions." Mozley & Whitley.

INTENTIONAL. Willful. Jackson v. Edwards, 144 Fla. 187, 197 So. 833, 835.

INTENTIONE. A writ that lay against him who entered into lands after the death of a tenant in dower, or for life, etc., and held out to him in reversion or remainder. Fitzh. Nat. Brev. 203.

INTER. Lat. Among; between.

INTER ALIA. Among other things. A term anciently used in pleading, especially in reciting statutes, where the whole statute was not set forth at length. Inter alia enactatum fuit, among other things it was enacted. Plowd. 65.

INTER ALIAS CAUSAS ACQUISITIONIS, MAGNA, CELEBRIS, ET FAMOSA EST CAUSA DONATION'S. Among other methods of acquiring property, a great, much-used, and celebrated method is that of gift. Bract. fol. 11.

INTER ALIOS. Between other persons; between those who are strangers to a matter in question.

INTER ALIOS RES GESTAS ALIIS NON POSSE PRIEJUDICIUM FACERE SIEPE CONSTITUTUM EST. It has been often settled that things which took place between other parties cannot prejudice. Code 7, 60, 1, 2.

INTER APICES JURIS. Among the subtleties of the law. See Apex Juris.

INTER ARMA SILENT LEGES. In time of war the laws are silent. Cicero, pro Milone. It applies as between the state and its external enemies; and also in cases of civil disturbance where extrajudicial force may supersede the ordinary process of law. Salmond, Jurispr. 641.

INTER BRACHIA. Between her arms. Fleta, lib. 1, c. 35, §§ 1, 2. See infra, Brachia.

INTER CIETEROS. Among others; in a general clause; not by name (nominatim). A term applied in the civil law to clauses of disinheritance in a will. Inst. 2, 13, 1; Id. 2, 13, 3.

INTER CANEM ET LUPUM. (Lat. Between the dog and the wolf.) The twilight; because then the dog seeks his rest, and the wolf his prey. 3 Inst. 63.

INTER CONJUGES. Between husband and wife.

INTER CONJUNCTAS PERSONAS. Between conjunct persons. By the act 1621, c. 18, all conveyances or alienations between conjunct persons, unless granted for onerous causes, are declared, as in a question with creditors, to be null and of no avail. Conjunct persons are those standing in a certain degree of relationship to each other; such, for example, as brothers, sisters, sons, uncles, etc. These were formerly excluded as witnesses, on account of their relationship; but this, as a ground of exclusion, has been abolished. Tray. Lat. Max.

INTER FAUCES TERRIE. (Between the jaws of the land.) A term used to describe a roadstead or arm of the sea enclosed between promontories or projecting headlands.

INTER PARES. Between peers; between those who stand on a level or equality, as respects diligence, opportunity, responsibility, etc.

INTER PARTES. Between parties. Instruments in which two persons unite, each making conveyance to, or engagement with, the other, are called "papers inter partes." Smith v. Emery, 12 N.J. Law, 60.

Judgment Inter Partes

See Judgment in Personam.

INTER QUATUOR PARIETES. Between four walls. Fleta, lib. 6, c. 55, § 4.

INTER REGALIA. In English law. Among the things belonging to the sovereign. Among these are rights of salmon fishing, mines of gold and silver, forests, forfeitures, casualties of superiority, etc., which are called "regalia minora," and may be conveyed to a subject. The regalia majora include the several branches of the royal prerogative, which are inseparable from the person of the sovereign. Tray. Lat. Max.

INTER RUSTICOS. Among the illiterate or unlearned.

INTER SE, INTER SESE. Among themselves. Story, Partn. § 405.

INTER VIRUM ET UXOREM. Between husband and wife.

INTER VIVOS. Between the living; from one living person to another. Where property passes by conveyance, the transaction is said to be inter vivos, to distinguish it from a case of succession or devise. So an ordinary gift from one person to another is called a "gift inter vivos," to distinguish it from a donation made in contemplation of death, (mortis causa.)

INTERCALARE. Lat. In the civil law. To introduce or insert among or between others; to introduce a day or month into the calendar; to intercalate. Dig. 50, 16, 98, pr.

INTERCEDERE. Lat. In the civil law. To become bound for another's debt.

INTERCEPTION. Within Federal Communications Act, prohibiting interception of communication by wire or radio, indicates taking or seizure by the way or before arrival at destined place, and does not ordinarily connote obtaining of what is to be sent before, or at the moment, it leaves the possession of the proposed sender, or after, or at the moment, it comes into possession of intended receiver. Communications Act of 1934, § 605, 47 U.S.C.A. § 605; Goldman v. United States, N.Y., 62 S.Ct. 993, 995, 316 U.S. 129, 86 L.Ed. 1322.

INTERCHANGEABLY. By way of exchange or interchange. This term properly denotes the method of signing deeds, leases, contracts, etc., executed in duplicate, where each party signs the copy which he delivers to the other. Roosevelt v. Smith, 40 N.Y.S. 381, 17 Misc.Rep. 323.

INTERCOMMON. To enjoy a common mutually or promiscuously with the inhabitants or tenants of a contiguous township, vill, or manor. 2 Bl. Comm. 33; 1 Crabb, Real Prop. p. 271, § 290.

INTERCOMMUNING. Letters of intercommuning were letters from the Scotch privy council passing (on their act) in the king's name, charging the lieges not to reset, supply, or intercommune with the persons thereby denounced; or to furnish them with meat, drink, house, harbor, or any other things useful or comfortable; or to have any intercourse with them whatever,—under pain of being reputed art and part in their crimes, and dealt with accordingly; and desiring all sheriffs, bailies, etc., to apprehend and commit such rebels to prison. Bell.

INTERCOURSE. Communication; literally, a running or passing between persons or places; commerce. As applied to two persons, the word standing alone, and without a descriptive or qualifying word, does not import sexual connection. People v. Howard, 143 Cal. 316, 76 P. 1116.

INTERDICT. In Roman law. A decree of the praetor by means of which, in certain cases determined by the edict, he himself directly commanded what should be done or omitted, particularly in causes involving the right of possession or a quasi possession. In the modern civil law, interdicts are regarded precisely the same as actions, though they give rise to a summary proceeding. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 258.

Interdicts are either prohibitory, restorative, or exhibitory; the first being a prohibition, the second a decree for restoring possession lost by force, the third a decree for the exhibiting of accounts, etc. Heinec. § 1206.

An interdict was distinguished from an "action," (actio,) properly so called, by the circumstance that the praetor himself decided in the first instance, (principaliter,) on the application of the plaintiff, without previously appointing a judex, by issuing a decree commanding what should be done, or left undone. Gaius, 4, 139. It might be adopted as a remedy in various cases where a regular action could not be maintained, and hence interdicts were at one time more extensively used than were the actiones themselves. Afterwards, however, they fell into disuse, and in the time of Justinian were generally dispensed with. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 258; Inst. 4, 15, 8.

In Ecclesiastical law. An ecclesiastical censure, by which divine services are prohibited to be administered either to particular persons or in particular places.

In Scotch law. An order of the court of session or of an inferior court, pronounced on cause shown, for stopping any act or proceedings complained of as illegal or wrongful. It may be resorted to as a remedy against any encroachment either on property or possession, and is a protection against any unlawful proceeding. Bell.

INTERDICTION. In French law. Every person who, on account of insanity, has become incapable of controlling his own interests, can be put under the control of a guardian, who shall administer his affairs with the same effect as he might himself. Such a person is said to be "interdit," and his status is described as "interdiction." Arg. Fr. Merc. Law, 562.

In the Civil law. A judicial decree, by which a person is deprived of the exercise of his civil rights.

In French-Canadian law. A proceeding instituted for the purpose of obtaining a curator of the person and property, and includes the calling of a family council and a petition to the court or its prothonotary, followed by a hearing. In re Methot's Will, 98 A. 839, 840, 87 N.J.Eq. 256.

In International law. An "interdiction of commercial intercourse" between two countries is a governmental prohibition of commercial intercourse, intended to bring about an entire cessation for the time being of all trade whatever. The Edward, 1 Wheat. 272, 4 L.Ed. 86.

INTERDICTION OF FIRE AND WATER. Banishment by an order that no man should supply the person banished with fire or water, the two necessaries of life.

INTERDICTUM SALVIANUM. Lat. In Roman law. The Salvian interdict. A process which /ay for the owner of a farm to obtain possession of the goods of his tenant who had pledged them to him for the rent of the land. Inst. 4, 15, 3.

INTERDUM EVENIT UT EXCEPTIO QUIE PRIMA FACIE JUSTA VIDETUR, TAMEN INIQUE NOCEAT. It sometimes happens that a plea which seems prima facie just, nevertheless is injurious and unequal. Inst. 4, 14, 1, 2.

INTERESSE, Lat. Interest. The interest of money; also an interest in lands.

Interesse termini. An interest in a term. That species of interest or property which a lessee for years acquires in the lands demised to him, before he has actually become possessed of those lands; as distinguished from that property or interest vested in him by the demise, and also reduced into possession by an actual entry upon the lands and the assumption of ownership therein, and which is then termed an "estate for years." Brown.

Pro interesse suo. For his own interest; according to, or to the extent of, his individual interest. Used (in practice) to describe the intervention of a party who comes into a suit for the purpose of protecting interests of his own which may be involved in the dispute between the principal parties or which may be affected by the settlement of their contention.

INTEREST.

Property

The most general term that can be employed to denote a property in lands or chattels. In its application to lands or things real, it is frequently used in connection with the terms "estate," "right," and "title," and, according to Lord Coke, it properly includes them all. Co. Litt. 345b. State v. McKellop, 40 Mo. 185; Loventhal v. Home Ins. Co., 20 So. 419, 112 Ala. 116, 33 L.R.A. 258, 57 Am.St.Rep. 17.

More particularly it means a right to have the advantage accruing from anything; any right in the nature of property, but less than title; a partial or undivided right; a title to a share.

The terms "interest" and "title" are not synonymous. A mortgagor in possession, and a purchaser holding under a deed defectively executed, have, both of them, absolute as well as insurable interests in the property, though neither of them has the legal title. Hough v. City F. Ins. Co., 29 Conn. 20, 76 Am.Dec. 581.

Absolute or conditional. That is an absolute interest in property which is so completely vested in the individual that he can by no contingency be deprived of it without his own consent. So, too, he is the owner of such absolute interest who must necessarily sustain the loss if the property is destroyed. The terms "interest" and "title" are not synonymous. A mortgagor in possession, and a purchaser holding under a deed defectively executed, have, both of them, absolute, as well as insurable, interests in the property, though neither of them has the legal title. "Absolute" is here synonymous with "vested," and is used in contradistinction to contingent or conditional. Hough v. City F. Ins. Co., 29 Conn. 10, 76 Am.Dec. 581; Garver v. Hawkeye Ins. Co., 69 Iowa 202, 28 N. W. 555; Washington F. Ins. Co. v. Kelly, 32 Md. 421, 431, 3 Am.Rep. 149; Elliott v. Ashland Mut. F. Ins. Co., 12 A. 676, 117 Pa. 548, 2 Am.St.Rep. 703.

Insurance

Interest or no interest. These words, inserted in an insurance policy, mean that the question whether the insured has or has not an insurable interest in the subject-matter is waived, and the policy is to be good irrespective of such interest. The effect of such a clause is to make it a wager policy.

Interest policy. One which actually, or prima facie, covers a substantial and insurable interest; as opposed to a wager policy.

English Law

Interest suit. An action in the probate branch of the high court of justice, in which the question in dispute is as to which party is entitled to a grant of letters of administration of the estate of a deceased person. Wharton.

General

Joint interest. One owned by several persons in equal shares by a title created by a single will or transfer, when expressly declared in the will or transfer to be a joint tenancy, or when granted or devised to executors or trustees as joint tenants. Civ. Code Cal. § 683.

Law of Evidence

"Interest," in a statute that no witness shall be excluded by interest in the event of the suit, means "concern," "advantage," "good," "share," "portion," "part," or "participation." Morgan v. Johnson, 87 Ga. 382, 13 S.E. 710.

A relation to the matter in controversy, or to the issue of the suit, in the nature of a prospective gain or loss, which actually does, or presumably might, create a bias or prejudice in the mind, inclining the person to favor one side or the other.

For Money

Interest is the compensation allowed by law or fixed by the parties for the use or forbearance or detention of money. Beach v. Peabody, 188 Ill. 75, 58 N.E. 680, Shealy v. U. S., D.C.S.C., 37 F.2d 918, 919.

Conventional interest is interest at the rate agreed upon and fixed by the parties themselves, as distinguished from that which the law would prescribe in the absence of an explicit agreement. Fowler v. Smith, 2 Cal. 568; Vernon's Ann. Civ. St. art. 5069.

Legal interest. See Legal Interest.

Simple interest is that which is paid for the principal or sum lent, at a certain rate or allowance, made by law or agreement of parties.

Compound interest is interest upon interest, where accrued interest is added to the principal sum, and the whole treated as a new principal, for the calculation of the interest for the next period.

Ex-interest. In the language of stock exchang es, a bond or other interest-bearing security is said to be sold "ex-interest" when the vendor reserves to himself the interest already accrued and payable (if any) or the interest accruing up to the next interest day.

Interest, maritime. See Maritime Interest.

Interest upon interest. Compound interest.

INTEREST REIPUBLICIE NE MALEFICIA REMANEANT IMPUNITA. It concerns the state that crimes remain not unpunished. Jenk. Cent. pp. 30, 31, case 59; Wing. Max. 501.

INTEREST REIPUBLICIE NE SUA QUIS MALE UTATUR. It concerns the state that persons do not misuse their property. 6 Coke, 36a.

INTEREST REIPUBLICIE QUOD HOMINES CONSERVENTUR. It concerns the state that [the lives of] men be preserved. 12 Coke, 62.

INTEREST REIPUBLICIE RES JUDICATAS NON RESCIND!. It concerns the state that things adjudicated be not rescinded. 2 Inst. 360. It is matter of public concern that solemn adjudications of the courts should not be disturbed. Best, Ev. p. 41, § 44.

INTEREST REIPUBLICIE SUPREMA HOMINUM TESTAMENTA RATA HABERI. It concerns the state that men's last wills be held valid, [or allowed to stand.] Co. Litt. 236b.

INTEREST REIPUBLICIE UT CARCERES SINT IN TUTO. It concerns the state that prisons be safe places of confinement. 2 Inst. 589.

INTEREST (IMPRIMIS) REIPUBLICIE UT PAX IN REGNO CONSERVETUR, ET QUIECUNQUE PACI ADVERSENTUR PROVIDE DECLINENTUE. It especially concerns the state that peace be preserved in the kingdom, and that whatever things are against peace be prudently avoided. 2 Inst. 158.

INTEREST REIPUBLICIE UT QUILIBET RE SUA BENE UTATUR. It is the concern of the state that every one uses his property properly.

INTEREST REIPUBLICIE UT SIT FINIS LITIUM. It concerns the state that there be an end of lawsuits. Co. Litt. 303. It is for the general welfare that a period be put to litigation. Broom, Max. 331, 343.

INTERFERE. To check; hamper; hinder; disturb; intervene; intermeddle; interpose; to enter into, or to take part in, the concerns of others. State v. Estes, 185 N.C. 752, 117 S.E. 581, 582; Conger v. Italian Vineyard Co., 186 Cal. 404, 199 P. 503. People ex rel. Benefit Ass'n of Railway Employees v. Miner, 387 Ill. 393, 56 N.E.2d 353, 356.

INTERFERENCE. In patent law, this term designates a collision between rights claimed or granted; that is, where a person claims a patent for the whole or any integral part of the ground already covered by an existing patent or by a pending application. Milton v. Kingsley, 7 App.D.C. 540; Dederick v. Fox, C.C.Pa., 56 F. 717; Nathan Mfg. Co. v. Craig, C.C.Mass., 49 F. 370.

Strictly speaking, an "interference" is declared to exist by the patent office whenever it is decided by the properly constituted authority in that bureau that -two pending applications (or a patent and a pending application), in their claims or essence, cover the same discovery or invention, so as to render necessary an investigation into the question of priority of invention between the two applications or the application and the patent, as the case may be. Lowrey v. Cowles Electric Smelting, etc., Co., C.C.Ohio, 68 F. 372.

INTERIM. Lat. In the meantime; meanwhile. An assignee ad interim is one appointed between the time of bankruptcy and appointment of the regular assignee. 2 Bell, Comm. 355.

INTERIM COMMITTITUR. "In the meantime, let him be committed." An order of court (or the docket-entry noting it) by which a prisoner is committed to prison and directed to be kept there until some further action can be taken, or until the time arrives for the execution of his sentence.

INTERIM CURATOR. In English law. A person appointed by justices of the peace to take care of the property of a felon convict, until the appointment by the crown of an administrator or administrators for the same purpose. Mozley & Whiteley.

INTERIM FACTOR. In Scotch law. A judicial officer elected or appointed under the bankruptcy law to take charge of and preserve the estate until a fit person shall be elected trustee. 2 Bell, Comm. 357.

INTERIM OFFICER. One appointed to fill the office during a temporary vacancy, or during an interval caused by the absence or incapacity of the regular incumbent.

INTERIM ORDER. One made in the meantime, and until something is done.

INTERIM RECEIPT. A receipt for money paid by way of premium for a contract of insurance for which application is made. If the risk is rejected, the money is refunded, less the pro rata premium.

INTERINSURANCE EXCHANGE. Reciprocal exchange. See that title.

INTERLAQUEARE. In old practice. To link together, or interchangeably. Writs were called "interlaqueata" where several were issued against several parties residing in different counties, each party being summoned by a separate writ to warrant the tenant, together with the other warrantors. Fleta, lib. 5, c. 4, § 2.

INTERLINEATION. The act of writing between the lines of an instrument; also what is written between lines. Morris v. Vanderen, 1 Dall. 67, 1 L.Ed. 38; Russell v. Eubanks, 84 Mo. 88.

INTERLOCUTOR. In Scotch practice. An order or decree of court; an order made in open court. 2 Swint. 362; Arkley, 32.

INTERLOCUTOR OF RELEVANCY. In Scotch practice. A decree as to the relevancy of a libel or indictment in a criminal case. 2 Alis. Crim. Pr. 373.

INTERLOCUTORY. Provisional; temporary; not final. Something intervening between the commencement and the end of a suit which decides some point or matter, but is not a final decision of the whole controversy. Mora v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 13 Abb. Prac. (N.Y.) 310.

As to interlocutory "Costs," "Decree," "Judgment," "Order," and "Sentence," see those titles.

INTERLOPERS. Persons who run into business to which they have no right, or who interfere wrongfully; persons who enter a country or place to trade without license. Webster.

INTERMARRIAGE. In the popular sense, this term denotes the contracting of a marriage relation between two persons considered as members of different nations, tribes, families, etc., as, between the sovereigns of two different countries, between an American and an alien, between Indians of different tribes, between the scions of different clans or families. But, in law, it is sometimes used (and with propriety) to emphasize the mutuality of the marriage contract and as importing a reciprocal engagement by which each of the parties "marries" the other. Thus, in a pleading, instead of averring that "the plaintiff was married to the defendant," it would be proper to allege that "the parties intermarried" at such a time and place.

INTERMEDDLE. To interfere with property or the conduct of business affairs officiously or without right or title. In re Shinn's Estate, 166 Pa. 121, 30 A. 1026, 45 Am.St.Rep. 656. Not a technical legal term, but sometimes used with reference to the acts of an executor de son tort or a negotiorum gestor in the civil law.

INTERMEDIARY. In modern civil law. A broker; one who is employed to negotiate a matter between two parties, and who for that reason is considered as the mandatary (agent) of both. Civ. Code La. art. 3016.

INTERMEDIATE. Intervening; interposed during the progress of a suit, proceeding, business, etc., or between its beginning and end.

INTERMEDIATE ACCOUNT. In probate law. An account of an executor, administrator, or guardian filed subsequent to his first or initial account and before his final account. Specifically in New York, an account filed with the surrogate for the purpose of disclosing the acts of the person accounting and the state or condition of the fund in his hands, and not made the subject of a judicial settlement. Code Civ.Proc. N.Y. 1899, § 2514, subd. 9 (Surrogate's Court Act, § 314, subd. 9).

INTERMEDIATE ORDER. An order made between the commencement of the action and its final determination, incident to and during its progress, which does not determine the cause but only some intervening matter relating thereto; one that is not directly appealable. Miami Copper Co. v. Strohl, 14 Ariz. 410, 130 P. 605, 608. People v. Priori, 163 N.Y. 99, 57 N.E. 85; Boyce v. Wabash Ry. Co., 63 Iowa 70, 18 N.W. 673, 50 Am.Rep. 730; State v. O'Brien, 18 Mont. 1, 43 P. 1091; Hymes v. Van Cleef, 61 Hun 618, 15 N.Y.S. 341.

INTERMEDIATE TOLL. Toll for travel on a toll road, paid or to be collected from persons who pass thereon at points between the toll gates, such persons not passing by, through, or around the toll gates. Hollingworth v. State, 29 Ohio St. 552.

INTERMITTENT EASEMENT. See Easement.

INTERMIXTURE OF GOODS. Confusion of goods; the confusing or mingling together of goods belonging to different owners in such a way that the pebperty of neither owner can be separately identified or extracted from the mass. Smith v. Sanborn, 6 Gray (Mass.) 134. And see Confusion of Goods.

INTERN. To restrict or shut up a person, as a political prisoner, within a limited territory.

INTERNAL. Relating to the interior; comprised within boundary lines; of interior concern or interest; domestic, as opposed to foreign.

INTERNAL COMMERCE. See Commerce.

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS. With reference to governmental policy and constitutional provisions restricting taxation or the contracting of public debts, this term means works of general public utility or advantage, designed to promote facility of intercommunication, trade, and commerce, the transportation of persons and property, or the development of the natural resources of the state, such as railroads, public highways, turnpikes, and canals, bridges, the improvement of rivers and harbors, systems of artificial irrigation, and the improvement of water powers; but it does not include the building and maintenance of state institutions. State v. Froehlich, 115 Wis. 32, 91 N.W. 115, 58 L.R.A. 757, 95 Am.St.Rep. 894. State v. Knapp, 99 Kan. 852, 163 P. 181, 182, L.R.A. 1917C, 1034; State v. Donald, 160 Wis. 21, 151 N.W. 331, 346.

INTERNAL POLICE. A term sometimes applied to the police power, or power to enact laws in the interest of the public safety, health, and morality, which is inherent in the legislative authority of each state, is to be exercised with reference only to its domestic affairs and its own citizens, and is not surrendered to the federal government. Cheboygan Lumber Co. v. Delta Transp. Co., 100 Mich. 16, 58 N.W. 630.

INTERNAL REVENUE. In the legislation and fiscal administration of the United States, revenue raised by the imposition of taxes and excises on domestic products or manufactures, and on domestic business and occupations, inheritance taxes, and stamp taxes; as broadly distinguished from "customs duties," i. e., duties or taxes on foreign commerce or on goods imported. Rev.St. U.S. tit. 35, § 3140 et seq.

INTERNAL WATERS. Such as lie wholly within the body of the particular state or country. The Garden City, D.C.N.Y., 26 F. 773.

INTERNATIONAL COMMERCE. See Commerce.

INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE. An agency of the United Nations. It has jurisdiction to give advisory opinions on matters of law and treaty construction when requested by the General Assembly, Security Council or any other international agency authorized by the General Assembly to petition for such opinion. It has jurisdiction, also, to settle legal disputes between nations when voluntarily submitted to it. Its judgments may be enforced by the Security Council.

Every member of the United Nations is automatically a member of the court.

INTERNATIONAL LAW. The law which regulates the intercourse of nations; the law of nations. 1 Kent, Comm. 1, 4. The customary law which determines the rights and regulates the intercourse of independent states in peace and war. 1 Wildm. Int. Law, 1.

Public international law is the body of rules which control the conduct of independent states in their relations with each other.

Private international law is that branch of municipal law which determines before the courts of what nation a particular action or suit should be brought, and by the law of what nation it should be determined.

INTERNUNCIO. A minister of a second order, charged with the affairs of the papal court in countries where that court has no nuncio.

INTERNUNCIUS. A messenger between two parties; a go-between. Applied to a broker, as the agent of both parties. 4 C. Rob. Adm. 204.

INTERPELLATE. To address with a question, especially when formal and public; originally used with respect to proceedings in the French legislature; used in reference to questions by the court to counsel during an argument.

INTERPELLATION. In the civil law. The act by which, in consequence of an agreement, the party bound declares that he will not be bound beyond a certain time. Wolff, Inst. Nat. § 752.

INTERPLEA. A plea by which a person sued in respect to property disclaims any interest in it and demands that rival claimants shall litigate their titles between themselves and relieve him from responsibility. Bennett v. Wolverton, 24 Kan. 286. See Interpleader.

In Missouri, a statutory proceeding, serving as a substitute for the action of replevin, by which a third person intervenes in an action of attachment, sets up his own title to the specific property attached, and seeks to recover the possession of it. Rice v. Sall[y], 176 Mo. 107, 75 S.W. 398; Spooner v. Ross, 24 Mo.App. 603; State v. Barker, 26 Mo. App. 491; Brownwell, etc., Car. Co. v. Barnard, 139 Mo. 142, 40 S.W. 762.

INTERPLEADER. When two or more persons claim the same thing (or fund) of a third, and he, laying no claim to it himself, is ignorant which of them has a right to it, and fears he may be prejudiced by their proceeding against him to recover it, he may file a bill in equity against them, the object of which is to make them litigate their title between themselves, instead of litigating it with him, and such a bill is called a "bill of interpleader." Brown; Hall v. San Jacinto State Bank, Tex.Civ.App., 255 S.W. 506, 509; Alton & Peters v. Merritt, 145 Minn. 426, 177 N.W. 770, 771.

By the statute 1 & 2 Wm. IV. c. 58, summary proceedings at law were provided for the same purpose, in actions of assumpsit, debt, detinue, and trover. And the same remedy is known, in one form or the other, in most or all of the United States.

INTERPOLATE. To insert words in a complete document.

INTERPOLATION. The act of interpolating; the words interpolated.

INTERPOSITION. The doctrine that a state, in the exercise of its sovereignty, may reject a mandate of the federal government deemed to be unconstitutional or to exceed the powers delegated to the federal government. The doctrine denies constitutional obligation of states to respect Supreme Court decisions with which they do not agree. Bush v. Orleans Parish Sch. Bd., D.C.La., 188 F.Supp. 916.

The concept is based on the 10th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States reserving to the states powers not delegated to the United States. Historically, the doctrine emanated from Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dallas 419, wherein the state of Georgia, when sued in the Supreme Court by a private citizen of another state, entered a remonstrance and declined to recognize the court's jurisdiction. Amendment 11 validated Georgia's position.

Implementation of the doctrine may be peaceable, as by resolution, remonstrance or legislation, or may proceed ultimately to nullification, with forcible resistance.

The Constitution does contemplate and provide for the contingency of adverse state interposition or legislation to annul or defeat the execution of national laws. In re Charge to Grand Jury, Fed. Cas.No.18,274 [2 Spr. 292].

INTERPRET. To construe; to seek out the meaning of language; to translate orally from one tongue to another.

INTERPRETARE ET CONCORDARE LEGES LEGIBUS, EST OPTIMUS INTERPRETANDI MODUS. To interpret, and [in such a way as] to harmonize laws with laws, is the best mode of interpretation. 8 Coke, 169a.

INTERPRETATIO CHARTARUM BENIGNE FACIENDA EST, UT RES MAGIS VALEAT QUAM PEREAT. The interpretation of deeds is to be liberal, that the thing may rather have effect than fail. Broom, Max. 543.

INTERPRETATIO FIENDA EST UT RES MAGIS VALEAT QUAM PEREAT. Jenk. Cent. 198. Such an interpretation is to be adopted that the thing may rather stand than fall.

INTERPRETATIO TAMS IN AMBIGUIS SEMPER FIENDA EST UT EVITETUR INCONVENIENS ET ABSURDUM. In cases of ambiguity, such an interpretation should always be made that what is inconvenient and absurd may be avoided. 4 Inst. 328.

INTERPRETATION. The art or process of discovering and expounding the meaning of a statute, will, contract, or other written document. People v. Com'rs of Taxes, 95 N.Y. 559; Rome v. Knox, 14 How. Prac., N.Y., 272; Ming v. Pratt, 22 Mont. 262, 56 P. 279; Tallman v. Tallman, 3 Misc. 465, 23 N.Y.S. 734; Roberts v. Portland Water Dist., 124 Me. 63, 126 A. 162, 163; Cohn-Hall-Marx Co. v. Vanosdall, 25 Ohio App. 360, 157 N.E. 908, 909.

The discovery and representation of the true meaning of any signs used to convey ideas. Lieb. Herm.

"Construction" is a term of wider scope than "interpretation;" for, while the latter is concerned only with ascertaining the sense and meaning of the subject-matter, the former may also be directed to explaining the legal effects and consequences of the instrument in question. Hence interpretation precedes construction, but stops at the written text.

Interpretation and construction of written instruments are not the same. A rule of construction is one which either governs the effect of an ascertained intention, or points out what the court should do in the absence of express or implied intention, while a rule of interpretation is one which governs the ascertainment of the meaning of the maker of the instrument. In re Union Trust Co., 151 N.Y.S. 246, 249, 89 Misc. 69.

Close interpretation (interpretatio restricta) is adopted if just reasons, connected with the formation and character of the text, induce us to take the words in their narrowest meaning. This species of interpretation has generally been called "literal," but the term is inadmissible. Lieb. Herm. 54.

Extensive interpretation (interpretatio extensiva, called, also, "liberal interpretation") adopts a more comprehensive signification of the word. Lieb. Herm. 58.

Extravagant interpretation (interpretatio excedens) is that which substitutes a meaning evidently beyond the true one. It is therefore not genuine interpretation. Lieb. Herm. 59.

Free or unrestricted interpretation (interpretatio soluta) proceeds simply on the general principles of interpretation in good faith, not bound by any specific or superior principle. Lieb. Herm. 59.

Limited or restricted interpretation (interpretatio limitata) is when we are influenced by other principles than the strictly hermeneutic ones. Lieb. Herm. 60.

Predestined interpretation (interpretatio predestinata) takes place if the interpreter, laboring under a strong bias of mind, makes the text subservient to his preconceived views or desires. This includes artful interpretation, (interpretatio vafer,) by which the interpreter seeks to give a meaning to the text other than the one he knows, to have been intended. Lieb. Herm. 60.

It is said to be either "legal," which rests on the same authority as the law itself, or "doctrinal," which rests upon its intrinsic reasonableness. Legal interpretation may be either "authentic," when it is expressly provided by the legislator, or "usual," when it is derived from unwritten practice. Doctrinal interpretation may turn on the meaning of words and sentences, when it is called "grammatical," or on the intention of the legislator, when it is described as "logical." When logical interpretation stretches the words of a statute to cover its obvious meaning, it is called "extensive;" when, on the other hand, it avoids giving full meaning to the words, in order not to go beyond the intention of the legislator, it is called "restrictive." Holl. Jur. 344.

As to strict and liberal interpretation, see Construction.

In the civil law, authentic interpretation of laws'; isthat given by the legislator himself, which is obligatory on the courts. Customary interpretation (also called "usual") is that which arises from successive or concurrent decisions of the court on the same subject-matter, having regard to the spirit of the law, jurisprudence, usages, and equity; as distinguished from "authentic" interpretation, which is that given by the legislator himself. Houston v. Robertson, 2 Tex. 26.

INTERPRETATION CLAUSE. A section of a statute which defines the meaning of certain words occurring frequently in the other sections.

INTERPRETER. A person sworn at a trial to interpret the evidence of a foreigner or a deaf and dumb person to the court. Amory v. Fellowes, 5 Mass. 226; People v. Lem Deo, 132 Cal. 199, 64 P. 266.

INTERREGNUM. An interval between reigns. The period which elapses between the death of a sovereign and the election of another. The vacancy which occurs when there is no government.

INTERROGATOIRE. In French law. An act which contains the interrogatories made by the judge to the person accused, on the facts which are the object of the accusation, and the answers of the accused. Poth. Proc. Crim. c. 4, art. 2, § 1.

INTERROGATORIES. A set or series of written questions drawn up for the purpose of being propounded to a party in equity, a garnishee, or a witness whose testimony is taken on deposition; a series of formal written questions used in the judicial examination of a party or a witness. In taking evidence on depositions, the interrogatories are usually prepared and settled by counsel, and reduced to writing in advance of the examination.

Written questions propounded by one party and served on adversary, who must serve written answers thereto under oath. Neske v. Burns, 8 N.J. Misc. 160, 149 A. 761.

Interrogatories are either direct or cross, the former being those which are put on behalf of the party calling a witness; the latter are those which are interposed by the adverse party.

INTERRUPTIO. Lat. Interruption. A term used both in the civil and common law of prescription. Calvin.

INTERRUPTIO MULTIPLEX NON TOLLIT PRJESCRIPTIONEM SEMEL OBTENTAM. 2 Inst. 654. Frequent interruption does not take away a prescription once secured.

INTERRUPTION. The occurrence of some act or fact, during the period of prescription, which is sufficient to arrest the running of the statute of limitations. It is said to be either "natural" or "civil," the former being caused by the act of the party; the latter by the legal effect or operation of some fact or circumstance. Innerarity v. Mims, 1 Ala. 674; Carr v. Foster, 3 Q.B. 588; Flight v. Thomas, 2 Adol. & El. 701.

Interruption of the possession is where the right is not enjoyed or exercised continuously; interruption of the right is where the person having or claiming the right ceases the exercise of it in such a manner as to show that he does not claim to be entitled to exercise it.

In Scotch law. The true proprietor's claiming his right during the course of prescription. Bell.

INTERSECTION. As applied to a street or highway means the space occupied by two streets at the point where they cross each other. Rodgers v. Commercial Casualty Ins. Co., 237 Ala. 301, 186 So. 684, 686. Space common to both streets or highways, formed by continuing the curb lines. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Dickson, 27 Tenn.App. 74, 173 S.W.2d 714, 718.

Point of intersection of two roads is the point where their middle lines intersect. In re Springfield Road, 73 Pa. 127. But the term may also mean the point which each of two approaching vehicles will reach at the same moment. Blashfield, Cyc. of Automobile Law and Prac., Perm.Ed., § 983.

"Intersection" may apply where street or highway runs into but without crossing another. Thrush v. Lingo Lumber Co., Tex.Civ.App., 262 S.W. 551, 553; Pangborn v. John Widdicomb Co., 223 Mich. 181, 193 N.W. 817, 31 A.L.R. 485; McCaa v. Thomas, 207 Ala. 211, 92 So. 414, 416; Mitchell v. Raymond, 181 Wis. 591, 195 N.W. 855, 857, 35 A.L.R. 1115; Rohde v. Knock, 101 Conn. 439, 126 A. 335, 336; Lawrence v. Goodwill, 44 Cal.App. 440, 186 P. 781, 783; York Ice Machinery Corporation v. Sachs, 167 Md. 113, 173 A. 240, 243.

INTERSTATE. Between two or more states; between places or persons in different states; concerning or affecting two or more states politically or territorially.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE. Traffic, intercourse, commercial trading, or the transportation of persons or property between or among the several states of the Union, or from or between points in one state and points in another state; commerce between two states, or between places lying in different states. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 194, 6 L.Ed. 23; Wabash, etc. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U.S. 557, 7 S.Ct. 4, 30 L.Ed. 244; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Railroad Com'rs, C.C.Tenn., 19 F. 701; Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. Lucker, 128 Minn. 171, 150 N.W. 790, 791; State v. Knights of Ku Klux Klan, 117 Kan. 564, 232 P. 254, 260, 37 A.L.R. 1267; Kirmeyer v. State of Kansas, 236 U.S. 568, 35 S.Ct. 419, 59 L.Ed. 721; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Foster, 247 U.S. 105, 38 S.Ct. 438, 439, 62 L.Ed. 1006, 1 A.L.R. 1278. It comprehends all the component parts of commercial intercourse between different states. Furst v. Brewster, 282 U.S. 493, 51 S.Ct. 295, 296, 75 L.Ed. 478.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT. The act of congress of February 4, 1887 (49 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.), designed to regulate commerce between the states, and particularly the transportation of persons and property, by carriers, between interstate points, prescribing that charges for such transportation shall be reasonable Ind just, prohibiting unjust discrimination, rebates, draw-backs, preferences, pooling of freights, etc., requiring schedules of rates to be published, establishing a commission to carry out the measures enacted, and prescribing the powers and duties of such commission and the procedure before it.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION. A commission created by the interstate commerce act (q. v.) to carry out the measures therein enacted, composed of eleven persons, appointed by the President, empowered to inquire into the business of the carriers affected, to enforce the law, to receive, investigate, and determine complaints made to them of any violation of the act, make annual reports, hold stated sessions, etc. 49 U.S.C.A. § 11.

INTERSTATE EXTRADITION. The reclamation and surrender, according to due legal proceedings, of a person who, having committed a crime in one of the states of the Union, has fled into another state to evade justice or escape prosecution.

INTERSTATE LAW. That branch of private international law which affords rules and principles for the determination of controversies between citizens of different states in respect to mutual rights or obligations, in so far as the same are affected by the diversity of their citizenship or by diversity in the laws or institutions of the several states.

INTERVENING ACT. Of third person in order to break chain of causation and obviate liability for original breach of duty must be a superseding cause and one which original wrongdoer was not bound to anticipate as the natural or ordinary result of his acts. Frazier v. Ayres, La.App., 20 So. 2d 754, 759; Littell v. Argus Production Co., C.C.A. Kan., 78 F.2d 955, 957.

INTERVENING AGENCY. To render an original wrong a remote cause, an "intervening agency," must be independent of such wrong, adequate to produce the injury, so interrupting the natural sequence of events as to produce a result different from what would have been produced, and one that could not have been reasonably expected from the original wrong. Lemos v. Madden, 28 Wyo. 1, 200 P. 791, 795.

An independent "intervening agency" which will protect the original wrongdoer must be the efficient cause of the injury of which complaint is made, and not a negligent act or omission of such agency concurring with or succeeding the original negligence permitted by the original wrongdoer to continue and which in the natural course of events results in such injury. In short, the result prevented by the intervening agency must be the injury complained of, and not the requital for that injury. Swanson v. Slagal, 212 Ind. 394, 8 N.E.2d 993, 1000.

An "intervening efficient cause" is a new and independent force which breaks the causal connection between the original wrong and injury, and itself becomes direct and immediate cause of injury. Phillabaum v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co., 315 Ill. 131, 145 N.E. 806, 808.

INTERVENING CAUSE. The "intervening cause," which will relieve of liability for an injury, is an independent cause which intervenes between the original wrongful act or omission and the injury, turns aside the natural sequence of events, and produces a result which would not otherwise have followed and which could not have been reasonably anticipated. Hartman v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 94 Kan. 184, 146 P. 335, 336, L.R.A. 1915D, 563. An act of an independent agency which destroys the causal connection between the negligent act of the defendant and the wrongful injury; the independent act being the immediate cause, in which case damages are not recoverable because the original wrongful act is not the proximate cause. Davenport v. McClellan, 88 N.J.L. 653, 96 A. 921.

INTERVENING DAMAGES. See Damages.

INTERVENING FORCE. One which actively operates in producing harm to another after the actor's negligent act or omission has been committed. Walborn v. Epley, 148 Pa.Super. 417, 24 A.2d 668, 671; American Mut. Liability Ins. Co. v. Buckley & Co., C.C.A.Pa., 117 F.2d 845, 847.

INTERVENOR. An intervenor is a person who voluntarily interposes in an action or other proceeding with the leave of the court. Ladue v. Goodhead, 181 Misc. 807, 44 N.Y.S.2d 783, 787.

INTERVENTION. In international law. Intervention is such an interference between two or more states as may (according to the event) result in a resort to force; while mediation always is, and is intended to be and to continue, peaceful only. Intervention between a sovereign and his own subjects is not justified by anything in international law; but a remonstrance may be addressed to the sovereign in a proper case. Brown.

In English ecclesiastical law. The proceeding of a third person, who, not being originally a party to the suit or proceeding, but claiming an interest in the subject-matter in dispute, in order the better to protect such interest, interposes his claim. 2 Chit. Pr. 492; 3 Chit. Commer. Law, 633; 2 Hagg. Const. 137; 3 Phillim. Ecc. Law, 586; Stillwell Hotel Co. v. Anderson, 16 Cal.App.2d 636, 61 P.2d 71, 72,

In the civil law. The act by which a third party demands to be received as a party in a suit pending between other persons. Stillwell Hotel Co. v. Anderson, 16 Cal.App.2d 636, 61 P.2d 71, 73.

The intervention is made either for the purpose of being joined to the plaintiff, and to claim the same thing he does, or some other thing connected with it; or to join the defendant, and with him to oppose the claim of the plaintiff, which it is his interest to defeat. Poth. Proc. Civile, pt. 1, c. 2, § 7, no. 3.

In practice. A proceeding in a suit or action by which a third person is permitted by the court to make himself a party, either joining the plaintiff in claiming what is sought by the complaint, or uniting with the defendant in resisting the claims of the plaintiff, or demanding something adversely to both of them. Logan v. Greenlaw, C.C.Tenn., 12 F. 16; Fischer v. Hanna, 8 Colo.App. 471, 47 P. 303; Gale v. Frazier, 4 Dak. 196, 30 N.W. 138; Reay v. Butler, Cal., 7 P. 671; Gorham v. Hall, 172 Ark. 744, 290 S.W. 357, 358; Adler v. Seaman, C.C. A.Mo., 266 F. 828, 832; In re Prouty's Estate, 107 Vt. 496, 181 A. 134.

INTESTABILIS. Lat. A witness incompetent to testify. Calvin.

INTESTABLE. One who has not testamentary capacity; e. g., an infant, lunatic, or person civilly dead.

INTESTACY. The state or condition of dying without having made a valid will, or without having disposed by will of a part of his property. In re Shestack's Estate, 267 Pa. 115, 110 A. 166; Brown v. Mugway, 15 N.J.L. 331.

Besides the strict meaning of the word as above given, there is also a sense in which intestacy may be partial; that is, where a man leaves a will which does not dispose of his whole estate, he is said to "die intestate" as to the property so omitted.

INTESTATE. Without making a will. A person is said to die intestate when he dies without making a will, or dies without leaving anything to testify what his wishes were with respect to the disposal of his property after his death. The word is also often used to signify the person himself. Thus, in speaking of the property of a person who died intestate, it is common to say "the intestate's property;" e., the property of the person dying in an intestate condition. Brown. In re Cameron's Estate, 47 App.Div. 120, 62 N.Y.S. 187; Messmann v. Egenberger, 46 App.Div. 46, 61 N.Y.S. 556; Code Civ.Proc.N.Y. 1899, § 2514, subd. 1 (Surrogate's Court Act, § 314, subd. 1).

INTESTATE LAWS. Statutes which provide and prescribe the devolution of estates of persons who die without disposing of their estates by law, will or testament. Fullbright v. Boardman, 159 Ga. 162, 125 S.E. 44, 46, 37 A.L.R. 532; In re Rogers' Estate, Mo.Sup., 250 S.W. 576, 578; Ford v. U. S., C.C.A.N.Y., 205 F. 130, 134.

INTESTATE SUCCESSION. A succession is called "intestate" when the deceased has left no will, or when his will has been revoked or annulled as irregular. Therefore the heirs to whom a succession has fallen by the effects of law only are called "heirs ab intestato." Civ. Code La. art. 1096.

INTESTATO. Lat. In the civil law. Intestate; without a will. Calvin.

INTESTATUS. Lat. In the civil and old English law. An intestate; one who dies without a will. Dig. 50, 17, 7.

INTESTATUS DECEDIT, QUI AUT OMNIO TESTAMENTUM NON FECIT; AUT NON JURE FECIT; AUT ID QUOD FECERAT RUPTUM IRRITUMVE FACTUM EST; AUT NEMO EX EO HARES EXSTITIT. A person dies intestate who either has made no testament at all or has made one not legally valid; or if the testament he has made be revoked, or made useless; or if no one becomes heir under it. Inst. 3, 1, pr.

INTIMACY. As generally applied to persons, it is understood to mean a proper, friendly relation of the parties, but it is frequently used to convey the idea of an improper relation; an intimacy at least disreputable and degrading. Collins v. Pub. Co., 152 Pa. 187, 25 A. 546, 34 Am.St.Rep. 636. See McCarty v. Coffin, 157 Mass. 478, 32 N.E. 649.

INTIMATE. Close in friendship or acquaintance, familiar, confidential; also near, close, direct, thorough, complete. Atkins Corporation v. Tourny, 6 Ca1.2d 206, 57 P.2d 480, 484.

INTIMATION. In the civil law. A notification to a party that some step in a legal proceeding is asked or will be taken. Particularly, a notice given by the party taking an appeal, to the other party, that the court above will hear the appeal.

In Scotch law. A formal written notice, drawn by a notary, to be served on a party against whom a stranger has acquired a right or claim; e. g., the assignee of a debt must serve such a notice on the debtor, otherwise a payment to the original creditor will be good.

INTIMIDATION. Unlawful coercion; duress; putting in fear. Michaels v. Hillman, 112 Misc. 395, 183 N.Y.S. 195, 200; Kayser v. Fitzgerald, 109 Misc. 27, 178 N.Y.S. 130, 134; Burns v. Lackey, 171 Ky. 21, 186 S.W. 909, 913; Southwick v. State, 126 Ark. 188, 189 S.W. 843, 844; Shehany v. Lowry, 170 Ga. 70, 152 S.E. 114, 115.

INTIMIDATION OF VOTERS. This, by statute in several of the states, is made a criminal offense. Under an early Pennsylvania act, it was held that, to constitute the offense of intimidation of voters, there must be a preconceived intention for the purpose of intimidating the officers or interrupting the election. Respublica v. Gibbs, 3 Yeates, Pa., 429.

INTITLE. An old form of "entitle." 6 Mod. 304.

INTO. A preposition signifying to the inside of; within. It expresses entrance, or a passage from the outside of a thing to its interior, and follows verbs expressing motion. It has been held equivalent to, or synonymous with, "at," "inside of," and "to," and has been distinguished from the words "from" and "through." 48 C.J.S. p. 120.

INTOL and UTTOL. In old records. Toll or custom paid for things imported and exported, or bought in and sold out. Cowell.

INTOLERABLE CRUELTY. In the law of divorce, this term denotes extreme cruelty, cruel and inhuman treatment, barbarous, savage, and inhuman conduct, and is equivalent to any of those phrases. Shaw v. Shaw, 17 Conn. 193; Morehouse v. Morehouse, 70 Conn. 420, 39 A. 516; Blain v. Blain, 45 Vt. 544.

INTOXICATED. Affected by an intoxicant, under the influence of an intoxicating liquor. Taylor v. Joyce, 4 Cal.App.2d 612, 41 P.2d 967, 968.

INTOXICATING LIQUOR. Any liquor used as a beverage, and which, when so used in sufficient quantities, ordinarily or commonly produces entire or partial intoxication; any liquor intended for use as a beverage or capable of being so used, which contains alcohol, either obtained by fermentation or by the additional process of distillation, in such proportion that it will produqe intoxication when imbibed in such quantities as may practically be drunk. Intoxicating Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 767, 37 Am.Rep. 284; Com'rs v. Taylor, 21 N.Y. 173; People v. Hawley, 3 Mich. 339; State v. Oliver, 26 W.Va. 431, 53 Am.Rep. 79; Frisvold v. Leahy, 15 Ca1.App.2d 752, 60 P.2d 151, 153; Worley v. Spurgeon, 38 Iowa 465. See, also, Alcoholic Liquors.

INTOXICATION. The state of being poisoned; the condition produced by the administration or introduction into the human system of a poison. But in its popular use this term is restricted to alcoholic intoxication, that is, drunkenness or inebriety, or the mental and physical condition induced by drinking excessive quantities of alcoholic liquors, and this is its meaning as used in, statutes, indictments, etc. Sapp v. State, 116 Ga. 182, 42 S.E. 410; State v. Pierce, 65 Iowa 85, 21 N.W. 195; Wadsworth v. Dunnam, 98 Ala. 610, 13 So. 599; Ring v. Ring, 112 Ga. 854, 38 S.E. 330; State v. Kelley, 47 Vt. 296; Com. v. Whitney, 11 Cush., Mass., 477.

INTOXIMETER. A trade name for scientific breath testing device that operates on assumption that concentration of blood alcohol bears fixed relation to concentration of alcohol in the deep lung, or alveolar air. City of Sioux Falls v. Kohler, S.D., 118 N.W.2d 14.

INTRA. Lat. In; near; within. "Infra" or "inter" has taken the place of "intra" in many of the more modern Latin phrases.

INTRA ANNI SPATIUM. Within the space of a year. Cod. 5, 9, 2. Intra annale tempus. Id. 6, 30, 19.

INTRA FIDEM. Within belief; credible. Calvin.

INTRA QUATUOR MARIA. Within the four seas. Shep. Touch. 378.

INTRA FIRES. An act is said to be intra vires ("within the power") of a person or corporation when it is within the scope of his or its powers or authority. It is the opposite of ultra vires, (q. v.). Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Dodd, 115 Ky. 176, 72 S.W. 827.

INTRALIMINAL. In mining law, the term "intraliminal rights" denotes the right to mine, take, and possess all such bodies or deposits of ore as lie within the four planes formed by the vertical extension downward of the boundary lines of the claim; as distinguished from "extraliminal," or more commonly "extralateral," rights. Jefferson Min. Co. v. Anchoria-Leland Mill. & Min. Co., 32 Colo. 176, 75 P. 1073, 64 L.R.A. 925.

INTRAMURAL. Within the walls. The powers of a municipal corporation are "intramural" and "extramural"; the one being the powers exercised within the corporate limits, and the other being those exercised without. State v. Port of Astoria, 79 Or. 1, 154 P. 399, 404.

INTRARE MARISCUM. L. Lat. To drain a marsh or low ground, and convert it into herbage or pasture.

INTRASTATE COMMERCE. See Commerce.

INTRINSECUM SERVITIUM. Lat. Common and ordinary duties with the lord's court.

INTRINSIC EVIDENCE is that which is derived from a document without anything to explain it.

INTRODUCTION. The part of a writing which sets forth preliminary matter, or facts tending to explain the subject.

INTROMISSION. In Scotch law. The assumption of authority over another's property, either legally or illegally. The irregular intermeddling with the effects of a deceased person, which subjects the party to the whole debts of the deceased, is called "vitious intromission." Kames, Eq. b. 3, c. 8, § 2.

Necessary Intromission. That kind of intromission or interference where a husband or wife continues in possession of the other's goods after their decease, for preservation. Wharton.

In English law. Dealings in stock, goods, or cash of a principal coming into the hands of his agent, to be accounted for by the agent to his principal. Stewart v. McKean, 29 Eng.Law & Eq. 391.

INTRONISATION. In French ecclesiastical law. Enthronement. The installation of a bishop in his episcopal see.

INTRUDER. One who enters upon land without either right of possession or color of title. Miller v. McCullough, 104 Pa. 630; Russel v. Chambers, 43 Ga. 479. In a more restricted sense, a stranger who, on the death of the ancestor, enters on the land, unlawfully, before the heir can enter. Williams v. Alt, 226 N.Y. 283, 123 N.E. 499, 500. Also one who intrudes on office and assumes to exercise its functions without legal title or color of right thereto. State ex rel. City of Republic v. Smith, 345 Mo. 1158, 139 S.W.2d 929, 933; Alleger v. School Dist. No. 16, Newton County, Mo.App., 142 S.W.2d 660, 663.

INTRUSION. A species of injury by ouster or amotion of possession from the freehold, being an entry of a stranger, after a particular estate of freehold is determined, before him in remainder or reversion. Hulick v. Scovil, 9 Ill. 170; Boylan v. Deinzer, 45 N.J.Eq. 485, 18 A. 121.

The name of a writ brought by the owner of a fee-simple, etc., against an intruder. New Nat. Brev. 453. Abolished by 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 57.

INTRUST. To confer a trust upon; to deliver to another something in trust or to commit something to another with a certain confidence regarding his care, use or disposal of it. State v. Ugland, 48 N.D. 841, 187 N.W. 237, 239.

INTUITUS. Lat. A view; regard; contemplation. Diverso intuitu, (q. v.,) with a different view.

INUNDATION. The overflow of waters by coming out of their bed. See, also, Dam; Backwater; Irrigation; Waters; Water Course.

Inundations may arise from three causes : from public necessity, as in defence of a place it may be necessary to dam the current of a stream, which will cause an inundation to the upper lands; they may be occasioned by an invincible force, as by the accidental fall of a rock in the stream, or by a natural flood or freshet; or they may result from the erection of works on the stream. In the first case, the injury caused by the inundation is to be compensated as other injuries done in war; in the second, as there was no fault of any one, the loss is to be borne by the unfortunate owner of the estate; in the last, when the riparian proprietor is injured by such works as alter the level of the water where it enters or where it leaves the property on which they are erected, the person injured may recover ,damages for the injury thus caused to his property by the inundation, 9 Co. 59; 1 B. & Ald. 258; Sumner v. Tileston, 7 Pick., Mass., 198; Bailey v. City of New York, 3 Hill, N.Y., 531, 38 Am.Dec. 669; Tillotson v. Smith, 32 N.H. 90, 64 Am.Dec. 355; Merritt v. Parker, 1 N.J.L. 460; Williams v. Gale, 3 Har. & J., Md., 231; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Nuetzel, 43 Ill.App. 108.

INURE. To take effect; to result. Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 118 Iowa 234, 91 N.W. 1081; Hinson v. Booth, 39 Fla. 333, 22 So. 687; Holmes v. Tallada, 125 Pa. 133, 17 A. 238, 3 L.R.A. 219, 11 Am.St.Rep. 880; Salyer v. Jackson, 105 Okl. 212, 232 P. 412, 414; Malachowski v. Varro, 76 Cal.App. 207, 244 P. 936, 938.

INUREMENT. Use; user; service to the use or benefit of a person. Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U.S. 583, 25 L.Ed. 618.

INUTILIS LABOR ET SINE FRUCTU NON EST EFFECTUS LEGIS. Useless and fruitless labor is not the effect of law. Co. Litt. 127b. The law forbids such recoveries whose ends are vain, chargeable, and unprofitable. Id.; Wing. Max. p. 110, max. 38.

INVADIARE. To pledge or mortgage lands.

INVADIATIO. A pledge or mortgage.

INVADIATUS. One who is under pledge; one who has had sureties or pledges given for him. Spelman.

INVALID. Vain; inadequate to its purpose; not of binding force or legal efficacy; lacking in authority or obligation. Hood v. Perry, 75 Ga. 312; State v. Casteel, 110 Ind. 174, 11 N.E. 219; Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. v. Winne, 20 Mont. 20, 49 P. 446; Avery & Co. v. Sorrell, 157 Ga. 476, 121 S.E. 828, 829; Dreidlein v. Manger, 69 Mont. 155, 220 P. 1107, 1108; Columbian Nat. Fire Ins. Co. v. Dixie Co-op. Mail Order House, Tex.Civ.App., 261 S.W. 174, 179.

INVASION. An encroachment upon the rights of another; the incursion of an army for conquest or plunder. Webster. See /Etna Ins. Co. v. Boon, 95 U.S. 129, 24 L.Ed. 395.

INVASIONES. The inquisition of serjeanties and knights' fees. Cowell.

INVECTA ET ILLATA. Lat. In the civil law. Things carried in and brought in. Articles brought into a hired tenement by the hirer or tenant, and which became or were pledged to the lessor as security for the rent. Dig. 2, 14, 4, pr. The phrase is adopted in Scotch law. See Bell.

INVENIENS LIBELLUM FAMOSUM ET NON CORRUMPENS PUNITUR. He who finds a libel and does not destroy it is punished. Moore, 813.

INVENT. To find out something new; to devise, contrive, and produce something not previously known or existing, by the exercise of independent investigation and experiment; particularly applied to machines, mechanical appliances, compositions, and patentable inventions of every sort. To create. E. W. Bliss Co. v. United States, 248 U.S. 37, 39 S. Ct. 42, 43, 63 L.Ed. 112.

INVENTIO. In the Civil law. Finding; one of the modes of acquiring title to property by occupancy. Heinecc. lib. 2, tit. 1, § 350.

In Old English law. A thing found; as goods or treasure-trove. Cowell. The plural, "inventiones," is also used.

INVENTION. In patent law. The act or operation of finding out something new; the process of contriving and producing something not previously known or existing, by the exercise of independent investigation and experiment. Also the article or contrivance or composition so invented. Leidersdorf v. Flint, 15 Fed.Cas. 260; Smith v. Nichols, 21 Wall. 118, 22 L.Ed. 566; Hollister v. Manufacturing Co., 5 S.Ct. 717, 113 U.S. 72, 28 L. Ed. 901; Murphy Mfg. Co. v. Excelsior Car Roof Co., C.C.Mo., 70 F. 495.

A concept or thing evolved from the mind. "Invention" is not a revelation of something which existed and was unknown, but the creation of something which did not exist before, and possessing elements of novelty and utility in kind and measure different from, and greater than, what the art might expect from skilled workers. Pyrene Mfg. Co. v. Boyce, C.C.A.N.J., 292 F. 480, 481. The finding out—the contriving, the creating of something which did not exist, and was not known before, and which can be made useful and advantageous in the pursuits of life, or which can add to the enjoyment of mankind. Conover v. Roach, 4 Fish. 12. Fed.Cas.No.3,125. Not every improvement is invention; but to entitle a thing to protection it must be the product of some exercise of the inventive faculties. and it must involve something more than what is obvious to persons skilled in the art to which it relates. Rosenwasser v. Berry, C.C.Me., 22 F. 841. Mere adaptation of known process to clearly analogous use is not invention. Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. v. U. S. Rubber Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 79 F.2d 948. 952. 953.

"Invention" involves the exercise of the creative mind. Aeolian Co. v. Wanamaker, D.C., 221 F. 666, 668.

Inventive skill has been defined as that intuitive faculty of the mind put forth in the search for new results, or new methods, creating what had not before existed, or bringing to light what lay hidden from vision; it differs from a suggestion of that common experience which arose spontaneously and by a necessity of human reasoning in the minds of those who had become acquainted with the circumstances with which they had to deal. Hollister v. Mfg. Co., 113 U.S. 72, 5 S.Ct. 717, 28 L.Ed. 901. -Invention, in the nature of improvements, is the double mental act of discerning, in existing machines, processes or articles, some deficiency, and pointing out the means of overcoming it. General Electric Co. v. Electric Co., Ill., 174 F. 246, 98 C. C. A. 154.

An "invention" differs from a "discovery." The former term is properly applicable to the contrivance and production of something that did not before exist; while discovery denotes the bringing into knowledge and use of something which, although it existed, was before unknown. Thus, we speak of the "discovery" of the properties of light, electricity, etc., while the telescope and the electric motor are the results of the process of "invention."

For "Examination of invention", see Examination.

INVENTIONES. See Inventio.

INVENTOR. One who finds out or contrives some new thing; one who devises some new art, manufacture, mechanical appliance, or process; one who invents a patentable contrivance. Sparkman v. Higgins, 22 Fed.Cas. 879; Henderson v. Tompkins, C.C.Mass., 60 F. 764.

INVENTORY. A detailed list of articles of property; a list or schedule of property, containing a designation or description of each specific article; an itemized list of the various articles constituting a collection, estate, stock in trade, etc., with their estimated or actual values. In law, the term is particularly applied to such a list made by an executor, administrator, or assignee in bankruptcy. See Silver Bow Min. Co. v. Lowry, 5 Mont. 618, 6 P. 62; Lloyd v. Wyckoff, 11 N.J.Law, 224; Roberts, etc., Co. v. Sun Mut. L. Ins. Co., 48 S.W. 559, 19 Tex.Civ.App. 338; Southern F. Ins. Co. v. Knight, 111 Ga. 622, 36 S.E. 821, 52 L.R.A. 70, 78 Am.St.Rep. 216.

INVENTUS. Lat. Found. Thesaurus inventus, treasure-trove. Non est inventus, [he] is not found.

INVERITARE. To make proof of a thing. Jacob.

INVERSE ORDER OF ALIENATION DOCTRINE. Under this doctrine, mortgagee or other lienor, where land subject to lien has been aliened in separate parcels successively, shall satisfy his lien out of land remaining in grantor or original owner if possible, and, if that be insufficient, he shall resort to parcels aliened in inverse order of their alienation. Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York v. Massachusetts Mut. Life Ins. Co., C.C.A.N.C., 74 F.2d 881, 884.

INVEST. To loan money upon securities of a more or less permanent nature, or to place it in business ventures or real estate, or otherwise lay it out, so that it may produce a revenue or income. Drake v. Crane, 127 Mo. 85, 29 S.W. 990, 27 L.R.A. 653; Stramann v. Scheeren, 7 Colo.App. 1, 42 P. 191; Una v. Dodd, 39 N.J.Eq. 186.

To clothe one with the possession of a fief or benefice. See Investiture.

INVESTIGATION. To follow up step by step by patient inquiry or observation; to trace or track mentally; to search into; to examine and inquire into with care and accuracy; to find out by careful inquisition; examination; the taking of evidence; a legal inquiry. Lukert v. Eldridge, 49 Mont. 46, 139 P. 999, 1001; People ex rel. Fennell v. Wilmot, 217 N.Y.S. 477, 479, 127 Misc. 791. Application of Gilchrist, 130 Misc. 456, 224 N.Y.S. 210, 219.

INVESTITIVE FACT. The fact by means of which a right comes into existence; e. g., a grant of a monopoly, the death of one's ancestor. Holl. Jur. 132.

INVESTITURE. A ceremony which accompanied the grant of lands in the feudal ages, and consisted in the open and notorious delivery of possession in the presence of the other vassals, which perpetuated among them the sera of their new acquisition at the time when the art of writing was very little known; and thus the evidence of the property was reposed in the memory of the neighborhood, who, in case of disputed title, were afterwards called upon to decide upon it. Brown.

In Ecclesiastical law. Investiture is one of the formalities by which the election of a bishop is confirmed by the archbishop. See Phillim. Ecc. Law, 42, et seq.

INVESTMENT. The placing of capital or laying out of money in a way intended to secure income or profit from its employment. Securities & Exchange Commission v. Wickham, D.C.Minn., 12 F. Supp. 245, 247.

INVIOLABILITY. The attribute of being secured against violation. The persons of ambassadors are inviolable.

INVITATION. In the law of negligence, and with reference to trespasses on realty, invitation is the act of one who solicits or incites others to enter upon, remain in, or make use of, his property or structures thereon, or who so arranges the property or the means of access to it or of transit over it as to induce the reasonable belief that he expects and intends that others shall come upon it or pass over it. Sweeney v. Old Colony & N. R. Co., 10 Allen, Mass., 373, 87 Am.Dec. 644; Wilson v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co., 18 R.I. 491, 29 A. 258; Wright v. Boston & A. R. Co., 142 Mass. 300, 7 N.E. 866.

Thus the proprietor of a store, theatre or amusement park "invites" the public to come upon his premises for such purposes as are comiected with its intended use. Again, the fact that safety gates at a railroad crossing, which should be closed in case of danger, are left standing open, is an "invitation" to the traveler on the highway to cross. Roberts v. Delaware & H. Canal Co., 177 Pa. 183, 35 A. 723. So, bringing a passenger train on a railroad to a full stop at a regular station is an "invitation to alight."

License distinguished

A license Is a passive permission on the part of the owner of premises, with reference to other persons entering upon or using them, while an invitation implies a request, solicitation or desire that they should do so. An invitation may be inferred where there is a common interest or mutual advantage; while a license will be inferred where the object is the mere pleasure or benefit of the person using it. Bennett v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 102 U.S. 580, 26 L.Ed. 235; Weldon v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co., 2 Pennewill, Del., 1, 43 A. 159; Babcock and Wilcox Co. v. Nolton, 58 Nev. 131, 71 P.2d 1051, 1053. An owner owes to a licensee no duty as to the condition of the premises (unless imposed by statute) save that he should not knowingly let him run upon a hidden peril or willfully cause him harm; while to one invited he is under the obligation to maintain the premises in a reasonably safe and secure condition. Beehler v. Daniels, 18 R.I. 563, 29 A. 6, 27 L.R.A. 512, 49 Am.St.Rep. 790.

Express and implied

An invitation may be express, when the owner or occupier of the land by words invites another to come upon it or make use of it or of something thereon; or it may be implied when such owner or occupier by acts or conduct leads another to believe that the land or something thereon was intended to be used as he uses them, and that such use is not only acquiesced in by the owner or occupier, but is in accordance with the intention or design for which the way or place or thing was adapted and prepared and allowed to be used. Turess v. New York, S. & W. R. Co., 61 N.J.L. 314, 40 A. 614; Furey v. New York Cent. R. Co., 67 N.J.L. 270, 51 A. 505; Lepnick v. Gaddis, 72 Miss. 200, 16 So. 213, 26 L.R.A. 686, 48 Am.St.Rep. 547; Plummer v. Dill, 156 Mass. 426, 31 N.E. 128, 32 Am.St.Rep. 463; Wilmes v. Chicago Great Western Ry. Co., 175 Iowa, 101, 156 N.W. 877, 880, L.R.A.1917F, 1024; Gasch v. Rounds, 93 Wash. 317, 160 P. 962, 964; Coburn v. Village of Swanton, 95 Vt. 320, 115 A. 153, 156; Bush v. Weed Lumber Co., 63 Cal.App. 426, 218 P. 618, 620; Polluck v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 44 S.D. 249, 183 N.W. 859, 862.

INVITED ERROR. See Error,

INVITEE. One who is at a place upon the invitation of another. Crossgrove v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 30 Ga.App. 462, 118 S.E. 694, 695; Carr v. Wallace Laundry Co., 31 Idaho 266, 170 P. 107; Fleckenstein v. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., 91 N.J.L. 145, 102 A. 700, L.R.A.1918C, 179; Crossgrove v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 30 Ga. App. 462, 118 S.E. 694; Campbell v. Sutliff, 193 Wis. 370, 214 N.W. 374, 375, 53 A.L.R. 771; Moohr v. Victoria Inv. Co., 144 Wash. 387, 258 P. 43, 46; Holm v. Investment & Securities Co., 195 Wash. 52, 79 P.2d 708, 711.

INVITO. Lat. Being unwilling. Against or without the assent or consent.

Ab invito

INVOICE PRICE of goods means the prime cost. Le Roy v. United Ins. Co., 7 Johns., N.Y., 343. The cost or value of property at the shipping point. State v. Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, 222 Iowa 1209, 271 N.W. 185, 188.

In sale of retail stock of goods, this term ordinarily means wholesale cost at time goods were purchased by seller. Hamilton v. O'Rear, 224 Ala. 625, 141 So. 565, 567.

INVOLUNTARY. Without will or power of choice; opposed to volition or desire. Curry v. Federal Life Ins. Co., 221 Mo.App. 626, 287 S.W. 1053, 1056. An involuntary act is that which is performed with constraint (q. v.) or with repugnance, or without the will to do it. An action is involuntary, then, which is performed under duress. Wolff Inst. Nat. § 5.

As to involuntary "Bankruptcy," "Indebtedness," "Nonsuit," and "Trust," see those titles.

INVOLUNTARY DEPOSIT. In the law of bailments, one made by the accidental leaving or placing of personal property in the possession of another, without negligence on the part of the owner, or, in cases of fire, shipwreck, inundation, riot, insurrection, or the like extraordinary emergencies, by the owner of personal property commit. ting it out of necessity to the care of any person. Civ. Code S. D. 1903, § 1354 (Rev. Codes 1919, § 971).

INVOLUNTARY DISCONTINUANCE. In practice. A discontinuance is involuntary where, in consequence of technical omission, mispleading, or the like, the suit is regarded as out of court, as where the parties undertake to refer a suit that is not referable, or omit to enter proper continuances. Hunt v. Griffin, 49 Miss. 748.

INVOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER. The unlawful killing of a human being in the commission of an unlawful act not amounting to felony, or in the commission of a lawful act which might produce death in an unlawful manner, or without due caution and circumspection. State v. Goodwin, 189 La. 443, 179 So. 591, 602; Salyer v. Commonwealth, 165 Va. 744, 181 S.E. 435, 436.

INVOLUNTARY PAYMENT. One obtained by fraud, oppression, or extortion, or to avoid the use of force to coerce it, or to obtain the release of the person or property from detention. Parcher v. Marathon County, 52 Wis. 388, 9 N.W. 23, 38 Am.Rep. 745; Wolfe v. Marshal, 52 Mo. 168; Corkle v. Maxwell, 6 Fed.Cas. 555.

INVOLUNTARY SERVITUDE. The condition of one who is compelled by force, coercion, or imprisonment, and against his will, to labor for another, whether he is paid or not. See State v. West, 42 Minn. 147, 43 N.W. 845; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U.S. 417, 5 S.Ct. 935, 29 L.Ed. 89; Thompson v. Benton, 117 Mo. 83, 22 S.W. 863, 20 L.R.A. 462; In re Slaughterhouse Cases, 16 Wall. 69, 21 L.Ed. 394; Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 17 S.Ct. 326, 41 L.Ed. 715.

IOTA. The minutest quantity possible. Iota is the smallest Greek letter. The word "jot" is derived therefrom.

IPSZE LEGES CUPIUNT UT JURE REGANTUR. Co. Litt. 174. The laws themselves require that they should be governed by right.

IPSE. Lat. He himself; the same; the very person.

IPSE DIXIT. He himself said it; a bare assertion resting on the authority of an individual.

IPSISSIMIS VERBIS. In the identical words; opposed to "substantially." Townsend v. Jemison, 7 How. 719, 12 L.Ed. 880; Summons v. State, 5 Ohio St. 346.

IPSO FACTO. By the fact itself; by the mere fact. By the mere effect of an act or a fact. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Hayward, 248 Mo. 280, 154 S.W. 140, 141.

In English ecclesiastical law. A censure of excommunication in the ecclesiastical court, immediately incurred for divers offenses, after lawful trial.

IPSO JURE. By the law itself; by the mere operation of law. Calvin.

IPSWICH, DOMESDAY OF. The earliest extant record of any borough court with elective officers sitting regularly and administering a customary law of the sea. Black Book of Admiralty, Vol. II. It was abolished by 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76. Its twelve "capital portmen" were elected from the most fit, wealthy and discreet of the judges.

IRA FUROR BREVIS EST. Anger is a short insanity. Beardsley v. Maynard, 4 Wend., N.Y., 336, 355.

IRA MOTUS. Lat. Moved or excited by anger or passion. A term sometimes formerly used in the plea of son assault demesne. 1 Tidd, Pr. 645.

IRADE. A decree of the Sultan.

IRE AD LARGUM. Lat. To go at large; to escape; to be set at liberty.

IRENARCHA. In Roman law. An officer whose duties are described in Dig. 5, 4, 18, 7. See Id. 48, 3, 6; Cod. 10, 75. Literally, a peace-officer or magistrate.

IRON-SAFE CLAUSE. A common clause in policies of fire insurance, requiring the insured to preserve his books and inventory in an iron or fireproof safe, or in some secure place not exposed to a fire which would destroy the building. This provision casts on the insured the responsibility for the loss of books and records if due to the wrongful act or negligence of himself or his employees in failing to comply with the requirement. 45 C.J.S. p. 358.

IRRATIONAL. Unreasonable, foolish, absurd; a person may be irrational in such sense, and still not be insane in the legal sense. Lee v. State, 30 Okl.Cr. 14, 234 P. 654, 655.

IRRECUSABLE. A term used to indicate a certain class of contractual obligations recognized by the law which are imposed upon a person without his consent and without regard to any act of his own. They are distinguished from recusable obligations which are the result of a voluntary act on the part of a person on whom they are imposed by law. A clear example of an irrecusable obligation is the obligation imposed on every man not to strike another without some lawful excuse. A recusable obligation is based upon some act of a person bound, which is a condition precedent to the genesis of the obligation. These terms were first suggested by Prof. Wigmore in 8 Harv. Law Rev. 200. See Harr. Contr. 6.

IRREGULAR. Not according to rule; improper or insufficient, by reason of departure from the prescriber) course.

As to irregular "Deposit," "Indorsement," "Process," and "Succession," see those titles.

IRREGULAR JUDGMENT. One rendered contrary to the course and practice of the court. Duplin County v. Ezzell, 223 N.C. 531, 27 S.E.2d 448, 450.

IRREGULARITY. The doing or not doing that, in the conduct of a suit at law, which, conformably with the practice of the court, ought or ought not to be done. Doe ex dem. Cooper v. Harter, 2 Ind. 252. Violation or nonobservance of established rules and practices. The want of adherence to some prescribed rule or mode of proceeding; consisting either in omitting to do something that is necessary for the due and orderly conducting of a suit, or doing it in an unseasonable time or improper manner. Coulter v. Board of Com'rs of Bernalillo County, 22 N.M. 24, 158 P. 1086; Ex parte Davis, 118 Or. 693, 247 P. 809, 811; Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529, 2 P. 418; Hall v. Munger, 5 Lans., N.Y., 113; Corn Exch. Bank v. Blye, 119 N.Y. 414, 23 N.E. 805; Salter v. Hilgen, 40 Wis. 365; Turrill v. Walker, 4 Mich. 183. The technical term for every defect in practical proceedings, or the mode of conducting an action or defense, as distinguishable from defects in pleadings. 3 Chit. Gen. Pr. 509.

Not synonymous with illegality. City of Tampa v. Palmer, 89 Fla. 514, 105 So. 115, 117. "Irregularity" is a want of adherence to some prescribed rule or mode of proceeding, while "illegality" denotes a radical defect. United States v. Salomon, D.C.La., 231 F. 461, 463; U. S. v. Richmond, C.C.A.Pa., 17 F.2d 28, 32. "Illegality" in the assessment of a tax is a substantial defect contrary to law and leaving the proceeding with nothing to stand on, while an "irregularity" is a formal defect contrary only to the practice authorized by law, and relating rather to the manner of doing the act than to the act itself. Bunten v. Rock Springs Grazing Ass'n, 29 Wyo. 461, 215 P. 244, 254.

Under statutes authorizing the modification or setting aside of judgments, "irregularity" is some departure from the prescribed procedure in the trial, or in the determination of the action, not evidenced by a ruling or an order. Duncan v. Wilkins, 103 Okl. 221, 229 P. 801, 802; American Nat. Bank of Tucumcari v. Tarpley, 31 N.M. 667, 250 P. 18, 20. But under a statute providing for relief against an irregularity in obtaining a judgment, the term has no fixed legal meaning, and in every instance the question is one of fact, dependent upon the circumstances of each case. Nation v. Savely, 127 Okl. 117, 260 P. 32, 34.

Irregularity in the proceedings of the court, as used in a California statute pertaining to new trials, relates to matters occurring during the trial, and not after it. Diamond v. Superior Court of California in and for City and County of San Francisco, 189 Cal. 732, 210 P. 36, 37.

In Canon law. Any impediment which prevents a man from taking holy orders.

General

Legal Irregularity. An irregularity occurring in the course of some legal proceeding. A defect or informality which, in the technical view of the law, is to be accounted an irregularity.

IRRELEVANCY. The absence of the quality of relevancy, as in evidence or pleadings. The quality or state of being inapplicable or impertinent to a fact or argument.

Irrelevancy, in an answer, consists in statements which are not material to the decision of the case; such as do not form or tender any material issue. People v. McCumber, 18 N.Y. 321, 72 Am.Dec. 515; Walker v. Hewitt, 11 How.Prac., N.Y., 398; Carpenter v. Bell, 1 Rob., N.Y., 715; Smith v. Smith, 50 S.C. 54, 27 S.E. 545. See, also, Irrelevant.

IRRELEVANT. Not relevant; not relating or applicable to the matter in issue; not supporting the issue. Crump v. Lanham, 67 Okl. 33, 168 P. 43, 44. Evidence is irrelevant where it has no tendency to prove or disprove any issue involved. Malone v. State, 16 Ala.App. 185, 76 So. 469, 470.

IRRELEVANT ALLEGATION. One which has no substantial relation to the controversy between the parties to the suit, and which cannot affect the decision of the court. Wayte v. Bowker Chemical Co., 196 App.Div. 665, 187 N.Y.S. 276, 277; Commander Milling Co. v. Westinghouse Electric and Mfg. Co., C.C.A.Minn., 70 F.2d 469, 472; The test of any allegation being whether it tends to constitute a cause of action or a defense, Isaacs v. Solomon, 159 App.Div. 675, 144 N.Y.S. 876, 877.

An allegation is irrelevant, where the issue made by its denial has no effect upon the cause of action or no connection with the allegation. Germofert Mfg. Co. v. Castles, 97 S.C. 389, 81 S.E. 665, 666. In this connection, "redundant" is almost a synonym for "irrelevant." Plank v. Hopkins, 35 S.D. 243, 151 N.W. 1017, 1019.

IRRELEVANT ANSWER. See Answer.

IRREMOVABILITY. The status of a pauper in England, who cannot be legally removed from the parish or union in which he is receiving relief, notwithstanding that he has not acquired a settlement there. 3 Steph.Comm. 60. Thus a pauper who has resided in a parish during the whole of the preceding year is irremovable, in view of Stat. 28 and 29 Vict. c. 79, § 8.

IRREPARABLE DAMAGES. See Damages.

IRREPARABLE INJURY. See Injury.

IRREPLEVIABLE. That cannot be replevied or delivered on sureties. Spelled, also, "irreplevisable." Co. Litt. 145; 13 Edw. I. c. 2.

IRRESISTIBLE FORCE. A term applied to such an interposition of human agency as is, from its nature and power, absolutely uncontrollable; as the inroads of a hostile army. Story, Bailm. § 25; Noel Bros. v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., 16 La.App. 622, 133 So. 830, 832.

IRRESISTIBLE IMPULSE. Used chiefly in criminal law, this term means an impulse to commit an unlawful or criminal act which cannot be resisted or overcome by the patient because insanity or mental disease has destroyed the freedom of his will and his power of self-control and of choice as to his actions. McCarty v. Corn., 114 Ky. 620, 71 S.W. 658; State v. Knight, 95 Me. 467, 50 A. 276, 55 L.R.A. 373; Leache v. State, 22 Tex.App. 279, 3 S.W. 539, 58 Am.Rep. 638; State v. Peel, 23 Mont. 358, 59 P. 169, 75 Am.St.Rep. 529. And see Insanity.

IRREVOCABLE. Which cannot be revoked or recalled. Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Strong Mfg. Co., C.C.A.6, 124 F.2d 360, 363.

IRREVOCABLE LETTER. A confirmed irrevocable letter of credit, irrevocable letter, or a confirmed credit is a contract to pay on compliance with its terms, and needs no formal acknowledgment or acceptance other than is therein stated. Lamborn v. National Park Bank of New York, 240 N.Y. 520, 148 N.E. 664, 665.

IRRIGATION. The operation of watering lands for agricultural purposes by artificial means. In its primary sense, a sprinkling or watering; specifically, the application of water to lands for the raising of agricultural crops and other products of the soil. Platte Water Co. v. Irrigation Co., 12 Colo. 529, 21 P. 711; City and County of Denver v. Brown, 56 Colo. 216, 138 P. 44, 49.

IRRIGATION COMPANY. A private corporation, authorized and regulated by statute in several states, having for its object to acquire exclusive rights to the water of certain streams or other sources of supply, and to convey it by means of ditches or canals through a region where it can be beneficially used for agricultural purposes, and either dividing the water among stockholders, or making contracts with consumers, or furnishing a supply to all who apply at fixed rates.

IRRIGATION DISTRICT. A public and quasi-municipal corporation authorized by law in several states, comprising a defined region or area of land which is susceptible of one mode of irrigation from a common source and by the same system of works. These districts are created by proceedings in the nature of an election under the supervision of a court, and are authorized to purchase or condemn the lands and waters necessary for the system of irrigation proposed and to construct necessary canals and other works, and the water is apportioned ratably among the landowners of the district. Nampa & Meridian Irr. Dist. v. Briggs, 27 Idaho 84, 147 P. 75, 82.

IRRITANCY. In Scotch law. The happening of a condition or event by which a charter, contract, or other deed, to which a clause irritant is annexed, becomes void.

IRRITANT. In Scotch law. Avoiding or making void; as an irritant clause. See Irritancy.

IRRITANT CLAUSE. In Scotch law. A provision by which certain prohibited acts specified in a deed are, if committed, declared to be null and void. A resolutive clause dissolves and puts an end to the right of a proprietor on his committing the acts so declared void.

IRROGARE. Lat. In the civil law. To impose or set upon, as a fine. Calvin. To inflict, as a punishment. To make or ordain, as a law.

IRROTULATIO. L. Lat. An enrolling; a record.

IS. This word, although normally referring to the present, Cunningham v. Moser, 910k1. 44, 215 P. 758, 759; Jenkins v. First Nat. Bank, 73 Mont. 110, 236 P. 1085, 1087; often has a future meaning, but is not synonymous with "shall have been." State v. Jorgenson, 25 N.D. 539, 142 N.W. 450, 462, 49 L.R.A.,N.S., 67. It may have, however, a past signification, as in the sense of "has been." 48 C.J.S. p. 774.

IS QUI COGNOSCIT. Lat. The cognizor in a fine. Is cui cognoscitur, the cognizee.

ISM In Scotch law. The period of the termination of a tack or lease. 1 Bligh, 522.

ISLAND. A piece of land surrounded by water. Webber v. Pere Marquette Boom Co., 62 Mich. 626, 30 N.W. 469; Goff v. Cougle, 118 Mich. 307, 76 N.W. 489, 42 L.R.A. 161.

An island that arises in the bed of a stream usually first presents itself as a sand bar, Cox v. Arnold, 129 Mo. 337, 31 S. W. 592, 50 Am.St.Rep. 450; Glassell v. Hansen, 135 Cal. 547, 67 P. 964; Holman v. Hodges, 112 Iowa, 714, 84 N.W. 950, 58 L.R.A. 673, 84 Am.St.Rep. 367; a bar, before it will support vegetation of any kind, may become valuable for fishing, hunting, as a shooting park, for the harvest of ice, for pumping sand, etc. If further deposits of alluvion upon it would make it more valuable, the law of accretion should still apply, Fowler v. Wood, 73 Kan. 511, 85 P. 763, 6 L.R.A.,N.S., 162, 117 Am.St.Rep. 534. Land in a navigable stream which is surrounded by water only in times of high water is not an island within the rule that the state takes title to newly formed islands in navigable streams. Payne v. Hall, 192 Iowa, 780, 185 N.W. 912, 915.

ISOLATED TRANSACTION. This term, in connection with the rule that single or isolated transactions do not violate a statute prohibiting foreign corporations from doing business within a state without first filing a copy of their charter, may be inapplicable to a single transaction consummated in furtherance of a corporation's business, where it is shown that the corporation in question is a foreign corporation, with its principal office in a town in a sister state near the state line, and that it has solicited business generally in tributary territory within the adjoining state. Dahl Implement & Lumber Co. v. Campbell, 45 N.D. 239, 178 N.W. 197, 198.

ISSEI, Jap. A term used to describe alien Japanese residing in the United States. 1945 Report of the Tenney Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities to the California Legislature p. 48.

ISSINT. A law French term, meaning "thus," "so," giving its name to part of a plea in debt. A term formerly used to introduce a statement that special matter already pleaded amounts to a denial.

An example of this form of plea, which is sometimes called the special general issue, occurs in Bauer v. Roth, 4 Rawle, Pa., 83.

ISSUABLE. In practice. Leading or tending to, or producing, an issue; relating to an issue or issues. See Colquitt v. Mercer, 44 Ga. 433.

ISSUABLE DEFENSE. A technical expression meaning a plea to the merits, properly setting forth a legal defense, as distinguished from a plea in abatement, or any plea going only to delay the case. Adamson v. Reagin, 143 Ga. 306, 84 S. E. 965.

ISSUABLE PLEA. A plea to the merits; a traversable plea. A plea such that the adverse party can join issue upon it and go to trial. It is true a plea in abatement is a plea, and, if it be properly pleaded, issues may be found on it. In the ordinary meaning of the word "plea," and of the word "issuable," such pleas may be called "issuable pleas," but, when these two words are used together, "issuable plea," or "issuable defense," they have a technical meaning, to-wit, pleas to the merits. Colquitt v. Mercer, 44 Ga. 434.

ISSUABLE TERMS. In the former practice of the English courts, Hilary term and Trinity term were called "issuable terms," because the issues to be tried at the assizes were made up at those terms. 3 Bl.Comm. 353. But the distinction is superseded by the provisions of the judicature acts of 1873 and 1875.

ISSUE, v. To send forth; to emit; to promulgate; as, an officer issues orders, process issues from a court. To put into circulation; as, the treasury issues notes. To send out, to send out officially; to deliver, for use, or authoritatively; to go forth as authoritative or binding. Stokes v. Paschall, Tex.Civ.App., 243 S.W. 611, 614; Blythe v. Doheny, C.C.A.Cal., 73 F.2d 799, 803.

A writ is "issued" when it is delivered to an officer, with the intent to have it served, Wilkins v. Worthen, 62 Ark. 401, 36 S.W. 21; Michigan Ins. Bk. v. Eldred, 130 U.S. 693, 9 S.Ct. 690, 32 L.Ed. 1080; Webster v. Sharpe, 116 N.C. 466, 21 S.E. 912; Ferguson v. Estes & Alexander, Tex.Civ. App., 214 S.W. 465, 466.

When used with reference to a writ of error, State v. Brown, 103 N.J.L. 519, 138 A. 370 ; a writ of scire facias, In re Johns' Estate, 253 Pa. 532, 98 A. 719, 720; a writ of attachment, McMaster v. Ruby, 80 Or. 476, 157 P. 782, 784; corporate stock, Cattlemen's Trust Co. of Fort Worth v. Turner, Tex.Civ.App., 182 S.W. 438, 441; a bond, Klutts v. Jones, 20 N.M. 230, 148 P. 494, 499; Travis v. First Nat. Bank, 210 Ala. 620, 98 So. 890, 891; Steinbruck v. Milford Tp., 100 Kan. 93, 163 P. 647; State v. School Board of Tecumseh Rural High School Dist. No. 4, 110 Kan. 779, 204 P. 742, 744; a deed, Wyman v. Hageman, 318 Ill. 64, 148 N.E. 852, 855; a note, Foster v. Security Bank & Trust Co., Tex.Com.App., 288 S.W. 438, 440; an insurance policy, Coleman v. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co., 236 Mass. 552, 129 N.E. 288, 289; National Liberty Ins. Co. v. Norman, C.C.A.N.C., 11 F.2d 59, 61; and the like, the term is ordinarily construed as importing delivery to the proper person, or to the proper officer for service, etc. But it does not invariably have such a meaning. Estabrook & Co. v. Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore, 122 Md. 643, 90 A. 523, 524.

In financial parlance the term "Issue" seems to have two phases of meaning. "Date of issue" when applied to notes, bonds, etc., of a series, usually means the arbitrary date fixed as the beginning of the term for which they run, without reference to the precise time when convenience or the state of the market may permit of their sale or delivery. When the bonds are delivered to the purchaser, they will be "Issued" to him, which is the other meaning of the term. Turner v. Roseberry Irr. Dist., 33 Idaho, 746, 198 P. 465, 467. See, also, Anderson v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, 164 Cal. 712, 130 P. 726, 727, Ann.Cas.1914B, 903.

ISSUE, n. The act of issuing, sending forth, emitting or promulgating; the giving a thing its first inception; as the issue of an order or a writ.

Pleading

A single, certain, and material point, deduced by the pleadings of the parties, which is affirmed on the one side and denied on the other. Whitney v. Borough of Jersey Shore, 266 Pa. 537, 109 A. 767, 769; Village of Oak Park v. Eldred, 265 Ill. 605, 107 N.E. 145, 146. A single certain and material point arising out of the allegations of the parties, and it should generally be made up of an affirmative and a negative. Cowen Co. v. Houck Mfg. Co.,

C.C.A.N.Y., 249 F. 285, 287; Simmons v. Hagner, 140 Md. 248, 117 A. 759, 760. A fact put in controversy by the pleadings. Shea v. Hillsborough Mills, 78 N.H. 57, 96 A. 293, 294.

The disputed point or question to which the parties in an action have narrowed their several allegations, and upon which they are desirous of obtaining the decision of the proper tribunal. When the plaintiff and defendant have arrived at some specific point or matter affirmed on the one side, and denied on the other, they are said to be at issue. Knaggs v. Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co., C.C.A.Ohio, 287 F. 314, 316; First Nat. Bank v. District Court of Hardin County, 193 Iowa, 561, 187 N.W. 457, 458. (But as used in a rule of. court, a case is not "at issue" where nothing but a demurrer has been filed, presenting no issue except a question of law as to the sufficiency of the complaint. Arnett v. Hardwick, 27 Ariz. 179, 231 P. 922, 923.) The question so set apart is called the "issue," and is designated, according to its nature, as an "issue in fact" or ah "issue in law " Brown ; Martin v. City of Columbus, 101 Ohio St. 1, 127 N.E. 411, 413.

Issues arise upon the pleadings, when a fact or conclusion of law is maintained by the one party and controverted by the other. They are of two kinds : (1) of law; and (2) of fact. Rev.Code Iowa 1880, § 2737 (Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 176); Code Civ.Proc.Cal. § 588; Comp.St. Wyo.1910, § 4451 (Rev.St.1931, § 89-1202); Berglar v. University City, Mo.App., 190 S.W. 620, 622; General Electric Co. v. Sapulpa & I. Ry. Co., 49 Okl. 376, 153 P. 189, 193.

The entry of the pleadings. 1 Chitty, P1. 630.

Issues are classified and distinguished as follows:

General and special. The former is a plea which traverses and denies, briefly and in general and summary terms, the whole declaration, indictment, or complaint, without tendering new or special matter. Steph. Pl. 155; Tilden v. E. A. Stevenson & Co., 3 W.W.Harr. 151, 132 A. 739, 740; McAllister v. State, 94 Md. 290, 50 A. 1046; Standard Loan & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Thornton, 97 Tenn. 1, 40 S.W. 136. Examples of the general issue are "not guilty," "non assumpsit," "nil debet," "non est factum." The latter is formed when the defendant chooses one single material point, which he traverses, and rests his whole case upon its determination.

Identical. Issues determined by same questions of fact and of law. Allbee v. Elms, 93 N.H. 202, 37 A.2d 790, 791.

Material and immaterial. They are so described according as they do or do not bring up some material point or question which, when determined by the verdict, will dispose of the whole merits of the case, and leave no uncertainty as to the judgment. Pearson v. Pearson, 104 Misc. 675, 173 N.Y. S. 563, 565.

Formal and informal. The former species of issue is one framed in strict accordance with the technical rules of pleading. The latter arises when the material allegations of the declaration are traversed, but in an inartificial or untechnical mode. In the latter case, the defect is cured by verdict, by the statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 30.

A collateral issue is an issue taken upon matter aside from the intrinsic merits of the action, as upon a plea in abatement; or aside from the direct and regular order of the pleadings, as on a demurrer. 2 Archb. Pr. K. B. 1, 6, bk. 2, pts. 1, 2; Strickland v. Maddox, 4 Ga. 394. The term "collateral" is also applied in England to an issue raised upon a plea of diversity of person, pleaded by a criminal who has been tried and convicted, in bar of execution, viz., that he is not the same person who was attainted, and the like. 4 Bl. Comm. 396. Matters collateral to the main issue are those which do not constitute an essential element of the offense embraced within the charge. State v. English, 308 Mo. 695, 274 S.W. 470, 474.

Real or feigned. A real or actual issue is one formed in a regular manner in a regular suit for the purpose of determining an actual controversy. A feigned issue is one made up by direction of the court, upon a supposed case, for the purpose of obtaining the verdict of a jury upon some question of fact collaterally involved in the cause. Such issues are generally ordered by a court of equity, to ascertain the truth of a disputed fact. They are also used in courts of law, by the consent of the parties, to determine some disputed rights without the formality of pleading; and by this practice much time and expense are saved in the decision of a cause. 3 Bla.Comm. 452. The name is a misnomer, inasmuch as the issue itself is upon a real, material point in question between the parties, and the circumstances only are fictitious.

Common issue is the name given to the issue raised by the plea of non est factum to an action for breach of covenant.

Ultimate issue signifies either such an issue as within itself is sufficient and final for the disposition of the entire case or one which in connection with other issues will serve such end. First State Bank of Seminole v. Dillard, Tex.Civ.App., 71 S. W.2d 407, 410.

This is so called because it denies the deed only, and not the breach, and does not put the whole declaration in issue, and because there is no general issue to this form of action. 1 Chitty, P1. 482; Gould, Pl. c. 6, pt. 1, 1 7.

Realty Law

Descendants. All persons who have descended from a common ancestor. Edmundson v. Leigh, 189 N.C. 196, 126 S.E. 497, 499, Offspring; progeny; descent; lineage; lineal descendants. Gardner v. Anderson, 114 Kan. 778, 227 P. 743, 747; In re Schuster's Will, 111 Misc. 534, 181 N.Y.S. 500, 503; Wilkins v. Rowan, 107 Neb. 180, 185 N.W. 437, 439; Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. v. Bridgham, 42 R.I. 161, 106 A. 149, 153, 5 A.L.R. 185; Hoadley v. Beardsley, 89 Conn. 270, 93 A. 535, 538; Turner v. Monteiro, 127 Va. 537, 103 S.E. 572, 575, 13 A.L.R. 383; In re Book's Will, 89 N.J.Eq. 509, 105 A. 878, 879; 3 Ves. 257; 17 Ves. 481; 19 Ves. 547; 1 Rop. Leg. 90.

In this sense, the word includes not only a child or children, but all other descendants in whatever degree; and it is so construed generally in deeds. But, when used in wills, it is, of course, subject to the rule of construction that the intention of the testator, as ascertained from the will, is to have effect, rather than the technical meaning of the language used by him; and hence issue may, in such a connection, be restricted to children, or to descendants living at the death of the testator, where such an intention clearly appears. Abbott; Sibley v. Perry, 7 Ves.Jun. 523, 529; Ralph v. Carrick, 11 Ch.D. 873, 883; Barmore v. Darragh, Tex.Civ.App., 231 S.W. 472, 479; Newcomb v. Newcomb, 197 Ky. 801, 248 S.W. 198, 200; Horner v Haase, 177

Iowa 115, 158 N.W. 548, 549; In re Rynear's Estate, 224 N.Y.S. 606, 607, 130 Misc. 804.

The word "issue" in a will is generally a word of limitation, In re Packer's Estate, 246 Pa. 116, 92 A. 70, 74; Baxter v. Early, 131 S.C. 374, 127 S.E. 607; Bonnycastle v. Lilly, 153 Ky. 834, 156 S.W. 874, L.R.A.1916B, 1076; and when so used, is sometimes said to be equivalent to "heirs of the body" ; Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. v. Bridgham, 42 R.I. 161, 106 A. 149, 152, 5 A.L.R. 185; Parrish v. Hodges, 178 N.C. 133, 100 S.E. 256; Middletown Trust Co. v. Gaffey, 96 Conn. 61, 112 A. 689, 690. But it has been pointed out in other cases that this word is not as strong 'a word of limitation as the words "heirs of the body," Adams v. Verner, 102 S.C. 7, 86 S.E. 211, 214; City Nat. Bank v. Slocum, C.C.A.Ohio, 272 F. 11, 18; and yields readily to a context indicating its use as a word of purchase, Stout v. Good, 245 Pa. 383, 91 A. 613, 615; Eversmeyer v. McCollum, 171 Ark. 117, 283 S.W. 379, 382; Ford v. McBrayer, 171 N. C. 420, 88 S.E. 736, 737; Yarrington v. Freeman, 201 Ky. 135, 255 S.W. 1034.

The word is commonly held to include only legitimate issue. Page v. Roddie, 92 Okl. 236, 218 P. 1092, 1095; King v. Thissell, 222 Mass. 140, 109 N.E. 880; Hardesty v. Mitchell, 302 369, 134 N.E. 745, 746, 24 A.L.R. 565; Love v. Love, 179 N.C. 115, 101 S.E. 562, 563; contra: Eaton v. Eaton, 88 Conn. 286, 91 A. 196, 198.

Business Law

A class or series of bonds, debentures, etc., comprising all that are emitted at one and the same time.

ISSUE IN FACT. In pleading. An issue taken upon or consisting of matter of fact, the fact only, and not the law, being disputed, and which is to be tried by a jury. 3 Bl.Comm. 314, 315; Co. Litt. 126a; 3 Steph.Comm. 572. An issue which arises upon a denial in the answer of a material allegation of the complaint or in the reply of a material allegation in the answer. Rev. Codes, Mont. § 6793 (Rev. Code 1921, § 9395). See, also, Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 590; Comp. St. Wyo. 1910, § 4452 (Rev. St. 1931, § 89-1203).

The "issues of fact" which, if presented by the pleadings and supported by evidence, must be submitted to the jury, where requested, are only the independent ultimate facts which go to make up plaintiff's cause of action and defendant's ground of defense. Texas City Transp. Co. v. Winters, Tex.Com.App., 222 S.W. 541, 542.

ISSUE IN LAW. In pleading. An issue upon matter of law, or consisting of matter of law, being produced by a demurrer on the one side, and a joinder in demurrer on the other. 3 Bl.Comm. 314; 3 Steph.Comm. 572, 580; Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 589. The term "issue" may be so used as to include one of law raised by demurrer to the complaint, as well as one raised by answer. Fruth v. Bolt, 39 S.D. 371, 164 N.W. 270, 271.

ISSUE ROLL. In English practice. A roll upon which the issue in actions at law was formerly required to be entered, the roll being entitled of the term in which the issue was joined. 2 Tidd Pr. 733. It was not, however, the practice to enter the issue at full length, if triable by the country, until after the trial, but only to make an incipitur on the roll. Id. 734. It was abolished by the rules of Hilary Term, 1834. Moz. & W. Diet.

ISSUES. In English law. The goods and profits of the lands of a defendant against whom a writ of distringas or distress infinite has been issued, taken by virtue of such writ. 3 Bl.Comm. 280; 1 Chit. Crim. Law, 351.

ISSUES AND PROFITS, as applied to real estate, comprehend every available return therefrom, whether it arise above or below the surface. Minner v. Minner, 84 W.Va. 679, 100 S.E. 509, 510.

ISSUES ON SHERIFFS. Fines and amercements inflicted on sheriffs for neglects and defaults, levied out of the issues and profits of their lands. Toml.

ISTIMRAR. Continuance; perpetuity; especially a farm or lease granted in perpetuity by government or a zemindar (q. v.). Wilson's Gloss; Ind.

ISTIMRARDAR. The holder of a perpetual lease. Moz. & W,

ITA EST. Lat. So it is; so it stands. In modern civil law, this phrase is a form of attestation added to exemplifications from a notary's register when the same are made by the successor in office of the notary who made the original entries.

ITA LEX SCRIPTA EST. Lat. So the law is written. Dig. 40, 9, 12; Allen v. Cook, 26 Barb., N.Y., 374, 380; Hemphill's Appeal, 18 Pa. 306; Monson v. Chester, 22 Pick., Mass., 389. The law must be obeyed notwithstanding the apparent rigor of its application. 3 Bl.Comm. 430. We must be content with the law as it stands, without inquiring into its reasons. 1 Bl.Comm. 32.

ITA QUOD. Lat. In Old Practice. So that. Formal words in writs. Ita quod habeas corpus, so that you have the body. 2 Mod. 180. The name of the stipulation in a submission to arbitration which begins with the words "so as [ita quod] the award be made of and upon the premises."

In Old Conveyancing. So that. An expression which, when used in a deed, formerly made an estate upon condition. Litt. § 329. Sheppard enumerates it among the three words that are most proper to make an estate conditional. Shep. Touch. 121, 122.

ITA SEMPER FIAT RELATIO UT VALEAT DISPOSITIO. 6 Coke, 76. Let the interpretation be always such that the disposition may prevail.

ITA TE DEUS ADJUVET. Lat. So help you God. The old form of administering an oath in England, generally in connection with other words, thus: Ita te Deus adjuvet, et sacrosancta Dei Evangelia, So help you God, and God's holy Evangelists. Ita te Deus adjuvet et omnes sancti, So help you God and all the saints. Willes, 338.

ITA UTERE TUO UT ALIENUM NON LIEDAS. Use your own property and your own rights in such a way that you will not hurt your neighbor, or prevent him from enjoying his. Frequently written, "Sic utere tuo," etc. (q. v.).

ITEM. Also; likewise; in like manner; again; a second time. This word was formerly used to mark the beginning of a new paragraph or division after the first, whence is derived the common application of it to denote a separate or distinct particular of an account or bill. Horwitz v. Norris, 60 Pa. 282; Baldwin v. Morgan, 73 Miss. 276, 18 So. 919; Callaghan v. Boyce, 17 Ariz. 433, 153 P. 773, 782; Innis, Pearce & Co. v. G. H. Poppenberg, Inc., 210 N.Y.S. 761, 762, 213 App.Div. 789, One of the portions, equal or unequal, into which anything is divided, or regarded as divided; something less than a whole; a number, quantity, mass, or the like, regarded as going to make up, with others or another, a larger number, quantity, mass, etc., whether actually separate or not; a piece, fragment, fraction, member, or constituent. State ex rel. Wisconsin Telephone Co. v. Henry, 218 Wis. 302, 260 N.W. 486, 99 A.L.R. 1267. An article; a single detail of any kind. Board of Education of Prince George's County v. County Com'rs of Prince George's County, 131 Md. 658, 102 A. 1007, 1010. A separate entry in an account or a schedule, or a separate particular in an enumeration of a total. People v. Brady, 277 Ill. 124, 115 N.E. 204, 206.

The word is sometimes used as a verb. "The whole [costs] in this case that was thus itemed to counsel." Bunb. p. 164, case 233.

An "item" in an appropriation bill is an indivisible sum of money dedicated to a stated purpose. Commonwealth v. Dodson, 176 Va. 281, 11 S.E.2d 120, 124, 125, 127, 130, 131.

ITEMIZE. To set down by items. People v. Lowden, 285 Ill. 618, 121 N.E. 188. To state each item or article separately. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Walker, Tex.Civ.App., 153 S.W. 398, 400. Used almost entirely with reference to accounts. J. F. Rappell Co. v. City of Manitowoc, 182 Wis. 141, 195 N.W. 399, 401; Banner Oil & Gas Co. v. Gordon, Tex.Civ.App., 235 S.W. 945, 948; Dorough v. Reliance Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 289 S.W. 703, 704; Board of Education of Prince George's County v. County Com'rs of Prince George's County, 131 Md. 658, 102 A. 1007, 1010; Lewis v. National Fire Ins. Underwriters, 136 Miss. 576, 101 So. 296, 297.

ITER. Lat.

In the Civil law. A way; a right of way belonging as a servitude to an estate in the country, (prcedium rusticum.) The right of way was of three kinds: (1) iter, a right to walk, or ride on horseback, or in a litter; (2) actus, a right to drive a beast or vehicle; (3) via, a full right of way, comprising right to walk or ride, or drive beast or carriage. Heinec. § 408. Or, as some think, they were distinguished by the width of the objects which could be rightfully carried over the way; e. g., via, 8 feet; actus, 4 feet, etc. Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 290; Bract. fol. 232; 4 Bell, H. L. Sc. 390.

In old English law. A journey, especially a circuit made by a justice in eyre, or itinerant justice, to try causes according to his own mission. Du Cange; Bract. lib. 3, cc. 11, 12, 13.

In Maritime law. A way or route. The route or direction of a voyage; the route or way that is taken to make the voyage assured. Distinguished from the voyage itself.

ITER EST JUS EUNDI, AMBULANDI HOMINIS; NON ETIAM JUMENTUM AGENDI VEL VEHICULUM. A. way is the right of going or walking, and does not include the right of driving a beast of burden or a carriage. Co. Litt. 56a; Inst. 2, 3, pr.; Mackeld. Rom. Law, § 318.

ITERATIO. Lat. Repetition. In the Roman law, a bonitary owner might liberate a slave, and the quiritary owner's repetition (iteratio) of the process effected a complete manumission. Brown.

ITINERA. Eyres, or circuits. 1 Reeve, Eng. Law, 52.

ITINERANT. Wandering; traveling; applied to justices who make circuits. Also applied in various statutory and municipal laws (in the sense of traveling from place to place) to certain classes of merchants, traders, and salesmen. Shiff v. State, 84 Ala. 454, 4 So. 419; Twining v. Elgin, 38 Ill.App. 357; Rev.Laws Mass. 1902, p. 595, c. 65, § 1 (Gen. Laws, c. 101, § 1) ; West v. Mt. Sterling, Ky., 65 S.W. 122.

ITINERANT PEDDLING. The going about of a merchant from place to place, meeting and dealing with his customers where he finds them. Good Humor Corporation v. City of New York, 264 App.Div. 620, 36 N.Y.S.2d 85, 91.

ITINERANT VENDOR. This term is variously defined in statutes; e. g., a person engaged in transient business either in one locality or in traveling from place to place selling goods, who, for the purpose of carrying on such business, sells goods at retail from a car. Rev. St. Me. c. 45, § 15 (Rev.St.1930, c. 46, § 25). See, also, Laws Mont. 1911, c. 110, § 1; St. Cal. 1903, p. 284, § 3.

ITS. This term does not necessarily import legal ownership, but may signify merely possession, or the temporary use of. Campbell v. Canadian Northern Ry. Co., 124 Minn. 245, 144 N.W. 772, IULE. In old English law. Christmas.

J

J. The initial letter of the words "judge" and "justice," for which it frequently stands as an abbreviation. Thus, "J. A.," judge advocate; "J. J.," junior judge; "L. J.," law judge; "P. J.," president judge; "F. J.," first judge; "A. J.," associate judge; "C. J.," chief justice or judge; "J. P.," justice of the peace; "JJ.," judges or justices; "J. C. P.," justice of the common pleas; "J. K. B.," justice of the king's bench; "J. Q. B.," justice of the queen's bench; "J. U. B.," justice of the upper bench.

This letter is sometimes used for "I," as the initial letter of "Institutiones," in references to the Institutes of Justinian.

JAC. An abbreviation for "Jacobus," the Latin form of the name James; used principally in citing statutes enacted in the reigns of the English kings of that name; e. g., "St. 1 Jac. II." Used also in citing the second part of Croke's reports; thus, "Cro. Jac." denotes "Croke's reports of cases in the time of James I."

JACENS. Lat. Lying in abeyance, as in the phrase "hcereditas jacens," which is an inheritance or estate lying vacant or in abeyance prior to the ascertainment of the heir or his assumption of the succession.

JACENS ILEREDITAS. See Hwreditas Jacens.

JACET IN ORE. Lat. In old English law. It lies in the mouth. Fleta, lib. 5, c. 5, § 49.

JACK. A kind of defensive coat-armor worn by horsemen in war; not made of solid iron, but of many plates fastened together. Some tenants were bound by their tenure to find it upon invasion. Cowell.

JACOB'S LADDER. A ladder with sides of rope and with wooden steps, frequently used on shipboard. Maloney v. Cunard S. S. Co., 217 N.Y. 278, 111 N.E. 835, 836.

JACOBUS. A gold coin an inch and three-eighths in diameter, in value about twenty-five shillings, so called from James I., in whose reign it was first coined. It was also called broad, laurel, and broad-piece. Its value is sometimes put at twenty-four shillings, but Macaulay speaks of a salary of eight thousand Jacobuses as equivalent to ten thousand pounds sterling. Hist. Eng. ch. xv.

JACTITATION. Boasting of something which is challenged by another. Moz. & W. A false boasting; a false claim; assertions repeated to the prejudice of another's right.

The species of defamation or disparagement of another's title to real estate known at common law as "slander of title" comes under the head of jactitation, and in some jurisdictions (as in Louisiana) a remedy for this injury is provided under the name of an "action of jactitation."

The action in jactitation of title is governed by the rules prescribed by the Code of Practice, under the title, "Possessory Actions," and differs materially from the common-law action of slander of title. Bill v. Saunders, 139 La. 1037, 72 So. 727, 729.

In medical jurisprudence. Involuntary convulsive muscular movement; restless agitation or tossing of the body to and fro. Leman V. Insurance Co., 46 La.Ann. 1189, 15 So. 388, 24 L.R.A. 589.

Jactitation of a right to a church sitting appears to be the boasting by a man that he has a right or title to a pew or sitting in a church to which he has legally no title.

Jactitation of marriage. In English ecclesiastical law. The boasting or giving out by a party that he or she is married to some other, whereby a common reputation of their matrimony may ensue. To defeat that result, the person may be put to a proof of the actual marriage, failing which proof, he or she is put to silence about it. 3 Bl. Comm. 93. The Scotch suit of a declarator of putting to silence is equivalent to jactitation of marriage.

Jactitation of tithes is the boasting by a man that he is entitled to certain tithes, to which he has legally no title. Rog. Ecc. L. 482.

JACTIVUS. Lost by default; tossed away. Cowell.

JACTURA. In the civil law. A throwing of goods overboard in a storm; jettison. Loss from such a cause. Calvin.

JACTUS. A throwing goods overboard to lighten or save the vessel, in which case the goods so sacrificed are a proper subject for general average. Dig. 14, 2, "de lege Rhodia de Jactu;" Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. 303, 13 L.Ed. 417.

JACTUS LAPILLI. The throwing down of a stone. One of the modes, under the civil law, of interrupting prescription. Where one person was building on another's ground, and in this way acquiring a right by usucapio, the true owner challenged the intrusion and interrupted the prescriptive right by throwing down one of the stones of the building before witnesses called for the purpose. Tray. Lat. Max.

JAIL. A gaol; a prison; a building designated by law, or regularly used, for the confinement of persons held in lawful custody. State v. Bryan, 89 N.C. 534; Adle v. Herald Co., Sup., 36 N.Y.S.2d 905, 907. See Gaol.

A "jail" is therefore distinguishable both in Taw and in common understanding from a temporary place of detention, like a police station or lockup. People ex rel. Murphy v. Holcomb, 181 N.Y.S. 780, 783, 111 Misc. 460. While the primary function of a "jail" is a place of detention for persons committed thereto, under sentence of a court, it is also the proper and usual place where persons under arrest or awaiting trial are kept until they appear in court and the charge is disposed of. Grab v. Lucas, 156 Wis. 504, 146 N.W. 504, 505.

JAIL DELIVERY. See Gaol,

JAIL LIBERTIES. See Gaol.

JAILER. A keeper or warden of a prison or jail. Lefman v. Schuler, 317 Mo. 671, 296 S.W. 808, 814.

JAKE. A low colloquialism applied to liquor reputed to be composed of a mixture of Jamaica ginger and some other beverage or beverages. Skelton v. State, 31 Okl.Cr. 343, 239 P. 189, 190.

JAMB. A side post or side of a doorway, window, opening, or fire place; a side or vertical piece of any opening or aperture in a wall which helps to bear an overhead member. Superior Skylight Co. v. Zerbe Const. Co., D.C.N.Y., 5 F.2d 982, 986.

JAMBEAUX. In old English and feudal law. Leg-armor. Blount.

JAMMA, JUMMA. In Hindu law. Total amount; collection; assembly. The total of a territorial assignment.

JAMMABUNDY, JUMMABUNDY. In Hindu law. A written schedule of the whole of an assessment.

JAMMUNDLING. See Jamunlingi.

JAMPNUM. Furze, or grass, or ground where furze grows; as distinguished from "arable," "pasture," or the like. Co. Litt. 5a.

JAMUNLINGI, JAMUNDILINGI. Freemen who delivered themselves and property to the protection of a more powerful person, in order to avoid military service and other burdens. Spelman. Also a species of serfs among the Germans. Du Cange. The same as commendati.

JANITOR. In old English law. A door-keeper. Fleta, lib. 2, c. 24.

In modern law. A person employed to take charge of rooms or buildings, to see that they are kept clean and in order, to lock and unlock them, and generally to care for them. Fagan v. New York, 84 N.Y. 352; Kramer v. Industrial Acc. Commission of State of California, 31 Cal.App. 673, 161 P. 278.

JANUS-FACED. An argument looking in both directions at the same time, e. g., urging jurors not to be swayed by sympathy, but adding that any sympathy should be in favor of the arguing counsel's client. Davis v. Franson, 296 P.2d 600, 606, 141 Cal.App.2d 263.

JAQUES. In old English law. Small money.

JASON CLAUSE. Clause in bills of lading which obligates cargo owners to contribute in general average in cases of danger, damage, or disaster resulting from faults or errors in navigation or in management of vessel, her machinery or appurtenances, provided that ship owner shall have exercised due diligence to make vessel in all respects seaworthy, and to have her properly manned, equipped, and supplied. Merklen v. Johnson & Higgins, D.C.N.Y., 3 F.Supp. 897, 898.

JAVELIN-MEN. Yeomen retained by the sheriff to escort the judge of assize.

JAVELOUR. In Scotch law. Jailer or gaoler. 1 Pitc, Crim. Tr. pt. 1, p. 33.

JAY WALKING. Proceeding diagonally across a street intersection. Gett v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co., 192 Cal. 621, 221 P. 376, 378.

Also, crossing a street between intersections, or at a place other than a crosswalk.

JEDBURGH JUSTICE. Summary justice inflicted upon a marauder or felon without a regular trial, equivalent to "lynch law." So called from a Scotch town, near the English border, where raiders and cattle lifters were often summarily hung. Also written "Jeddart" or "Jedwood" justice.

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES. A religious sect whose members profess allegiance to a visionary heavenly kingdom and disclaim all duties of citizenship which they deem in conflict with such heavenly allegiance. U. S. ex rel. Hoce v. McGinnis, D.C.W.Va., 56 F.Supp. 668.

JEMAN. In old records. Yeoman. Cowell; Blount.

JENNY. With names of animals, often used to denote a female; also short for "jenny ass," "jenny wren," etc. Likewise short for "spinning jenny." Webster, Diet.; O'Rear v. Richardson, 17 Ala.App. 87, 81 So. 865, 866.

JEOFAILE. L. Fr. I have failed; I am in error. An error or oversight in pleading.

Certain statutes are called "statutes of amendments and jeofailes" because, where a pleader perceives any slip in the form of his proceedings, and acknowledges the error, (jeofaile,) he is at liberty, by those statutes, to amend it. :1 111.Comm. -107: 1 Sound. p. 228, no. 1.

Jeofaile is when the parties to any suit in pleading have proceeded so far that they have joined issue which shall be tried or is tried by a jury or inquest, and this pleading or issue is so badly pleaded or joined that it will be error if they proceed. Then some of the said parties may, by their counsel, show it to the court, as well after verdict given and before judgment as before the jury is charged. And the counsel shall say : "This inquest ye ought not to take." And if it be after verdict, then he may say : "To judgment you ought not to go." Termer de la Ley.

JEOPARDY. Danger; hazard; peril.

The danger of conviction and punishment which the defendant in a criminal action incurs when a valid indictment has been found, and a petit jury has been impaneled and sworn to try the case and give a verdict in a court of competent jurisdiction. State v. Nelson, 26 Ind. 368; State v. Emery, 5S Vt. 84, 7 A. 129; People v. Terrill, 132 Cal. 497, 64 P. 894; Mitchell v. State, 42 Ohio St. 383; Grogan v. State, 44 Ala. 9; Ex parte Glenn, C.C.W.Va., 111 F. 258; State v. McKee, 1 Bail., S.C., 655, 21 Am. Dec. 499; State v. Yokum, 155 La. 846, 99 So. 621, 631.

The peril in which a prisoner is put when he is regularly charged with a crime before a tribunal properly organized and competent to try him. Com. v. Fitzpatrick, 121 Pa. 109, 15 A. 466, 1 L.R.A. 451; Peavey v. State, 153 Ga. 119, 111 S.E. 420. The situation of a defendant when the jury is impaneled and sworn and the issues presented on a valid indictment or information in a court of competent jurisdiction. State v. Thompson, 58 Utah 291, 199 P. 161, 163, 38 A.L.R. 697. The condition of a person when he is put upon trial, before a court of competent jurisdiction, upon an indictment or information which is sufficient in form and substance to sustain a conviction, and a jury has been charged with his deliverance. Allen v. State, 13 Okl.Cr. 533, 165 P. 745, 748, L.R.A.1917E, 1085; State v. Runyon, 100 W.Va. 647, 131 S.E. 466, 467; Commonwealth v. Grey, 249 Ky. 36, 60 S.W.2d 133.

Defendant is not in "jeopardy" until jury has been duly impaneled and charged with his deliverance, but conviction or acquittal by any competent tribunal, whether after jury trial or not, satisfies requirement of jeopardy. Pepin v. State ex rel. Chambers, 217 Wis. 568, 259 N.W. 410.

The terms "jeopardy of life and liberty for the same offense," "jeopardy of life or limb," "jeopardy for the same offense," "in jeopardy of punish. ment," and other similar provisions used in the various Constitutions, are to be construed as meaning substantially the same thing. Stout v. State, 130 P. 553, 556, 36 Okl. 744, 45 L.R.A.,N.S., 884, Ann.Cas.1916E, 858.

JOCALIA. In old English law. Jewels. This term was formerly more properly applied to those ornaments which women, although married, call their own. When these jocalia are not suitable to her degree, they are assets for the payment of debts. 1 Rolle, Abr. 911.

JOCELET. A little manor or farm. Cowell.

JOCKEY CLUB. An association of persons for the purpose of regulating all matters connected with horse racing. See Corrigan v. Jockey Club, 2 Misc. 512, 22 N.Y.S. 394.

JOCUS. In old English law. A game of hazard. Reg. Orig. 290.

JOCUS PARTITUS. In old English practice. A divided game, risk, or hazard. An arrangement which the parties to a suit were anciently sometimes allowed to make by mutual agreement upon a certain hazard, as that one should lose if the case turned out in a certain way, and, if it did not, that the other should gain. Bract. fols. 211b, 379b, 432, 434, 200b.

JOHN DOE. A fictitious name frequently used to indicate a person for the purpose of argument or illustration, or in the course of enforcing a fiction in the law. The name which was usually given to the fictitious lessee of the plaintiff in the mixed action of ejectment. He was sometimes called "Goodtitle." So the Romans had their fictitious personages in law proceedings, as Titius, Seius.

The name "John Doe" is, and for some centuries has been, used in legal proceedings as a fictitious name to designate a party until his real name can be ascertained. State v. Rossignol, 22 Wash.2d 19, 153 P.2d 882, 885.

JOIN. To unite; to come together; to combine or unite in time, effort, action; to enter into an alliance. Lowery v. Westheimer, 58 Okl. 560, 160 P. 496, 500.

JOINDER. Joining or coupling together; uniting two or more constituents or elements in one; uniting with another person in some legal step or proceeding; union; concurrence.

Joinder in demurrer. When a defendant in an action tenders an issue of law, (called a "demurrer,") the plaintiff, if he means to maintain his action, must accept it, and this acceptance of the defendant's tender, signified by the plaintiff in a set form of words, is called a "joinder in demurrer." Brown; Co. Litt. 71 b; Thompson v. Goudelock, 10 Rich., S.C., 49.

Joinder in issue. In pleading. A formula by which one of the parties to a suit joins in or accepts an issue in fact tendered by the opposite party. Steph. Pl. 57, 236. More commonly termed a "similiter." (q. v.)

Joinder in pleading. Accepting the issue, and mode of trial tendered, either by demurrer, error, or issue, in fact, by the opposite party.

Joinder of actions. This expression signifies the uniting of two or more demands or rights of action in one action; the statement of more than one cause of action in a declaration. Sickler v. City of Broken Bow, 143 Neb. 542, 10 N.W.2d 462, 464.

Joinder of error. In proceedings on a writ of error in criminal cases, the joinder of error is a written denial of the errors alleged in the assignment of errors. It answers to a joinder of issue in an action.

Joinder of issue. The act by which the parties to a cause arrive at that stage of it in their pleadings, that one asserts a fact to be so, and the other denies it.

Joinder of offenses. The uniting of several distinct charges of crime in the same indictment or prosecution.

Joinder of parties. The uniting of two or more persons as co-plaintiffs or as co-defendants in one suit.

JOINT ACTION. An action brought by two or more as plaintiffs or against two or more as defendants.

JOINT AND SEVERAL. A liability is said to be joint and several when the creditor may sue one or more of the parties to such liability separately, or all of them together at his option. Dicey, Parties 230.

A joint and several bond or note is one in which the obligors or makers bind themselves both jointly and individually to the obligee or payee, so that all may be sued together for its enforcement, or the creditor may select one or more as the object of his suit. See Mitchell v. Darricott, 3 Brev., S.C., 145; Rice v. Gove, 22 Pick., Mass., 158, 33 Am.Dec. 724.

JOINT AUTHORSHIP. As to literary property, where there exists a common design to the execution of which several persons contribute. Mere alterations, additions or improvements, whether with or without the sanction of the author, will not entitle the person making them to claim to be a joint author of the work. 18 C.J.S., Copyright and Literary Property, § 11, p. 145.

Joint labor in furtherance of a common design. Edward B. Marks Music Corporation v. Jerry Vogel Music Co., C.C.A.N.Y., 140 F.2d 266, 267.

JOINT CAUSE OF ACTION. This term, as used in Equity Rule 26 (see Rules of Civil Procedure, Rules 18, 20, 82, 28 U.S.C.A.), does not mean a technical legal privity, such as a joint contract; but the rule will be satisfied where there is a single question of law and fact common to all the complainants, as where in a suit to quiet title they claim separate parcels of land under a common source of title. Commodores Point Terminal Co. v. Hudnall, D.C.Fla., 283 F. 150, 171.

JOINT DEBTORS. Persons united in a joint liability or indebtedness. Two or more persons jointly liable for the same debt. See Robertson v. Smith, 18 Johns., N.Y., 459, 9 Am.Dec. 227; Ex parte Zeigler, 83 S.C. 78, 64 S.E. 513, 916, 21 L.R.A., N.S., 1005.

JOINT DEBTORS' ACTS. Statutes enacted in many of the states, which provide that judgment may be given for or against one or more of several plaintiffs, and for or against one or more of several defendants, and that, "in an action against several defendants, the court may, in its discretion, render judgment against one or more of them, leaving the action to proceed against the others, whenever a several judgment is proper." The name is also given to statutes providing that where an action is instituted against two or more defendants upon an alleged joint liability, and some of them are served with process, but jurisdiction is not obtained over the others, the plaintiff may still proceed to trial against those who are before the court, and, if he recovers, may have judgment against all of the defendants whom he shows to be jointly liable. 1 Black, Judgm. §§ 208, 235. And see Hall v. Lanning, 91 U.S. 168, 23 L.Ed. 271.

JOINT ENTERPRISE. Also called "common enterprise." The joint prosecution of common purpose under such circumstances that each has authority express or implied to act for all in respect to the control, means or agencies employed to execute such common purpose. Hines v. Welch, Tex.Civ.App., 229 S.W. 681, 683. Greenwell's Adm'r v. Burba, 298 Ky. 255, 182 S.W.2d 436, 441; Illingworth v. Madden, 135 Me. 159, 192 A. 273, 276, 110 A.L.R. 1090. An enterprise participated in by associates acting together. Howard v. Zimmerman, 120 Kan. 77, 242 P. 131, 132. There must be a community of interests in the objects or purposes of the undertaking, and an equal right to direct and govern the movements and conduct of each other with respect thereto; each must have some voice and right to be heard in its control or management. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Bell, 58 Okl. 84, 159 P. 336, 337, L.R.A. 1917A, 543; Trumpfeller v. Crandall, 130 Me. 279, 155 A. 646, 650; Murphy v. Keating, 204 Minn. 269, 283 N.W. 389, 392, 393; Bloom v. Leech, 120 Ohio St. 239, 166 N.E. 137, 138.

JOINT ESTATE. "Joint estate" involves unity of interest, unity of title, unity of time, and unity of possession, and joint tenants must have the same interest accruing under the same conveyance, commencing at the same time, and held under the same undivided possession. Deslauriers v. Senesac, 331 Ill. 437, 163 N.E. 327, 329, 62 A.L.R. 511.

At common law, estates in which there were a plurality of tenants were described as "joint-estates" which designation includes estates in coparcenary, tenancies in common and joint tenancies, within which class are included ten- ancies by the entirety but the terms is not synonymous with "joint tenancies". Mosser v. Dolsay, 132 N.J.Eq. 121, 27 A.2d 155, 157.

JOINT EXECUTORS. Co-executors; two or more who are joined in the execution of a will. See, also, Coexecutor.

JOINT FEASORS IN PARI DELICTO. Phrase means as between persons who by concert of action intentionally commit the wrong complained of; there is no right of contribution. Commercial Cas. Ins. Co. v. Leonard, 210 Ark. 575, 196 S.W.2d 919, 920.

JOINT INDUSTRY OF HUSBAND AND WIFE. This phrase, as applied in Oklahoma statutes to property passing by descent, means the industry of a husband and wife each, in his or her recognized sphere of marital activity, and not that both must pursue jointly the same business or calling. In re Stone's Estate, 86 Okl. 33, 206 P. 246, 247. See, also, Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 121 Okl. 145, 247 P. 684, 687.

JOINT INTEREST. This term within federal rule requiring persons having a joint interest to be made parties, refers to parties designated as necessary or indispensable under former practice, and means an interest which must be directly affected by adjudication in the case. Platte County v. New Amsterdam Cas. Co., D.C.Neb., 6 F.R.D. 475, 482.

JOINT INVENTIONS. These are made when two or more persons jointly work or collaborate in devising and putting into practical form the subject-matter of patent. Altoona Publix Theatres v. American Tri-Ergon Corporation, C.C.A.Pa., 72 F. 2d 53, 56.

JOUIR. A French word, meaning to enjoy; to have enjoyment of; or to possess. Allison v. Maroun, 193 La. 286, 190 So. 408, 411.

JOUR. A French word, signifying "day."

It is used in our old law-books; as "tout fours," forever. It is also frequently employed in the composition of words: as, journal, a daybook ; journey-man, a man who works by the day; journeys account.

JOUR EN BANC. A day in Banc. Distinguished from "jour en pays," (a day in the country,) otherwise called "jour en nisi prius."

JOUR IN COURT. In old practice. Day in court; day to appear in court; appearance day. "Every process gives the defendant a day in court." Hale, Anal. § 8.

JOURNAL. A daily book; a book in which entries are made or events recorded from day to day.

In maritime law, the journal (otherwise called "log" or "log-book") is a book kept on every vessel, which contains a brief record of the events and occurrences of each day of a voyage, with the nautical observations, course of the ship, account of the weather, etc. In the system of double-entry bookkeeping, the journal is an account-book into which are transcribed, daily or at other intervals, the items entered upon the day-book, for more convenient posting into the ledger. In the usage of legislative bodies, the journal is a daily record of the proceedings of either house. It is kept by the clerk, and in it are entered the appointments and actions of committees, introduction of bills, motions, votes, resolutions, etc., in the order of their occurrence. See Montgomery Beer Bottling Works v. Gaston, 126 Ala. 425, 28 So. 497, 51 L.R.A. 396, 85 Arn_St.Rep. 42.

The daily printed pamphlets which contain the record of the proceedings of each house of the Legislature are the "journals" of the respective houses. Amos v. Moseley, 74 Fla. 555, 77 So. 619, 621, L.R.A.1918C, 482.

A "journal" is a permanent record, and the daily minutes kept by the secretary of the Senate or the journal clerk from which the permanent record is finally made up, does not constitute a part of the journal. Niven v. Road Improvement Dist. No. 14 of Jefferson County, 132 Ark. 240, 200 S.W. 997, 998.

JOURNAL ENTRY RULE. Regularity of enactment of statute may be inquired into by examining legislative journals. Freeman v. Goff, 206 Minn. 49, 287 N.W. 238, 240.

JOURNEY. Originally, a day's travel. The word is now applied to a travel by land from place to place, without restriction of time. But, when thus applied, it is employed to designate a travel which is without the ordinary habits, business, or duties of the person, to a distance from his home, and beyond the circle of his friends or acquaintances. Gholson v. State, 53 Ala. 521, 25 Am.Rep. 652.

JOURNEY–HOPPERS. In English law. Regrators of yarn. 8 Hen. VI. c. 5.

JOURNEYMAN. A workman hired by the day, or other given time. Hart v. Aldridge, 1 Cowp. 56; Butler v. Clark, 46 Ga. 468.

JOURNEYS ACCOUNT, In English practice. A new writ which the plaintiff was permitted to sue out within a reasonable time after the abatement, without his fault, of the first writ. This time was computed with reference to the number of days which the plaintiff must spend in journeying to reach the court; hence the name of journeys account, that is, journeys accomptes or counted. Co.Litt. fol. 9b; English v. T. H. Rogers Lumber Co., 68 Okl. 238, 173 P. 1046, 1048.

This mode of proceeding has fallen into disuse, the practice now being to permit that writ to be quashed, and to sue out another. See Termes de la Ley; Bacon, Abr. Abatement (Q) ; 14 Viner, Abr. 558; 4 Com.Dig. 714; 7 M. & G. 762; Richards v. Ins. Co., 8 Cranch, 84, 3 L. Ed. 496.

JOUSTS. See Justs,

JUBERE. Lat. In the civil law. To order, direct, or command. Calvin. The word jubeo (I order,) in a will, was called a "word of direction," as distinguished from "precatory words." Cod. 6, 43, 2.

To assure or promise.

To decree or pass a law.

JUBILACION. In Spanish law. The privilege of a public officer to be retired, on account of infirmity or disability, retaining the rank and pay of his office (or part of the same) after twenty years of public service, and on reaching the age of fifty.

JUDZEUS, JUDEUS. Lat. A Jew.

JUDAISMUS. The religion and rites of the Jews. Du Cange. A quarter set apart for residence of Jews. Du Cange. A usurious rate of interest. 1 Mon.Angl. 839; 2 Mon.Angl. 10,665. Sex marcus sterlingorum ad acquietandam terram prcedictum de Judaismo, in quo fuit timpignorata. Du Cange. An income anciently accruing to the king from the Jews. Blount.

JUDEX. Lat.

In Roman law. A private person appointed by the prtor, with the consent of the parties, to try and decide a cause of action commenced before him. He received from the praetor a written formula instructing him as to the legal principles according to which the action was to be judged. Calvin. Hence the proceedings before him were said to be in judicio, as those before the prtor were said to be in jure. A judge who conducted the trial from beginning to end; magistrates.

The practice of calling in judices was disused before Justinian's time: therefore, in the Code, Institutes, and Novels, judex means judge in its modern sense. Heineceh's, Elem. Jur.Civ. § 1327. The term judex is used with very different significations at different periods of Roman law.

In later and modern Civil law. A judge in the modern sense of the term.

In old English law. A juror. A judge, in modern sense, especially—as opposed to justiciarius, e., a common-law judge—to denote an ecclesiastical judge. Bract. fols. 401, 402.

JUDEX A QUO. In modern civil law. The judge from whom, as judex ad quem is the judge to whom, an appeal is made or taken. Halifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 11, no. 34.

JUDEX AD QUEM. A judge to whom an appeal is taken.

JUDEX PEQUITATEM SEMPER SPECTARE DEBET. A judge ought always to regard equity. Jenk. Cent. p. 45, case 85.

JUDEX ANTE OCULOS IEQUITATEM SEMPER HABERE DEBET. A judge ought always to have equity before his eyes. Jenk. Cent. p. 58.

JUDEX BONUS NIHIL EX ARBITRIO SUO FACIAT, NEO PROPOSITO DOMESTICIE VOLUNTATIS, SED JUXTA LEGES ET JURA PRONUNCIET. A good judge should do nothing of his own arbitrary will, nor on the dictate of his personal inclination, but should decide according to law and justice. 7 Coke, 27a.

JUDEX DAMNATUR CUM NOCENS ABSOLVITUR. The judge is condemned when a guilty person escapes punishment.

JUDEX DATUS. In Roman law. A judge given, that is, assigned or appointed, by the praetor to try a cause.

JUDEX DEBET JUDICARE SECUNDUM ALLEGATA ET PROBATA. The judge ought to decide according to the allegations and the proofs.

JUDEX DELEGATUS. A delegated judge; a special judge.

JUDEX EST LEX LOQUENS. A judge is the law speaking, [the mouth of the law.] 7 Coke, 4a.

JUDEX FISCALIS. A fiscal judge; one having cognizance of matters relating to the fiscus, (q. v.).

JUDEX HABERE DEBET DUOS SALES,—SALEM SAPIENTIIE, NE SIT INSIPIDUS; ET SALEM CONSCIENTIIE, NE SIT DIABOLUS. A judge should have two salts,—the salt of wisdom, lest he be insipid [or foolish]; and the salt of conscience, lest he be devilish. 3 Inst. 147; Bart. Max. 189.

JUDEX NON POTEST ESSE TESTIS IN PROPRIA CAUSA. A judge cannot be a witness in his own cause. 4 Inst. 279.

JUDEX NON POTEST INJURIAM SIBI DATAM PUNIRE. A judge cannot punish a wrong done to himself. See 12 Coke, 114.

JUDEX NON REDDIT PLUS QUAM QUOD PETENS IPSE REQUIRIT. A judge does not give more than what the complaining party himself demands. 2 Inst. 286.

JUDEX ORDINARIUS. In the civil law. An ordinary judge; one who had the right of hearing and determining causes as a matter of his own proper jurisdiction, (ex propria jurisdictione,) and not by virtue of a delegated authority. Calvin. According to Blackstone judices ordinarii determined only questions of fact. 3 B1.Comm. 315.

JUDEX PEDANEUS. In Roman law. Inferior judge; deuuty judge. The judge who was commissioned by the praetor to hear a cause was so-called, from the low seat which he anciently occupied at the foot of the praetor's tribunal.

JUDEX QUIESTIONIS. A magistrate who decided the law of a criminal case, when the prcetor himself did not sit as a magistrate. Morey, Rom. L. 88. The director of the criminal court under the presidency of the prcetor. Harper's Lat. Dict.; Cic. Brut. 76, 264.

JUDEX SELECTUS. A select or selected judex or judge. The judges in criminal suits selected by the prcetor. Harper's Lat.Dict.; Cic.Verr. 2, 2, 13, § 32. These judices selecti were used in criminal causes, and between them and modern jurors many points of resemblance have been noticed; 3 Bla.Comm. 366.

JUDGE. An officer so named in his commission, who presides in some court; a public officer, appointed to preside and to administer the law in a court of justice; the chief member of a court, and charged with the control of proceedings and the decision of questions of law or discretion. Todd v. U. S., 15 S.Ct. 889, 158 U.S. 278, 39 L.Ed. 982; Foot v. Stiles, 57 N.Y. 405; State v. Le Blond, 108 Ohio St. 126, 140 N.E. 510, 512. A public officer who, by virtue of his office, is clothed with judicial authority. State ex rel. Mayer v. City of Cincinnati, 60 Ohio App. 119, 19 N.E.2d 902. Presiding officer of court. State v. Horn, 336 Mo. 524, 79 S.W.2d 1044, 1045. Any officer authorized to function as or for judge in doing specified acts. In re Roberts' Estate, 49 Cal.App.2d 71, 120 P.2d 933, 937.

The term is sometimes held to include all officers appointed to decide litigated questions while acting in that capacity, including justices of the peace, and even jurors who are judges of the facts; Corn. v. Dallas, 4 Dall. 229, 1 L.Ed. 812; In re Hess, 20 N.J.Misc. 12, 23 A.2d 298, 300, 301; Webster v. Boyer, 81 Or. 485, 159 P. 1166, Ann.Cas. 1918D, 988; but see, contra, Alcorn v. Fellows, 102 Conn. 22, 127 A. 911, 915; Vollmer v. Board of Com'rs of Dubois County, 53 Ind.App. 149, 101 N.E. 321, 322. In ordinary legal use, however, the term is limited to the sense of the first of the definitions here given, People v. Wilson, 15 Ill. 388; and it has been held that a surrogate is not a "judge" within a statute providing for additional compensation to a judge for his services in drawing jurors, People ex rel. Noble v. Mitchel, 170 App.Div. 379, 155 N.Y.S. 660, 662; nor are United States commissioners judges, although they at times act in a quasi judicial capacity and exercise the power of a court, in so far as an act of Congress has conferred specific authority or imposed the performance of a special duty, United States v. Jones, D.C.N.Y., 230 F. 262, 264.

As used in Chandler Act, means the judge of court of bankruptcy. London v. O' Dougherty, C.C.A.2, 102 F.2d 524, 525; Dickinson Industrial Site v. Cowan, Ill., 309 U.S. 382, 60 S.Ct. 595, 597, 84 L.Ed. 819. As used in statute authorizing introduction in criminal proceeding of a writing written for purpose of comparison under supervision of a judge, means judge of a court of record, and does not include a justice. State v. Shade, 119 W.Va. 600, 195 S.E. 338.

"Judge" and "court", are often synonymous or interchangeable. In re Slattery, 310 Mich. 458, 17 N.W.2d 251, 259; Commonwealth v. Shawell, 325 Pa. 497, 191 A. 17, 19, but see holding that a judge is not a court, State ex rel. Mayer v. City of Cincinnati, 60 Ohio App. 119, 19 N.E.2d 902.

"Judge" and "justice" (q. v.) are often used in substantially the same sense.

JUDGE ADVOCATE. An officer of a court-martial, whose duty is to swear in the other members of the court, to advise the court, and to act as the public prosecutor; but he is also so far the counsel for the prisoner as to be bound to protect him from the necessity of answering criminating questions, and to object to leading questions when propounded to other witnesses.

JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL. The adviser of the government in reference to courts-martial and other matters of military law. In England, he is generally a member of the house of commons and of the government for the time being.

JUDGE DE FACTO. One who holds and exercises the office of a judge under color of lawful authority and by a title valid on its face, though he has not full right to the office, as where he was appointed under an unconstitutional statute, or by an usurper of the appointing power, or has not taken the oath of office. State v. Miller, 111 Mo. 542, 20 S.W. 243; Walcott v. Wells, 21 Nev. 47, 24 P. 367, 9 L.R.A. 59, 37 Am.St.Rep. 478; Dredla v. Baache, 60 Neb. 655, 83 N.W. 916; Caldwell v. Barrett, 71 Ark. 310, 74 S.W. 748.

In Missouri, a special judge Is a "judge de facto". State ex rel. McGaughey v. Grayston, 349 Mo. 700, 163 S.W.2d 335, 337.

JUDGE-MADE LAW. A phrase used to indicate judicial decisions which construe away the meaning of statutes, or find meanings in them the legislature never intended. It is sometimes used as meaning, simply, the law established by judicial precedent. Cooley, Const.Lim., 4th ed. 70, note.

JUDGE ORDINARY. By St. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, § 9, the judge of the court of probate was made judge of the court for divorce and matrimonial causes created by that act, under the name of the "judge ordinary."

In Scotland, the title "judge ordinary" is applied to all those judges, whether supreme or inferior, who, by the nature of their office, have a fixed and determinate jurisdiction in all actions of the same general nature, as contradistinguished from the old Scotch privy council, or from those judges to whom some special matter is committed; such as commissioners for taking proofs, and messengers at arms. Bell.

JUDGE PRO TEMPORE. One appointed for the term or some part thereof, during which time he exercises all the functions of the regular judge. State ex rel. Hodshire v. Bingham, 218 Ind. 490, 33 N.E.2d 771, 134 A.L.R. 1126.

JUDGER. A Cheshire juryman. Jacob.

JUDGE'S CERTIFICATE. In English practice. A certificate, signed by the judge who presided at the trial of a cause, that the party applying is entitled to costs. In some cases, this is a necessary preliminary to the taxing of costs for such party. A statement of the opinion of the court, signed by the judges, upon a question of law submitted to them by the chancellor for their decision. See 3 Bl.Comm. 453.

JUDGE'S MINUTES, OR NOTES. Memoranda usually taken by a judge, while a trial is proceeding, of the testimony of witnesses, of documents offered or admitted in evidence, of offers of evidence, and whether it has been received or rejected, and the like matters.

JUDGE'S ORDER. An order made by a judge at chambers, or out of court.

JUDGMENT. A sense of knowledge sufficient to comprehend nature of transaction. Thomas v. Young, 57 App.D.C. 282, 22 F.2d 588, 590.

An opinion or estimate. McClung Const. Co. v. Muncy, Tex.Civ.App., 65 S.W.2d 786, 790.

The conclusion in a syllogism having for its major and minor premises issues raised by the pleadings and the proofs thereon. Barlow v. Scott, Mo.Sup., 85. S.W.2d 504, 517.

The formation of an opinion or notion concerning some thing by exercising the mind upon it.

Cleveland Clinic Foundation v. Humphrys, C.C.A. Ohio, 97 F.2d 849, 857.

Finnell, 113 Okl. 269, 230 P. 912, 913; Kline v. Murray, 79 Mont. 530, 257 P. 465, 467; Weeden v. Weeden, 116 Ohio St. 524, 156 N.E. 908, 909.

An allowance or disallowance of a claim may be a judgment. United States v. Paisley, D.C.I11., 26 F.Supp. 237, 238; In re Hiller's Estate, 171 Or. 428, 137 P.2d 828, 830; State ex rel. Spellman v. Commercial State Bank of Omaha, 143 Neb. 490, 10 N.W.2d 268.

An award may be in the nature of, or equivalent of, a judgment. Traders & General Ins. Co. v. Baker, Tex.Civ. App., 111 S.W.2d 837, 839, 840; Holliday v. Sailing, 54 Ariz. 496, 97 P.2d 221, 223, 126 A.L.R. 145; Wisconsin Compensation Bureau v. Mortensen, 227 Wis. 335, 277 N.W. 679, 684; Detroit Trust Co. v. Van Wagoner, 295 Mich. 449, 295 N.W. 222, 223.

An entry on court record may constitute a judgment. Nichols v. Chandler, Ohio App., 61 N.E.2d 239, 240.

An order may be a judgment: Compensation proceeding. Truax-Traer Coal Co. v. Compensation Com'r, 123 W. Va. 621, 17 S.E.2d 330, 334; Traders & General Ins. Co. v. Baker, Tex.Civ.App., 111 S.W.2d 837, 839, 840; State v. Thierfelder, 114 Mont. 104, 132 P.2d 1035, 1037; State v. McNichols, 62 Idaho 552, 115 P.2d 104, 107; Baumgartner v. United States, C.C.A.Mo., 138 F.2d 29, 33.

Commitment to institution, etc., as a judgment, People ex rel. McCarthy v. Snyder, Sup., 54 N.Y.S.2d 40, 41; Ex parte Herrera, 143 P.2d 345, 349, 23 Ca1.2d 206.

The words "decision" and "judgment" may be used interchangeably. Smith v. State, 196 Ga. 595, 27 S.E.2d 369, 373; Gutierrez v. Brady, 45 N.M. 209, 113 P.2d 585, 537; but in a different context may not be synonymous. Mennel Milling Co. v. Slosser, 140 Ohio St. 445, 45 N.E.2d 306, 308. They are not the same thing under federal rules. Winkelman v. General Motors Corporation, D.C.N.Y., 48 F.Supp. 490, 494. A written decision that finally determines rights of parties is a "judgment". Zbikowski v. Straz, 236 Wis. 161, 294 N.W. 541, 543. Decisions by Secretary of the Interior on matters relating to public lands are equivalent of a "judgment" of a court. Elliott v. Thompson, 63 Idaho 395, 120 P.2d 1014, 1022. Decisions of administrative boards are not "judgments". Dal Maso v. Board of Com'rs of Prince George's County, 182 Md. 200, 34 A.2d 464, 466. The decision of the court, when filed, amounts to rendition of judgment. Lind v. Baker, 48 Cal.App.2d 234, 119 P.2d 806, 812.

To constitute act of bankruptcy, "judgment" suffered by debtor must be one that has become lien and, as such, a legal preference. Elkay Reflector Corporation v. Savory, Inc., C.C.A.N.Y., 57 F.2d 161, 162.

Judgments, considered with regard to the method of obtaining them, may be classified as follows.

Admission of facts by the parties, leaving only issues of law to be determined. Such judgments are: judgment upon a demurrer; judgment on a case stated; judgment on a general verdict subject to a special case; judgment on a special verdict.

Admissions or confessions of one only of the parties; judgments based on. Such judgments when for defendant upon the admissions of the plaintiff are: judgment of nolle prosequi; judgment of retraxit; judgment on leave of court to discontinue; a stet processus. Judgments for the plaintiff upon facts admitted by the defendant are: judgment by cognovit actionem; cognovit or confession.

Trial of an issue of fact. Judgments upon facts found are: Judgment of nul tiel record; judgment upon verdict; judgment non obstante veredicto; judgment of repleader.

Alternative judgment. One that by its terms might be satisfied by doing either of several acts at the election of the party or parties against whom the judgment is rendered and from whom performance is by the judgment required. Henderson v. Arkansas, 71 Okl. 253, 176 P. 751, 754. A judgment for one thing or another which does not specifically and in a definitive manner determine the rights of the parties. State v. Wilson, 216 N.C. 130, 4 S.E.2d 440, 442.

Assets in futuro, judgment of. One against an executor or heir, who holds at the time no property on which it can operate. See Quando Acciderint.

Case stated, judgment on. It sometimes happens that though the adverse parties are agreed as to the facts, and only differ as to the law arising out of them, still these facts do not so clearly appear on the pleadings as to enable them to obtain the opinion of the court by way of demurrer; for on demurrer the court can look at nothing whatever except the pleadings. In such circumstances the statute 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 42, § 25, which has been imitated in most of the states, allows them after issue joined, and on obtaining the consent of a single judge, to state the facts in a special case for the opinion of the court, and agree that a judgment shall be entered for the plaintiff or defendant by confession or nolle prosequi immediately after the decision of the case; and judgment is entered accordingly, called judgment on a case stated.

Cassetur breve or billa, judgment of (that the writ or bill be quashed) is a judgment rendered in favor of a party pleading in abatement to a writ or action. Steph.Pl. 130, 131.

Cognovit. See Cognovit.

Cognovit actionem. See Cognovit Actionem.

Conditional judgment. One whose force depends upon the performance of certain acts to be done in the future by one of the parties; as, one which may become of no effect if the defendant appears and pleads according to its terms, or one which orders the sale of mortgaged property in a foreclosure proceeding unless the mortgagor shall pay the amount decreed within the time limited. Mahoney v. New South Building & Loan Ass'n, C.C.Va., 70 F. 513; Simmons v. Jones, 118 N.C. 472, 24 S.E. 114.

Confession. At common law, judgment entered where defendant, instead of entering plea, confessed action, or withdrew plea and confessed action. Information Buying Co. v. Miller, 173 Ga. 786, 161 S.E. 617, 618. Judgment where a defendant gives the plaintiff a cognovit or written confession of the action by virtue of which the plaintiff enters judgment. The act of a debtor in permitting judgment to be entered against him by his creditor, for a stipulated sum, by a written statement to that effect or by warrant of attorney, without the institution of legal proceedings of any kind; voluntary submission to court's jurisdiction. O'Hara v. Manley, 140 Pa.Super. 39, 12 A.2d 820, 822.

Consent judgment. A judgment, the provisions and terms of which are settled and agreed to by the parties to the action. Hargis v. Hargis, 252 Ky. 198, 66 S.W.2d 59; Andrews v. Indemnity Ins. Co. of North America, 55 R.I. 341, 181 A. 403; Matthews v. Looney, 132 Tex. 313, 123 S.W.2d 871, 872.

It is not the judgment of the court, it is the agreement of the parties, entered upon the record with the sanction and approval of the court, and is their act rather than that of the court. Andrews v. Indemnity Ins. Co. of North America, 55 R.I. 341, 181 A. 403; Cason v. Shutte, 211 N. C. 195, 189 S.E. 494, 495.

Consent judgments are, in effect, merely contracts acknowledged in open court and ordered to be recorded, but as such they bind the parties as fully as do other judgments. Prince v. Frost-Johnson Lumber Co., Tex.Civ. App., 250 S.W. 785, 789; Belcher v. Cobb, 169 N.C. 689, 86 S.E. 600, 602.

Contradictory judgment. A judgment which has been given after the parties have been heard, either in support of their claims or in their defense. Cox's Ex'rs v. Thomas, 11 La. 366.

It is used in Louisiana to distinguish such judgments from those rendered by default.

De melioribus damnis. See De Melioribus Damnis.

Default and inquiry, judgment by. It establishes right of action of kind properly pleaded in complaint, determines right of plaintiff to recover at least nominal damages and costs, and precludes defendant from offering any evidence on execution of inquiry to show -that plaintiff has no right of action. De Hoff v. Black, 206 N.C. 687, 175 S.E. 179.

Default final, judgment by. It establishes allegations of complaint and concludes by way of estoppel. De Hoff v. Black, 206 N.C. 687, 175 S.E. 179.

Default judgment. A judgment rendered in consequence of the non-appearance of the defendant. Beard v. Sovereign Lodge, W. 0. W., 184 N.C. 154, 113 S.E. 661; In re Smith, 38 Idaho, 746, 225 P. 495, 496; Brame v. Nolen, 139 Va. 413, 124 S.E. 299, 301. One entered upon the failure of a party to appear or plead at the appointed time. The term is also applied to judgments entered under statutes or rules of court, for want of affidavit of defense, plea, answer, and the like, or for failure to take some required step in the cause.

Judgments rendered on defendant's default are: Judgment by default; judgment by non sum informatus; judgment nil licit. Judgments rendered on plaintiff's default are: Judgment of non pros. (from non prosequitur) and judgment of nonsuit (from non sequitur, or ne suit pas).

Deficiency judgment. See Deficiency.

Demurrer, judgment on. Concludes party demurring, because by demurring, a party admits the facts alleged in the pleadings of his adversary and relies on their insufficiency in law. See Demurrer.

Discontinuance. A "judgment of discontinuance" is one of dismissal of plaintiff's action based on interruption in proceedings occasioned by failure of plaintiff to continue suit regularly from time to time as he ought. Steele v. Beaty, 215 N.C. 680, 2 S.E.2d 854, 855.

A plaintiff sometimes, when he finds he has misconceived his action, obtains leave from the court to discontinue, on which there is a judgment against him and he has to pay costs; but he may commence a new action for the same cause.

Dismissal, judgment of. See Dismissal.

Domestic judgment. A judgment is domestic in the courts of the same state or country where it was originally rendered; in other states or countries it is called foreign. The federal court sitting for the state is a domestic court, and its judgments within the scope of its jurisdiction are domestic judgments. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Tally, 203 Ala. 370, 83 So. 114, 117.

Dormant judgment. One which has not been satisfied or extinguished by lapse of time, but which has remained so long unexecuted that execution cannot now be issued upon it without first reviving the judgment. Draper v. Nixon, 93 Ala. 436, 8 So. 489; General Electric Co. v. Hurd, C.C.Or., 171 F. 984; Burlington State Bank v. Marlin Nat. Bank, Tex.Civ.App., 207 S.W. 954, 956. Or one which has lost its lien on land from the failure to issue execution on it or take other steps to enforce it within the time limited by statute. 1 Black, Judgm. (2d Ed.) § 462.

Error, judgment in. A judgment rendered by a court of error on a record sent up from an inferior court.

It is either in affirmance of the former judgment; in recall of it for error in fact; in reversal of it for error in law ; that the plaintiff be barred of his writ of error, where a plea of release of errors or of the statute of limitations is found for the defendant ; or that there be a venire facias de novo, which is an award of a new trial.

Execution of judgment. See Execution of Judgment or Decree.

Face of judgment. See Face of Judgment.

Final judgment. One which puts an end to a suit or action.

One which puts an end to an action at law by declaring that the plaintiff either has or has not entitled himself to recover the remedy he sues for. 3 Bl.Comm. 398; Frank P. Miller Paper Co. v. Keystone Coal & Coke Co., 275 Pa. 40, 118 A. 565, 566. So distinguished from interlocutory judgments, which merely establish the right of the plaintiff to recover, in general terms. Id. 397. A judgment which determines a particular cause. Bostwick v. Brinkerhoff, 106 U.S. 3, 1 S. Ct. 15, 27 L.Ed. 73; Pfeiffer v. Crane, 89 Ind. 487; Nelson v. Brown, 59 Vt. 601, 10 A. 721. A judgment which cannot be appealed from, which is perfectly conclusive upon the matter adjudicated. Snell v. Cotton Gin Mfg. Co., 24 Pick., Mass., 300; Foster v. Neilson, 2 Pet. 294, 7 L.Ed. 415; Forgay v. Conrad, 6 How. 201, 12 L.Ed. 404; State v. Harmon, 87 Ohio St. 364, 101 N.E. 286, 288. A judgment which disposes of the subject-matter of the controversy or determines the litigation as to all parties on its merits. Lamberton v. McCarthy, 30 Idaho, 707, 168 P. 11; Sanders v. May, 173 N. C. 47, 91 S.E. 526, 527; France & Canada S. S. Co. v. French Republic, C.C.A. N.Y., 285 F. 290, 294; Judson Lumber Co. v. Patterson, 68 Fla. 100, 66 So. 727, 728; Miller v. Farmers State Bank & Trust Co., Tex.Civ.App., 241 S.W. 540, 541. A judgment which terminates all litigation on the same right. For meaning of "final judgment", in the judiciary act of 1789, § 25, see 1 Kent., Comm. 316; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 494, 7 L.Ed. 481; Forgay v. Conrad, 6 How. 201, 209, 12 L.Ed. 404.

Foreign judgment. One rendered by the courts of a state or country politically and judicially distinct from that where the judgment or its effect is brought in question. One pronounced by a tribunal of a foreign country, or of a sister state. Karns v. Kunkle, 2 Minn. 313, Gil. 268; Gulick v. Loder, 13 N.J.L. 68, 23 Am.Dec. 711; Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Radcliffe, 137 U.S. 287, 11 S. Ct. 92, 34 L.Ed. 670.

General verdict subject to a special case, judgment on. Where at the trial the parties agree on the facts and the only question is one of law and a verdict pro forma is taken and the jury find for the plaintiff generally but subject to the opinion of the court on a special case.

In personam or inter partes. See Judgment in Personam or Inter Partes.

In rem. See Judgment in Rem.

Interlocutory judgment. One given in the progress of a cause upon some plea, proceeding, or default which is only intermediate and does not finally determine or complete the suit. 3 Bl.Comm. 396. One which determines some preliminary or subordinate point or plea, or settles some step, question, or default arising in the progress of the cause, but does not adjudicate the ultimate rights of the parties, or finally put the case out of court. Thus, a judgment or order passed upon any provisional or accessory claim or contention is, in general, merely interlocutory, although it may finally dispose of that particular matter. 1 Black, Judgm. § 21; Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. McDonald, 177 Ky, 838, 198 S.W. 225, 226; Frank P. Miller Paper Co. v. Keystone Coal & Coke Co., 275 Pa. 40, 118 A. 565, 566.

Junior judgment. One which was rendered or entered after the rendition or entry of another judgment, on a different claim, against the same defendant.

Merits, judgment on. One rendered after argument and investigation, and when it is determined which party is in the right, as distinguished from a judgment rendered upon some preliminary or formal or merely technical point, or by default and without trial. Bell Grocery Co. v. Booth, 250

Ky. 21, 61 S.W.2d 879; State ex rel. National Lead Co. v. Smith, Mo.App., 134 S.W.2d 1061, 1068.

Money judgment. One which adjudges the payment of a sum of money, as distinguished from one directing an act to be done or property to be restored or transferred. Fuller v. Aylesworth, Mich., 75 F. 694, 21 C.C.A. 505; Pendleton v. Cline, 85 Cal. 142, 24 P. 659.

Ordinary "judgment for money" merely determines amount due. State ex rel. Lang v. Superior Court for King County, 176 Wash. 472, 30 P.2d 237, 239.

Narr and cognovit, judgment on. Summons is unnecessary because maker of note authorizes appearance and waives summons. Schwartz v. Schwartz, 366 Ill. 247, 8 N.E.2d 668, 670, 112 A.L.R. 325.

Nihil dicit. See Nihil Dicit.

Nil capiat per breve or per billa (that he take nothing by his writ, or by his bill). A judgment in favor of the defendant upon an issue raised upon a declaration or peremptory plea.

Nil dicit, judgment by. One rendered where defendant fails to plead, or where, having pleaded, plea is stricken, withdrawn, or abandoned and no further defense is made. Grand Lodge Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen v. Ware, Tex.Civ. App., 73 S.W.2d 1076, 1077; Reliance Equipment Co. v. Montgomery, 27 Ala.App. 539, 175 So. 703.

At common law, it may be taken against defendant who omits to plead or answer whole or any separable substantial portion of declaration. Clonts v. Spurway, 104 Fla. 340, 139 So. 896, 897. It amounts to judgment by confession with reference to cause of action stated, Grand Lodge Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen v. Ware, Tex.Civ.App., '73 S.W.2d 1076, 1077. For judgment nihil dicit, see Nihil Dicit. Judgment rendered on plea of guilty is not judgment nil dicit, which is substantially identical with default judgment. Stevens v. State, 100 Vt. 214, 136 A. 387.

Nisi. At common law, judgment nisi was a judgment entered on the return of the nisi prius record, which, according to the terms of the postea indorsed thereon was to become absolute unless otherwise ordered by the court within the first four days of the next succeeding term. See U. S. v. Winstead, D.C.N.C., 12 F. 51; Young v. McPherson, 3 N.J.L. 897.

Nolle prosequi, judgment of. One entered against plaintiff when, after appearance and before judgment, he declares that he will not further prosecute his suit. Steph. Pl., Andr. Ed. § 97; Merchants Mut. Casualty Co. v. Kiley, 92 N.H. 323, 30 A.2d 681, 683.

Non obstante veredicto. See Non Obstante Vereclicto.

Non pros (non prosequitur [he does not follow up, or pursue]). See Non Prosequitur.

Non sum informatus. See Non Sum Informatus.

Nonsuit. See Nonsuit.

Nul tiel record. See Nul Tiel Record.

Nunc pro tune. One entered on a day subsequent to the time at which it should have been entered, as of the latter date. See Nunc Pro Tunc.

Personal judgment. One imposing on the defendant a personal liability to pay it, and which may therefore be satisfied out of any of his property which is within the reach of process, as distinguished from one which may be satisfied only out of a particular fund or the proceeds of particular property.

Thus, in a mortgage foreclosure suit, there may be a personal judgment against the mortgagor for any deficiency that may remain after the sale of the mortgaged premises. See Bardwell v. Collins, 44 Minn. 97, 46 N.W. 315, 9 L.R.A. 152.

Pocket judgment. A statute-merchant which was enforceable at any time after non-payment on the day assigned, without further proceedings. Wharton.

Pro retorno habendo. A judgment that the party have a return of the goods.

Quando acciderint. See Quando Acciderint.

Quod computet. See Quod Computet.

Quod partes replacitent. See Quod Partes Replacitent.

Quod partitio fiat. Interlocutory judgment in a writ of partition, that partition be made.

Quod recuperet. See Quod Recuperet.

Relicta verificatione. See Relicta Verificatione.

Repleader, judgment of. See Repleader.

Respondeat ouster. When the issue in law arises on a dilatory plea, and is determined for the plaintiff, the judgment is only that the defendant "do answer over," called a judgment of respondeat ouster; it is interlocutory only.

Retraxit. See Retraxit.

Special verdict, judgment on. Where at the trial the parties find that they agree on the facts and the only question is one of law and a verdict pro forma is taken, and the jury state the facts as they find them, concluding that the opinion of the court shall decide in whose favor the verdict shall be, and that they assess the damages accordingly.

Stet Processus. See Stet Processus.

Verdict, judgment on. The most usual of the judgments upon facts found, and is for the party obtaining the verdict.

Warrant of attorney. See Warrant.

JUDGMENT-BOOK. A book required to be kept by the clerk, among the records of the court, for the entry of judgments. In re Weber, 4 N.D. 119, 59 N.W. 523, 28 L.R.A. 621.

JUDGMENT CREDITOR. One who has obtained a judgment against his debtor, under which he can enforce execution. King v. Fraser, 23 S.C. 548; Baxter v. Moses, 77 Me. 465, 1 A. 350, 52 Am. Rep. 783; Chalmers & Williams v. Surprise, 70 Ind.App. 646, 123 N.E. 841, 844. Code Civ.Proc. N.Y.1899, § 3343 (Civ.Prac. Act, § 7). The owner of an unsatisfied judgment.

JUDGMENT DEBT. One which is evidenced by matter of record. Colonial Building-Loan Ass'n v. Mongiello Bros., 120 N.J.Eq. 270, 184 A. 635, 637. A debt, whether on simple contract or by specialty, for the recovery of which judgment has been entered up, either upon a cognovit or upon a warrant of attorney or as the result of a successful action. Brown.

JUDGMENT DEBTOR. A person against whom judgment has been recovered, and which remains unsatisfied. The term has been construed to include a judgment debtor's successors in interest. Bateman v. Kellogg, 59 Cal.App. 464, 211 P. 46, 51; but see, contra, Northwest Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Butcher, 98 Wash. 158, 167 P. 46, 47.

JUDGMENT DEBTOR SUMMONS. Under the English bankruptcy act, 1861, §§ 76-85, these summonses might be issued against both traders and non-traders, and, in default of payment of, or security or agreed composition for, the debt, the debtors might be adjudicated bankrupt. This act was repealed by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 83, § 20. The 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, however, (bankruptcy act, 1869,) provides (section 7) for the granting of a "debtor's summons," at the instance of creditors, and, in the event of failure to pay or compound, a petition for adjudication may be presented, unless in the events provided for by that section. Wharton.

JUDGMENT DOCKET. A list or docket of the judgments entered in a given court, methodically kept by the clerk or other proper officer, open to public inspection, and intended to afford official notice to interested parties of the existence or lien of judgments.

JUDGMENT, ESTOPPEL BY. The estoppel raised by the rendition of a valid judgment by a court having jurisdiction. 2 Bl.Judgm. § 504; State v. Torinus, 28 Minn. 175, 9 N.W. 725. See, also, Verdict, Judgment By.

Final adjudication of any issue by court of competent jurisdiction binds parties and privies in any subsequent proceeding, irrespective of difference in forms or causes of action. Citizens' Loan & Trust Co. of Washington, Ind. v. Sanders, 99 Ind.App. 77, 187 N.E. 396, 398.

The essence of estoppel by judgment is that there has been a judicial determination of a fact. Price v. Clement, 187 Okl. 304, 102 P.2d 595, 597; Monteith Bros. Co. v. U. S., D.C.Ind., 48 F.Supp. 210, 212. It arises where a party litigant attempts to assume inconsistent and contradictory positions with respect to same matter. Elfman v. Glaser, 313 Mass. 370, 47 N.E.2d 925, 929. It rests upon principles forbidding one to relitigate matter in dispute between parties which has been determined by competent court, on ground that record of judgment imports absolute verity. Cauble v. Cauble, Tex.Civ.App., 2 S.W.2d 967, 970.

The doctrine extends to matters actually adjudicated, Hamlin v. Johns, 41 Ga.App. 91, 151 S.E. 815, 817; Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Childs, 189 Ga. 835, 7 S.E.2d 907; actually and necessarily included in judgment, MacDonnell v. Capital Co., C.C.A.Cal., 130 F.2d 311, 318; Panos v. Great Western Packing Co., Cal.App., 126 P.2d 889, 892; expressly or by necessary Implication adjudicated, McKee v. Producers' & Refiners' Corporation, 170 Okl. 559, 41 P.2d 466, 469; necessarily adjudicated, Capps v. Toccoa Falls Light & Power Co., 46 Ga.App. 268, 167 S.E. 530, 532; Humble Oil & Refining Co. v. Webb, Tex.Civ.App., 177 S.W.2d 218, 223. It extends only to facts in issue as they existed at time judgment was rendered, Fort Worth Stockyards Co. v. Brown, Tex.Civ.App., 161 S.W.2d 549, 555. It extends' to matters which might have been litigated in former case. Paine & Williams Co. v. Baldwin Rubber Co., C.C.A.Mich., 113 F.2d 840, 842, 843; Knabb v. Duner, 143 Fla. 92, 196 So. 456, 460. But it has been held that the doctrine does not apply where point at issue was not controverted in prior action but might have been. Haumesser v. Woodrich, 315 475, 43 N.E.2d 193, 196; the estoppel does not extend to matter not directly in issue though it arose in case collaterally. Morrison v. Bank of Mount Hope, 124 W.Va. 478, 20 S.E.2d 790, 794.

Ordinarily, "estoppel" at judgment does not extenCtO matters not expressly adjudicated, Sonken-Galamba Corporation v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., C.C.A.Mo., 124 F.2d 952, 956; and a judgment or decree without prejudice does not work an "estoppel". In re McDermott, C.C.A. Ill., 115 F.2d 582, 584.

Elements or essentials are or may include former judgment between same parties or their privies. Postelneck v. Edbro Realty Co., 228 App.Div. 105, 239 N.Y.S. 173, 175; former judgment must relate to same question and must clearly decide it, First Nat. Bank of Atlanta v. Williams, 62 Ga.App. 203, 8 S.E.2d 562, 564, 565; former judgment on the merits, Stowers v. Harris, 194 Ga. 636, 22 S.E.2d 405, 408; Postelneck v. Edbro Realty Co., 228 App.Div. 105, 239 N.Y.S. 173, 175; identity of parties suing in same capacity, Ford v. Dania Lumber & Supply Co., 150 Fla. 435, 7 So.2d 594, 595; material facts necessary in arriving at conclusion must be properly in issue, Paine & Williams Co. v. Baldwin Rubber Co., C.C.A.Mich., 113 F.2d 840, 842, 843; matters litigated and determined in prior case must have been within scope of the pleadings, Slaughter v. Slaughter, 190 Ga. 229, 9 S.E.2d 70, 71, 129 A.L.R. 156; mutuality of estoppel, Stewart v. City of Springfield, 350 Mo. 234, 165 S.W.2d 626, 630; Elder v. New York & Pennsylvania Motor Express, 284 N.Y. 350, 31 N.E.2d 188, 189, 133 A.L.R. 176; precise facts or questions must have been determined by former judgment, Skolnik v. Petella, 376 Ill. 500, 34 N.E.2d 825, 826; Flint v. Kimbrough, 45 N.M. 342, 115 P.2d 84, 86; subsequent suit must be between same parties or their privies. Harris v. Jacksonville Paper Co., 67 Ga.App. 759, 21 S.E.2d 537, 541; Woods v. Duval, 151 Kan. 472, 99 P.2d 804, 808; substantial identity of parties, Curtis v. Maryland Baptist Union Ass'n, 176 Md. 430, 5 A.2d 836, 839, 121 A.L.R. 1516.

The estoppel may be based on consent judgment, Le Bire v. Department of Labor and Industries, 14 Wash.2d 407, 128 P.2d 308, 313; declaratory judgment, In re Patton's Estate, 170 Or. 186, 132 P.2d 402, 406; default judgment, Lawhorn v. Wellford, 179 Tenn. 625, 168 S.W.2d 790, 792; erroneous judgment regularly entered by court. Ex parte Young, 222 N.C. 708, 24 S.E.2d 539, 540; fin•_ judgment, Ramsey Tp., McCook County v. Lake County, 68 S.D. 67, 298 N.W. 356; final judgment in a criminal prosecution or proceeding, Ex parte Lewis, 152 Kan. 13, 102 P.2d 981, 982; judgment in rem, or quasi in rem, Saunders v. King, 69 Ohio App. 313, 37 N.E.2d 92, 93; judgment upon stipulation, Tillman v. National City Bank of New York, C.C.A.N.Y., 118 F.2d 631, 633, 634, 635; judgment upon the merits, Smith v. C. I. T. Corporation, 69 Ga.App. 516, 26 S.E.2d 146, 148; Fightmaster v. Tauber, 43 Ohio App. 266, 183 N.E. 116, 117.

When causes of action or claims or demands in prior and subsequent suits are different the estoppel exists with respect to matters actually decided and essential to or necessarily involved in judgment, Balcom v. Cain, Tex. Civ.App., 81 S.W.2d 827, 829; actually litigated, American Trust Co. v. Butler, C.C.A.Fla., 47 F.2d 482, 483; Vaughn's Adm'r v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 297 Ky. 309, 179 S.W.2d 441, 444, 152 A.L.R. 1060; common to both causes of action, McKee v. Producers' & Refiners' Corporation, 170 Okl. 559, 41 P.2d 466, 469; Guaranty Trust Co. of New York v. International Trust Co., 144 Misc. 127, 258 N.Y.S. 465; necessarily adjudicated, Bassick Mfg. Co. v. Larkin Automotive Parts Co., D.C.I11., 23 F.2d 92, 94; McDowell v. Harris, Tex.Civ.App., 107 S.W.2d 647, 652.

Where subsequent proceeding is on same cause of action between same parties a former adjudication is conclusive. Kimpton v. Spellman, 351 Mo. 674, 173 S.W.2d 886, 891.

JUDGMENT EXECUTION. In the judgment on which it issues, it is a species of execution process, but as to the garnishee who becomes a party defendant therein it is an original process-a summons commanding him to appear and show cause, if any he has, why judgment in favor of the plaintiff should not be levied on the goods and effects of defendant in his hands. Shane v. Commercial Casualty Ins. Co., D.C.Pa., 48 F.Supp. 151, 156.

JUDGMENT IN PERSONAM OR INTER PARTES. A judgment against a particular person, as distinguished from a judgment against a thing or a right or status.

Judgments of the former class, though conclusive even against strangers, as to the fact of their rendition and the resultant legal consequences, are not binding as to the issues involved, except upon the parties and their privies, while judgments of the latter class are conclusive upon all the world. City of Huntsville v. Goodenrath, 13 Ala.App. 579, 68 So. 676, 680. See the title Judgment In Rem.

Decrees of divorce of other states recovered upon service by publication are not judgments in personam. Ball v. Cross, 106 Misc. 184, 174 N.Y.S. 259, 260.

JUDGMENT IN REM. An adjudication pronounced upon the status of some particular thing or subject matter. Perry v. Edmonds, 59 Nev. 60, 84 P.2d 711, 713; Consolidated Flour Mills Co. of Kansas v. Sayre Wholesale Grocer Co., 176 Okl. 482, 56 P.2d 781, 784; by a tribunal having competent authority. Booth v. Copley, 283 Ky. 23, 140 S.W.2d 662, 666. It is founded on proceeding instituted against or on some thing or subject matter whose status or condition is to be determined, McCormick v. Blaine, 345 Ill. 461, 178 N.E. 195, 197, 77 A.L.R. 1215; Eureka Building & Loan Ass'n v. Shultz, 139 Kan. 435, 32 P.2d 477, 480; or one brought to enforce a right in the thing itself, Federal Land Bank of Omaha v. Jefferson, 229 Iowa 1054, 295 N.W. 855, 857; Hobbs v. Lenon, 191 Ark. 509, 87 S.W.2d 6, 11. It operates directly upon the property. Federal Land Bank of Omaha v. Jefferson, 229 Iowa 1054, 295 N.W. 855, 857, 132 A.L.R. 1282; Hobbs v. Lenon, 191 Ark. 509, 87 S.W.2d 6, 11; Guild v. Wallis, 150 Or. 69, 40 P.2d 737, 742. It is a solemn declaration of the status of some person or thing. Jones v. Teat, Tex.Civ.App., 57 S.W.2d 617, It is binding upon all persons in so far as their interests in the property are concerned. Federal Land Bank of Omaha v. Jefferson, 229 Iowa 1054, 295 N.W. 855, 857, 132 A.L.R. 1282. It is binding upon the world. Booth v. Copley, 283 Ky. 23, 140 S.W.2d 662, 666; Hobbs v. Lenon, 191 Ark. 509, 87 S.W.2d 6, 11.

Various definitions have been given of a judgment in rem, but all are criticised as either incomplete or comprehending too much.

"A very able writer says : 'The distinguishing characteristic of judgments in rem is that, wherever their obligation is recognized and enforced as against any person, it Is equally recognized and enforced as against all persons.' It seems to us that the true definition of a 'judgment in rem' is 'an adjudication' against some person or thing, or upon the status of some subject-matter; which, wherever and whenever binding upon any person, is equally binding upon all persons." Bartero v. Real Estate Savings Bank, 10 Mo.App. 78.

In Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 734, 24 L. Ed. 565, the court said : "It is true that, in a strict sense, a proceeding in rem is one taken directly against property, and has for its object the disposition of property, without reference to the title of individual claimants; but, in a larger and more general sense, the terms are applied to actions between parties, where the direct object is to reach and dispose of property owned by them, or of some interest therein. Such are cases commenced by attachment against the property of debtors, or instituted to partition real estate, foreclose a mortgage, or enforce a lien. So far as they affect property in this state, they are substantially proceedings in rem in the broader sense which we have mentioned."

JUDGMENT IN RETRAXIT. A "judgment" which is usually based upon and follows a settlement out of court, and like a judgment on the merits is a bar and estops plaintiff from again proceeding in another suit on same cause of action. Steele v. Beaty, 215 N.C. 680, 2 S.E.2d 854, 856, 857.

See Retraxit.

JUDGMENT LIEN. A lien binding the real estate of a judgment debtor, in favor of the holder of the judgment, and giving the latter a right to levy on the land for the satisfaction of his judgment to the exclusion of other adverse interests subsequent to the judgment. Ashton v. Slater, 19 Minn. 351 (Gil. 300) ; Shirk v. Thomas, 121 Ind. 147, 22 N.E. 976, 16 Am.St.Rep. 381; Jones v. Hall, 177 Va. 658, 15 S.E.2d 108, 111; right to subject land of judgment debtor to satisfaction of judgment, Jones v. Hall, 177 Va. 658, 15 S.E.2d 108, 110, 111.

JUDGMENT NOTE. A promissory note, embodying an authorization to any attorney, or to a designated attorney, or to the holder, or the clerk of the court, to enter an appearance for the maker and confess a judgment against him for a sum therein named, upon default of payment of the note. Sweeney v. Thickstun, 77 Pa. 131.

JUDGMENT OF BOARD OF DIRECTORS. Determination by corporate action. Du Bois v. Century Cement Products Co., 119 N.J.Eq. 472, 183 A. 188, 191.

JUDGMENT OF CONVICTION. Sentence in criminal case, entered in court's minutes. People v. Mellon, 261 App.Div. 400, 25 N.Y.S.2d 650, 651.

JUDGMENT OF HIS PEERS. A term of expression borrowed from Magna Charta and means trial by jury. Ex parte Wagner, 58 Okl.Cr. 161, 50 P.2d_ 1135, 1139. A trial by a jury of twelve men according to the course of the common law. Fetter v. Wilt, 46 Pa. 460; State v. Simons, 61 Kan. 752, 60 P. 1052; Newland v. Marsh, 19 Ill. 382.

JUDGMENT PAPER. In English practice. A sheet of paper containing an incipitur of the pleadings in an action at law, upon which final judgment is signed by the master. 2 Tidd, Pr. 930.

JUDGMENT RECORD. In English practice. A parchment roll, on which are transcribed the whole proceedings in the cause, deposited and filed of record in the treasury of the court, after signing of judgment. 3 Steph.Comm. 632. In American practice, the record is signed, filed, and docketed by the' clerk.

Findings of fact and conclusions of law held part of "judgment record;" the phrases "judgment roll," "judgment record," and "face of the record" are synonymous. Permian Oil Co. v. Smith, 129 Tex. 413, 107 S.W.2d 564, 566, 111 A.L.R. 1152.

JUDGMENT ROLL. See Roll.

JUDGMENT RECOVERED. A plea by a defendant that the plaintiff has already recovered that which he seeks to obtain by his action. This was formerly a species of sham plea, often put in for the purpose of delaying a plaintiff's action.

JUDGMENT VOID ON ITS FACE. A judgment or order is "void on its face" when its invalidity is apparent upon inspection of judgment roll. Application of Behymer, 130 Cal.App. 200, 19 P.2d 829, 830.

JUDICANDUM EST LEGIBUS, NON EXEMPLIS. Judgment is to be given according to the laws, not according to examples or precedents. 4 Coke, 33b; 4 Bl.Comm. 405.

JUDICARE. Lat. In the civil and old English law. To judge; to decide or determine judicially; to give judgment or sentence.

JUDICATIO. Lat. In the civil law. Judging; the pronouncing of sentence after hearing a cause. Hallifax, Civil Law, b. 3, c. 8, no. 7.

JUDICATORES TERRARUM. Lat. Certain tenants in the county palatine of Chester, who were bound by their tenures to perform judicial functions.

In case of an erroneous judgment being given by them, the party aggrieved might obtain a writ of error out of Chancery, directing them to reform it. They then had 'a month to consider of the matter. If they declined to reform their judgment, the matter came on writ of error before the king's bench; and if the court of king's bench held the judgment to be erroneous they forfeited £100 to the crown by custom. Jenk.Cent. 71.

JUDICATORIES. The term as used designates that department of government which it was intended should interpret and administer the laws. In re Opinion of the Justices, 86 N.H. 597, 166 A. -640, 646.

JUDICATURE. The state or profession of those officers who are employed in administering justice; the judiciary.

A judicatory, tribunal, or court of justice.

Jurisdiction; the right of judicial action; the scope or extent of jurisdiction.

JUDICATURE ACTS (ENGLAND). The acts under which the present system of courts in England was organized and is continued.

The statutes of 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, and 38 & 39 Vict. c. 77, which went into force November 1, 1875, with amendments in 1877, 40 & 41 Vict. c. 9; 1879, 42 & 43 Vict. c. 78; and 1881, 44 & 45 Vict. c. 68,—made most important changes in the organization of, and methods of procedure in, the superior courts of England, consolidating them together so as to constitute one supreme court of judicature, consisting of two divisions,—her majesty's high court of justice, having chiefly original jurisdiction; and her majesty's court of appeal, whose jurisdiction is chiefly appellate.

JUDICATURE ACTS (IRELAND). The act of 40 & 41 Vict. c. 57, which went into operation Jan. 1, 1878, established a supreme court of judicature in Ireland, under which acts and subsequent ones a system essentially similar in its constitution to that in England is in force.

JUDICES. Lat. Judges. See Judex.

JUDICES NON TENENTUR EXPRIMERE CAUSAM SENTENTLZE SUIE. Judges are not bound to explain the reason of their sentence. Jenk.Cent. 75.

JUDICES ORDINARII. Lat. Plural of judex ordinarius (q. v.).

JUDICES PEDANEI. Lat. Plural of judex pedaneus (q. v.).

JUDICES SELECTI, Lat. Plural of judex selectus (q. v.).

JUDICI OFFICIUM SUUM EXCEDENTI NON PARETUR. A judge exceeding his office (or jurisdiction) is not to be obeyed. Jenk.Cent. p. 139, case 84. Said of void judgments.

JUDICI SATIS PENA EST, QUOD DEUM HABET ULTOREM. It is punishment enough for a judge that he has God as his avenger. 1 Leon. 295.

JUDICIA; JUDICIA PUBLICA. Lat. In Roman law. Judicial proceedings; trials. Judicia publica, criminal trials. Dig. 48, 1. See, also, Judicium.

JUDICIA IN CURIA REGIS NON ADNIHILENTUR, SED STENT IN ROBORE SUO QUOUSQUE PER ERROREM AUT ATTINCTUM ADNULLENTUR. Judgments in the king's court are not to be annihilated, but to remain in force until annulled by error or attaint. 2 Inst. 539.

JUDICIA IN DELIBERATIONIBUS CREBRO MATURESCUNT, IN ACCELERATO PROCESSU NUNQUAM. Judgments frequently become matured by deliberations, never by hurried process or precipitation. 3 Inst. 210.

JUDICIA POSTERIORA SUNT IN LEGE FORTIORA. The later decisions are the stronger in law. 8 Coke, 97.

JUDICIA SUNT TANQUAM JURIS DICTA, ET PRO VERITATE ACCIPIUNTUR. Judgments are, as it were, the sayings of the law, and are received as truth. 2 Inst. 537.

JUDICIAL. Belonging to the office of a judge; as judicial authority.

Relating to or connected with the administration of justice; as a judicial officer.

Having the character of judgment or formal legal procedure; as a judicial act.

Proceeding from a court of justice; as a judicial writ, a judicial determination.

Involving the exercise of judgment or discretion; as distinguished from ministerial.

Of or pertaining or appropriate to the administration of justice, or courts of justice, or a judge thereof, or the proceedings therein; as, judicial power, judicial proceedings. ,State v. Freitag, 53 Idaho 726, 27 P.2d 68.

As to judicial "Confession," "Day," "Discretion," "Documents," "Estoppel," "Evidence," "Factor," "Mortgage," "Notice," "Process," "Record," "Sale," "Sequestration," and "Writ," see those titles.

As to quasi judicial, see Quasi Judicial.

JUDICIAL ACT. An act which involves exercise of discretion or judgment. State ex rel. Allen v. Rose, 123 Fla. 544, 167 So. 21, 24; In re McGarry, 380 Ill. 359, 44 N.E.2d 7, 10; Wicksel v. Cohen, 262 N.Y. 446, 187 N.E. 634, 635; Dovel v. Bertram, 184 Va. 19, 34 S.E.2d 369, 370.

It is also defined as an act by court or magistrate touching rights of parties or property brought before it or him by voluntary appearance, or by prior action of ministerial officers, Flournoy v. Jeffersonville, 17 Ind. 173, 79 Am. Dec. 468; Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., 99 U.S. 700, 761, 25 L.Ed. 496; United States v. Ward, C.C.A.Okl., 257 F. 372, 377; Board of Com'rs of Atoka County v. Cypert, 65 Oki. 168, 166 P. 195, 198; an act by member of judicial department in construing law or applying it to a particular state of facts, State ex rel. Tharel v. Board of Com'rs of Creek County, 188 Okl. 184, 107 P.2d 542, 549; an act of administrative board if it goes to determination of some right, protection of which is peculiar office of courts, Belk's Dept. Store v. Guilford County, 222 N.C. 441, 23 S.E.2d 897, 902; an act which imposes burdens or confers privileges according to finding of some person or body whether a general rule is applicable or according to discretionary judgment as to propriety, Stevens ex rel. Kuberski v. Haussermann, 113 N.J.L. 162, 172 A. 738, 741; an act which undertakes to determine a question of right or obligation or of property as foundation on which it proceeds, Pearson v. Reed, 6 Cal.App.2d 277, 44 P.2d 592, 597; determination of what the law is and what rights of parties are with reference to transactions already had or thing already done or happened, Nider v. Homan, 32 Cal.App.2d 11, 89 P.2d 136, 139; Nash v. Brooks, 251 App.Div. 616, 297 N.Y. S. 853, 855; State v. Ramirez, 34 Idaho 623, 203 P. 279, 282, 29 A.L.R. 297; the action of judge in trying a cause and rendering a decision, Application of Gleit, 178 Misc. 198, 33 N.Y.S.2d 629, 630, 631.

The act of an administrative or ministerial officer does not become judicial simply because it requires some discretion and judgment, but becomes judicial only when there is opportunity to be heard, and the production and weighing of evidence and a decision thereon. People ex rel. Argus Co. v. Hugo, 101 Misc. 48, 168 N.Y.S. 25, 27; Sweeney v. Young, 82 N.H. 159, 131 A. 155, 157, 42 A. L.R. 757.

Rendition or pronouncement of a judgment is a judicial act and entry thereof a ministerial act. Peoples Electric Co-op. v. Broughton, 191 Okl. 229, 127 P.2d 850, 853; O'Brien v. New York Edison Co., D.C.N.Y., 26 F.Supp. 290, 291; Bailer v. Dowd, 219 Ind. 624, 40 N.E.2d 325, 327. But if there are matters requiring exercise of court's discretion, entry of decree is judicial act. Stewart v. Superior Court in and for Los Angeles County, 3 Cal.App.2d 702, 40 P.2d 529.

JUDICIAL ACTION. An adjudication upon rights of parties who in general appear or are brought before tribunal by notice or process, and upon whose claims some decision or judgment is rendered. Southeastern Greyhound Lines v. Georgia Public Service Commission, 181 Ga. 75, 181 S.E. 834, 102 A.L.R. 517. Action of a court upon a cause, by hearing it, and determining what shall be adjudged or decreed between the parties, and with which is the right of the case. Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. 718, 9 L.Ed. 1233 ; Kerosene Lamp Heater Co. v. Monitor Oil Stove Co., 41 Ohio St. 293. When an inferior officer or board is charged with an administrative act, the performance of which depends upon and requires the existence or ascertainment of facts, the investigation and determination of such facts is so-called judicial action. Austin v. Eddy, 41 S.D. 640, 172 N.W. 517, 518.

Every judicial action involves primary right of plaintiff and corresponding duty devolving on defendant, breach of such duty by defendant, remedial right and duty, and remedy itself. Vinson v. Graham, C.C.A.Okl., 44 F.2d 772, 777; Brice v. Glenn, 165 S.C. 509, 164 S.E. 302, 303; Radosevich v. Engle, 111 Mont. 504, 111 P.2d 299, 303.

JUDICIAL ADMISSION. See Admissions.

JUDICIAL AUTHORITY. The power and authority appertaining to the office of a judge; jurisdiction; the official right to hear and determine questions in controversy.

JUDICIAL BUSINESS. Such as involves the exercise of judicial power, or the application of the mind and authority of a court to some contested matter, or the conduct of judicial proceedings, as distinguished from such ministerial and other acts, incident to the progress of a cause, as may be performed by the parties, counsel, or officers of the court without application to the court or judge. See Heisen v. Smith, 138 Cal. 216, 71 P. 180, 94 Am.St.Rep. 39; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Jaffray, 36 Neb. 218, 54 N.W. 258, 19 L.R.A. 316; State v. California Min. Co., 13 Nev. 214.

JUDICIAL CIRCUIT. As used in a state constitution, a term referring to the subdivisions of the state to each of which one judge shall be assigned to exercise therein the judicial power conferred by the constitution upon circuit courts. State v. Butler, 70 Fla. 102, 69 So. 771, 779.

JUDICIAL COGNIZANCE. Judicial notice, or knowledge upon which a judge is bound to act without having it proved in evidence.

JUDICIAL COMITY. Principle in accordance with which courts of one state or jurisdiction give effect to laws and judicial decisions of another state out of deference and respect, not obligation. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. v. City of Thomasville, 100 Fla. 748, 130 So. 7, 8.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL. In English law. A tribunal established in 1833, composed of members of the privy council, being judges or retired judges, which acts as the king's adviser in matters of law referred to it, and exercises a certain appellate jurisdiction, though its power in this respect was curtailed by the judicature act of 1873.

It consists of the Lord Chancellor, the six Lords of Appeal, if Privy Councillors, and such other members of the Privy Council as have held any high judicial office in the United Kingdom, India, or the colonies. It is the court of final appeal from the ecclesiastical courts, from the courts of India, the colonies, dominions, etc., the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, administering all the different systems of law of the countries under its appellate jurisdiction, and exercising a notable influence on the tenor and course of law in some of those jurisdictions, especially Indian law.

JUDICIAL CONVENTION. An agreement entered into in consequence of an order of court; as, for example, entering into a bond on taking out a writ of sequestration. Penniman v. Barrymore, 6 Mart. N.S., La., 494.

JUDICIAL CY PRES.

Doctrine of "judicial cy pres" is a principle of construction based on a judicial finding of donor's intention as applied to new conditions. Rohlff v. German Old People's Home, 143 Neb. 636, 10 N.W.2d 686, 691.

When only minor features of a trust for charity become impossible or impracticable of performance and it cannot properly be said that general scheme of testator has failed, doctrine of "judicial cy pres" operates to avoid failure of charity. Noel v. Olds, 78 U.S.App.D.C. 155, 138 F.2d 581, 586, 587.

JUDICIAL DECISION. An opinion or determination of the judges in causes before them, particularly in appellate courts. Le Blanc v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 73 Miss. 463, 19 So. 211. Application by a court or tribunal exercising judicial authority of competent jurisdiction of the law to a state of facts proved, or admitted to be true, and a declaration of the consequences which follow. In re Knofier's Estate, 73 Ohio App. 383, 52 N.E.2d 667, 668.

JUDICIAL DECLARATION OF LAW. A rule adopted as the basis of decision of issues involved. Trustees of Phillips Exeter Academy v. Exeter, 90 N.H. 472, 27 A.2d 569, 577.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT. The branch of government which is intended to interpret, construe and apply the law. Board of Com'rs of Wyandotte County v. General Securities Corporation, 157 Kan. 64, 138 P.2d 479, 487.

JUDICIAL DICTUM. A dictum made by a court or judge in the course of a judicial decision or opinion. Com. v. Paine, 207 Pa. 45, 56 A. 317. See Dictum.

JUDICIAL DISTRICT. One of the circuits or precincts into which a state is commonly divided for judicial purposes, a court of general original jurisdiction being usually provided in each of such districts, and the boundaries of the• district marking the territorial limits of its authority; or the district may include two or more counties, having separate and independent county courts, but in that case they are presided over by the same judge. See Ex parte Gardner, 22 Nev. 280, 39 P. 570; Lindsley v. Coahoma County Sup'rs, 69 Miss. 815, 11 So. 336; Com. v. Hoar, 121 Mass. 377; Consolidated Flour Mills Co. v. Muegge, 127 Okl. 295, 260 P. 745, 752.

JUDICIAL DIVORCE. One granted by the sentence of a court of justice, pursuant to general law. Maclay v. Maclay, 147 Fla. 77, 2 So.2d 361, 363.

JUDICIAL DUTY. One that requires exercise of judgment or choice of alternatives in its performance. Board of Education of Nebo School Dist. v. Jeppson, 74 Utah 576, 280 P. 1065, 1069. One that requires exercise of judgment or decision of a question of fact. State ex rel. Coast Holding Co. v. Ekwall, 144 Or. 672, 26 P.2d 52. One that requires use of discretion or examination of evidence and decision of questions of law and fact. Taylor County Farm Bureau v. Board of Sup'rs of Taylor County, 218 Iowa 937, 252 N.W. 498. One that legitimately pertains to an officer in judicial department. Harding v. McCullough, 236 Iowa 556, 19 N.W.2d 613, 617; Ex parte Lewis, 328 Mo. 843, 42 S.W.2d 21, 22.

JUDICIAL ERRORS. Errors into which the court itself falls are "judicial errors." An error of this character occurs when the judgment rendered is erroneous in some particular, requiring it to be changed. Connecticut Mortgage & Title Guaranty Co. v. Di Francesco, 112 Conn. 673, 151 A. 491, 492.

JUDICIAL ESTOPPEL. Arises from sworn statements made in course of judicial proceedings. Clarke v. Ripley Sa^{y}. Bank & Trust Co., 27 Tenn. App. 387, 181 S.W.2d 386, 389; Helfer v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n, 170 Tenn. 630, 96 S.W.2d 1103, 1105, 113 A.L.R. 921. The doctrine of "judicial estoppel" is the doctrine of the conclusiveness of the judgments. State v. Ohio Oil Co., Tex.Civ.App., 173 S.W.2d 470, 478, 479.

It is based on bad faith, and cannot be asserted unless sworn statement was made knowingly, or with degree of negligence authorizing imputation of knowledge. Broyles v. Scottish Union & National Ins. Co., 16 Tenn.App. 331, 64 S.W. 51:7.

The rule may be invoked only where the prior and subsequent litigation involves the same parties and where one party has relied on the former testimony and changed his position by reason of it. Tracy Loan & Trust Co. v. Openshaw Inv. Co., 102 Utah 509, 132 P.2d 388, 390, 391. But see holding that judicial estoppel is based on public policy and not on prejudice to adverse party. Sartain v. Dixie Coal & Iron Co., 150 Tenn. 633, 266 S.W. 313, 316.

JUDICIAL EVIDENCE is the means, sanctioned by law, of ascertaining in a judicial proceeding the truth respecting a question.

JUDICIAL FUNCTION. The exercise of the judicial faculty or office. The capacity to act in the specific way which appertains to the judicial power, as one of the powers of government.

The term is used to describe generally those modes of action which appertain to the judiciary as a department of organized government, and through and by means of which it accomplishes its purposes and exercises its peculiar powers. See State v. Kelly, 27 N.M. 412, 202 P. 524, 528, 21 A.L.R. 156; Lyon v. City of Payette, 38 Idaho 705, 224 P. 793, 794; People v. Hersey, 69 Colo. 492, 196 P. 180, 181, 14 A.L.R. 631; Sauskelonis v. Herting, 89 Conn. 298, 94 A. 368, 369. While ordinarily a case or judicial controversy within the meaning of Const. art. 3, § 2, results in a judgment requiring award of process of execution to carry it into effect, such relief is not an indispensable adjunct to the exercise of the "judicial function." Fidelity Nat. Bank & Trust Co. of Kansas City v. Swope, 274 U.S. 123, 47 S.Ct. 511, 514, 71 L.Ed. 959.

JUDICIAL INQUIRY. Such inquiry investigates, declares, and enforces liabilities as they stand on present or past facts and under laws supposed already to exist. Oklahoma Gas & Electric Co. v. Wilson & Co. of Oklahoma, C.C.A.Okl., 54 F.2d 596, 598; In re Turnock's Estate, 238 Wis. 438, 300 N.W. 155, 156.

JUDICIAL KNOWLEDGE. Knowledge of that which is so notorious that everybody, including judges, knows it, and hence need not be proved. Ex parte Ferguson, 112 Tex.Cr.R. 152, 15 S.W.2d 650, 652.

JUDICIAL LEGISLATION. See Judge-Made Law.

JUDICIAL NOTICE. The act by which a court, in conducting a trial, or framing its decision, will, of its own motion, and without the production of evidence, recognize the existence and truth of certain facts, having a bearing on the controversy at bar, which, from their nature, are not properly the subject of testimony, or which are universally regarded as established by common notoriety, e. g., the laws of the state, international law, historical events, the constitution and course of nature, main geographical features, etc. North Hempstead v. Gregory, 53 App.Div. 350, 65 N.Y.S. 867; State v. Main, 69 Conn. 123, 37 A. 80, 36 L.R. A. 623, 61 Am.St.Rep. 30. The cognizance of certain facts which judges and jurors may properly take and act upon without proof, because they already know them. United States v. Hammers, D. C.Fla., 241 F. 542, 543.

The true conception of what is "judicially known" is that of something which is not, or rather need not be, unless the tribunal wishes it, the subject of either evidence or argument. Chiulla de Luca v. Board of Park Com'rs of City of Hartford, 94 Conn. 7, 107 A. 611, 612. The limits of "judicial notice" cannot be prescribed with exactness, but notoriety is, generally speaking, the ultimate test of facts sought to be brought within the realm of judicial notice; in general, it covers matters so notorious that a production of evidence would be unnecessary, matters which the judicial function supposes the judge to be acquainted with actually or theoretically, and matters not strictly included under either of such heads. Gottstein v. Lister, 88 Wash. 462, 153 P. 595, 602, Ann.Cas.1917D, 1008.

JUDICIAL OATH. See Oath.

JUDICIAL OFFICE. Offices which relate to the administration of justice; Waldo v. Wallace, 12 Ind. 569; and which should be exercised by persons of sufficient skill and experience in the duties which appertain to them. A general term including courts of record and courts not of record. Buckley v. Holmes, 259 Pa. 176, 102 A. 497, 500.

A. term used In 34 & 35 Vict. c. 91, to define qualifications of additional members of the judicial committee of the Privy Council.

JUDICIAL OFFICER. The term, in the popular sense, applies generally to an officer of a court, but in the strictly legal sense applies only to an officer who determines causes between parties or renders decision in a judicial capacity. Hitt v. State, 182 Miss. 184, 181 So. 331; Alexander v. Holmes, 180 Ga. 397, 179 S.E. 77, 78. One who exercises judicial function. Adams v. State, 214 Ind. 603, 17 N.E.2d 84, 118 A.L.R. 1095.
